IN

"The PAWN of FATE"

PIERRE DUFRENE, a peasant of Normandy, and his pretty wife, leave their picturesque farm for the gay world of Paris, confident that in Pierre the world is to discover a new artistic genius.

¶ Pierre is really the dupe of a wealthy Parisian painter who has fallen in love with Pierre's wife Lesar, the Parisian, plays upon Pierre's artistic ambitions and lures him on to become at last the butt of a cruel jest.

¶ His illusions shattered and his faith in his wife dimmed, Pierre turns upon his false friend and takes partial toll for his wrongs in physical violence.

¶ In the depths of despair, Pierre is about to seek solace in suicide when arrested and confronted by the man he has mortally wounded.

¶ In his dying moments Lesar atones and the reconciliation between Pierre and his wife comes in a scene of deep pathos and compelling heart interest.

"The PRICE of HAPPINESS"

THE story of "The Price of Happiness" deals with the bitter disillusionment of a woman who envies the seemingly more fortunate lot of her wealthy friends. The heroine of the story becomes discontented with her own simple home life and seeks happiness amid the false gayeties of the world in which her richer acquaintances live.

¶ In a series of startling dramatic episodes, she learns that the supposed happiness of three of her former chums is based upon a false structure of material success and luxury, and that they are paying a bitter price for their success.

¶ Slowly it dawns upon her that there is no such thing as happiness in the usual sense of the word, but that true happiness dwells side by side with modest contentment and the interests of a real home.

¶ In the end, after estranging herself from her husband, she returns to him and to her child with a new spirit of contentment and peace.

Successful Business Is Built On
A Definite Plan and Policy

First—get a good program—one that is consistent—one your patrons talk about—one in which they have confidence.

Get a program that is supported by a definite plan and policy.

Advertise and build your business on the kind of pictures that will not give out and leave you "flat on the lot."

The Paramount contract is the first step in a definite plan and policy. It means you will not have to begin all over next year with a new program.

With a Paramount Franchise you are building for permanent success.

Adopt a policy and stick to it.

MOORE'S GARDEN THEATRE, WASHINGTON

MOORE'S STRAND THEATRE, WASHINGTON

THREE COMPETITORS WHO ACT AS ONE

THE total film rental paid the V-L-S-E by the four largest down-town houses of Washington, D. C., during the week of January 16th, probably exceeded the combined rental of all other features shown in that city.

At The Strand and The Garden, operated by Thomas Moore, the Big Four was represented by "The Battle Cry of Peace," "My Lady's Slipper," and "The Heights of Hazard," respectively, while at Crandall's, on the same block, "The Misleading Lady," was the business-building attraction. A block away, The Cosmos, charging 15c. and 25c., featured that tremendous success, "The Great Divide" and "The College Widow."

Of even greater significance than that three centrally located, next-door neighbors should concentrate upon V-L-S-E plays as the vehicles to fill their houses, is the fact that one of this number was sold this service by another.

It was Mr. Moore, who upon finding that he could not use all the Big Four output, induced Mr. Crandall, formerly his keenest competitor, to take those which either The Strand or The Garden had not the open time to book—this without a V-L-S-E representative ever having called upon Mr. Crandall.

A sense of fairness, based on his own success; the liberal "open-booking" policy of the Big Four, and the consistent excellence of its production, prompted this unusual support.

The exhibitor in search of features of proved earning power, who gives these facts the consideration they deserve, will not err in judgment.

Gentlemen:

Herewith find check for payment of "Thou Art the Man." Am using "The Great Divide" today and playing to big business, although the day is only half over.

I used "The Misleading Lady" Monday and Tuesday last, and played to big houses both days. My patrons were delighted with the picture, and many asked me to get more of the same calibre.

The Big Four is certainly on the right road to success. The "open market" is a long-looked for service, and I sincerely congratulate you on being the first big feature concern to institute it.

Trusting "The Big Four" features keep coming in the same quality measure as those I used this week, I am

Gives Her Reasons

For Organizing a New Film Corporation with

Lewis J. Selznick

as President and General Manager

To the Motion Picture Exhibitors. Havana, Cuba, February 12, 1916.

Gentlemen:—When the formation of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation was announced recently, showing my association in a new company of which Mr. Lewis J. Selznick is the President and General Manager, I made a hasty statement of our plans and promised a further announcement of my individual thoughts in the matter. Since then, even down here in Cuba, I have heard of the avalanche of telegrams, telephone calls, special delivery letters and personal applications made by you for the pictures which our new organization will release in October. This is most encouraging and I desire to place before you now the reasons for my abandonment of the salaried method of paying the motion picture artist, and taking an interest in my own concern and relying on this interest for my reward.

I HAVE REFUSED MANY OFFERS OF A CONTRACT. THE LOWEST WAS $3,000 PER WEEK.

The reasons for my action must therefore be interesting to you and briefly here are the more important ones:

1—FREEDOM: To think, do and act as I think best. I am the responsible party and must deliver the goods.

2—ARTISTIC DEVELOPMENT: By this new arrangement I will be free to study and improve. I am not one to think I have attained perfection. I must progress. I can't stand still and be contented.

3—HARMONY: Mr. Selznick and I are in perfect accord. Our ideals, ambitions and policies are fixed and in perfect agreement. Our organization will be synchronized from the office boy up. Team work will be our motto.

4—NO MORE DEAD WEIGHTS: Our pictures will not be sold as a part of a program. You buy direct the Clara Kimball Young pictures and no deadwood.

5—PROTECTION OF EXHIBITORS: We give you an absolute guaranty of big business. It will be the essence of our success.

6—PROTECTION OF PUBLIC: You won't need Federal or any other kind of censorship if you buy the Clara Kimball Young pictures produced by us.

7—CONTROL OF SCENARIOS: No subsidized director or pussy-footing scenario writer can force a mediocre play on me under Mr. Selznick's management of our company.

8—CONTROL OF CASTS: We will cast these pictures with artists especially suited for the parts in each picture.

9—DIRECTION: The name of our director—a man of great international reputation, a great master of the genius of picture presentation, famous and already deemed immortal for his masterpieces—his name will be announced shortly.

10—MOTION PICTURE DISTINCTION: Mr. Selznick and I intend by our efforts to raise the motion picture profession to the dignity of an art and take it out of the machinery class.

11—MOTION PICTURE TRAINING SCHOOL: I will now be able to realize my keenest ambition and establish a school for motion picture acting and give the graduates a chance to earn a good living.

12—HAPPINESS: I am an associate and not an employee in the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation. Can there be a greater happiness for an artist than such an opportunity to fulfil one's life's ambitions?

Cordially yours,

Clara Kimball Young

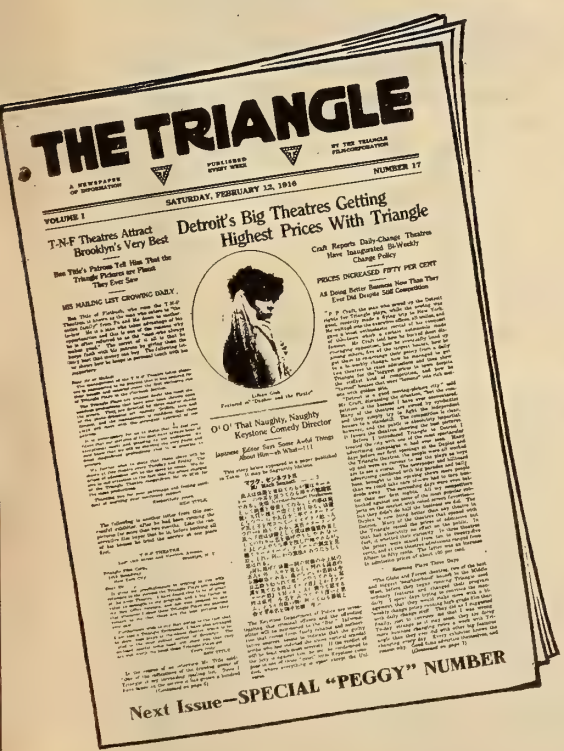
ALL over the United States, from Maine to California, wherever good pictures are shown you can find the TRIANGLE trade mark, for exhibitors have come to realize that it is money in their pocket to present such plays to their patrons. More attendance and increased box office returns, as a rule, are the result of exhibiting TRIANGLE PLAYS.

The two telegrams shown on this page are typical of the reports on TRIANGLE PLAYS which are constantly being received from exhibitors.



There is a reason back of the success of TRIANGLE PLAYS—a reason back of the increased profits to exhibitors.

Plays of the right kind, productions of the best, and stars of the first magnitude combine to make motion pictures that pay.

BILLIE BURKE in "PEGGY"

TRIANGLE PLAYS pay the exhibitor because of the class of productions which are offered him on the regular service. For instance, for the week of February 20th, Billie Burke will be presented for the first time in motion pictures in a masterpiece, "Peggy," a wonderful production which is furnished to exhibitors at no additional cost but as a part of the regular TRIANGLE service. Productions of this kind cannot help but develop the TRIANGLE reputation, and they mean increased box office receipts for the exhibitor.

"Murder in the First Degree"

A CIRCULAR was sent throughout New England last week offering a whole week's film service at the following rates:

"Twelve reels $10 a week; 18 reels $15 a week; 21 reels $17.50 a week."

The circular is entitled: "Murder in the First Degree."

"Sure, it's murder" admits the circular in big type, "but then, we're in a killing game."

THIS price-cutting propaganda is not as sensational as it might seem. The proposition will only appeal to houses whose audiences like cheap films as they also like cheap literature and to houses of a speculative nature, houses looking for a buyer and in the speculative interim more interested in footage than pictures.

Nor is this price-cutting propaganda unusual. It is by no means confined to New England. It is going on everywhere.

It may be briefly classified and as briefly dismissed as "junk." Junk film we have with us; we shall always have it in some degree, though always in a lessening degree.

THE point that really concerns us, the matter that really constitutes business murder in the first degree, the situation that is turning a great industry into a "killing game"—all this lies in the fact that price-cutting is not confined to "junk" film but is rampant today with the fresh product of the picture industry.

The situation is an ominous one. It is high time that we take exact measure of the situation. It is a "killing game."

IF pictures are being rented for less than the cost of production and distribution, then the result is simple and self-evident. For some producers it means eventual ruin; for others it means serious losses. But the effect does not stop here. The disturbance will go on throughout the entire industry, now and for time to come. It will affect the art of the picture and it will affect the exhibitor.

RUINOUS price-cutting is, of course, only a surface indication of trouble beneath.

The trouble beneath,—and it is a big, two-fold trouble—is: overproduction and excessive cost of distribution.

There are two ways by which this huge, fundamental fault may be corrected,—and it would seem only two ways. Either one or both must happen.

THE first is consolidation—consolidation among producers in order to control production—and to lessen distribution cost. That has happened before in this field when no features were being made. It may have to happen with feature production.

The other way is the way of the survival of the fittest. Against the common menace of over production—and extravagant distribution—those companies will last which make the best pictures, which make and distribute them most economically and which finally are well and sufficiently intrenched with capital.

THE present year is bound to disclose some striking developments along either or both of these lines.

The matter is a vital one and we shall have more to say about it.

Our especial contention right here and now is with the exhibitor—with the exhibitor who is asking that prices be cut.

IT would seem offhand that the cheaper an exhibitor can book his pictures the better off he is. This is not so. It has never been true of any other industry; it is not true of this.

There is something beside pictures to book, and that is the service that goes with them. There is something to do beside book pictures and that is to resell them to the public. And you can't get service with cheap prices.

THE exhibitor who demands cheap prices, is quite often a lame duck. His lameness consists in his utter inefficiency as an exhibitor. It is this inefficiency and this alone that makes him demand cheap prices.

He doesn't know that he has a good picture until it is too late to advertise it.

He doesn't know how, and hasn't the nerve to advertise it well, if he does know the picture's value in advance. He doesn't know how to exhibit a good picture.

THESE facts being true, he doesn't get the maximum number of people into his house and can't keep them coming, therefore he gets minimum box-office receipts and so he wants minimum rental prices.

This rule is by no means general. There is many a small house which is paying for service all it can possibly afford to pay in view of its population appeal.

But, on the contrary, there is many an exhibitor who could get twice as many people to view a picture, pay twice as much for it and yet make twice as much money as he now makes with cheap pictures and no service.

GOOD pictures and good advertising service with them cost money and are worth money, because they will make money.

Service is quite as important as goods. This is true of every other industry. There are thousands of miles of dealers' shelves in this country constantly loaded with goods and the force that moves them and makes money for the retailer is not only the quality of the goods but the advertising that sends the people into the store.

We need—and eventually we will have—these same proven principles in the exhibiting business.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

The Motion Picture Curfew in Maryland

THE censorship situation in Maryland is, in itself, a crushing refutation of the claim that there is a public demand for pre-publicity control of motion pictures by the state.

Public demand had, and has, as little to do with the bill before the legislature at Annapolis as it did with the present European war.

IN the state of Maryland the character and origin of the measure is clearly understood. It is what is known in the political slang of the "oyster state" as a "bell-ringer."

We do not know precisely what Mr. Webster's definition of the phrase would be, but there arises in our mind the vision of a penniless tramp ringing the door-bell at a respectable house and demanding money.

The penniless beggar in this case is, of course, the politician. And the watchdog is the remedy for both.

NOT only is the measure a "bell-ringer," but it originated within the motion picture business, not outside of it, if persistent rumors are to be believed. The Ohio censorship measure, it will be recalled, was of film parentage. The Maryland measure comes of the same stock, so they say.

To blame such a measure as this on public demand, is libeling the people of Maryland. They want clean pictures, very naturally. So do the men in the motion picture business, though their traducers would insist that the average film man is a moral degenerate.

BUT the public, simply because they want clean pictures cannot be rightfully accused of desiring to compass the destruction of the industry, and an end of all pictures, good and bad.

The case in Maryland is too clearly against those who are trying to whitewash their own illegitimate ends by attempting to spread a coat of public opinion over their activities.

Why the Board of Trade Is Representative

THE word "representative" has been used so often of late in connection with the Board of Trade, that it is well to understand just what the significance of the word is, and the way that body is living up to the definition.

SUCH a body is representative, not only because its membership is so, but because it has in executive capacities, men who are capable of really representing the industry, as a whole, in important and crucial situations, external to the business.

Such men must be accurate mouthpieces of the fundamental needs and aspirations of the business; they must be able to realize and able to represent the basic ideas which, consciously or unconsciously are the mainsprings of the men who direct the progress of the industry.

UNLESS, or until such a body has this means of communicating its real needs and wants to the rest of the world whenever that may be necessary, it cannot be really representative of the business it professes to represent.

It is precisely because the Board of Trade is fortunate in possessing such executives, such ambassadors, as it were, that its claims to be representative of the motion picture industry are being substantiated by each new development in the "foreign relations" of the business.

The Sunday Closing Agitation

AN epidemic of Sunday closing seems to have struck the country. The professional reformers, not content with attempting to force Federal censorship on the industry, are continuing their efforts to regulate the industry.

In both cases the busybodies say they are saving the morals of the people. They are advocating Federal censorship in order to ward off immorality from the people, and they are advocating shutting up the picture theatres on Sunday in order to keep the people moral and righteous.

THERE is a great deal of nonsense talked about Sabbath desecration. The mere presence of a man or a woman in a theatre on Sunday certainly does not constitute an unrighteous or an immoral act. Usually, it means that diversion is being sought, that the persons concerned are merely seeking to enjoy their favorite entertainment.

If this process lightens their burdens, refreshes their minds, entertains them, and sends them away happy or stimulated, it serves a moral and a righteous purpose.

Stripped of its sentimental nonsense, the movement for Sunday closing signifies that the preachers feel the competition of the motion picture.

The motion picture is vitally interesting to millions of people. If the church is less so, whose fault is it?

First Annual Movie Costume and Civic Ball, Held in Madison Square Garden, Is Biggest Affair of Its Kind

Event, Given Under Auspices of Screen Club and Exhibitors' League, New York City, Brings Out Nearly Sixteen Thousand People, Members of All Branches of the Industry and Vast Numbers of the Public Who Wanted to See Their Favorite Players in the Flesh—Interior of the Huge Edifice Decorated with Striking Banners and Other Devices by Prominent Manufacturing Concerns

THE first annual Movie Costume and Civic Ball, held February 19, in Madison Square Garden, New York City, under the combined auspices of the Screen Club and the Exhibitors' League proved to be the largest and most successful social event that has occurred in the eastern circles of the film world.

It is estimated that between fifteen and sixteen thousand guests attended, including members of all branches of the picture business and many outsiders. Practically every available seat in the Garden was occupied, those in front being held by many of the prominent stars.

Many and varied were the costumes, worn in most instances by the players. Queens of Sheba were plentiful, there were ballet girls, farmers, Russian peasants and the like. Quite remarkable was the total absence of anyone attempting to imitate Charles Chaplin.

The interior of the huge building was decorated with emblems of the various film companies. Metro monoplized a large area of square feet on each of the four walls and affixed thereto banners bearing its name.

Universal, acting largely in the interests of its Red Feather and Blue Bird companies strung its streamers from the ceiling. The Thanhouser boxes wkere marked by a device of purple velvet, supported by two Hindus.

Many Companies Represented

Vitagraph, World and Equitable, the Paramount subsidiary companies, Fox, Triangle, Ivan, Gaumont, Kleine, Edison, Pathé, Arrow, Nicholas Power, Biograph, V-L-S-E, Mirror, besides many individuals held boxes that circled the entire place.

Balls and publicity stunts are inseparable nowadays and this occasion was marked by any number of them. Harry Reichenbach, lending his best efforts in behalf of World and Equitable, led off the stunts by introducing Gail Kane attired in so many diamonds that eight detectives were necessary as an escort.

Miss Kane made her entrance onto the large floor to the tune on a Hawaiian Band when all the lights had been dimmed. Spotlights were played upon her and to say the least she presented a most glittering appearance.

Metro followed with another of those pretty girl effects especially arranged by Arthur James and Merrit Crawford. Several girls in pierrot costume, each carrying a standard bearing one of the letters of Metro, paraded out on the floor and lined up with a winning Metro effect. A little song and dance act was given and the whole affair turned out successfully.

The next sensation was created by Leon J. Rubenstein of Thanhouser. The floor cleared Florence La Badie, attired in a gorgeous costume, entered borne aloft in a golden bowl by giant Hindus.

The procession keeping time to a gong and tom-tom moved slowly around the floor midst loud applause. Governor Whitman's absence prevented Mr. Rubenstein from carrying out a stunt even more formidable.

Billie Reeves on the Floor

Billie Reeves fell all the way around the Garden in behalf of the Lubin company and the Screen Club. His clothes at the finish of this performance were merely a mass of dust.

Universal let loose several thousand red feathers and a few blue birds of the genuine variety. There was a gentleman, however, attired in the feathers of a blue bird who paraded the floor througout the evening. There was also Michael Schlesser and his big dog Barney, who has recently decided to play in Universal pictures.

After this various of the stars marched about the floor in small groups for the eager inspection of the fans, who thronged the side lines.

Anita Stewart and Earl Williams headed a Vitagraph contingent; Richard Tucker and Viola Dana led other players from the Edison studio; Roscoe Arbuckle and Mabel Normand appeared for Keystone; Carl Laemmle, P. A. Powers and Violet Mersereau marched before a large following of Universal favorites; Ben Wilson, Vera Michelena and Frank Powell walked by themselves; Carlyle Blackwell, Muril Ostriche and Edwin August were gathered under the direction of Mr. Reichenbach.

Clara Kimball Young Leads Grand March

After all these smaller marches came the grand parade led by Clara Kimball Young and Billy Quirk, who substituted for Governor Whitman. Prominent stars, writers, directors, officials and citizens followed in line. General dancing on the main floor to the tune of the Twenty-second Regiment band was the order for the rest of the evening.

All the story of the Metro side of the ball will never be completely told. Metro had a private room, private band, private refreshments and private whatnot. Altogether Metro's was quite a separate and distinct affair, although there was by no means a lack of Metro boosters on the main floor.

Among those present were:

Sidelights on the Costume Ball at Madison Square

In a Whirl of Dancing Many Things Happen That Will Make the Event Long Remembered by Those in Attendance—There Was the Whole Gamut of Doings, from the Issuance of a "Newspaper" to the Floor Sagging in Where Merritt Crawford Stood

By Longacre

Said Lee S. Ochs to Sammy Trigger:
"Our ball could not have been much bigger."
"We sure did get a crowd of folks,"
Said Sammy Trigger to Lee S. Ochs.

Furthermore, Mr. Engel, if it hadn't been for Harry Reichenbach counting Gail Kane's diamonds out loud, and the hiss of the spotlight on Clara Kimball Young, we would have been able to make you hear what we were talking about.

It is rumored that 2,673 exhibitors were at the ball. It is a good eight-to-three bet that of these fully 2,673 have heard of Metro.

In fact, after canvassing the Garden thoroughly, from entrance to bar, and, noting the various displays and "stunts," we are convinced that the telephone booths on the first floor expressed the situation cogently.

"Hello, Metro!"

George Irving took the 11:28 (P. M.) train for Bayside. He can hardly be said to have attended the ball.

Said Arthur James to Peggy Snow:
"There's people here that I don't know."
"I know 'em, but forget their names,"
Said Peggy Snow to Arthur James.

Just when the crowd on the dancing floor was thickest, Roscoe Arbuckle had to shove his way in. There was a threatened panic for a moment, but by removing the Fourth avenue side of the Garden, the pressure was relieved.

That, and the big sag in the flooring of the second floor, where Merritt Crawford stood for the greater part of the evening, is about the only damage reported.

This aforesaid Arthur James was among those present. At the moment we can recall no one who was more present.

Billie Reeves set a rather dangerous example in his parade early in the evening. He had several imitators before the night was over.

Frank W. O'Malley came up and wrote quite a nice piece about the ball for a certain New York newspaper. He promised to mention MOTION PICTURE NEWS, but didn't do it; so here's where we get back at him.

In his inimitable characterization of Governor Whitman, "Bayside Jim" McKenna got the best hand of the evening. As Florence Labadie remarked before taking the noon train for New Rochelle, she was almost on the point of sending the governor a telegram of thanks for his interest in the picture industry.

Said Joseph Drum to Billy Quirk:
"This ball idea seems to work."
"We certainly are going some,"
Said Billy Quirk to Joseph Drum.

Through the Exhibitor's Annual, a newspaper published for the occasion, Metro extended a welcome in thirty languages. We can only comment by calling attention to our fifth paragraph back. We don't know why the number thirty was selected, but there were at least twenty-eight languages spoken at the ball which we couldn't understand.

Nat Goodwin was there, disguised as a motion picture star. His make-up was excellent, and remained so throughout the evening.

Many a cheer intended for Mary Fuller went to Frances Klein. And when Miss Klein appeared in Metro's private ballroom, it was whispered around that Miss Fuller had deserted the Universal camp. We are authorized to deny the rumor.

As Ethel Colt remarked to Juliet Shelby, it is remarkable how many people there are in New York who can dig up dress suits and $1 for a ticket when the situation is put squarely up to them.

Edwin Thanhouser and Leon Rubenstein are to be congratulated on the display they made of Florence Labadie in the "Golden Bowl." In fact, there was so much Flo Labadie in the procession as to entitle it to the name of the Flo-ing Bowl.

One advertising manager, to be exact Rod. Vandivert, remarked that he was obliged to shun the bar. It was impossible to take anything and remain neutral. When all fizzes, highballs, cocktails, flips and the like are named after one company, what is a neutral man to do?

Said Florence Reed to J. A. Berst:
"Of all the crowds, this is the worst!"
"A good-sized crowd it is, indeed,"
Said J. A. Berst to Florence Reed.

The Pathé star blazed brightly. It shone in red electrics all over the hall, and, with Messrs. Berst, Douglas, George Smith, Larry McGill, "Doc" Shallenberger, P. A. Parsons and their families, as well as Albert Le Vino, to uphold the honor of the Gold Rooster, the blithe little bird was certainly on the map.

When Howell Hansel arrived, and found the Pathé box filled, the only question he could ask was: "Who's guilty?"

Gail Kane's appearance, behind "nearly $1,000,000 worth of diamonds," was striking. The cost of production, however, must have been immense.

Yes, Vitagraph was represented. J. Stuart Blackton was there. So were Anita Stewart, Lillian Walker, Mary Gardner, Earle Williams, Wilfrid North and quite a following from Flatbush.

A number of "doubles" appeared during the services. Mary Miles Minter and Carmelita Geraghty, talking together, were taken for sisters, whereas Margaret Shelby, the real sister in the case, was undetected.

Not satisfied with having appropriated about all of Madison Square Garden that was loose, Richard Rowland, Joseph Engel, Arthur James, Merritt Crawford and Tom Geraghty tried to annex Jack's later in the evening. They advanced north with a boarding party about five o'clock, invaded the restaurant, and placed a prize crew aboard.

Arthur Spiegel and Lewis J. Selznick were both present. They arrived separately, but both had a good time.

Joseph Engel received a magnificent gold stick-pin from his Metro associates. The pin was presented for general efficiency and for having made himself an immensely popular man.

Said Arthur Spiegel to Harry R.:
"I guess folks know now who we are."
"Our fame is soaring like an eagle,"
Said Harry R. to Arthur Spiegel.

The liberation of a flock of ravenous blue-birds did much to signal the presence of Universal. Carl Laemmle, Joe Brandt, King Baggot and H. H. Van Loan led the cheering.

THEATRICAL FEDERATION WANTS 'FRISCO CENSORSHIP ABOLISHED

The Theatrical Federation of San Francisco, with which are affiliated the stage employees, musicians, bill posters, White Rat actors and moving picture operators, has named a committee to appear before the police committee of the board of supervisors at its next hearing and ask that the board of censorship in that city to be abolished.

A report to the effect that the Ohio Board of Censors had refused to permit the people of Ohio to see Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen" led this action to be taken and at the meeting recently held strong resolutions were adopted setting forth the reasons why it was deemed proper that censorship should be stopped there.

In speaking of this L. G. Dolliver, an official of the Moving Picture Operators' Union said:

"The censorship of moving pictures will prevent the great mass of people who cannot afford to pay the admission price to the legitimate theatres from ever seeing the plays which are now being reproduced in motion pictures, but which, for some reason unknown to us, are looked upon as being objectionable when shown on the screen, although on the legitimate stage they are given full-hearted popular approbation."

SUNDAY CLOSING AGITATION MAY START POLITICAL ISSUE IN CLEVELAND

Persistent Sunday closing prosecution of Arnold Goodman, manager of the Wind-A-Meer motion picture theatre, by East Cleveland authorities is being used as one of the arguments in favor of annexation of East Cleveland by the larger city from which it gets its name.

Next month the citizens of East Cleveland will vote on the question of whether or not the Wind-A-Meer is to be permitted to open Sundays. Signatures obtained to Mr. Goodman's petition suggest an overwhelming majority for Sunday opening.

OHIO AND KENTUCKY RIGHTS TO "RACE SUICIDE" SOLD EXCLUSIVE

The Ohio and Kentucky rights to "Race Suicide," the six-part motion picture which is being marketed upon a territorial basis by Joseph W. Farnham, have been secured by the Exclusive Photoplay Service, Inc., of Cleveland, whose secretary and treasurer, Frank L. Greenwald, made a special trip to New York last week to complete negotiations for the purchase.

Mr. Farnham turned over to Mr. Greenwald at the time of the purchase more than seventy-five applications for bookings in the State of Ohio.

ST. JOHN, N. B., PAPER INAUGURATES FILM SECTION

The St. John Standard, of St. John, N. B., Canada, has inaugurated a film section, which shows a very healthy growth, even in its first few issues, and has all the appearances of a mighty fine page in the near future.

The work is in charge of Miss Fairweather, who will give special attention to the exchanges.

Milwaukee Begins Campaign Against Federal Censor Bill; Graham Leads the Work

MILWAUKEE photoplay exhibitors are thoroughly aroused over the proposed federal censorship bill. An active campaign is being undertaken by the exhibitors and everything that the local men can do to defeat the bill will be done.

The newspapers have entered into the fight and a number of column stories have already been run upon the first pages. Most of the active newspaper work has been done under the direction of H. D. Graham of the Merrill theater, through the press publicity company.

The Milwaukee exhibitors have placed themselves on record as being against the proposed bill. Manager Graham in an interview in the Milwaukee Leader, Wednesday, February 9, stated that:

"The need for a federal board of censors or any other form of censorship is about as urgent as a censorship for newspapers, magazines and books.

"There is but one form of regulation necessary for indecent pictures and that is the police power possessed by every state to regulate immoral literature, pictures, or newspapers.

"There is no more reason why pictures should be submitted to a board of censors than that all newspapers, weeklies, magazines and books should be submitted to the censor before publication.

"In fact, this form of censorship would not work any more hardship with the publishers than the movie censorship will work with the producers."

Incidentally the Milwaukee exhibitors feel sure that they have brought home to their representatives in Washington that if the bill should be passed that the men voting for it will have all of the photoplay houses lined solidly against them before they come up for re-election to Congress next November.

PANTAGES CIRCUIT WILL SHOW NEW PATHE SERIAL

The Pathé Seattle office wires that they have closed with the Pantages theatres in Seattle, Tacoma and Spokane for the new serial, "The Iron Claw."

The Pantages circuit is the largest in the Northwest, and their representatives, after viewing the first two episodes, proclaimed it to be the best serial ever made by Pathé.

LAMBSON GETS "RACE SUICIDE"

A. T. Lambson, who, through his own efforts and recognition, has recently incorporated the Reelplay Feature Company, with offices at 1019 Eastlake avenue, Seattle, Wash., has purchased the six-part motion picture attraction, "Race Suicide," from Jos. W. Farnham, as the leader in his program of features de luxe, which he will book to the theatres of the territory of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana.

Mr. Lambson reports that he has been so successful with the producition that he has signified his intention of entering into contract with Mr. Farnham for the next nine-reel production, which is being made for state rights marketing at the present time.

SID TAUBE GETS PICTURES OF OTTAWA FIRE IN HURRY

Co-manager Sid Taube, of the Montreal branch of the Universal company in Canada, together with Bert Mason, in charge of the shipping and poster department of the same branch, took the first train to Ottawa, on learning of the fire, and secured some exceptionally fine scenes for the Universal Weekly.

Bert Mason is noted as one of Canada's best cameramen and his work in this instance was particularly good.

"GOING UP," CUB WITH OVEY, READY FEBRUARY 25

In "Going Up," the Cub Comedy scheduled for release through Mutual on February 25, George Ovey will be seen as Jerry, the principal character. Much of the fun centers about a suitcase in which Jerry carries high explosives instead of money.

The cast, which was directed by Milton Fahrney, includes George George, Louis Fitzroy, Jefferson Osborne, Arthur Mund, Henry Jackson, Gordon McGregor, Louise Horner, Janet Sully and Robert Kenyon.

MARY PICKFORD LEADS IN TORONTO POPULARITY CONTEST

The contest being conducted by the Toronto World has entered upon its first stage with Mary Pickford in the lead and Grace Cunard a close second.

Considerable interest is attached to the trial for popularity, and people in Toronto are working hard for their favorites.

Ocean Pictures Will Be Sold by Raver Corporation

In the List Are "Life Without Soul," "The Fortunate Youth," and "Driftwood"—Companies Will Continue Production as Separate Organizations

ARRANGEMENTS have just been perfected whereby the Raver Film Corporation takes over the exploitation of all films produced by the Ocean Film Corporation.

These consist of "Life Without Soul," an unusual drama founded on the famous story, "Frankenstein"; "The Fortunate Youth," by William J. Locke and a photo-revival of the famous old play "Driftwood," with Marshall Farnum, and other successes now in preparation.

The Raver-Thomas productions, including "The Other Girl," with James J. Corbett and Paul Gilmore; "The Hoosier Doctor" with Digby Bell, "The Witching Hour," "Alabama," "The Ranger," "As a Man Thinks," "The Embassy Ball," "The Harvest Moon," "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," "Oliver Goldsmith," and other Augustus Thomas successes are to be distributed in conjunction with Ocean productions to the same buyers in each territory.

The sales department of the Ocean company has been discontinued and removed to Harry R. Raver's offices in the World's Tower building.

When approached regarding the possibility of a definite combination of the Raver and Ocean companies, as indicated by the amalgamation of their selling forces, Mr. Raver would make no statement for publication other than to say that the present arrangement was satisfactory to both firms and that no statements regarding the future would seem advisable at this time.

He did admit, however, that big interests were working out certain plans involving a large investment and that for the present both the Raver and Ocean companies would continue production as separate organizations.

The first consignment of official Austrian war films, secured by Harry R. Raver through arrangement with the Austrian government, has just reached the Raver Film Corporation's New York office and is now being edited and arranged for an early showing.

A second consignment of twenty-five thousand feet of negative is due to arrive about April 1.

These films are delivered into Mr. Raver's hands by a special messenger, whose permits and passports are inscribed with a list of scenes shown in the pictures, together with such official documents as will remove any doubt regarding the authenticity of the films.

The fact that these are really the first comprehensive collection of Austrian war pictures ever brought to this country should make them popular, especially at this time.

A special showing will be arranged shortly and exclusive territory sold on the first series, each buyer being given an option on subsequent issues.

Beban Signs with Pallas Pictures for Paramount

Actor Whose Finished Performance as Poor Italian in "The Alien," Adapted from His Successful Play, "Sign of the Rose," Will Appear in Own Photodrama

GEORGE BEBAN, protrayer of Italian roles, has signed with Pallas Pictures to appear again on the Paramount Program. Mr. Beban is in Los Angeles and is now preparing a play written by himself.

A telegram announcing his engagement by Pallas does not mention the name of his next screen vehicle, but it is expected to be a modern drama of Italian theme.

Mr. Beban's work in "The Alien," "The Italian," and "The Sign of the Rose" made him known to photoplay audiences throughout the country. He created widespread interest when he appeared on Broadway in a combination picture and dramatic sketch entitled "The Alien," adapted from his play "The Sign of the Rose," which was afterwards made into a complete screen drama.

Since the age of eight, Mr. Beban has devoted his efforts to the stage. As the "Boy Baritone of California" he toured the country, later appearing as end man in minstrel organizations and then in stock.

He also appeared in important roles in such productions as Weber and Fields' Jubilee and George M. Cohan's "The American Idea."

OPPOSITION TO "NATION" SHOWING IN CLEVELAND MAY STOP

Although the Ohio censors have twice turned down "The Birth of a Nation," it is still believed that the great Griffith spectacle will be shown at the Cleveland Opera House according to schedule.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been booked for the Opera House for the last two weeks in March, but arrangements have been made to give the picture a clear run of ten weeks if the patronage should warrant so lengthy a stay.

Maryland Film Men Battle Against State Censorship

Board of Trade Delegation Aids Fight at Legislative Hearing in Annapolis, Where Sponsors of Motion Picture Liberty Make Favorable Impression—Outlook for Death of Pernicious Measure Is Bright—Exhibitors and Exchange Men Show Admirable Co-operation

ONE of the most spirited and impressive demonstrations ever made by exhibitors and exchange men against an inimical legislative measure was engineered at Annapolis, Md., on Thursday, February 17, when a group of nearly fifty Baltimore and Washington exhibitors and exchange managers journeyed to the Maryland capitol to register their protest against the censorship measure now before the state legislature.

Guy L. Wonders, president of the Maryland State League, headed the Baltimore-Washington delegation.

Board of Trade Represented

The Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., was represented by J. W. Binder, executive secretary; Paul Cromelin, of the Cosmofotofilm Company; W. Stephen Bush, of the Moving Picture World, and Lesley Mason, of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Despite the fact that the threatened censorship bill is reared against a powerful fabric of city and state politics, and is said to be of suspiciously obscure origin, the prospects for a motion picture victory were considered to be extremely bright, as a result of the Annapolis hearing.

Men who were in a position to know declared that the representatives of the films had made a decidedly favorable impression upon the Ways and Means Committee. Additional though indirect strength was said to have been gained from the weakness displayed by the advocates of the measure, who were present in surprisingly small numbers.

The fact that few proponents of the measure put in an appearance was taken as an indication of the political origin of the bill. It also demonstrated conclusively that there was no public demand in Baltimore for state censorship, and it is believed that this fact, coupled with several other features of the situation, will make it comparatively easy to prevent the measure from becoming a law.

The hearing at Annapolis, which occurred at half past eight in the evening, was preceded by an animated meeting at Moeller's, Baltimore, attended by the exhibitors and exchange men who were to form part of the delegation, as well as the New York visitors.

Exhibitors and Exchange Men Co-Operate

Exchange men and exhibitors stood shoulder to shoulder in an admirable attitude of co-operation from the beginning of the meeting. After the usual preliminary business, during which Guy L. Wonders was elected temporary chairman and J. Howard Bennett, of the new Pickwick theatre, Baltimore, temporary secretary, the list of speakers was made out and the order in which they were to appear decided.

The discussion of the various features of the measure and the course of the delegation at the hearing occupied the meeting until dinner time, when, without any adjournment, that refreshing matter was made the business of the moment while the consideration of the censorship question went on informally between courses.

At seven o'clock the entire body repaired to the Camden station of the Annapolis Short Line, where a special car had been chartered for the trip. One section of the car was reserved for the speakers of the evening, and there impromptu rehearsals of the arguments to be presented were held until the capitol was within sight.

A slight delay followed the delegation's arrival at the State House, and then the clerk of the Ways and Means Committee ushered the film men into the presence of Chairman Bryant and his colleagues. There the first disappointment occurred. Chairman Bryant announced that only two hours could be allowed for the entire hearing, and it developed that the advocates of the bill wished to be heard. Consequently the time of the motion picture men was cut to an hour and an equal period allotted the censor party.

At the Legislative Hearing

This made it necessary to revise the speakers' list, and it was finally reduced to Guy L. Wonders, J. W. Binder, Fulton Brylawski, W. Stephen Bush, J. Howard Bennett and Paul Cromelin.

But few questions were asked by the members of the committee, and those were answered to their entire satisfaction. It was plain to all present that the serious purpose of the motion picture men, their command of their position, their confidence in their arguments, and their fairness in laying down the broad principles of their opposition to censorship, won the committee and held them to attention.

Mr. Wonders, as league president, introduced the speakers after making a brief address himself. Mr. Binder laid down the fundamental bases of the anti-censorship position. Mr. Brylawski spoke on behalf of the exchange men. The exhibitors were represented by J. Howard Bennett and Dr. Schanze, of the West End and Schanze theatres, Baltimore. Paul Cromelin took the producers' viewpoint, and Mr. Bush exposed the fallacy and folly of erecting a censorship upon the theory of child protection, when that was a matter for parental control of the child's habits and recreations.

Highly elated with the success of the hearing, the delegation returned to Baltimore. Plans were immediately laid down for the launching of an extensive publicity campaign, both in the newspapers and on the theatre screens. Particularly encouraging was the attitude of the Baltimore newspapers, all of whom devoted unusual space to the hearing on Friday morning and displayed their appreciation of the principles and the issues at stake. The Baltimore American and the Evening News were especially conspicuous in their recognition of the importance of the event.

Thanks Tendered to New York Delegation

Warm thanks were tendered to the members of the Motion Picture Board of Trade and to Mr. Binder for their generous assistance at the hearing, and in collaborating with the Exhibitors' League toward the development of further publicity.

The exhibitors and exchange men who formed the motion picture delegation and contributed to the success of (Baltimore exhibitors and exchange men are designated by "B") the undertaking are here given: J. George Wittich, Majestic, B.; Peter Oletsky, Universal Exchange, B.; O. D. Weems, Mutual, B.; Thomas D. Goldberg, Goldberg theatre, B.; H. E. Reddish, Pathè Exchange, B.; H. E. Osborn, Pathé Exchange, Washington; Basil Morgan, Federation of Labor, B.; William Fait, Red Moon theatre, B.; Fulton Brylawski, Washington; Dr. F. W. NO SHORTAGE OF RAW STOCK FOR PATHE

A story of the "yellow" sort recently appeared in a theatrical magazine to the effect that Pathé had cut down its program because of shortage in raw stock. J. A. Berst, vice president and general manager of Pathé, when the story was brought to his attention, promptly stamped as a gross misstatement.

"As a matter of fact," said Mr. Berst, "Pathé has enough stock on hand to last four months without getting any at all from Europe.

"The only stock we cannot get is non-inflammable. When our present stock of celluloid film gets low we anticipate no trouble in replenishing it."

Lou Bent, formerly with the Mutual exchange at 1311 Pine street, St. Louis, has been appointed special representative of the Universal exchange at 2116 Locust street.

How Ingenious Mr. Ditmars Works for Paramount

Curator of Zoological Park Solves Problem of Stories Acted by Animals—"Gathering of the Clans" Shows an Eating Race Between Monkey, Grasshopper and Caterpillar

CONSPICUOUS among the releases of the Bray Studios, Inc., through the Paramount Pictures Corporation are the nature studies contributed by Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Park.

Mr. Ditmars has solved the problem of stories acted by animals. His "Gathering of the Clans" is an interesting example of the way he works. The star act in this is an eating race between a monkey, grasshopper, and caterpillar.

The curator decided some time ago that his exploits in nature study were incomplete. He had never taken a motion picture of a genuine wood-bred skunk from close range.

He searched for a real, lively one with a mean disposition. Hearing that a farmer in Valhalla had caught one alive in a trap, Mr. Ditmars, armed with a specially constructed asbestos box, went to Valhalla and borrowed the skunk from the farmer.

Back to the studio at his home in Scarsdale he took it. He spent three days getting on friendly terms with little Mephitis, and the creature got to know him so well that at last he brought his camera and a supply of formaldehyde into the room, and left with a film of a genuine rip-roaring wood skunk in war maneuvers.

When Mr. Ditmars tried to return the skunk to the farmer, the latter refused to take it. Mr. Ditmars had to take it back to Scarsdale. Anybody who will give little Mephitis a good home can have him.

McNamara in Charge of Mirror Scenario Department

Author of "Traffic in Souls" Believes in Demand of Public for Photodramas Exploiting Great Problems of Life—President Harmon in Accord with His Views

WALTER McNAMARA, who wrote "Traffic in Souls," "Ireland A Nation" and produced other photoplays, has taken charge of the scenario department of Mirror Films, Inc., and will begin at once the work of organizing his part in the production of Mirror pictures.

McNamara, an Irishman by birth, came to this country in 1912 after an interesting career as blacksmith, marine engineer, and impresario with such stars as Anna Held, and Nance O'Neil under his management. He has also been a newspaper man, a playwright, and an actor.

For Universal, he wrote the "Binks" comedies and special stories in which King Baggot was featured. His photoplay, "Traffic in Souls," an expose of the white slave traffic, created a sensation.

Questioned as to the type of photoplay which he preferred to make, McNamara said:

"Big, social dramas. I am a great believer in exploiting the great problems of life on the screen. We hope to do big things at the Mirror studio. The public wants big, soul stirring and heart gripping dramas and we shall supply the demand."

Clifford B. Harmon, president of Mirror, who made the arrangements whereby McNamara goes to the Mirror studio, is in accord with the Irish producer's ideas and remarked that the new member of his staff would be afforded every opportunity to put those plans in execution.

Plans Under Way for Improvements at Lasky Studio

Laboratory Is Practically Completed—At Rear of Dressing Rooms Exterior Stage, 80 by 300 Feet, Will Be Built—Administration Building in Bungalow Form Is Planned

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Feb. 17.

PLANS for many improvements at the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play studio in Hollywood have been prepared, and now that the laboratory is practically completed, the work of these other improvements will be taken up.

The first which will be made are the dressing rooms for the players, which face on Lasky Lane. A second story will be built on all of these, thus increasing the capacity to twice that of the present time.

At the rear of the dressing rooms is to be built an exterior stage, 80 x 300 feet, which is of sufficient size to accommodate the large sets now being used.

An administration building of the type of a two-story California bungalow, is to replace the property department, which in the future will be housed in a separate building more centrally located.

A new building to contain a number of dressing rooms for stars will be built near the new administration building.

Board of Trade Has Many Irons in the Fire Just Now

And Like the Wares of the Peanut Vender, "They're All Hot"—While the Organization Is Conducting a Relentless Warfare Against Censorship (a Day and Night Job in Itself) It Perfects Plans for the First National Exposition of Motion Picture Industries, a Cartoonists' Dinner and a Few Other Things

THE manifold activities of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, and of the executive secretary, J. W. Binder, for the advancement of the industry, are strikingly typified by the fact that while the board is conducting a relentless war on censorship it is also perfecting plans for the First National Exposition of Motion Picture Industries, selecting its officers for 1916, and, through its Publicity Committee, arranging for a Cartoonists' Dinner, to be given March 12 in New York.

It was at the annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of North Carolina that the board saw established an exhibitors' record for direct condemnation of any Federal pre-publicity censorship of motion pictures. The convention was held at Greensboro, February 14 and 15.

Mr. Binder, in his address to the convention, dealt in detail with the motives behind the censorship efforts in Washington of Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, head of the so-called International Reform Bureau, and with the work of agitators and irresponsible agencies.

The convention spoke its mind on censorship in no uncertain terms, as is shown by the following resolution adopted by the meeting:

North Carolina League Passes Resolution

RESOLVED that the motion picture exhibitors of North Carolina in convention assembled, unqualifiedly condemn the efforts now being made to fasten the principle of federal pre-publicity censorship of motion pictures upon the American people through the several bills being considered by the House Committee on Education at Washington.

RESOLVED FURTHER that the convention pledges its membership, representing 175 theatres in the state, with a total capital invested of upwards of a million dollars, attended daily by more than one hundred thousand people, to use every effort to defeat censorship measures of any kind or character, whether they be federal, state or municipal, and be it further

RESOLVED that in thus going on record against against governmental interference in a legitimate established industry—now the fifth in the country—the convention desires at the same time to place its seal of condemnation upon the making and exhibiting of any picture which is of a questionable character or which is immoral, indecent or obscene.

The convention records with gratification the fact that the cheap, fly-by-night exhibitor who has been chiefly to blame in the past for furnishing a market for this objectionable class of pictures is rapidly being eliminated from the business. The convention pledges its hearty and undivided support and assistance in the enforcement of existing laws for the suppression of pictures of this class. Be it further

RESOLVED that the secretary of this convention be instructed to give these resolutions statewide publicity and that copies of the same be sent to each member of Congress from North Carolina.

Unanimously adopted this fourteenth day of February, 1916, at Greensboro, N. C.

(Signed)
H. B. VARNER,
A. F. SAMS,
P. W. WELLS,
Committee.

This telegram was sent to Robert L. Doughton, member of Congress from North Carolina and a member of the House Education Committee:

Motion picture exhibitors of North Carolina in convention assembled unanimously ask you to vote against a favorable report of the Smith-Hughes or any other of the censorship bills being considered by the House Education Committee.

There are represented in this convention 175 motion picture theatres in North Carolina patronized daily by more than 100,000 people.

The board also reports progress on its plans for the National Exposition, which will be held at Madison Square Garden, New York, May 6 to 13.

Board Reports Exposition Progress

The Exposition will be under the auspices of the Board of Trade and will be managed by J. W. Binder and Harry A. Cochrane, general manager of Madison Square Garden, and one of the most successful American organizers of trade shows and industrial expositions.

Many important trade conferences and conventions will be held in conjunction with the Exposition.

Film manufacturers will have their favorite players on hand to meet the public, the manufacturing end of the business will be illustrated, and all the latest devices and accessories will be shown.

In its election of officers for 1916, the board re-elected J. Stuart Blackton, of Vitagraph, as president.

The other officers for 1916 are: Vice-presidents, Carl Laemmle, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Nicholas Power, Nicholas Power Company; John R. Freuler, Mutual Film Corporation; F. J. Rembusch, Mirror Screen Company; W. Stephen Bush, editor, Moving Picture World; W. R. Rothacker, Industrial Moving Picture Company.

Directors, J. Stuart Blackton, Nicholas Power, A. J. Gilligham, R. H. Cochrane, Walter W. Irwin, S. L. Rothapfel, William A. Johnston, J. E. Brulatour, P. A. Powers, and J. W. Binder, the executive secretary.

Executive Committee, Walter W. Irwin, chairman, Nicholas Power, P. A. Powers, William A. Johnston, E. A. MacManus, J. Stuart Blackton, J. E. Brulatour, John R. Freuler, J. W. Binder.

Secretary, Edward A. MacManus; treasurer, Joseph W. Engel; executive secretary, J. W. Binder.

The Executive Committee of the Board voted its endorsement of the motion picture actors' fund campaign to place the work of the fund on an assured financial basis.

The appointment of the following members of the Bureau of Standards was recommended: Don J. Bell, Nicholas Power, F. H. Richardson, C. Francis Jenkins, and Albert E. Smith.

At the meeting of the Publicity Committee of the Board of Trade on February 10, organization for the year was effected. Arthur James, of Metro, was re-elected chairman, and Paul Gulick, of Universal, was chosen vice-chairman, an office made necessary by the enlargement of the committee's activities.

Plans discussed at the meeting make it an assured fact that the Cartoonists' Dinner, to be given at the Hotel Astor, New York, March 12, will be an event ranking with the Gridiron, and other notable dinners.

The following committee on arrangements was appointed: Arthur Leslie, Sam Spedon, George Blaisdell, Terry Ramsaye, P. A. Parsons, Paul Gulick, Carl H. Pierce, J. W. Binder, Arthur James and T. M. Alexander.

Sothern, Shakesperian Actor of Note, with "V"

Distinguished Stage Player Signs for Leads in Four Feature Productions, One Especially Written for Him, and Will Begin Work on May 1

EDWARD H. SOTHERN, one of the foremost Shakespearian actors on the English-speaking stage, has decided to lend his talents to the screen. He has been engaged by the Vitagraph Company of America for the leading role in four feature productions.

Mrs. Sothern (Julia Marlowe) will not be seen with him on the screen.

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, of Vitagraph, in confirming the announcement of Mr. Sothern's accession to the ranks of the silent drama, said that one of these films will be a specially written story for the famous actor.

"He will begin work about May 1," said Mr. Blackton, "and will continue through the summer until the four are completed. Some of the stars of our company will support him, among them Anita Stewart, Edith Storey and Lillian Walker."

The distinguished actor, who also confirmed the announcement that he had signed a contract with Vitagraph, remarked: "Up to recently I regarded motion pictures as comparatively unimportant as compared with the speaking stage. I considered the screen's limitations as regards the voice of the actor, as being too great a handicap. How on earth, I thought, could the immortal Shakespeare be produced without the speaking of every one of his lines!

"I am convinced now, however, that the combined use of subtitles and lip movements will more than offset this handicap. Then I considered the tremendous scope in the matter of scenic portrayal, and I am now on my way to become a motion picture actor.

"In the legitimate theatre I appear before several hundreds—possibly a thousand or two, six nights a week, for a matter of forty weeks. In the movies, I am told, I will appear before hundreds of thousands every afternon and every evening. The temptation was too strong."

The Sothern films will be shown in New York first under the Vitagraph's special direction as in the case of "The Battle Cry of Peace." It is expected that by that time the company will again control a Broadway house.

YOUNG IS MEMBER OF METRO SCENARIO STAFF

Howard Irving Young, one of the most promising of the younger group of successful scenario writers, has been added to Metro's staff of writers, and will devote all his time with that company, making adaptations from books, plays and unfinished manuscripts. Mr. Young will work directly under the supervision of Harry O. Hoyt.

Mr. Hoyt, who has written more than four hundred scenarios, and is the highest salaried writer in the profession, will in the future devote all his time to original manuscripts.

Mr. Young was graduated from the New York University two years ago, but before leaving the university he had written and sold a number of scenarios.

Until recently he was associated with Kalem as a special writer and film editor. While with that company he wrote many of their best features, including "The Call of the Dance," for Yansci Dolly; "The Apaches of Paris," "The Net of Deceit," "The Pitfall," and "The Lotus Woman," all original 'scripts.

He is also the author of "Hearts in Exile," which he wrote for Clara Kimball Young.

Before joining Kalem, Mr. Young was with the Reliance Company, and for a brief time was associated with the Crystal Film Printing Company.

MILLER HOST AT DINNER HELD FOR LEONHARDT

Los Angeles, Feb. 17.

Frederick A. Miller, owner and manager of Miller's theatres, Los Angeles, was host at a dinner given at Levy's Café, Thursday evening, for Harry Leonhardt, former Pacific Coast and mountain states district manager of the Fox Film Corporation, who left Friday to take up his new work as manager of the Chicago district for William Fox.

Alexander Cuscaden, city editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, was toastmaster, and the guests included representatives of all local papers, trade publications, a number of theatre men, and members of the Fox producing organization.

Following the dinner the later hours of the evening and a portion of the morning was spent at the home of the Los Angeles Press Club.

A most pleasant feature of the event was the detailed story given by William Farnum of his first experience in pictures when he met Thomas Santchi, and they fought the fight of "The Spoilers."

KINGSLEY MADE FOX MANAGER IN DETROIT

C. G. Kingsley, better known in the trade as "Neal," has been promoted to manager of the Detroit office of the Fox Film Corporation, succeeding A. I. Shapiro, who has been assigned special work in the eastern territory.

Mr. Kingsley was for a year stationed in Cincinnati for Fox and for the past few months has been doing special work in Michigan.

Horsley Plays for Week of Feb. 28 Mutual De Luxe

"A Law Unto Himself" Is First Subject, a Drama of the West Featuring Crane Wilbur in a Dual Role—"The Heart of Tara" Is Set for March 4

CRANE WILBUR MARGARET GIBSON WILLIAM CLIFFORD

THE five-reel David Horsley productions will be offered as Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, releases during the week of February 28. On Monday, the 28, will be released "A Law Unto Himself," and on Saturday, March 4, "The Heart of Tara" will be distributed.

In theme and treatment the two productions carry out Mr. Horsley's aim to furnish pictures of widely diverging nature.

"A Law Unto Himself" is a drama of the West, not the West of cowboys and Indians, but brought to date in the light that it really is. Crane Wilbur is the featured player and enacts a dual role.

In its portrayal Wilbur is supported by a carefully selected cast, including Carl von Schiller, Louis Durham, Francis Raymond, E. W. Harris, Steve Murphy and Virginia Kirtley together with a host of other carefully selected players in minor parts.

Of the principals named all except Wilbur and von Schiller, who are regular members of Mr. Horsley's stock company, were expressly engaged for this picture only because of their peculiar adaptability to play the parts they here portray.

"The Heart of Tara" is a drama set in the heart of India amid the colorful surroundings of the great tropical country. The story is founded on the theme of hate. The leading male and female roles are played by Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, respectively, and among others in the cast are Sherman Bainbridge, Marie James, Marvel Spencer, Edward Alexander, Edward Roberts, and Gordon Russell.

The Bostock animals are also identified in unraveling the plot, adding no small measure of interest to the picture.

Vitagraph's "Secret Kingdom" a 31-Reel Serial

Director Marston and a Large Company Is Now in San Antonio and Adjacent Country, Texas, for Filming $250,000 Production, Written by Vance and Featuring Richman

DIRECTOR THEODORE MARSTON and a company of Vitagraph players are in San Antonio, Tex., arranging for the production of "The Secret Kingdom," a thirty-one-reel Blue Ribon serial, which will be made under Marston's direction at a cost of approximately $250,000, according to his estimate. At least one-fourth of the work in connection with it will be done in San Antonio and adjacent country.

The San Antonio Chamber of Commerce has assured Director Marston of its cooperation and that of all the city's interests. A campaign by that business organization was started, with a view to inducing the big motion picture concerns to establish headquarters in that city.

The scenario for "The Secret Kingdom" was written by Louis Joseph Vance and Basil Dickey. The story is based on love and adventure. Arrangements have been made for the appearance of the story in serial form in more than one hundred newspapers at the same time instalments of the picture are released.

Charles Richman, who starred in "The Battle Cry of Peace," will play the leading role in "The Secret Kingdom." The cast includes Arline Pretty, Dorothy Kelly, Joseph Kilgour, Ned Finley, Robert Whitworth and William E. Dunn. Arthur Ross is the camera man who will film the entire series.

In the last two years Marston has made a total of ninety-seven pictures for the Vitagraph company. Among his recent successes are "Mortman," "The Cave Man," featuring Robert Edeson; "Surprises of an Empty Hotel," and "The Patriot," featuring Charles Richman; and "The Quagmire," and "Miss Warren's Brother," featuring Joseph Kilgour.

NO SUNDAY SHOWS FOR CHESTERTON, INDIANA

Proprietors of motion picture theatres at Chesterton, Ind., opened recently on Sunday, without molestation, but were notified by the prosecutor and sheriff of the county not to try it again.

Metro Re-elects Rowland and Engel as Heads

Two Men Were Recipients of Votes, Thanks and Approval for Their Guidance of Company to Point of Eminence in Industry—Board of Directors Is Increased from Seven to Nine—Fitzgerald of Detroit Is First Vice-President—Arthur James Congratulated by Board for Success of Publicity Campaigns

At the most enthusiastic meeting ever held by the Metro Pictures Corporation, Richard A. Rowland was re-elected president, Joseph W. Engel was re-elected treasurer, and the two were inducted into office with votes, thanks and approval that would make even less modest men tingle with satisfaction.

The director's meeting followed the annual stockholders' meeting held on Wednesday in the Metro offices in the Longacre Building, and Friday and Saturday were spent in going over Metro's program of events and ratifying the schedule outlined by its leaders.

The board of directors was increased from seven to nine by the addition of L. Lawrence Weber, president of the Popular Plays and Players, Inc., and an associate of H. H. Frazee in theatrical enterprises, and A. S. Beymer, of the Keystone National Bank of Pittsburgh.

The following is a list of the other officers elected: First vice-president, James A. Fitzgerald of Detroit; second vice-president, James B. Clark of Pittsburgh; treasurer, Joseph W. Engel of New York; secretary, Louis B. Mayer of Boston; assistant secretary and general counsel, J. Robert Rubin of New York.

Executive Committee: Richard A. Rowland of New York; Joseph W. Engel, New York; Louis B. Mayer, Boston.

Directors: Richard A. Rowland, New York; Joseph W. Engel, New York; Louis B. Mayer, Boston; James A. Fitzgerald, Detroit; L. Lawrence Weber, New York; A. S. Beymer, Pittsburgh; O. N. Davies, Minneapolis; John D. Clark, Philadelphia; James B. Clark, Pittsburgh.

Metro Spirit at Its Height

All the elections were unanimous, and the now famous Metro spirit was at its height.

Secretary Louis B. Mayer, addressing the meeting, congratulated the corporation on its growth from a small beginning a little less than a year ago to its present status as the young giant among the feature companies, and the contender for first honors in the motion picture industry. He ascribed Metro's success to ability, leadership, enthusiasm and complete cooperation.

In thanking President Rowland and Treasurer Engel for their unremitting labors and the results they have achieved, the spokesman voiced the sentiments of the board when he said:

"Metro has proved what exchangemen can do when they stick together as one man and by cooperation and enthusiastic support of the central body turn the tide of victory their way."

Responding, President Rowland said: "We have gone forward with determination to give the exhibitors what they needed and what they wanted, and their response has been certain and sure.

"We are proud of our record, but we are not puffed up about it nor content with it. Our march has been along progressive lines that were business-like, and we have tried to be fair to the exhibitors, to the public and to ourselves."

Mr. Rowland then called upon his associate Mr. Engel, who spoke also of Metro's progress. Mr. Engel said:

"We were told that exchange men didn't know the meaning of cooperation, but we knew better, and I want to point out to you that in all the months since our start your management has suffered no embarrassment from lack of full, complete and cordial cooperation.

"It is a great honor to be elected to office in a company like Metro, and to find that one's associates are satisfied to stand by, to bear with our mistakes and to hold up our hands in the great work we have undertaken.

"Metro will never rest content until it occupies the predominant place in motion pictures, and if our progress in the coming year shall equal the strides we have made in the last ten months, Metro will have reached the goal toward which Metro has been striving so earnestly and so successfully."

Vote $250,000 for Publicity

An appropriation of $250,000 was voted for publicity and general advertising, to be expended in the next twelve months, and the publicity program arranged in a series of special campaigns was approved in toto.

A number of big things may be expected from Metro during the coming year, and it was announced that these would be made public at scheduled intervals.

The first announcement includes a series of Metro Travelogues, which will include a departure in scenic pictures, a cartoon series and an addition of a number of novelty subjects in short length releases.

The program for the big series in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be starred was approved. These pictures will be released one each week in addition to the regular feature release.

Announce Weekly Schedule

The weekly schedule includes one five-reel Metro wonderplay, one Metro-Drew comedy, one Metro Travelogue and one installment of the Bushman and Bayne series, the name of which will not be announced until March.

In approving in its entirety the publicity and advertising program for the new year the board passed a resolution congratulating Arthur James, publicity director, on the nation-wide scope of the publicity campaigns which have so materially contributed to the successes of the year.

Private Showing of First Part of Billie Burke Film

Six Hundred Feet of Hughes Screen Novel, Featuring Broadway Star as Society Debutante, is Run off at Kleine Studio for Critical Inspection

A PRIVATE showing of the first six hundred feet of film of the new Rupert Hughes' screen novel featuring Billie Burke, was held at the Kleine studios last week.

Among those present were: Billie Burke, George Kleine and James M. Sheldon. The film was given a critical inspection to determine the progress that is being made in its production. After the showing Mr. Kleine expressed himself as follows:

"We have found a screen type of unusual merit in Billie Burke. We knew of her remarkable stage personality, of course. We knew of her ability as an actress in speaking parts.

"Now we know that she emphasizes in pictures every characteristic that made her so famous on the stage.

"The situations provided by Rupert Hughes give Miss Burke an unusual opportunity to display her talent. She is wonderful in the role of the society debutante.

"The scenes we have made are interiors showing our heroine in her palatial home on Riverside Drive, New York. These interiors represent a tremendous investment.

"Each is built entirely of lumber. We avoided the use of wall board because we wanted natural shadows and clear photography.

"The walls are paneled and painted with four coats of interior finish. All furniture is in perfect harmony with wall decoration.

"We are proceeding with great care. Every member of the cast was selected only after thorough thought. Mr. Hughes is diligently at work on the scenario, and I am confident that the new novel will mark the advent of original literature on the screen."

SEATING BILL COMES UP IN BAY STATE LEGISLATURE

In addition to the bill to limit feature pictures to twenty-five minutes, already described in Motion Picture News, there are among the thirty or more measures introduced in the Massachusetts legislature, relative to the film industry, one or two worthy of special noting.

One provides that no person gaining admittance to a place of amusement by paid admission or otherwise shall be allowed to stand therein after all the seats are taken. Provision is made, however, for firemen, policemen or employes of the house.

Another provides that it shall be unlawful for the owner, proprietor or manager of a moving picture theatre to display on the screen any advertisement or announcement, with the exception of advertisements or announcements of religious or charitable institutions or events, or when it refers to his own theatrical affairs.

MISS HANSON WENT DIRECT TO ESSANAY TO PLAY IN "HAVOC"

Gladys Hanson, famous Frohman star, went to the Essanay studios in Chicago direct from Broadway to play the lead in "The Havoc." She was born in Atlanta, Ga., and educated in a girls' school in the South.

She studied dramatics and soon won the attention of the Frohmans, who besides taking her for small parts also brought her school chum, Virginia Hammond, to the stage.

"The Spoilers" was their first play. The two advanced rapidly and Miss Hanson took the heavy feminine leads in E. H. Sothern's interpretation of Shakespeare's plays. She was the queen in "Hamlet," and held equivalent parts in the other plays.

After several years in Sothern plays exclusively, Miss Hanson played opposite Kyrle Bellew and in support of Minnie Maddern Fiske. A year ago she spent some time before the camera for four feature pictures.

Her latest work was as leading woman with Lou Tellegen, who married Geraldine Farrar. They played in "The Ware Case" at Maxine Elliott's theatre.

"FOR A WOMAN'S FAIR NAME," FROM VITAGRAPH, FEB. 28

Robert Edeson, who has the stellar role in "For a Woman's Fair Name," heads a list of photoplay stars in the Vitagraph releases for the week of February 28. The program for the week is well balanced with two comedies and two dramas.

The other dramatic offering is "La Paloma," a three-part Broadway Star feature, featuring Mary Anderson and William Duncan.

Comedy is supplied by "Her Bad Quarter of an Hour," in which Lillian Walker and Evart Overton appear, and "Tubby Turns the Tables," featuring Hughie Mack. This one-reeler contains three hundred feet of "Odd Acquaintances," showing feathered and furred folk in strange companionship.

Sixty Per Cent Attendance Is Expected from Indiana

This Number of Exhibitors in the State Have Signified Their Intentions of Being Present at Convention in Indianapolis, March 2-3

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Indianapolis, Feb. 19.

F. J. REMBUSCH, Earnest P. Hunter, Joseph H. Gavin, John A. Victor, J. C. Lockwood, B. V. Barton, L. H. O'Donnell, J. B. Hubert, and Fred Sanders, the chairmen of the various committees in charge of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' Convention, to be held in Indianapolis March 2-3, are "working like Trojans" to make this meeting a success.

Even at this date fully sixty per cent. of the exhiibtors throughout the state have signified their intention of attending, and when the convention is called to order at ten o'clock on the morning of the second, it is expected ninety per cent. will be present.

In connection with the convention, which will be held in the Severin Hotel, will be an exhibit by manufacturers and dealers in everything pertaining to the motion picture industry.

Most of the space for these exhibits has already been sold, thus assuring the members the most complete display of this kind they have ever had a chance to witness in that part of the country.

Another attraction is the grand ball, to be given in Tomlinson Hall, in which several of the noted stars of filmdom are to appear.

It is easy to see the magnitude of the undertaking, as Tomlinson Hall is the largest auditorium in Indiana, and the members who know, say that the hall will be packed when the grand march begins at eight p. m., Friday, March 3.

Payment in Advance Demands in Ohio Not Adjusted

Matter Is in the Hands of Exchange Committee of Northwestern State Branch—Federated Women's Clubs Work in Harmony with Exhibitors for "Family Programs"

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, Feb. 19.

DESULTORY discussions leading to no decisive action being taken on topics of great importance to the trade, had a marked effect upon the attendance at the last meeting of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

No agreement has yet been reached between the exchanges and the exhibitors on the payment in advance demands of the exchanges. A majority of the exhibitors still maintain that honest and well-established members of the trade should not be penalized because exchanges have permitted themselves to be duped by "fly by nights." The exchange committee of the league has the matter in hand.

Members of the Federation of Women's Clubs at this week's meeting, in Cleveland, made additions to the committee co-operating with exhibitors in an effort to arrange week-end family programs at selected neighborhood houses.

The speakers referred in terms of praise to the spirit in which the women have been met by the exhibitors, and to the valuable instruction afforded by Attorney Ben J. Sawyer and Charles A. McGown at special motion picture exhibitions.

At the same meeting of the Federation of Women's Clubs a letter was read from Mrs. Maud Murray Miller, of the Ohio Censor Board, asking the club women of Cleveland to investigate difficulties of censorship and the actual good it accomplishes before attempting to change the present system.

Mutual Reports Large Volume of Business for Vogue

"Comedies Are Built on What We Call Slapstick with a Reason" Declares President Samuel S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Company

WITH Vogue Films, Inc., established less than four months, the Mutual Film Corporation reports a large volume of business on this brand, with a steady demand for Vogue comedies from patrons and exhibitors.

"The Vogue 'slapstick' comedies are built on the basis of a reason for every laugh," said President Samuel S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Company, producers of the comedies.

"When Mr. Joseph H. Finn and I decided to produce what we call 'slapstick with a reason,' we combed the country for talent that would be entirely capable of producing this eccentric type of comedy.

"Under our general supervision, two well-known directors, Rube Miller and Jack Dillon, are producing 'funny business' from the pens of Robert A. Dillon and Thomas Delmar, featuring in the leading roles Rube Miller, Madge Kirby, Pricilla Dean, Arthur Moon, Patty McGuire, Arthur Tavares, Alice Neice and Louise Owen.

"Each Vogue comedy has a legitimate plot and continuity of story upon which all eccentric action is based. Both Miller and Dillon are experts in burlesque, acrobatic and athletic comedy, having been engaged in the origination, production and acting of all kinds of comedy for years."

RICHARD NEILL IS CAST FOR IMPORTANT FOX ROLE

Richard Neill, who has an important role in the William Fox release, "The Fool's Revenge," is an experienced stage and screen actor.

Latterly he has been appearing in five-reel features, playing opposite Lily Cahill in "Col. Carter of Cartersville," Gail Kane in the Equitable production of "The Labyrinth," and William Farnum in "The Broken Law." He is now a member of the Fox company in the East.

In his stage days, he appeared with Mary Mannering, Virginia Harned, W. H. Thompson and others, and in a number of musical comedy successes.

Otis Skinner Latest Distinguished Recruit to Screen

Well-Known "Legitimate" Actor, Who Has Been in the Public Eye for Several Years, Is Signed by the California Motion Picture Corporation for an Appearance in an Elaborate Production of "Kismet," Ten Reels, for Release Early Autumn

OTIS SKINNER, one of the most distinguished actors of the legitimate stage, has signed with the California Motion Picture Corporation for the stellar role in a picturization of "Kismet," the spectacle in which Mr. Skinner achieved notable popularity on the speaking stage.

The California Corporation announces that "Kismet" will be presented in ten reels, and will be ready for the public early next Fall.

It will be given an elaborate production, in which the glory of ancient Bagdad, the sensuous charm of the East and the story of Hajj the beggar, who becomes a noble in a day and finds himself a beggar again before the hour of the last prayer at the Mosque, will be screened on a costly scale.

Mr. Skinner hitherto has steadily refused to appear in pictures. He was said to feel that actors and actresses should not confuse their identity by alternate appearances on the stage and screen.

The case of "Kismet" was an exception, however. Mr. Skinner was loath to leave the character of Hajj snoring endlessly on the stone bench before the Mosque.

He believed Hajj should be installed permanently in the hall of fame reserved for great stage characters.

The motion picture version will lend itself to the development of gorgeous scenes and to the pageantry of the play in a manner which is expected to eclipse the legitimate production.

Mr. Skinner, a producer of marked ability in his own right, promises to be of the greatest assistance in mounting the ensemble episodes and the mob scenes.

In connection with the question of Mr. Skinner's fitness for the screen, it is pointed out that his training, which began in the period of the older drama, has been in the field of pantomime rather than that of elocution. The older drama required of its actors—acting. Pose, poise, gesture, facial play, grace, carriage and mute deportment were all equally essential to the playerr before he won popularity.

This training, coupled with Mr. Skinner's long experience as an interpreter of striking characters, is expected to stand him in good stead when he goes before the camera.

Otis Skinner, the son of a Massachusetts clergyman, was born in Cambridge, Mass. Before he was twenty years of age, he determined upon a stage career.

His first role was that of a negro in a now forgotten play called "Woodleigh" at the Philadelphia Museum in 1877.

Within two years he had successfully invaded New York, and was appearing in support of Edwin Booth and Lawrence Barrett.

For several years he was a member of Augustin Daly's company, gaining equal popularity in England as well as in this country.

In 1899 Mr. Skinner toured the country as leading man for Madame Modjeska in her association with the great Booth.

OTIS SKINNER

He played Capt. Absolute with Joseph Jefferson in "The Rivals" after a second engagement with Modjeska, and then began his career as star and producer. This was interrupted but once, briefly, when he appeared with Ada Rehan, playing Charles Surface, Petruchio and Shylock, and other notable roles.

His performance of the role of Colonel Philippe Bridau in "The Honor of the Family" was probably the crowning achievement of a series of romantic appearances which include "His Grace de Grammont," "The King's Jester," "Villon the Vagabond," "Prince Rudolph," "Rosemary," "Prince Otto," "In a Balcony," and other plays of similar appeal, besides a number of Shakesperian impersonations.

METRO SCENARIO EDITOR BRINGS OUT NOVEL WITH WESTERN LOCAL COLOR

Edfrid A. Bingham, chief scenario reader on the Metro staff and a former well-known newspaper man, is the author of a novel which will be placed on the market March 18, called "The Heart of Thunder Mountain."

It is a story of the far West, which Mr. Bingham knows as well as any living writer, and one of the figures in it is a wonderful horse, Sunnysides, that plays an almost human part in the unravelling of the story.

The book is being published by Little, Brown and Company, of Boston. Mr. Bingham, who is a native of Ohio, was in the newspaper business for many years before going into motion pictures.

He was dramatic critic on the New York Evening Mail, and afterward went to Paris, where he was in charge of the Paris edition of the New York Herald.

Omaha Photoplay Managers Association Organized

Thomas of Strand Is Elected President; Schlank of the Hipp, Treasurer, and Monaghan of the Boulevard, Secretary—Theatre Fumigation First Problem of New Body

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Omaha, Feb. 19.

FORTY motion picture exhibitors in Omaha met last week and organized the Omaha Photoplay Managers Association, which will hold regular meetings and discuss matters of interest to the theatres of the city. H. M. Thomas of the Strand was elected president; Jake Schlank of the Hipp, treasurer, and Ed Monaghan of the Boulevard, secretary.

Already the association has had to wrestle with a tough problem. Omaha has been in the grip of a scarlet fever epidemic. To aid in stopping the spread the city health commissioner issued an order that no child under twelve years of age was to attend a motion picture theatre, and every theatre had to be fumigated daily.

The exhibitors appeared before the city commission, at first one by one, and then in a body, objecting to the move. It would cost from three to forty-two dollars daily to fumigate, they said, and to lose the patronage of the children would be a heavy blow.

The association this week held a meeting at the Strand theatre and there, after a conference with the health officer and the city commissioners, they agreed to bar all children under twelve, for the time being, and to fumigate twice weekly.

The city was divided into seven districts and a member of the association clothed with police power and made an inspector in each district. It is his duty to inspect all theatres in his district twice a week to see that fumigation is being done according to the regulations.

Every member of the association was placed on his honor faithfully to carry out the instructions of the authorities.

"We felt that the orders given were somewhat unreasonable and impractical," said President Thomas.

"When we showed the city officials we were ready to co-operate with them in every way, even to the closing of our houses, we soon got together on the present plan, which will make every theatre safe."

Realizing the loss the theatres would meet with as a result of the restricted patronage and the cost of fumigating, the exchanges united in an offer to reduce the cost of reels 50 per cent. during the epidemic. The offer was gratefully received, as several of the smaller suburban houses had about decided to close their doors.

Theatre Tax Collection Cleared Up By Commissioner

Payment of Necessary Sum by Owner Covers All Performances in the Structure, Whether Held Under His Own Supervision or That of the Person Leasing the Theatre

Washington, D. C., Feb. 19.

THERE has been more or less general misunderstanding regarding the interpretation of that section of the so-called war emergency revenue act of October 22, 1914, which pertains to the taxing of motion picture and other theatres, according to Acting Commissioner David A. Gates, of the Internal Revenue Bureau of the Treasury Department, in a letter addressed to collectors of internal revenue, revenue agents, and others concerned.

In this letter is restated the construction of the provision in question as follows:

"Where the owner of a building pays special tax as proprietor of a theatre, covering a theatre or auditorium in the building in question, the stamp secured by him will cover all dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays or performances given in such theatre or auditorium, produced either by himself or under his proprietorship, or produced by others under lease of the theatre or auditorium from the owner thereof.

"The owner may, upon application to the collector of internal revenue, have the special tax stamp transferred to any other theatre, auditorium, or airdrome, provided the seating capacity of the theatre, auditorium or airdrome is not greater than the seating capacity indicated on the face of the special tax stamp.

"Of course, if performances are continued at the building from which the stamp is transferred, a new special tax stamp must be taken out to cover such building.

"Where a lessee of a theatre pays special tax therefor, the special tax stamp secured by him, if not transferred to another location, will cover performances given in the theatre under the proprietorship of another, who subleases the theatre from the lessee.

"However, if the lessee sells out his lease, and is no longer connected with the theatre in any capacity whatsoever, his special tax stamp will not cover performances given by the purchaser of the lease.

"Where two parties pay special tax and operate a theatre as a partnership, upon one of the partners selling out his interests or a new partner coming into the partnership, the special tax stamp secured by the first partnership will cover performances given by the succeeding partnership.

"Where a hall or auditorium is maintained for public entertainment, but operatic or dramatic, or other representations, plays or performances are given therein only occasionally, for example, on an average of not exceeding twice a month, the proprietors of such hall or auditorium do not incur special tax liability.

"The owners or agents of theatrical troupes traveling around the country and giving performances in halls or auditoriums for which special taxes have not been paid by the owners or lessees thereof, are required to pay special tax under the sixth subdivision of section 3 of the act aforesaid, and may have their special tax stamps transferred from place to place upon application to the collector of internal revenue.

"It will suffice if the owner or agent, upon entering a collection district, files with the collector a statement as to the theatres and towns in which performances are to be given E. A. Dyer.

MYERS AND ROSEMARY THEBY LEAVE UNIVERSAL

Harry Myers, director and leading man and Rosemary Theby, leading woman, are no longer affiliated with Universal.

Mr. Myers and Miss Theby joined the forces of the eastern studio of this company about a year ago and have since been producing dramas and comedies under the Victor trademark.

Previous to their connection with Universal, it will be remembered, Mr. Myers and Miss Theby held the same positions with the Lubin producing company in Philadelphia. Future plans of the two have yet to be announced.

CATHERINE CALHOUN SIGNED BY METRO

Catherine Calhoun, whose legitimate appearances included engagements with Lewis Waller and Henry Miller, and who has appeared in important roles in "The Daughter of the Sea," "A Circus Romance," and other photoplays, has been signed by Metro, and will make her first appearance for that company in "Playing with Fire," a five-part feature under production by Popular Plays and Players. In it Mme. Petrova will be starred.

Why "Silas Marner" Runs to Seven Reels for Mutual

President Freuler Agreed with Edwin Thanhouser on Seeing Complete Print That Every Foot of Picture Intended as a Five Reeler Was Necessary to Develop Story

WHEN Director Ernest Warde, of the Thanhouser forces, began to stage "Silas Marner," in which his father, Frederick Warde, is featured, he intended it to be a five-reel Mutual Masterpicture De Luxe.

When the picture was finished, however, and the editing department began to lay out the cuts, it found itself facing a difficult task.

Every proposed curtailment seemed to mar the play, and yet the picture had to be two thousand feet shorter to conform to standard.

Finally the editors went into conference with Edwin Thanhouser. Mr. Thanhouser, who is a believer in what he calls the "natural length theory," instructed the editors not to cut the picture at all but to prepare a finished print of it in full length.

Then he arranged to give an exhibition of it to officials of the Mutual. Mr. Freuler, after viewing the film, was among the first to assure the manufacturer that every foot of the film was vital and necessary.

So "Silas Marner" will be released on February 19, in seven reels, and the Mutual Film Corporation has given it extensive advertising.

Explaining his natural length theory, Mr. Thanhouser said: "Only a naturally acted play will stand the test and justify the natural length principle. I am satisfied to let this production stand as my ideal illustration of the theory."

MABEL TALIAFERRO FOR METRO IN "POLLY OF CIRCUS" PART

Mabel Taliaferro, who will be seen in the stellar role in "Her Great Price," on the Metro program, has a role similar to the ones that made her famous in "Polly of the Circus."

Right of Appeal From Censors Decided by Quaker City

Judge Barratt, of the Common Pleas Court, No. 2, Hands Down Decision Giving Manufacturers Through Their Local Exchanges the Right to Seek Judicial Relief from Censor Board for Rejected Film—Opinion Making Precedent Is Based on "Virtue" Case

Philadelphia, Feb. 19.

FILM men all through the city of Brotherly Love are rejoicing over the ruling of Judge N. S. Barratt of Common Pleas Court No. 2, which gives the manufacturers through their local exchanges the right of appeal from the decisions of the State Board of Censors on rejected films.

The decision of Judge Barratt was rendered in the case of the picture "Virtue" which the Franklin Film Company took into court after the censors had in the opinion of the said company completely destroyed the value of their film by the many eliminations made.

The appeal was based on two points at issue. First, as to whether the censors had the sole authority of jurisdiction over pictures as claimed by them, without the chance of an appeal.

Second, as to the right of the censors to eliminate certain parts of the picture in question which showed vice. The latter was sustained in part by the Judge as certain scenes and titles were ordered eliminated.

In his ruling on the first part of the appeal, Judge Barratt said: "Recognizing the movies' educational qualities and possibilities for good and evil, apart from the mere feature of amusement, the Commonwealth has adopted the policy of regulation for the protection of the community, especially the young and immature. And this power to determine whether a film is sacrilegious, obscene, indecent, or immoral, or such as tend, in the judgment of the board, to debase or corrupt morals, is lodged in a Board of Censors. At the same time we must not lose sight of the fact that moving pictures are a great commercial enterprise in which many millions of dollars are invested by our citizens, and that property rights ought not to be injured or destroyed capriciously, wantonly or by rules which seek to impose a degree of strictness in requirements or standards, which amount to confiscation of property. A motion picture theatre conducted by responsible people, visited daily by thousands, principally women and children, could not afford to exhibit on its screen anything of doubtful propriety, because loss of reputation as a proper resort for women and children would be speedily felt in decreased receipts at the box-office, and result in bankruptcy.

"In addition, the Mayor of the City of Philadelphia and his Director of Public Safety have ample power and authority to protect the public if they deem a motion picture improper or immoral, as they still exercise supervision over theatres, and many States consider this a sufficient protection. The proofs show that the very film "Virtue" complained of here, at the time of the hearing was actually being publicly exhibited in New York City without objection by the police department or anyone else.

"So with those general principles in mind, we have considered the merits of this appeal, which involve the specified eliminations complained of. It is an old-fashioned melodrama which depicts a contest between 'Virtue' and 'Vice,' and the ultimate triumph of 'Virtue.'"

Right of Appeal Bone of Contention

This question of the right to an appeal has long been a big bone of contention between the film companies and the censors, which in other cases that have come before certain judges of the Courts of Common Pleas have not been definitely decided.

The Board of Censors, however, are not so well satisfied with the opinion of Judge Barratt as the film people and an immediate appeal will be taken to the Superior Court of the State.

J. L. Breitinger, chief censor, when asked for an expression of opinion would not talk for publication, claiming that reporters in general and papers in particular never quoted him correctly, so he made it a rule never to say anything.

The most solemn promises as to a verbatim et literatim et puctuatim report of any interview still found the gentleman obdurate. He did admit, however, that in his opinion the decision rendered was not of such far reaching importance as people generally seemed to think.

Mr. Breitinger also referred me to Deputy Attorney General Joseph L. Kun who conducted the case for the Board of Censors.

Mr. Kun not being sworn to silence readily gave me time and attention. He did not agree with Mr. Breitinger as to the non-importance of this decision, but considered it a far reaching one in its scope.

Mr. Kun said, "I think the opinion of the Court fails to meet the distinctive feature of the case, which is the peculiarity of the subject matter involved, with reference to which, the word 'appeal' in the Act of 1915, Section 26, must be interpreted.

"In my opinion, the Apellate Courts will hold that the decision of a board having a distinctive discretionary authority can not be reversed, excepting for manifest abuse of discretion, or in other words, in a case where it has acted arbitrarily.

No Interference of Personal Opinion

"The mere fact that the particular judge before whom an appeal is taken, may in his personal opinion differ from the view expressed by the Board of Censors on the subject in question would not warrant a reversal of the censors' decision.

"To reverse, the Court must find that as a matter of law, the board has acted arbitrarily; that is without reason and has therefore abused its discretion. There is no such finding in this case."

Mr. Kun further said that Judge Barratt was wrong about "Virtue" being shown freely in New York as he was informed it had been stopped (after some litigation on the matter) by the police.

In view of the public importance of this case, Mr. Kun said an earnest effort would be made to advance it as speedily as possible on the calendar of the Superior Court. "It will be a good thing for all concerned," said he, "to have this matter set at rest for all time."

Sidney L. Krauss, attorney for the Franklin Film Company being out of the city, no information could be had as to his intentions in the case, but it is thought no attempt to show the disputed picture will be made until the case is acted on by the Superior Court.

Bertha Kalich Leaves Stage for Appearance with Fox

Emotional Actress Whose Reputation Is Wide on Both Sides of the Atlantic, and Has Scored Success in Difficult Roles, Is Already at Work in Her First Film Production

BERTHA KALICH, one of the stage's most prominent emotional actresses, has signed a contract to act before the motion picture camera, and has already begun work in her first film production.

Mme. Kalich has been averse to appearing in motion pictures, it is said, until she was assured that the picture plays selected for her would be of a type designed to introduce her favorably to the American photoplay public.

Mr. Fox has ordered that the first production for Mme. Kalich be costly in the point of mounting.

Bertha Kalich, a native of Lemberg, Galicia, has been upon the stage since her fourteenth year.

After several seasons at the Bucharest National theatre, she came to New York, and achieved great success on the East Side. She built up her following in foreign language plays exclusively, and became one of the principal owners of the Kalich theatre, which was named in her honor.

Her introduction to the English language audiences of America came chiefly through her acting of Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna," in which she made a successful tour of the country.

She has also scored successes in "The Kreutzer Sonata," "Marta of the Lowlands," "Cora," "Sappho and Phaon," and other plays.

In vaudeville Mme. Kalich appeared in "The Light of St. Agnes," a dramatic sketch which introduced her to a still different type of American theatregoers and which served to increase her popularity.

STEGER CAST FOR "BLINDNESS OF LOVE," METRO

Julius Steger, the dramatic star, who will soon be seen in "The Blindness of Love," a new Metro, plays the role of a delightful old, itinerant piano tuner.

EMMY WEHLEN AND ESTABROOK IN KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURE

Emmy Wehlen and Howard Estabrook will be seen as co-stars in the Knickerbocker Star Feature, "The Master Smiles," a three-reel drama. Miss Wehlen goes to the Knickerbocker Features through the courtesy of the Rolfe Photo Plays, Inc.

HOWARD ESTABROOK AND EMMY WEHLEN

Miss Wehlen's role is that of a girl who is the victim of early environment which leaves its mark upon her, and assists her to glide downward into the grip of the Master of the White Lights.

Mr. Estabrook takes the part of a gallant New Yorker, who strikes a fortune in the West and returns East in search of a better fortune than gold.

KLEINE COMEDY BOOKED FOR 1,925 DAYS

Booking records tottered when in less than a week (six days to be exact) George Kleine booked 1,925 days for his comedy "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer."

This was accomplished, too, without advertising but through a plan for advance of release date showings.

There had been very little said or written about "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," but apparently all that was needed was for an exhibitor to see the comedy—and a booking followed.

Now that March 1 has been definitely decided upon as a releasing date, the Kleine studio force and branch offices expect to be swamped with bookings.

"The Mishaps of Musty Suffer" is a comedy in series, ten in all, one each week. Critics viewing the advance showing were more than kind toward it—they were even mildly extravagant in their praise.

DINTENFASS OF VIM THE GUEST OF HONOR AT JACKSONVILLE BANQUET

Special to Motion Picture News

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 9.

M. M. Dintenfass, treasurer of the Vim Film Company, came down from New York a few days ago and saw their studio for the first time. Louis Burstine, his partner, selected the studio several months ago and brought three companies down to start activities while Mr. Dintenfass remained in New York, taking charge of their office there.

A dinner was given in honor of Mr. Dintenfass by the Chamber of Commerce.

Pittsburgh's First Screen Ball Is a Big Affair

Event Goes into Motion Picture History as the Largest Social Gathering Ever Assembled in the Iron City and Is Settled Upon as an Annual Function

PITTSBURGH'S first big motion picture ball has gone into history as the biggest social gathering ever assembled in the Iron City, and as a result the Screen Club ball has been settled upon definitely as an annual event.

The proceeds this year will go to the motion picture division of the Actors' Fund Fair to swell the contributions to the half-million-dollar fund now being raised for that purpose.

The first honors of the ball held in the Motor Square Garden go to Metro for the largest delegation of stars, the number and variety of the "stunts," the decorations of the Metro booth, and the general acclaim given by Pittsburgh's public to the representatives of that organization.

Metro's party that journeyed from New York included Mr. and Mrs. Richard A. Rowland, Joseph W. Engel, Metro's treasurer, Marguerite Snow, Mary Miles Minter, Grace Valentine, Anne Barnes and Mrs. Charlotte Shelby.

The Pittsburgh wing of Metro's contingent included Vice-President James S. Clark, with Mrs. Clark, A. S. Beymer, J. B. Skirboll, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Miller and the fifteen managers of the Rowland and Clark theatres.

Vitagraph was represented by Mary Maurice, Samuel M. Spedon and Rose Tapley. The Ivan Company by Paula Shay, Universal by Hobart Henley and Violet Mersereau.

With "Mother" Maurice on one side, and Mary Miles Minter on the other, Mayor Armstrong led the grand march that preceded the dancing. Miss Mersereau and Mr. Henley were entertained in the Metro booths, a 60-foot space decorated with palms and flowers and with an electric fountain blazing in the center of the Metro space.

A large program of vaudeville preceded the introduction of the stars and the giving away of souvenirs. Metro gave away 25,000 novelties and pictures during the evening, and a special Metro chorus in pierette costumes participated in the dancing.

The New York Screen Club was represented by William Quirk, and he was greeted by President H. B. Kester, president of the Pittsburgh Screen Club, on the platform during the festivities.

Marguerite Snow, Grace Valentine, Mary Miles Minter and Anne Barnes were guests at a luncheon at the home of Mrs. James B. Clark, at the Pittsburgh Athletic Club, at a dinner that preceded the ball, and at the Metro supper dance at the Hotel Schenley after the ball.

Tuesday was spent in a tour of the Rowland and Clark theatres.

Pittsburgh is loyal to motion pictures, and the public interest was so great that the stars were greeted by enormous crowds, who waited in zero weather for their arrival at the several theatres. Joseph W. Engel was master of ceremonies on the theatre tour.

At Wilkinsburg, President Richard A. Rowland addressed his fellow-townsmen from the stage of his own pet theatre, The Rowland, and he received an old home-week ovation from a gathering of over 2,500 people.

Two Well Known Feminine Stars Engaged by World

Jane Grey, Who Will Appear in "Man and His Angel," Co-Starred with John Barrymore in "Kick In"—Mollie King, Former Maxine Elliott Player, Signs Long Contract

TWO important engagements of feminine stars—Jane Grey and Mollie King—were made last week by the Triumph-Equitable and World-Equitable Corporations.

JANE GREY AND MOLLIE KING

Miss Grey will make her screen debut on the World Program in a dramatization of "Man and His Angel," in which she will be supported by Henri Bergman. Following this, she will be seen in "The Surrender," to be produced under the supervision of George A. Wright.

Miss Grey, who began her career with a small repertoire company, is a well-known leading woman on the legitimate stage. Her most recent Broadway appearance was in "Kick In," in which she co-starred with John Barrymore.

Mollie King, who made her screen debut in "A Woman's Power," a World production, has been engaged by the World-Equitable heads on a three-year contract to star exclusively under their management.

She has begun work on her second picture at the Paragon studio under the direction of Frank Crane. This picture is temporarily entitled "The Lily," and is said to provide excellent opportunities for Miss King's abilities.

Miss King has to her credit many years of stage experience. She appeared with Maxine Elliott, Denman Thompson and others, and in vaudeville with her sister Nellie. She was featured in support of Sam Bernard in "The Belle of Bond Street."

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. EVOLUTION OF HOUSE ORGAN SHOWN BY WESTERN MAGAZINE—WITH A FOOTNOTE ON "BUNK"

THERE are a good many indications that the house organ is undergoing a process of evolution. It is changing from a folder or booklet devoted exclusively to news and pictures of plays and players to a magazine of wider appeal, with feature articles, and hints to photoplay patrons who are seized with ambition to write scenarios or become screen actors.

We have seen several house organs in which this tendency was visible enough. Few of them have carried it very far. Usually they have stopped with answering questions from devoted fans. But along comes The Strand, house organ of the theatre of the same name in Minneapolis, with an article by Beverly Bayne on "How to Become a Picture Actress, and a department devoted to scenario writing, conducted by Harry O. Hoyt.

The lines along which the Strand management is working are explained by it as follows: "It is the purpose of the Strand magazine to help as well as entertain its readers. Photoplay producing companies are demanding scenarios for new plays. Minneapolis has as many talented people as any city in the world. To aid such of these as wish to enter the writing field The Strand will publish a series of articles on photoplay technique, written by a man who has sold over two hundred plays."

Likewise, Miss Bayne's department, which will be continued from issue to issue, is designed "to help" feminine picturegoers who look longingly at the screen. Inasmuch as Miss Bayne is a native of Minneapolis, her articles are especially timely in that city.

The Strand is helping to blaze the trail along which house organs in the larger cities will undoubtedly follow. The purpose of a house organ, of course, is to interest patrons in the theatre to the greatest possible extent. They must be interested primarily in the pictures the house is showing, and no house organ which loses sight of this fact is effective. The news angle must be kept uppermost. At the same time, it is an excellent thing to interest patrons in the entire industry—satisfy their curiosity, if nothing else.

This is the particular merit of the Strand magazine. It is also neatly printed and is evidently a self-supporting proposition, as it carries on alternate pages a large number of well-displayed commercial ads.

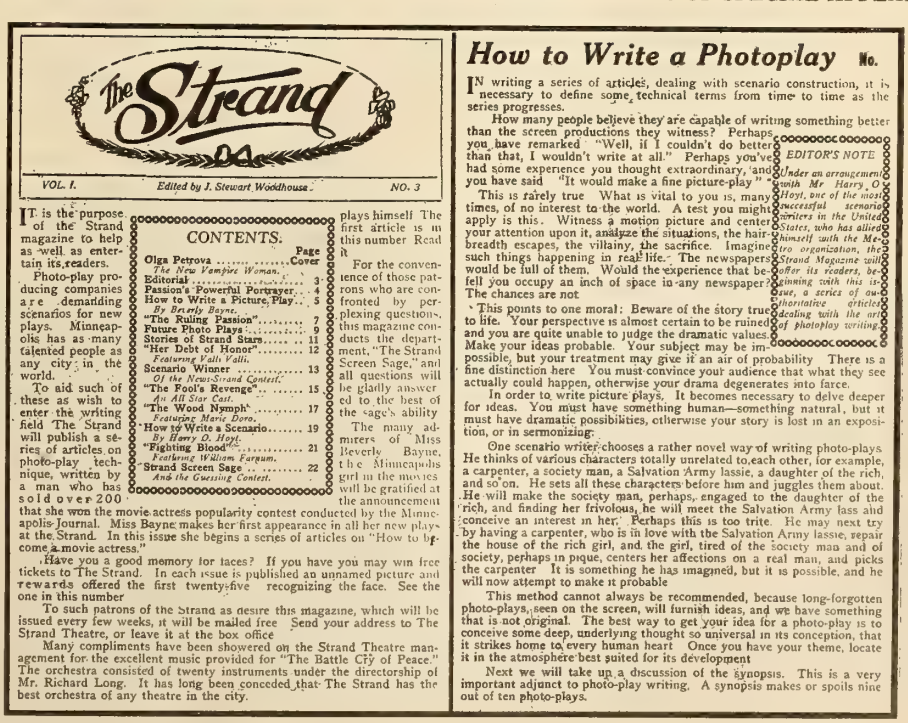
We suggest that one page should be given to announcements of coming photoplays. Page nine of the issue before us is evidently intended to meet that need, but it hardly does so. We find only one picture mentioned, and the rest of the page devoted to a list of stars. It would be more effective to list all the coming plays on a single page—simply itemize them.

This otherwise excellent publication is marred by an article headed "Pre-eminent Portrayer of Passion." In a perfect cyclone of alliteration it depicts a prominent screen actress as "the pre-ordained poetess of perdition," etc. Publicity of this sort should be banned. It is "bunk" of a peculiarly offensive variety, and there is no excuse for printing it.

Exhibitors should learn that publicity of this sort is really a boomerang.

TELEPHONE DIRECTORY A GOOD ADVERTISING MEDIUM

The new telephone directory issued in Omaha, Neb., has the names of many more motion picture theatres listed under the classified section than ever before.



"And why not?" ask the exhibitors. "The patrons call us up and ask what kind of picture is to be shown. Different people like different kinds of pictures. If we happen to have the kind they want, it is all right. If not, they call up somewhere else. They might read the advertisements in the paper, or they might telephone. It is best to keep both before them."

"MOVIE FAN" CHANGES FROM WEEKLY TO SEMI-WEEKLY

"The Movie Fan," program of the Majestic Theatre, Grand Junction, Colo., has cut down its size to four columns, and changed from a weekly to a semi-weekly publication.

"The Movie Fan" is a miniature newspaper. We think its plan for twice-a-week appearance is good.

HOUSE ORGAN SERIES No. 22: A MAGAZINE WITH ARTICLES OF SPECIAL APPEAL

The Strand

VOL. I. Edited by J. Stewart Woodhouse NO. 3

IT is the purpose of the Strand magazine to help as well as entertain its readers.

Photo-play producing companies are demanding scenarios for new plays. Minneapolis has as many talented people as any city in the world.

To aid such of these as wish to enter the writing field The Strand will publish a series of articles on photo-play technique, written by a man who has sold over 200 that she won the movie actress popularity contest conducted by the Minneapolis Journal. Miss Bayne makes her first appearance in all her new plays at the Strand. In this issue she begins a series of articles on "How to become a movie actress."

Have you a good memory for faces? If you have you may win free tickets to The Strand. In each issue is published an unnamed picture and rewards offered the first twenty-five recognizing the face. See the one in this number

To such patrons of the Strand as desire this magazine, which will be issued every few weeks, it will be mailed free Send your address to The Strand Theatre, or leave it at the box office

Many compliments have been showered on the Strand Theatre management for the excellent music provided for "The Battle Cry of Peace." The orchestra consisted of twenty instruments under the directorship of Mr. Richard Long. It has long been conceded that The Strand has the best orchestra of any theatre in the city.

How to Write a Photoplay No.

IN writing a series of articles, dealing with scenario construction, it is necessary to define some technical terms from time to time as the series progresses.

How many people believe they are capable of writing something better than the screen productions they witness? Perhaps you have remarked "Well, if I couldn't do better than that, I wouldn't write at all." Perhaps you've had some experience you thought extraordinary, and you have said "It would make a fine picture-play."

This is rarely true What is vital to you is, many times, of no interest to the world. A test you might apply is this. Witness a motion picture and center your attention upon it, analyze the situations, the hair-breadth escapes, the villainy, the sacrifice. Imagine such things happening in real life. The newspapers would be full of them. Would the experience that befell you occupy an inch of space in any newspaper? The chances are not

This points to one moral: Beware of the story true to life. Your perspective is almost certain to be ruined and you are quite unable to judge the dramatic values. Make your ideas probable. Your subject may be impossible, but your treatment may give it an air of probability There is a fine distinction here You must convince your audience that what they see actually could happen, otherwise your drama degenerates into farce.

In order to write picture plays, It becomes necessary to delve deeper for ideas. You must have something human—something natural, but it must have dramatic possibilities, otherwise your story is lost in an exposition, or in sermonizing.

One scenario writer chooses a rather novel way of writing photo-plays. He thinks of various characters totally unrelated to each other, for example, a carpenter, a society man, a Salvation Army lassie, a daughter of the rich, and so on. He sets all these characters before him and juggles them about. He will make the society man, perhaps, engaged to the daughter of the rich, and finding her frivolous, he will meet the Salvation Army lass and conceive an interest in her. Perhaps this is too trite. He may next try by having a carpenter, who is in love with the Salvation Army lassie, repair the house of the rich girl, and the girl, tired of the society man and of society, perhaps in pique, centers her affections on a real man, and picks the carpenter It is something he has imagined, but it is possible, and he will now attempt to make it probable

This method cannot always be recommended, because long-forgotten photo-plays, seen on the screen, will furnish ideas, and we have something that is not original. The best way to get your idea for a photo-play is to conceive some deep, underlying thought so universal in its conception, that it strikes home to every human heart Once you have your theme, locate it in the atmosphere best suited for its development

Next we will take up a discussion of the synopsis. This is a very important adjunct to photo-play writing. A synopsis makes or spoils nine out of ten photo-plays.

EDITOR'S NOTE Under an arrangement with Mr Harry O Hoyt, one of the most successful scenario writers in the United States, who has allied himself with the Mecca Theatre organization, the Strand Magazine will offer its readers, beginning with this issue, a series of authoritative articles dealing with the art of photoplay writing

DELIVERING FILM BY THE DOG SLED ROUTE IN SEATTLE

LEAVING THE EXCHANGE—ARRIVING AT THE THEATRE

DISTRIBUTING film by dog teams is the latest wrinkle employed in the snowbound Northwest. During the heavy snowfall in Seattle recently, Manager Von Herberg, of the Liberty theatre, requested that the V-L-S-E exchange get one of the company's pictures to the theatre in thirty minutes.

As the streets were practically impassable, and all transportation facilities out of commission, an Alaskan dog team was secured, and Tom North, V-L-S-E manager, and Manager Von Herberg got the picture to the theatre without serious difficulty, so that the crowd which was waiting to see "The Island of Surprise" was not disappointed.

This is the first time in the history of the film industry, it is said, that a feature has ever been conveyed by a dog team and sled from an exchange to a theatre, a la Alaskan.

PARAMOUNT PROGRESS REPRINTS WHOLE HOUSE ORGAN AS AN EXHIBITOR HELP

PARAMOUNT, in reprinting an exhibitor's entire house organ as a supplement to Paramount Progress, has started an innovation which we endorse heartily, because we believe it will be a distinct help to the exhibitor.

Some twenty weeks ago MOTION PICTURE NEWS began reproducing in this department exhibitor house organs in a regular series, with very much the same idea in mind. It is far more effective to show an exhibitor just how his fellow exhibitors are building their house organs—by running cuts of the house organs themselves—than it is to indulge in columns of description and advice.

The house organ selected for reproduction is "Stage and Screen," published by the Connellan Amusement Company, which operates the Bath Opera House and the Columbia theatre at Bath, Me. This house organ was reproduced in part in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, of February 5, page 680.

In explaining its purpose, Paramount Progress not only calls attention on its cover page to the innovation, but it also devotes another page, opposite the reproduction, to the idea. This latter page, addressed to exhibitors, says:

"We want to call your attention to the insert reproduction of 'Stage and Screen.' We want your criticism on these points or any additional ones which you care to mention:

"Note the newspaper style of heading, also the newspaper style of leading article.

"Note the advertising in the center pages. This sheet is now soliciting outside advertisements which will undoubtedly appear at an early date.

"What do you think of the short notices carried throughout this publication?"

The article then goes on to point out and ask special criticism on several leading paragraphs and brings in this final point:

"Will you be helped by hearing what your neighboring exhibitor has to say about this publication? Here is a chance to trade in some good opinions."

The whole idea is excellent. The house organ is "the one vital and interesting subject" to the exhibitor. All the help he can get on the subject is useful to him, and Paramount has devised a striking way in which to aid the cause of better house organs.

It is manufacturer aid of a very practical sort which the exhibitor appreciates.

NEAT FORM FOR "INVITATION" ADVERTISING

Tom North, Seattle manager for V-L-S-E, sends us a neatly printed invitation issued by the Coliseum Theatre, that city. INVITES NEWSPAPER MEN TO SEE "THE FOURTH ESTATE"

The management of the Mary Anderson theatre, Louisville, Ky., extended an invitation to every newspaper man in the city to see "The Fourth Estate," which was recently at that house.

Tickets were distributed in the newspaper offices to all employees and the publicity given this stunt served as good advertising. Large crowds were in attendance at each show during the two days' run.

AUTO LAMPS SERVE AS SPOTLIGHTS IN CALIFORNIA THEATRE

Floods at Lindsey, California, put the electric lighting plant out of commission, and Manager H. G. Hyde of the Rink theatre ran his automobile into the theatre, and the lamps on the machine served as spotlights. It was impossible to use the projection machine, but fortunately Hyde had booked C. E. Hudson for a vaudeville act, and the two put on a program that lasted more than an hour.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

FOUR WIDELY DISSIMILAR PRODUCTIONS FROM FOX FOR MARCH RELEASE

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by William Fox that during the month of March the Fox Film Corporation will release four widely dissimilar productions in which will be seen stars and supporting players well known to photoplay audiences.

The stars, the productions and the dates of release are: Violet Horner, in "The Marble Heart," March 6; Theda Bara, in "Gold and the Woman," March 13; William Farnum, in "A Man of Sorrow," March 20; Robert B. Mantell, with Genevieve Hamper, in "A Wife's Sacrifice," March 27.

"The Marble Heart," which is a drama of love and intrigue, was staged in the West Indies under the supervision of Herbert Brenon. Among the players seen in support of Miss Horner are Walter McCullough, Rhy Alexander, Henry Armetta, Louise Rial, Harry Burkhardt, Walter Miller, Hal De Forrest, Mlle. Marcelle, Mark Price and Arthur Leslie.

"Gold and the Woman," the story of a siren's conquest, was made at the Fox studios in Grantwood, N. J., and some of the exterior scenes were taken in the coal fields of Virginia.

The picture was directed by James Vincent. The players who support Miss Bara are H. Cooper Cliffe, celebrated English actor; Carleton Macy, Julia Hurley, Carter B. Harkness, George Walsh, Frank Whitson, Howard Messimer, Joseph Hamlish, Francis Ne Moyer, Pauline Barry, Hattie Delaro and Chief Black Eagle.

"A Man of Sorrow," which is a dramatic story of tangled lives, was made at the Fox studios in Edendale, Cal., under the direction of Oscar C. Apfel.

Mr. Farnum is supported by a cast which includes Dorothy Bernard, Willard Louis, Mary Ruby, Fred Huntley, Harry DuRoy, Henry J. Herbert, William Burress, H. A. Barrows, Thelma Burns, William Scott, Robert Wayne, Mildred Halsey, and Jacob Abrams.

"A Wife's Sacrifice," a drama of married life, was made at the Fox studios in Kingston, Jamaica, British West Indies, under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards.

Besides Mr. Mantell and Miss Hamper, the cast includes Claire Whitney, Genevieve Blinn, Louise Rial, Henry Leoni, Stuart Holmes, Walter Miller and Walter McCullough.

BLUE LAWS EXTRACT GREENBACKS FROM GOLD ROOSTER PRODUCER, RED WITH INDIGNATION

George Fitzmaurice, who is producing Pathé's "Big Jim Garrity," has had his company down in Georgia for several days at a stretch.

"Fitz" finally lost all track of the passage of time. When Sunday came he braved the elements and went out into the back yard of the country hotel and practised shooting at a mark.

Within ten minutes he had been arrested, arraigned before a magistrate at his home and fined twenty-five dollars and costs for "hunting on the Sabbath."

IVAN COMPLETES "THE IMMORTAL FLAME," TO BE RELEASED IN MARCH

"THE IMMORTAL FLAME," the newest Ivan production whose locale is laid in Washington, D. C., has just been completed, Director Ivan Abramson and the entire company returning to New York a few days ago.

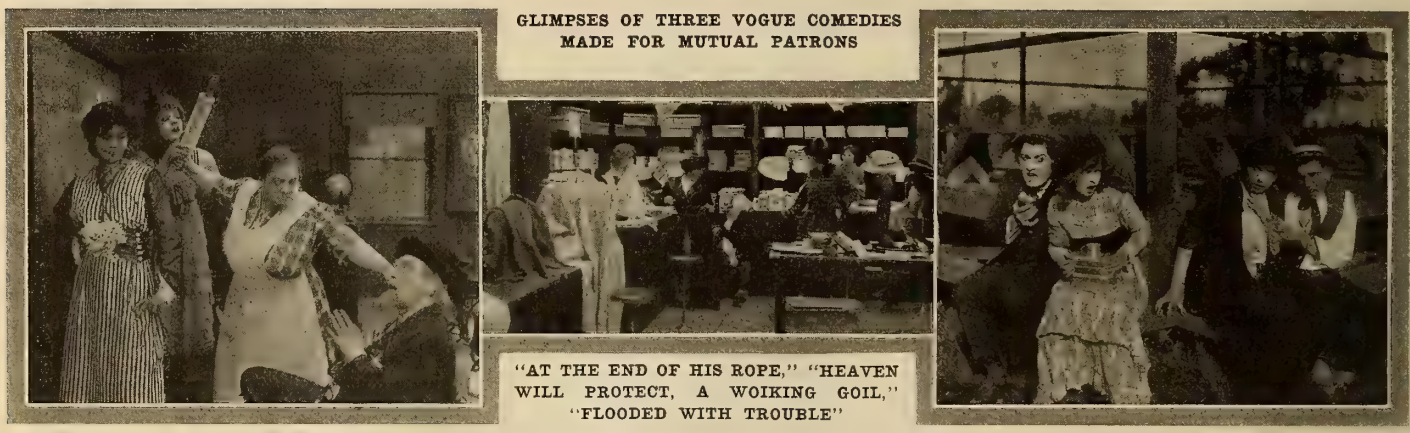
The last few exteriors, Riverside Park and the Pennsylvania station, were made and the latest screen drama from the pen of Ivan Abramson was finished.

All in all, this is said to be the most propitious offering as yet from the Ivan Film Productions. It employed an all-star cast with such notable artists as Maude Fealy, Paula Shay, Joseph Burke and James Cooley, under the direction of Ivan Abramson.

"The Immortal Flame" is scheduled for release as the Ivan feature for March, but the New York theatre, a Marcus Loew house, in order to make certain of obtaining first run on Broadway, has booked it in advance of completion for February 29 at an exceptionally high price.

In keeping with the standard they have set to make the best posters, the Ivan Film Productions have secured the services of George Sequard, the master of poster craft, who has designed some paper which from the sketches and drawings which have resulted are certain to set a new record for poster artistry.

The paper will be made by the Otis Lithograph Company, responsible in a large measure for the marked popularity the Ivan paper enjoys as a business booster among exhibitors showing Ivan Productions.



CAST FOR "ACCORDING TO LAW" IS COMPLETED BY GAUMONT

With the choosing of Little Madison Weeks for the important part of the boy, the cast of "According to Law" is now complete.

Mildred Gregory is starred in this Gaumont Mutual Masterpicture.

MAUDE FEALY, THE STAR, AND TWO SCENES FROM "THE IMMORTAL FLAME," IVAN FILM PRODUCTION TO BE RELEASED THIS MONTH

GLIMPSES OF THREE VOGUE COMEDIES MADE FOR MUTUAL PATRONS

"AT THE END OF HIS ROPE," "HEAVEN WILL PROTECT A WOIKING GOIL," "FLOODED WITH TROUBLE"

PAULINE FREDERICK COMPANY BACK FROM FILMING "AUDREY" SCENES IN SOUTH UNDER VIGNOLA

PAULINE FREDERICK and the company gathered in her support for the adaptation of Mary Johnston's celebrated novel and play, "Audrey," has returned to the Famous Players Film Company's studio from Jacksonville, Fla., where the greater portion of the scenes for this forthcoming Paramount production was staged under the direction of Robert Vignola.

Among the players supporting Miss Frederick are Charles Waldron, Escamillo Fernandez, Helen Lindreth, Miss Christian, and Tinker Hallam, who are appearing in the more important roles.

"Audrey," which is a far more pastoral character than anything which Miss Frederick has ever done on the screen, requires especially beautiful settings in order to give it the greatest effectiveness.

The return of Miss Frederick and her company, coming only a few days after the arrival of Marie Doro and Elliott Dexter, Director Sidney Olcott, and the "Diplomacy" company from Palm Beach, emphasizes the fact that the Famous Players Film Company is sending its respective directors far and wide in the search for atmosphere.

Marguerite Clark, Director J. Searle Dawley and the other members of the "Out of the Drifts" company have returned to Ithaca in order to take advantage of the recent big storm in obtaining the scenes for the big Alpine story in which the diminutive star is soon to make her appearance.

The entire company made one trip to the north in search of "snow stuff" two weeks ago, but was prevented from getting many important scenes by a heavy rainfall which swept away the greater part of the snow.

Among the players are William Courtleigh, Jr., J. W. Johnston, Ivan Simpson, and others of importance.

Meanwhile Mary Pickford is commuting between Yonkers and New York by motor in order to combine the factory scenes and interior settings of her next production which is being filmed under the direction of John O'Brien. In support of Miss Pickford are Robert Cain and John Bower.

John Barrymore's activities have not yet carried the comedian farther than the Hudson River, but that was quite enough for him.

It is not ideal weather for falling off piers, which was one of the things required of Barrymore in "The Man Who Lost Himself." Katherine Harris is playing opposite the star and James Kirkwood is the director.

Hazel Dawn is the only Famous Players star who has thus far been able to work almost exclusively in the confines of the studio, though Director Fred Thompson expects to take her South for the completion of her next picture within a week.

"NUMBER 13, WESTBOUND," SELIG, IS SET FOR RELEASE ON MARCH 20

"NUMBER 13, WESTBOUND" is the title of the first drama of railroad life in which Kathlyn Williams ever appeared. Despite the fact that this star of filmland has undertaken hundreds of different character roles running the entire gamut, from wild animal dramas and comedies to "The Adventures of Kathlyn," she never in her varied career as a motion picture star took a chance with a flying locomotive.

The drama has to do with a girl who saved hundreds of lives by flagging an express train.

As she signals, the girl, overcome with fright, faints in the pathway of the approaching locomotive, which is checked just a few inches from her prostrate body.

"Number 13, Westbound" will be released in General Film Service on Monday, March 20, in three reels. Miss Williams is supported by Guy Oliver and an all-star cast.

On Monday, March 27, the Selig company will release, through General Film Service, a society drama, entitled "A Social Deception," featuring Harry Mestayer and Eugenie Besserer. A carefully selected company of Selig stars enact the roles.

The Selig Polyscope Company has now on file sixty-seven letters written by exhibitors in eighteen states, praising The Selig-Tribune, the new news film released twice weekly through General Film Service.

The new style of poster originated for the Selig-Tribune has also been universally praised.

"HEART OF TARA" ON MARCH 4 INSTEAD OF "A LITTLE LADY OF LIONS"

Owing to force of circumstances David Horsley has been compelled to postpone the production of Roy L. McCardell's story, "A Little Lady of Lions," and the picture will not be released March 4 as originally intended.

In its place will be issued a romantic drama of India by Theodosia Harris, entitled "The Heart of Tara."

Mr. McCardell's story is of circus life and in its enactment is required the services of a large number of circus performers—clowns, acrobats and riders. Complete circus equipment—the big top, circus wagons, and the other accoutrement that goes with a traveling tented city—had to be built.

"The Heart of Tara" features Margaret Gibson, and William Clifford appears in the leading male role. Others in the cast are Sherman Bainbridge, Marie James, Marvel Spencer, Walter Spencer, Edward Alexander, Edward Roberts, Gordon Russell and the Bostock animals.

Wm. J. Bowman, who wrote "The Bait" in collaboration with Theodosia Harris, and who directed that production, is staging this picture, which will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition.

MILDRED GREGORY IN RESTLESS WIFE ROLE, "ACCORDING TO LAW"

Mildred Gregory will be seen on the screen March 6 as a Gaumont star in the five-reel feature, "According to Law," in which she has the role of a young wife who cares more for social diversions than she does for her husband's happiness.

Howard Hall is the most prominent member of the supporting company. The story was written by Paul M. Bryan and Joseph H. Trant. Many of the scenes are being taken in the Florida Everglades. Richard Garrick is directing.

BLANCHE SWEET BEGINS WORK IN "THE SOWERS"

Blanche Sweet has begun work on the Lasky production of Henry Seaton Merriman's story, "The Sowers," under the personal direction of William C. De Mille.

She will be supported by Theodore Roberts, Thomas Meighan, Horace B. Carpenter, Mabel Van Buren, Camille Astor and Ernest Joy.

"THE FLIRT," MADE BY SMALLEYS WITH MARIE WALCAMP, READY MARCH 27

The Smalleys have completed the production of "The Flirt," in Bluebird Photoplays, for release March 27. Marie Walcamp will play the lead.

"The Flirt" is the film version of Booth Tarkington's serial story that gained such wide favor in the Saturday Evening Post, and the boy character was later developed in the Penrod Schofield stories in the Cosmopolitan.

MARIE WALCAMP

The Bluebird people are depending upon this large publicity to give the feature an established following as soon as it is released.

BUSHMAN AND BEVERLY BAYNE AT WORK ON METRO FEATURE IN SAVANNAH

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, with a company of twenty-five other principals, have gone to Savannah, Georgia, where they are at work on the sensational Metro wonderplay, "The Wall Between," one of the most pretentious productions attempted by Metro.

Besides the Metro players five hundred regular army soldiers will be used, together with 1,500 negroes who will appear in battle scenes between United States soldiers and an uprising among the blacks of Nicaragua.

"The Wall Between" will be produced under the direction of John W. Noble, who is a graduate of West Point, and who served seven years in the United States Army. He will be assisted by William "Bill" Bailey.

In addition to Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne, the supporting cast includes Charles Prince, Helen Dunbar, John Davidson, Edward Brennan, Sidney Cushing, Thomas Brooks, Alice Gordon, and other well-known players.

LENNON OF CANADIAN UNIVERSAL IS MADE ASSISTANT GENERAL MANAGER

The Canadian Universal Film Company announces from its head office that F. R. Lennon, long known to his friends as "Bud," has been promoted from the managership of the Toronto office to assistant general manager. Mr. Lennon has made it a part of his position to know personally every exhibitor in his territory, so that when he had any dealings with these gentlemen his knowledge of their peculiarities and business difficulties made it possible for him to afford them satisfaction in a degree.

From this thoroughness of detail handling, he has risen naturally to the broader scope of his present position, and a very fair indication of the success he will attain in his new capacity may be had from the success that attended his visit to Nova Scotia, where he battled for the rights of the film men in a very serious censorship question.

Mr. Lennon, immediately upon his return from the East, left for an extended trip throughout western Canada, during which he will undertake many adjustments necessary in that difficult territory.

BOSWORTH PICTURE, "THE YAQUI" READY ON MARCH 19 FOR BLUE BIRD BUYERS

Bluebird Photoplays will present Hobart Bosworth as the star in the March 19 release, "The Yaqui," a picture-legend of old Mexico.

The film is based on incidents in Dane

HOBART BOSWORTH, LITTLE DOROTHY CLARK, AND GOLDA CALDWELL IN A SCENE FROM "THE YAQUI," BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAY

Coolidge's novel, "The Land of the Broken Promise," and will be a timely exposition of the methods of warfare and vengeful intrigue in Mexico—a subject so widely discussed and so much in the public mind these days.

The films were made across the border from Tempe, Ariz., last fall, where Lloyd Carleton directed a large company, amid natural surroundings, in battle scenes and many beautiful exteriors.

Golda Caldwell, Little Dorothy Clark, Charles H. Hickman, Jack Curtis, Yona Landowska, Gretchen Lederer, Emory Johnson and Louis A. Valderanna are principals in Mr. Bosworth's support.

"THE WITCH," STARRING NANCE O'NEIL, SET FOR RELEASE FEBRUARY 28

"The Witch," starring Nance O'Neil, will be the William Fox release of February 28. This is based on Victorien Sardou's famous play, "The Sorceress."

The plot is laid in Mexico, and neither time nor expense has been spared in surrounding the picture with that atmosphere of color and romance which is so effective when properly presented.

NANCE O'NEIL

A Mexican village was built outside the Fort Lee, N. J., studio, at a cost of several thousand dollars, in order that all of the street scenes would be absolutely correct, and a thousand persons took part.

KALEM BUILDS NEW STAGE FOR GLENDALE STUDIO

A new stage is being built at the Glendale, California, Kalem studio in order to accommodate the larger acts that are to be used in later episodes of "The Social Pirates" series.

True Boardman, who has been playing with the Kalem Glendale Company, has been transferred to the "Hazards of Helen" producing staff, and will play opposite Helen Ross Gibson.

This will give to future releases which are to be of two reels each, two excellent leading people, well known for their ability in riding and performing of daring acts.

BILLIE BURKE COMPANY GOES TO PALM BEACH FOR SOCIETY SCENES

The Billie Burke Company of players engaged in producing the new Rupert Hughes' novel for George Kleine will leave the New York studios this week for Palm Beach, Florida, to make a number of "society" scenes.

The company will be in charge of Supervisor James M. Sheldon and Director Walter Edwin.

THREE FIVE REEL FEATURES ON THE STOCKS AT GAUMONT STUDIO FOR MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES

GAUMONT company has in preparation three five-reel features to be released as Mutual Masterpictures, de Luxe Edition.

Richard Garrick is directing a modern society drama, "According to Law," starring Mildred Gregory, supported by Howard Hall. Helen Marten and Charles W. Travis are also in the cast. Edwin Middleton has started work on his first Masterpicture, "The Haunted Manor," starring Iva Shepard, with Henry Pemberton, Earl Schenck, Robert Clugston and Gertrude Robinson in the cast.

The story is an East India one, and is perhaps the most pretentious yet offered from the Gaumont company on the Masterpicture program.

Henry Vernot is directing the second Marguerite Courtot Gaumont feature, "Feathertop," a modern romance that has woven into it a bit of the spirit of the old story in its unfolding. Sydney Mason, Lucille Taft and John Reinhard are in the cast.

"The Haunted Manor," the latest of the Gaumont-Mutual Masterpictures now being made by the Gaumont company under the direction of Edwin Middleton, boasts a cast of fifty important parts, with over a thousand extra people used in more than a third of the scenes of the story.

A special car was engaged to take the leading players from the Jacksonville studio to St. Augustine for a week's stay, where many of the big scenes were made.

The rights to the use of the main thoroughfare of the picturesque city were granted Mr. Middleton and his assistant, Edwin Vail, and a big parade, a feature of the story, was photographed.

Camels, mules, elephants and other beasts were especially procured for the scenes from a circus wintering near St. Augustine, while over five hundred negroes were utilized for East Indian natives.

Iva Shepard is the star, supported by Henry Pemberton, Robert Clugston, Gertrude Robinson, Earl Schenck and Albert Macklin are in the selected cast of Gaumont players.

THEODORE THUNDERS FORTH THOUGHTS ABOUT PREPAREDNESS IN PARAMOUNT PICTOGRAPHS

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, expounding his ideas on "Preparedness," is the headline feature of the second release of Paramount Pictographs, the animated magazine.

The Colonel is shown walking upon the verandah at his home at Oyster Bay, just as he is preparing to go for a ride about the estate.

He shouts forth, "We must prepare," and tells in detail his thoughts on this vital question, visualized on the screen.

The subject "Preparedness" is being picturized under the direction of Frederick Palmer, famous war correspondent, and Henry Reuterdahl, naval expert.

Others besides Colonel Roosevelt who contribute to the department on "Preparedness," include Major-General Leonard Wood, former Secretary of War Garrison, Major-General Hugh L. Scott, Brigadier-General Macomb, of the Army War College; Secretary of State Lansing, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, President John Grier Hibben, of Princeton; Robert E. Peary, John Hays Hammond, Jr., and others.

For the gathering of this material on "Preparedness" cameramen have been dispatched to important army and naval bases, where they are making pictures.

Just what the Pork Barrel means is to be demonstrated; just where the army and navy are helpless is being put on the screen."

There are other shorter contributions in the second Pictograph on "Better Babies," in which the mother is shown how to feed the baby; a picturing of America's three busiest corners, Park Row, New York City; "Four Corners" in Newark, N. J., and State and Madison streets, in Chicago.

Intermingled with this is the "Trickids" trick picture, entitled "Happifat's Jitney Adventure," followed by the picturing of the latest in evening gowns and a cartoon by J. R. Bray, entitled "Bronco Buster," picturing President Wilson on the "congressional mule," endeavoring to climb up the "hill to Preparedness" over the obstacles of "army appropriations," "navy appropriations," "aeroplane appropriations," and "coast defense."

CLIFFE SUPPORTS ETHEL BARRYMORE IN COLUMBIA-METRO PICTURE

H. Cooper Cliffe, who was last seen on the Metro program in support of Ethel Barrymore in "The Final Judgment," and who has since been starred by another motion picture company, has returned to the Metro ranks, and will again be seen in support of Ethel Barrymore in "The Kiss of Hate."

This is a five-part feature dealing with the persecution of the Jews in Russia. It is being produced for the Metro program by the Columbia Pictures Corporation.

William Nigh, who has produced several notable Metro features, is directing Miss Barrymore in her newest picture.

"BLINDNESS OF LOVE," METRO, SET FOR MARCH 6

"The Blindness of Love," with Julia Steger in the stellar role, and George Le Guere and Grace Valentine featured, will be released on the Metro program March 6.

This notable five-part feature was produced by the Rolfe Photoplays Inc. for Metro, under the direction of Charles Horan.

The cast includes Walter Hitchcock, Edgar L. Davenport, Maud Hill, Charles F. Gotthold and Harry Neville.

McCLUNG PICKS LOCATIONS FOR FOX IN THE SOUTH

H. C. McClung, of the staff of John G. Adolfi, a William Fox director, is in the South, selecting locations for the forthcoming picture starring Vivian Martin, who had the name part in the picturization of Zangwill's masterpiece, "Merely Mary Ann."

Among those who will be seen in support of Miss Martin in her new picture are William H. Tooker, Harry Hilliard, Stuart Russell, Richard Neil, Maud Sinclair, Allen Walker, Flora Mason and others.

BERTHA KALICH JOINS FOX IN NEW JERSEY

Bertha Kalich, the latest important star to cast her fortunes with William Fox, is busily at work in one of the Fox New Jersey studios on her first picture for the Fox Film Corporation.

Miss Kalich makes her debut in a picture under the direction of W. S. Davis.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Los Angeles, Feb. 17.

AT the parlors of the Hotel Alexandria, Los Angeles, on February 2, occurred the marriage of Carl Franzen Sternlov and Charmian Butts Bacon. Mr. Sternlov, who was formerly manager of the Los Angeles Motion Picture Company, is the manager of personal business of D. W. Griffith, and his bride is a vaudeville and legitimate stage actress who is known to patrons of principal coast theatres as Carol Barker.

The couple will reside in Hollywood. The marriage was witnessed by a number of friends, all of whom are engaged in the film industry of Los Angeles, and following a very pleasant wedding, dinner was served.

D. W. GRIFFITH AND MACK SENNETT SNAPPED AT THE KEYSTONE STUDIOS

The cast selected for the production of "The Sowers," an adaptation from the Henry Seaton Marrimen story being produced by William C. deMille, will include Blanche Sweet in the part of a Russian peasant girl, supported by a cast including Theodore Roberts, Tom Meighan, Horace B. Carpenter, Mabel Van Buren, Camille Astor, and Ernest Joy.

A big set representing the lattice work back yard fence effect of the residence district of New York, has been built at the Lasky studio for scenes in "The Woman and the Law," being filmed by Frank Reicher.

This story is founded on an incident in political history of New York City, and Charlotte Walker appears as the star. The supporting cast includes Charles Clary, Raymond Hatton, Florence Dagmar, and others.

James Neil Cast for Important Role

"Sweet Kitty Bellairs," an adaptation from "The Bath Comedy" by Agnes and Edgerton Castle, is the next vehicle for Mae Murray, which is the first subject to be made by James Young, who recently came to the Coast. Tom Forman and James Neil have the important roles.

Director Paul Dickey of the Lasky staff has acquired all the earmarks of a producer, having discarded his hats and purchased a red Stutz automobile which has a thundering voice.

He is engaged in filming "Under the Mask," a western story in which Cleo Ridgley and Wallace Reid appear in the leads as principals.

Director Colin Campbell has departed for Chicago, and from there will go to Philadelphia and New York to supervise the selection of styles for costumes for "The Crisis."

It is expected that these will be ready within the next three weeks, and active production will be taken up. Bessie Eyton, Thomas Santchi and others of the Selig Stock Company will go East in about three weeks.

It is expected the filming of "The Crisis" will require six months, more time being needed for this because actual scenes described by Winston Churchill in this famous book will be used.

Officials of the Rolin Film Company are congratulating themselves on securing the services of Mae White, late of the Essanay-Chaplin Company, for appearance in Pathé Phunphilms.

Miss White will be remembered as taking the part of the stout woman in Chaplin's "A Night at the Show," and the Rolin officials believe their present line-up, which consists of Harold Lloyd as Lonesome Luke; Harry Pollard as Tin Horn Tommy; Bebe Daniels, ingenu; Gilbert Pratt, leads; "Cutey" A. H. Fralich, the Giant Ben Corday; Fatty Del Hampton; "Frowsy" C. E. Stephenson, and Rube Fred Newmeyer, all under the direction of Hal Roach, an incomparable one for slapstick comedy making.

Selig Leases Three Masted Vessel for Play

The sea story entitled "The Gold Ship," from the story by James Oliver Curwood, was begun by the Selig Company.

A three-masted modern vessel was leased, and the company will be at sea for the filming of most of the scenes for this story, which deals with an attempt of a Nome firm to transport a shipment of gold.

A dishonest clerk and members of the crew scheme to rob the vessel, but their efforts are thwarted by a girl and a crippled boy, these parts being taken by Edith Johnson and Sidney Smith. Harry Mestayer appears in the role of the captain, William Hutchinson the cook, and C. C. Holland the dishonest clerk.

"Into the Primitive" is to be a Gold Seal Selig release being made from an adaptation of the Robert Ames Bennett story of the same name.

This story has to do with an English nobleman, taken by Harry Lonsdale, an American by Guy Oliver, and a society woman by Kathlyn Williams, who following a shipwreck safely land on the East African shore.

The story deals with the hardships of the trio and their life away from civilization. In this all of the great collections of animals of the Selig zoo that came from this section of Africa which includes lions, leopards, giraffes, hyenas, monkeys, many varieties of snakes, "flock" of ostriches, and scores of species of birds, will be seen. The direction of this production will be by T. N. Heffron.

The studio run of "Wives of the Rich," a Selig subject, reveals some very unusual effects. In this the heavy accidently shoots himself while locked in a room with the wife of another. The woman's husband is in an adjoining room.

When the wife leaves after securing the key from the vest pocket, the husband enters the room by a window, locks all the doors and then by means of a string through a transom to the table on which the dead man's hand holding the revolver is resting, he sends the key back after locking the door from the outside.

The removal of the string gives it the impression of a clear case of suicide, thus relieving his wife from any guilt. Grace Darmond, Harry Mestayer, and Lafayette McKee are the principals in this.

Lady's Wraps Keep 100 Extras at Work

More than one hundred extra people employed for the day to take part in cafe scenes at the Biograph studio in the three-reel subject, "Murders of Cafe Epicure," being filmed by J. F. Macdonald, were idle for two-thirds of the day owing to a lady's evening wrap trimmed with white fur, and serving as the principal clue in this detective yarn, being worn away to an exterior location by its owner, Gretchen Hartman, who loaned it to Vera Sisson.

When the Macdonald Company was ready to make its first scenes the loss was discovered, and a city-wide search was started. All the autos of the Biograph Company were forced into service, the police took part in the attempt to find Miss Hartman, and when it was learned the company with which she was working was on a location on Santa Fe Railway property, many of the railway's employes, the telegraph system, and three of the division officers attempted to aid the Biograph people in finding the stray coat.

The search continued until after two o'clock, when Miss Hartman was found posing between two box cars. This subject reveals the difficulties encountered by an attorney who had witnessed a double murder in a cafe at night, and the following day after learning it had been hushed up by the police, attempted to unravel the mystery.

Some new trick photography was introduced in this. The cast includes Vera Sisson, Charles Mailes, Ivan Christy, Charles Pearley, and Jack Nelson.

The Walter Coyle Biograph company is making "Alias Jimmie Barton," a two-reel subject with Jack Mulhall, Jose Ruben, Gretchen Hartman and Vola Smith as principals.

The story deals with the loss of an indentification letter carried by a young man who was to take a position in a bank. The letter is found by another who takes advantage of the opportunity, and while in the new position is given unlimited opportunity to carry out plans of a criminal nature. The subject has a decided comedy vein.

Live Comedy from E and R Jungle

The E and R Jungle Company has finished three subjects featuring the educated chimpanzees. In "Some Detective" Napoleon appears as the heavy and steals a detective's shoes whenever he wishes to commit a robbery.

For the first time in history of trained animals, so far as it is known, the two chimpanzees appear in make-up of German comedians in the subject "In Dutch."

Napoleon, who had previously manned the art of smoking, is at home in scenes for this with his big pipe, but his mate, Sallie, had more or less trouble with her wooden shoes.

The most recent subject completed is "Papa's Baby," in which a henpecked, dieted husband of a militant suffraget, child-hating woman, declares his independence, and in order to add happiness to his home, purchases a chimpanzee of a band of Spanish gutter singers.

A number of comedy situations are introduced when the mannish woman has trouble with her Ford. The principal players in all of these subjects are Lillian Brown Leighton and Ralph McComas.

The new interior stage at the Horsley studio has been completed with the exception of the installation of Cooper-Hewitt lighting system, which will consist of ten banks.

The stage space is 74 x 144 feet, and will enable the companies to continue production without loss of time due to bad weather.

A scene representing the harem of an Egyptian ruler with gardens in the background, and having a depth of more than four hundred feet, was made at the Horsley studio last week for the Mutual Masterpicture, "The Secret Hate," filmed under the direction of William J. Bowman. The furnishings for this set included a very large collection of Persian rugs and tapestries that represent a small fortune.

Alexander to Direct Clifford for Mutual

Edward Alexander, formerly with the Universal and other Los Angeles producing companies, who has been with the Horsley organization for the past several months, has been selected to direct a Mutual Masterpicture company headed by William Clifford. Mae Gaston, late of the Majestic stock company, and Lucy Payton, who was with the American, have been engaged at the Horsley studio.

Filming of the fifth episode of "The Social Pirates" series from stories by George Bronson-Howard, was begun last week by Director James Horne. This is titled "Doctor Hyocine," and reveals the practice of a physician in the use of a drug discovered by himself.

This drug enables him to very easily hypnotize anyone, and by its aid he forces parties to give him checks. His villany is practised at a summer resort where the "Social Pirates," Mona and Mary, taken by Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby, succeed in using the doctor's weapon, the drug, on him.

Other principals of this cast are Frank

JEWEL CARMAN (Fine Arts-Triangle)

Jonnason, John G. Lingham, Paul C. Hurst, and Edward Clisbee.

A departure from the past methods of production is being inaugurated at Universal City, which officials believe will to a very great extent eliminate the loss of time by producing companies occasioned by the need of waiting when required sets, props, and costumes are not at hand when the company is ready to make scenes.

A new department is being organized which eventually will become paramount to the scenario technical, art, and costume.

A scenario after being completed and O. K.'d, will next go to the draftsmen, where settings will be laid out and drawings made for their completion.

These will in turn pass through the technical and art departments where the sets will be made and ready for the director by the time production is taken up.

Two Directors for Universal Studios

Heretofore it has been the practice for directors to be in full charge of ordering all required for each photoplay, and this change will materially reduce the work of the directors and at the same time insure greater efficiency.

The new department is under the management of Charles Rankin, who was in charge of the electrical displays and lighting system at the California Panama Exposition at San Diego.

Two directors were this week added to the Universal West Coast producing staff in the persons of Wm. J. Bowman, late of Quality and Horsley companies, and Craig Hutchinson, until recently director of L-Ko comedies.

Mr. Bowman will direct the making of five-reel and larger subjects featuring prominent legitimate stage and screen stars. The first subject to be taken up will be a five-reel one featuring Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven, entitled "The King Who Would Not Stay Put."

Scenario for this is being adapted from a story recently purchased and the screen version will be the second prepared by Ford I. Beebe. The story deals with the kidnapping of a crown prince of Magonia.

He is placed in an orphan's home in New York under the name of Jimmie Smith. Twenty years later the man who caused the kidnapping becomes conscious-stricken and makes a confession, thus bringing about the difficulty of trying to discover among some twenty Jimmie Smiths the heir to the throne.

To add to the difficulty of the government detective force a vaudeville actor of the proper name claims the right for publicity purposes and is dumbfounded when he is actually taken by the detectives to the home of the king.

Mr. Bowman has a number of legitimate stage playlets and photoplays to his credit, has been a director for the past six years following stage production, and during the past year made the first six releases of the Quality Company for the Metro program.

In the making of the second he made a wager with Francis X. Bushman, respecting certain phases regarding the photoplay and production and Mr. Bushman after screen examination of the completed subject admitted Mr. Bowman's ideas to be the best. At the Horsley studio Mr. Bowman directed the filming of "The Bait" and "The Secret Hate."

Craig Hutchinson will direct the making of comedies in which Harry Todd and Marguerite Joslin will be featured.

These two players have just been added to the Universal stock company following the completion of their contract with the Essanay Company, where they took part in the successful "Snakeville" comedy series.

Mr. Hutchinson entered tne picture industry as scenario writer for the Keystone and after serving a number of months there accepted a similar position at the L-Ko.

Last August he was given a company to direct and has since filmed a number of excellent comedies, many of which he was author of.

"Love and Money" a Curtis Joker

"Love and Money" is an Allen Curtis Joker in which two cousins, partners in business, fall in love with the same girl, and both play on the firm's bank account to make the girl's parents believe they have the cash. The usual cast for Curtis comedies appears.

The Ford-Cunard Company has turned in five scenarios for subjects which will be made for Universal immediately. "The Key to a Flat" has three principals who appear in the role of stage players.

One actor in the absence of his wife falls in love with the wife of another and they continue their case through rehearsals. By an interchange of keys the actor's wife returns home and makes a discovery.

At the same time the actress' husband learns of the case, and there is a tragedy.

"A Bad Start" shows the success of a small town detective aided by his wife in causing the arrest of a famous pair of crooks when they go to the city on a visit.

A womanless comedy drama is another of the Grace Cunard scenarios entitled "The Three Veterans." The name characters after misjudging one another with regard to their experiences in the Civil War, finally learn the truth and it brings together soldiers who had aided each other in preventing death.

SCENES FROM TWO TRIANGLE-KAY BEE VEHICLES FOR H. B. WARNER; "THE RAIDERS" AND "THE BEGGAR OF CAWNPORE"

"Lucille Love" and "Broken Coin" characters have been brought from their celluloid sepulcher to again flicker on screens in "The Royal Robber."

Grace Cunard is again the Madcap Queen and Director Ford appears in the part of Crown Prince Frederick. The latter runs away and becomes leader of a band of bandits. The queen causes a search for him and he is accidently located by a sketch of him made by an artist who was held prisoner.

The soldiers of the kingdom aid in finding the prince whose father has in the meantime died, and he is taken to the throne.

Ford Subject with Irish Locale

The fifth of the Francis Ford subjects is from a scenario by the director with subtitles from an old ballad by R. P. S. Lefann.

The locale of this is Ireland and the time shortly after the island had become a possession of Brittany. It reveals the feeling of the native sons of the land of the sod toward the new rulers and military government established.

Ultimately the Irish are forced to come to America. The players appearing in the several stories with Francis Ford and Grace Cunard are Irving Lipner, Harry Mann, Pete Girrard, Jack Conlay, Jack Holt, "Daddy" and Mrs. Charles Manley, Adoni Foverri, Orrin Jackson, and Robert Murdock.

A comedy drama revealing effects of the feelings of one upon associates forms the plot for "Grouches and Smiles." This features Myrtle Gonzalez as the ever-happy and pleasant unfortunate girl who must support herself and crippled brother.

The others in the cast are Frankie Lee, Alfred Allen and Val Paul. The direction is in charge of Lynn Reynolds who also wrote the scenario.

The scenes are laid in and about the household of a business man whose feelings indicate the state of mind of all others about him.

Another railroad melodrama is being made by the 101 Bison Company entitled "A Railroad Tie." This is an adaptation from the story by James MacGregor, prepared by Harvey Gates and pertains to the son and daughter of business enemies because of their ownership of mines located in the same district.

The fathers to separate the children send them west. The son taking an assumed name works in the mine of the girl's father, and the girl becomes an employe of the other mine superintendent.

The son is successful in preventing a dreadful catastrophy, thus bringing about the meeting of the two fathers and instilling a feeling of love rather than hatred.

The four principals are Lee Hill, Rena Rogers, E. N. Wallock, and Mark Fenton. Also appearing in this subject is L. C. Shumway, late leading man for the Melville Lubin Company at San Diego.

Making Romance Real

Eugene Palette, member of the Fine Arts stock company, and Ann Slater, an actress of the same studio, were recently married and spent their honeymoon at San Francisco. The nuptial is the culmination of a studio romance which began when the bride of today worked in a picture with Mr. Palette last summer.

Announcement of several changes in titles of coming Fine Art Triangle photoplays was made last week. "Daphne," starring Lillian Gish with Elliott Dexter, is to be known as "Daphne and the Pirate." "Betty of Greystone," co-starring Dorothy Gish and Owen Moore, has been changed to "Betty the Homeless," and "Martha's Vindication" will appear as "The Silence of Martha."

The latter is by Ella Woods, presenting Norma Talmadge, Seena Owen, Tully Marshall and Ralph Lewis.

Douglas Fairbanks has discarded his drawing-room clothing and is to be seen now in the make-up of a westerner of the early-day type, for his appearance in the next subject, a comedy drama, scenario of which was written by himself. Bessie Love, Sam DeGrasse, Mary Alden and Fred Burns constitute the supporting principals.

David W. Griffith and Frank E. Woods are preparing a number of editorials explaining the injustice, unconstitutionality, and un-American like phases of the question of censorship of motion pictures, which is to be elaborately printed with cartoon illustrations and will be forwarded gratis to the principal newspaper editors of the country.

An incident in arranging for the preparation for this very effectively illustrates that the cry for censorship comes from the educated people who are not familiar with motion pictures nor acquainted with the makers.

Mr. Griffith attempted to enlist the services of a cartoonist of national repute, and the producer was told by the artist that his services would not prove satisfactory because he could not draw pictures successfully on a subject he did not fully believe in.

Mr. Griffith spent twenty minutes in explaining the making of pictures and the attempts of producers to the artist, who left the studio a convert to the anti-censorship movement, anxious to make the pictures desired by Griffith because he believed in them.

Injury to Helen Gibson

The current "Hazard of Helen" is "The Trap of Death" and resulted in the injury of Helen Gibson. A scene for this was being made at the Salt Lake Railroad yards, and the actress of thrills was injured when the employed engineer ran the train at a speed of thirty miles when ordered to go about half that rate.

Miss Gibson injured her leg in climbing from a box car to the engine. Further production will be delayed a short time owing to this injury.

Director William Beaudine and his company of Ethel Teare-Kalem comedy makers spent the past week at Santa Barbara making scenes for "What Father Found Out." Miss Teare is supported by Jack McDermott and the scenario is by Howard Young.

The story deals with the success of a suitor father did not like who successfully disguised himself and won the heart of not only the girl but also her father.

The Ham comedy company is filming "Ham's Nightmare," written by Lloyd Hamilton and Bud Duncan.

"The Argonauts" Is Elaborate Film

For the past sixteen weeks a troupe of players have been working on the filming of a ten-reel subject entitled "The Argonauts," which is of a historical nature with scenes laid at Hang Town, where the first gold was discovered, and at San Francisco.

The film is to reveal a historical fact which occurred in 1849 and 1850. The scenario was prepared by Winifred Hugaboon, who has also novelized the play and the production is being made under the direction of Henry Kabierske, assisted by William Ehfe and William Parsons.

The producing company is the Grafton Film Publishing Company, of which Edward L. Grafton, a Los Angeles magazine publisher, is the head. The principals of this subject include Grant Churchill, Gertrude Kaby, Dorothy Barrett, Emma Kost, Ethel Smith, Vera Lewis, Gale Brooks and William Reiffel. The photography is in charge of Victor and Alex Scheurich.

The studio of this company has been built at Monrovia, California, and the subject will be completed early in March.

Christie Now at New Studio

The Christie Film Company has now taken complete control of the Quality studio at Sunset Boulevard and Gower Street, Hollywood, using all stages, the laboratories and other equipment.

Frank Potter, for a number of years with the Universal, where he supervised finishing of Nestor subjects, has been engaged as superintendent of the Christie laboratory.

The Christie Nestor players were last week filming "Eddie's Night Out," wherein a young husband is driven to seek the bright lights because he forgot to purchase food for his mother-in-law's parrot.

Mr. Christie's parrot appears in this, and gave to the scenario writer a good subtitle when it continually cried "Put him out."

Besides Eddie Lyons as the husband, Betty Compson, the wife, Stella Adams her mother, Lee Moran and Neil Burns play in this.

"NEWS" GIVES ITS SUBSCRIBER SERVICE

Muscatine, Ia., January 31

Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Your letter dated January 25, in answer to ours relative to obtaining films pertaining to the lumber industry received. We have followed your suggestion. The manner in which you readily investigated this matter for us is indeed appreciated, but not more than we would naturally suppose after being a constant reader of so splendid a trade paper.

We follow every issue, with a feeling that only the best and better trained minds in the profession are molding the steps for the masses of exhibitors in this country.

A favor such as complied with in our case is well worth the price of MOTION PICTURE NEWS alone.

Most sincerely,
Bosten and Neibert,
Per Ludy Bosten.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

HOW time does fugit along! Here we have Ash Wednesday coming on March 8; then we'll have St. Patrick's day, then the income tax will be due, and before we realize it Mary Miles Minter will be fourteen years old again, and we'll be knee-deep in summer!

And the next thing we know this Motion Picture Industry of ours will be out of its infancy.

About that time the Strange Case of Mary Page will have been solved, we'll know Who's Guilty, and Charlie Chaplin will get a job somewhere. The future is rich in promise.

There is no more unfailing sign of a noble nature than to recognize when one is in error, and to make amends for it.

The graceful and Chesterfieldian bow of apology which we made to Irene Howley for having listed her as a character actress in MOTION PICTURE NEWS Studio Directory, we now repeat before Gladys Brockwell, of the Fine Arts forces.

It seems that on page 80 of the directory, she, too, is catalogued as a character actress, whereas she has played leads in many notable pictures.

Among these have been "The Typhoon," "One of the Discard," "Up from the Depths," "A Man and His Mate," "The She-Devil," and "The Price of Power." We are sorry, and we'll never let it happen again.

A new assistant general manager has been added to the staff of the Rolfe-Metro studios. He is Max Karger Jr., who took his first survey of this world in which he proposes to reside, on Sunday, February 13 He took over the control of the Rolfe studios about eight minutes later.

In consideration of our agreeing to keep his name out of it, and say nothing of his being connected with Metro Pictures Corporation, Arthur James has told us this story:

"I have just returned from the Pittsburgh exhibitors' ball. There I heard of one of the best theaters in the city, which has a real practical fountain in the lobby, and in the basin are schools of gold fish.

"Sometimes this theater books an especially popuar feature—I name no brand—and the lobby is crowded. The manager that several times under these conditions. women have been pushed over into the fountain.

"'But have any of them been injured?' I asked him. 'No,' he replied, 'but many of the goldfish have been practically ruined'."

Mr. James then signed for the luncheon check, and we came back to the office.

It cannot be denied that the modern advertising man is wide-awake and up to date. Note particularly the Universal advertising on page 1150 of last week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS. It shows, among other things that this department has a number of careful readers.

No ordinary comedy lion can back David Griffith up more than seven inches, not even the most ferocious, man-woman-and-child-eating specimen the E. and R. Jungle film can produce. The E. & R. lent Leo, its famous African beef-wrecker, to Mr. Griffith for use in the new De Wolf Hopper picture, "Sunshine Dad" at the Fine Arts studio, last week.

Three boys were hired to hold the beast up until he got over to the Griffith workshops, and there he was put in a cage—for photographic purposes.

DAVID AND THE LION

It happened that Hi Johnson, who is at present in the employ of the state of California, as governor, was visiting the studio, and Mr. Griffith took him into the set to see Leo.

Leo immediately walked through his cage, and came out to see the man who might have been president, if he had gotten enough votes, and the Original Progressive had resigned. The company took to the wings, all except Messrs. Griffith and Johnson.

Mr. Johnson shouted "Scat!" and Mr. Griffith picked up an oyster fork and charged the infuriated beast. He stabbed Leo right between the eyes, but except for a plaintive "meow" obtained no results.

It is reported that Governor Johnson started in on a Progressive speech, but before he had finished the first reel, Leo turned and went back into his cage.

He was furious all the rest of the day, however, and toward evening escaped from his keeper, tipped over a bottle of cream, and lapped up every drop of it.

There is fear around the E. & R. Jungle that the vigorous exercise of the day may have injured Leo permanently, as when he came home that night he lay down on the doorstep instead of scratching to be let in as usual.

The heavy snow of last week delayed the milk train from up-state all the way from three to four hours. Consequently, last Tuesday, Virginia Pearson did not get her customary cream bath until 11:19 in the morning.

We have this exclusive like: William Nigh, Metro director, is producing a new and still unnamed feature. He had considerable difficulty in getting the script from the script writing person who had been employed to make it, but after considerable urging the scenario began to come in one reel at a time.

He protested that he needed it all at once, but the author coyly replied that it was impossible, as part of the plan was to furnish surprises—even for the director.

The big surprise came in reel four. The script called for a full thousand prisoners, marching in a dreary line across the Russian snows, into Siberia. These were to be dissolved out into a similar line of skeletons.

Mr. Nigh was surprised all right. But he wasn't stalled. He turned immediately to "Kid" Hogan, chief property man. "Hogan," he said, "go out and get me one thousand skeletons."

"Yes, sir," replied Hogan, kneeling as usual and kissing the cuff of the director's trousers. "What kind of skeletons, sir?" "Regular marching skeletons," said Nigh. "And hurry up; we're behind now." Hogan is still ransacking the family cupboards of the upper west side.

J. K. Burger, who for the last four years has been connected with Pathé in various capacities, has resigned from that company. His plans for the future have not been laid, but he assures us he intends to stay in the film business.

Mr. Burger has had a wide experience in this line. He was first connected with the Mutual corporation, and later with the World Special Film corporation, his work having included the positions of auditor, controller, special representative and district manager for Pathé.

Among the week's visitors to the film colony at Jacksonville are Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Thanhouser. They have busied themselves looking up some new locations for Thanhouser productions now already under way, and assisting their directors in every way.

Mr. Thanhouser is reported as delighted with the conditions for picture making as he found them in the South. He will immediately send another feature company down to take advantage of his discovery.

Mrs. Thanhouser, who is the head of the scenario department, made the trip for the special purpose of putting some finishing touches of her own to several important scripts.

Two mighty men of America are about to fare forth and show a few Mexicans just where to dismount. They aim to fight their way through peons, Yaquis, haciendas, generals, admirals, and the whole population, rescue a few beautiful damsels, and compel someone to salute the flag.

The two fighters are James Corbett and Clifford Bruce, ordinarily peaceful citizens of Bayside, L. I., but terrors when they get on a screen.

CLIFFORD BRUCE

The fighting has been laid out for them in a scenario by Porter Emerson Browne, and they announce that they are going to wade into it in the true Bayside spirit. We recall a more or less enchanting verse on this subject, which runs:

A mining man in Mexico
Sat singing to a star;
In the shelter of his bungalow
He strummed his soft guitar.
And he sang of eyes
Where the love-light lies
Like summer night
In hazy skies——etc.

There is more of this poem, which we are in a position to furnish on receipt of a two-cent stamp. However, the fame of Messrs. Bruce and Corbett, both as actors and first class fighting men, is beginning to spread beyond the limits of Bayside—indeed, if it has not already done so. All we can say is, don't pick on us, boys.

Special Research Laboratory for Industrial

Department Will Be in Charge of E. H. Spears, Who Entered the Motion Picture Business with Kinetograph in 1902, and Later Went to Eastman Kodak Company

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER'S announcement of the inauguration of a special research laboratory in direct connection with the Industrial Moving Picture Company's factory organization, signalizes a decided and important innovation inasmuch as that it is the first department of its kind to be exclusively maintained by an individual moving picture manufacturer in this country.

The research laboratory of the Industrial Moving Picture Company will be directed by E. H. Spears, who, until February 1, was working along these lines under the personal supervision of Dr. Kenneth S. Meese, director of the research laboratory of Eastman Kodak Company.

Mr. Spears entered the moving picture business in 1902, with the Kinetograph Company, of New York City, which was then managed by Percy Waters. In 1905 Mr. Spears accepted a position with the Eastman Kodak Company.

While in the Eastman employ, his work covered practically everything in the field of moving pictures, from camera man down through to the production of the finished picture.

He made exhaustive experiments on the Gaumont three-color process, and went through all of the branches of the Gaumont work, from camera man to the finished product.

For two years he was engaged in experiments concerning a two-color process which was expected to be more satisfactory than the Gaumont three-color process.

Mr. Spears has had unlimited experience in research work directly pertaining to developing, the chemistry of developers, dyeing, and the chemistry of dyeing, toning, fixing, etc., and is qualified in every way to capably handle the new research laboratory Mr. Rothacker has placed under his direction.

Mr. Spears' duties, in addition to continuing his experimental research work, will be to personally screen-inspect the product of the Industrial Moving Picture Company and to render special and expert advice to customers of this company and to undertake a special educational campaign for the direct and specific benefit of the Rothacker employes.

Defense League Calls Aid of Films to Arouse Nation

"America Unprepared"' with No "Story," But Full of Just Plain Horsesense About Deplorable Condition of Country's Means to Repel Invasion, Is Part of Propaganda

"AMERICA UNPREPARED," a six-reel film showing the nation's defenselessness, was given a private showing at the Hotel Biltmore, New York, on February 15. The pictures are sponsored by the American Defense Society, and are part of that organization's propaganda for an adequate army and navy.

No attempt is made to weave a story into the film. Instead, views of our present military resources are shown, and subtitles, skillfully written, present the facts with regard to our lack of preparedness.

These subtitles, based on data from official records, show just where the nation stands as a military power.

Considered as a whole, the subtitles drive home as convincing an argument for military preparation as has ever been offered. The American Defense Society's program, which the pictures illustrate graphically, is this:

"We must have a strong navy, of forty-eight dreadnoughts and battle-cruisers in proportion. The necessary number of scout cruisers and sea-going submarines should balance the capital fleet; also auxiliaries, colliers, repair ships, tenders, etc. Ships should be laid down immediately.

"We must have a standing army of 200,000 men and 45,000 officers, backed by a national force of citizens trained in arms under a universal and obligatory system.

"This body should be of no less strength than two million men, fully equipped, and with a large reserve supply of artillery and ammunition. . . . . Half measures are useless and a waste of money."

The pictures will be sent out with lecturers over the country for showing at mass meetings.

Many prominent Americans are identified with the Defense Society. The advisory board consists of the following:

David Jayne Hill, ex-ambassador to Germany; Perry Belmont, of the Navy League; Charles J. Bonaparte, former attorney-general; John Grier Hibben, president of Princeton University; Henry B. Joy, president Packard Motor Car Company; Hudson Maxim, member Naval Advisory Board; William F. McCombs, of McCombs and Ryan; Truman H. Newberry and Theodore Roosevelt.

SNOW STORM CLOSES UP NEARLY ALL VANCOUVER HOUSES

A particularly heavy snowfall in Victoria recently served to close up practically all the theatres on a recent evening, and the only ones remaining open for business were the Columbia, Empress and Dominion.

They had a very light business, as the deep snow rendered the streets almost impassable.

The 930 men comprising the 103d Battalion, who are in training at Victoria, turned out to help the local street railway clear the snow from its tracks, and were later invited by the company to attend the showing of "Fighting in France" at the Royal Victoria theatre.

Pictures of this description are found to be intensely interesting to soldiers, and this and similar pictures have done unusually good business in that section.

NED REARDON, UNIVERSAL PLAYER OF NOTE, DIED ON FEBRUARY 4

Universal fans will regret to hear that Ned Reardon, for the past two years in eastern Universal productions, died February 4 at St. Luke's hospital, New York City, after a gallant eight weeks' fight with pneumonia. The body was shipped to Mr. Reardon's mother in Boston for burial.

Ned Reardon played exclusively with King Baggot. He was a very versatile screen actor and before joining the Baggot company had appeared in Edison pictures, previous to which he had had a long experience on the stage.

One of his most notable Universal pictures was "The Corsican Brothers," the Baggot double-exposure feature.

Mr. Reardon was unmarried. His last Universal appearance was with Mr. Baggot in "Almost a Papa." The Universal Heights studios sent a massive wreath to the services at Boston.

WINNIPEG CENSORS REJECT 21 REELS

Even scenes in motion picture films suggesting crime were cut out of many reels at the behest of the Winnipeg board of picture censors, according to the record of last month's culling.

The censors inspected 547 reels, condemning 21 of them intact. The balance, for the most part, were subjected to eliminations, murders, robberies, burglaries, suicides, indecencies, suggestive scenes and sub-titles proving obnoxious to the censors' tastes.

"THE IRON CLAW" PATHE TO BE IN FOURTEEN EPISODES

A unique tribute has been paid "The Iron Claw," Pathé's new serial.

Exhibitors were so impressed with the strength of the cast and the excellence of the first episode shown them privately that a large majority have requested Pathé to make the serial in fourteen episodes instead of twelve.

These requests have come from all over the country. Consequently it is announced that the serial will be in fourteen episodes.

Essanay in Throes of Moving into New Quarters

Studio Is Practically Completed—Main Entrance of the Offices Will Be in New Building—Entire Two Stories of the Structure in Use for Stage Sets

EXTERIOR OF THE NEW ESSANAY STUDIO JUST COMPLETED AT CHICAGO

THE Essanay Company in Chicago is now in the throes of moving into its new quarters. The new studio practically is completed and while carpenters and electricians are still hard at work putting on the finishing touches, the movers are changing offices from the old studio building to the new, and property men are busy fitting up their new department.

The new studio building is 350 feet long by 175 wide. It forms a west wing to the old studio, and runs from Argyle street one block south.

On the east side of the old building there is an extension for factory purposes, while in the center there is a large rear portico, so that the building as it now stands forms a perfect E.

The main entrance of the offices will be in the new studio building. There is a large reception hall on the first floor at the entrance, where those who come to the office on business will be attended to and directed to the necessary departments.

To the right of the entrance is a large carpenter shop, and back of this is the new studio stretching back to the end of the building, and said to be the largest indoor artificially lighted studio in the world.

The entire two stories of the building are given over to the studio, with the exception that on one side there is a long gallery with 50 dressing rooms devoted to male actors only.

Just east of the studio is a large property room extending the full length of the studio. Over this there are two new exhibition rooms, gymnasiums and shower baths for the men.

There is a gallery that connects the baths with the dressing rooms so that they are of easy access. There is also a large room off the gymnasium for a general lounging place for players when not busy on the floor.

The front of the building on the second floor is devoted to the main offices, including that of George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, and other officials.

Here also are the advertising, scenario, and auditing departments, and offices of the directors and assistants.

The advertising department, scenario department, offices of the directors, and dressing rooms of the actors now located on the second floor of the old building all are being moved into the new building.

This entire wing of the old building will be given over to the women's department. Carpenters have already started remodeling and finishing it off making it more comfortable, while the office furniture is being moved out.

A matron will be put in charge with several maids to look after the comfort of the actresses.

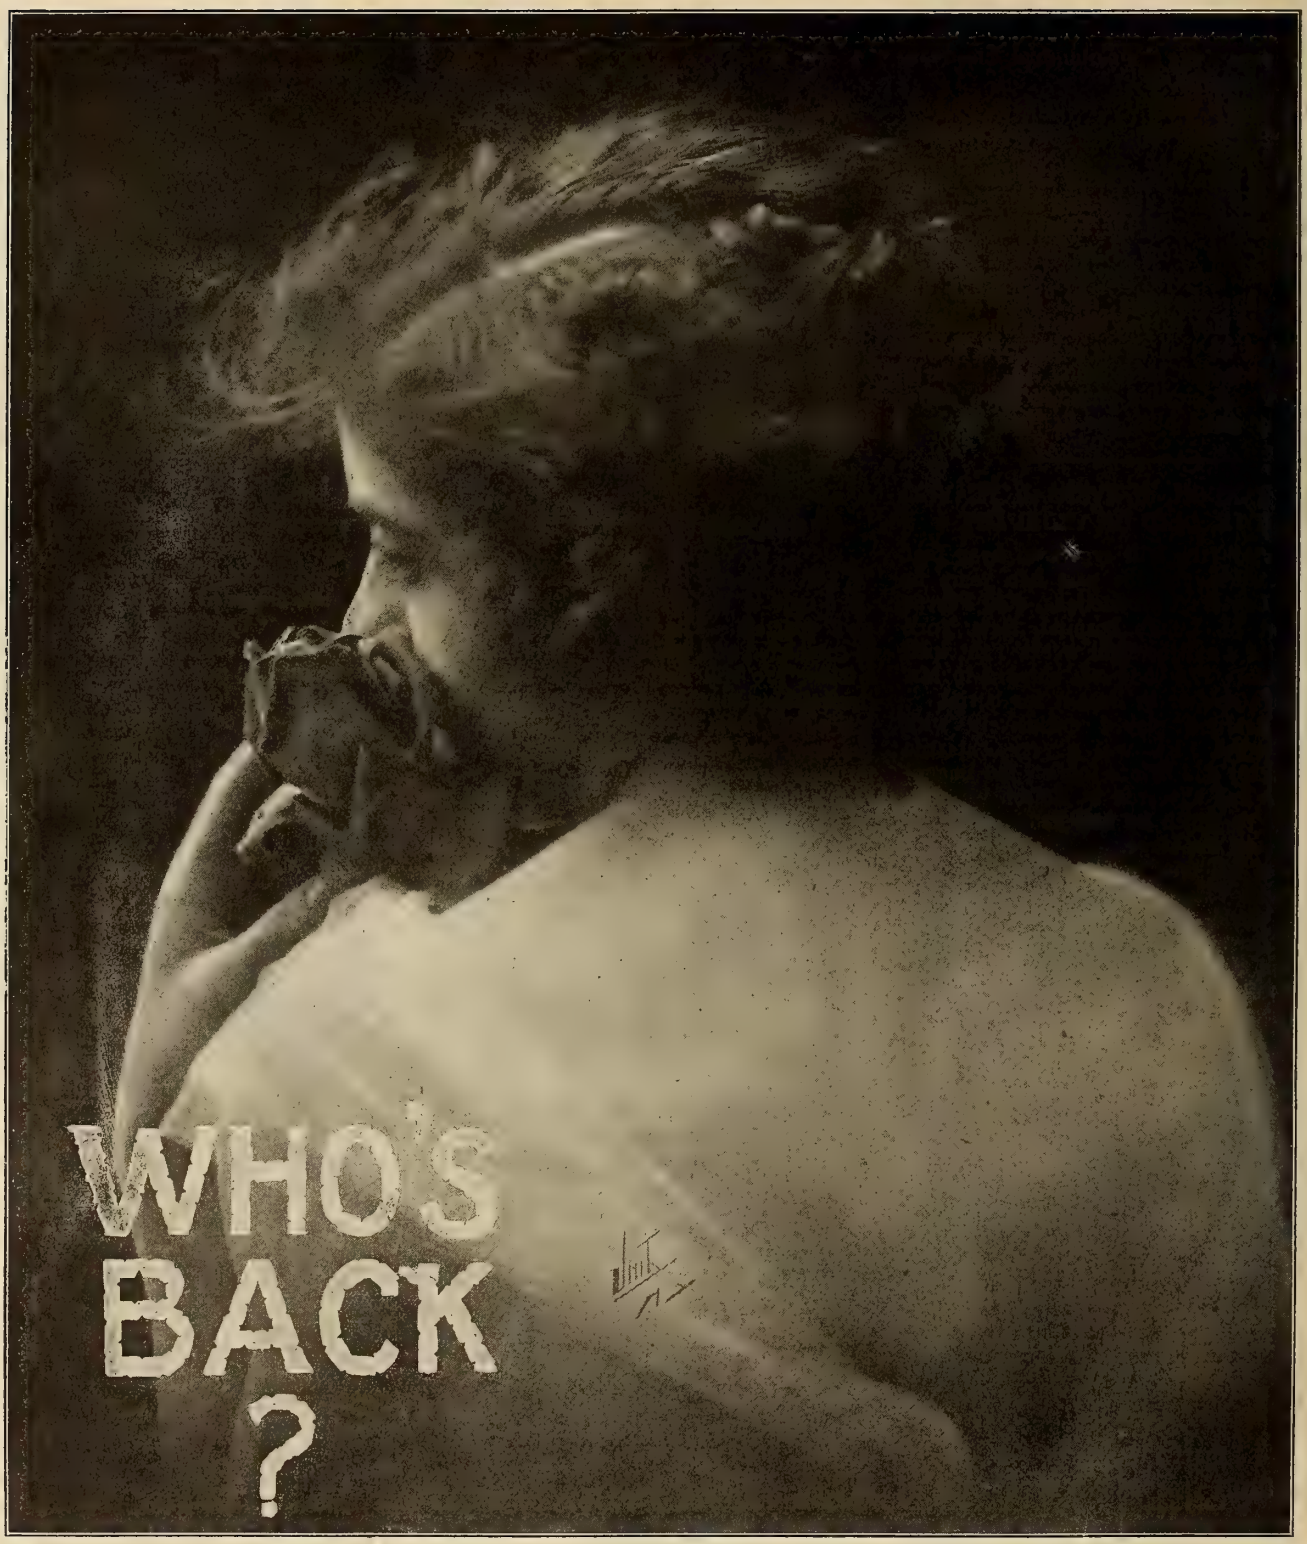
The business offices on the first floor and which now are being moved to the new building will make way for a factory extension.

The taking of photoplays already is progressing in the new studio. The sets are being snapped, however, by temporary lights, some floor lights, and others fastened to a scaffolding.

Work is going on rapidly on the great cranes which will carry the permanent overhead lights, switching them back and forth from one part of the studio to the other, as required by the various sets.

Essanay having been cramped for floor space for its multiple reel features, all of which require large sets, it was necessary to use temporary lights in order to push its plays to completion on time.

It is expected that the new lighting system will be completed shortly.



WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD

Motion Picture News,
729 7th Ave., New York.

Congratulations on the Studio Directory Number. As motion picture editor and answers man of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, I find it worth its weight in gold, and as publicity man for the Lyrics, two high class feature houses, I find it very valuable.

As your St. Louis correspondent I am very proud of it. The idea is fine. Long life to it.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

FROM 5 OFFICES 10 MONTHS AGO TO 17 BRANCHES IS V-L-S-E RECORD

FROM a group of five offices with which the Big Four began business ten months ago, this combination has grown to seventeen branches, known as buying offices, and six sub-offices, making a total of twenty-three exchanges altogether.

The latest addition to the organization is a new sub-office in Montreal, at 204 St. Catherine street, under the guidance of H. W. McCullum.

Although the Big Four has been in Canada only a month, W. C. Gookin, the Canadian manager, found that the demand for V-L-S-E features was growing so rapidly that it was utterly impossible to handle the business with a road force and a single office in Toronto, and as a result quarters in Montreal were taken almost immediately after the establishment of the Toronto main office.

Another enlargement of the Big Four organization is the transfer of the St. Louis office from a sub to a buying office, under the management of S. W. Hatch, who has been in charge of the Big Four interests in that territory for some time past.

Heretofore the St. Louis sub-office was a part of the Kansas City branch, but the large increases in business which the Big Four has experienced all along the line for the past few months, necessitated a separate branch office, to issue additional prints and quicker service.

The many expansions in the V-L-S-E service—additions being noted almost every week since the first of the year—have, of course, necessitated the augmentation of the selling force.

A number of new additions have already been reported. Those which have occurred within the past week include appointments in Philadelphia, Washington, New York and Atlanta.

Two acquisitions to the sales force of the New York office are M. Morrison, who will cover upper Manhattan and some towns to the north, and William H. Irvine, who will have as his territory part of Brooklyn and Long Island.

Mr. Morrison is new to the film business, his previous selling efforts having been devoted, for the most part, to the motor truck industry.

Mr. Irvine has been in the film industry for several years. He, at one time, had an exchange of his own, and also represented the Kinemacolor Company, and originally was manager at Washington for the World Film Corporation.

This brings the total of the New York sales force up to nine representatives, including those connected with the recently opened Syracuse sub-office.

In Washington there has been added S. J. Mayor, to cover the city of Baltimore, part of the state of Maryland, and that part of Virginia which is served by the Washington office.

Mr. Mayor was formerly manager of the General Film Company in Washington, and has also been connected with the World Film Corporation and the Inter-state Film Company.

Further announcement concerns the appointment of R. Bins as salesman attached to the Philadelphia office. He will travel in Delaware, part of Maryland, and that section of New Jersey which is included in the Philadelphia exchange territory.

Among the promotions made by the Big Four during the past week, is that of H. P. Allen, from the position of shipper to that of booker in the Atlanta office.

Mr. Allen has only been with the V-L-S-E for a short time, but has made an excellent record, and his advancement is well deserved.

It is understood that another salesman will be added to the Atlanta office within the immediate future, making four representatives of the Big Four traveling out of that branch.

Officials of the V-L-S-E state that the many expansions of the past few months have only been made in response to increasing demands.

METRO'S INCREASE IN CAPITAL CITY IS FROM 9 THEATRES TO 19 IN TWO MONTHS

THE Washington (D. C.) Metro exchange has increased wonderfully in business in the past two months under the presidency of L. M. Day.

Since taking over the film of Mr. and Mrs. Venon Castle in "The Whirl of Life" in that territory, J. Frank Brown, the sales manager, has had to resort to some ingenuity to satisfy the demand for this film.

This production has been playing to twenty-five and fifty cents, even in small towns, with a run of from several days to a week. E. E. Reese is on the road booking "Virtue," and reports exceptional success.

"We are daily adding contracts to our list," commented Mr. Day. "In Baltimore alone we have risen from nine houses to nineteen in the past two months. Other cities in proportion. Francis X. Bushman in 'Man and His Soul' is one of our biggest drawing cards at present, because it appeals to all classes and all ages."

Under the management of C. W. Bunn, the World Film Exchange, in Washington, D. C., is enjoying excellent prosperity. An air of business activity pervades these offices, which may be due to the fact that Mr. Bunn went there with business ability as his chief asset.

"Before I entered the film industry I sold watches," said Mr. Bunn. "Now I sell films. It makes no difference what your wares are, the same principles of salesmanship govern them. That's the way I look at it. We are reaping good harvest now, and are particularly finding a place in the smaller towns, which have also reached the point that the feature is the thing for their theatre."

The V-L-S-E exchange, in Washington, D. C., is increasing in business to such an extent that an increase in force has been necessary. The latest addition is S. J. Mayer, formerly with the World Film Corporation.

Mr. Mayer is well known throughout this territory in the film business and promises to materially assist in broadening the trade of the V-L-S-E.

Frank Spurrier, manager of the exchange, recently returned from a short trip and reports favorable conditions for the picture industry as a whole.

Activity is a noticeable feature of the Mutual exchange, in Washington, D. C., under the management of B. C. Cunningham. "Mutual certainly knew what it was doing when it increased its feature productions," commented Mr. Cunningham.

"We keep these booked solid at all times, with repeated calls for return engagements."

MIDDLE WEST FILM MEN LOOK TO MOST PROSPEROUS SEASON

With the advance of spring, motion picture men, in the Middle West, both exhibitors and exchange managers, are looking forward to one of the most prosperous seasons ever enjoyed.

"It is already picking up out our way," said J. T. Cummings, manager of Cherokee, Ia., theatres, who was in Omaha the other day.

"Winter may be the show season in the larger cities, but not in our town.

"We are just large enough not to depend upon the country patronage, which is taken away when the spring rush begins on the farm."

Messrs. Taft and Franck, managers of the Iowa Amusement Company, with theatres in Marshalltown, Des Moines, Mason City and elsewhere in Iowa, visited at the World exchange in Omaha. They are preparing, they declared, for the biggest business they have ever known.

SCREEN CLUB ORGANIZED IN DETROIT

To guard against unfair and unscrupulous methods in the trade, the leading exchange managers of Detroit have formed an organization to be known as the Screen Club of Michigan.

At the first meeting, held Sunday afternoon, February 6, only Detroiters were present, but as time progresses it is planned to have exchange managers join from other parts of the state, such as Grand Rapids and the upper peninsula.

Those at the preliminary meeting were A. J. Gilligham, General Film Company; George Weeks, Universal; G. J. Trask, Mutual; Henry J. Guthard, Metro; A. I. Shapiro, Fox; Mr. Franconi, Pathé; James Duncan, Big Four; and Joseph Kent, World.

There was an election of officers which resulted as follows: President, A. J. Gilligham; vice-president, G. J. Trask; and secretary-treasurer, George Weeks.

The club will hold luncheon meetings every second and fourth Tuesday of the month. Already there is some talk of holding a big Screen dance, either in April or May, and to have it attended by some of the best-known screen stars.

BLUEBIRDS MAKE HEADWAY IN DENVER TERRITORY

Bluebirds are certainly making fine headway in the Denver territory. Manager Boyd of the Tabor Grand, of Denver, called on Carl Stearn of the Bluebirds and arranged to have each Bluebird feature show three days each week instead of two days, which was the former arrangement.

Manager Boyd stated that it was on account of the capacity business that "Secret Love" played to that prompted this move on his part.

Stearn has appointed George Mayne as roadman for the Bluebirds to work the Utah and Montana territory. Mayne was formerly connected with Mutual in the same capacity, and from all reports is a regular business getter.

SNOW IN SOUTHERN COLORADO KEEPS ROADMEN FROM TERRITORY

Charles R. Gilmore, manager of the World exchange, reports that, on account of the snowbound conditions of southern Colorado, his roadmen have had to forgo working the territory. He also reports that his office did more business in the past two weeks than in any six weeks previous.

GOLDSTEIN MAKES SWEEP OF COLORADO THEATRES

Louis Goldstein, manager Universal exchange, Denver, is making a sweep of the larger theatres in the territory. He reports that he has placed the Universal program in the Star theatre, largest theatre in Cripple Creek, Colo.; Isis theatre, largest theatre in Alamosa, and the Idle Hour theatre, largest theatre in Wellington, Colo.

TANDY, SOUTHERN PARAMOUNT PICTURES, BRINGS "PROSPERITY ITEMS" TO NEW ORLEANS

BRINGING with him a story of unprecedented Paramount activity in that territory, C. E. Tandy, general manager of the Southern Paramount Pictures Company, and of the Texas Paramount Pictures Company, dropped off in New Orleans to give a lightning "once over" to the Crescent City.

This is the gist of the prosperity items Mr. Tandy gave to a representative of Motion Picture News:

"Almost every town in eleven states, positively every city of more than 5,000 population, is oversold on Paramount releases. The exhibitors are hollering for three pictures a week, and in a number of instances we are able to supply them only two.

"Geraldine Farrar in 'Carmen' is the biggest knockout and drawing card Paramount ever had. We can fill but a scant fifty per cent of bookings on this picture.

"Mr. Verleye, of the New Orleans office, reports that 'Carmen' is solidly booked in his territory up to April, and that numerous requests are coming in for May dates.

"I have just returned from a trip through Southern territory and am on my way to visit Dallas, Jacksonville and other exchange centers. Everywhere I go I find that the Southern exhibitor is getting away from the general program idea and is putting his money into features.

"This is one of the principal reasons why Paramount cannot supply the demand. Paramount from November 1 until the present is doing practically double the business it did in the three months immediately preceding.

"The Southern Paramount Pictures Company is doing so much business at its Southern headquarters in Atlanta that it will construct its own building, a building that will be one of the finest film structures in the South.

"A few months ago we were forced to double our space in Atlanta. We moved from 65 Walton Street to 67 Walton Street and doubled the space, and now find that we will have to construct our own building.

"My agents are looking over several sites and we have construction plans drawn.

"The investment will represent $75,000; but we believe in Atlanta real estate and that in ten years the site we will purchase will double in value.

"The building will be fire-proof and in line with Atlanta's new laws passed after the recent disastrous Mutual fire in that city.

"Reinforced concrete will be the material used throughout. We are figuring on three stories and a foundation which will allow of additions.

"Every advanced construction idea that architects, engineers and the board of underwriters can give us we will incorporate into the building.

"Just one of our ideas will be convex floors. This will facilitate the use of the overhead sprinkling system for fire prevention which we will install.

"We believe that these convex floors will make the sprinkling system much less damaging to goods, for the water will not stand on the floors. We can even try it out now and then without soaking the floors."

Mr. Tandy's visit to New Orleans was in the nature of a between-trains-stop. He left for Dallas.

While in New Orleans he arranged for the complete refitting of the Southern Paramount Pictures office. A half carload of mahogany furniture has been brought to New Orleans.

REPORTS HEAVY BOOKINGS OF KLEINE COMEDIES IN QUAKER CITY; METRO SIGNS WITH BROADWAY THEATRE

HARRY SCOTT, manager of the Philadelphia Kleine-Edison office, reports the Kleine comedies, "Mishaps of Musty Suffer," so popular the office finds it difficult to keep up with the demands for bookings. Every exhibitor who has seen these fun-producers is clamoring for them all.

As to the Billie Burke serial, although the release is not scheduled to start until April, inquiries are being received daily from eager exhibitors.

As nothing has yet been decided about the particulars of these pictures, Mr. Scott can but exhort them to have patience until the time is ripe. On general lines at the exchange, business is quite satisfactory.

The Famous Players' Exchange is elated with the overwhelming success of the latest Pickford release of "Poor Little Peppina."

This picture is playing a whole week at the Stanley, several weeks in advance of its regular release date. This large house has been packed to the doors day and night.

On the fourth night of its showing, at nine o'clock, not only the standing space inside was packed like the proverbial sardines, but the street outside was lined four deep for the space of a whole block.

As these "outsiders" had longer than an hour yet before them to stand in the damp street, it was certainly a great demonstration (if one were needed) of the all-powerful psychology of a popular screen star in a new role.

The Metro has just completed a satisfactory contract with the Broadway, a large south Philadelphia house of 1,800 seats. Metro's "What Will People Say" ran a whole week at the Broadway.

Sam Sagan, one of the Metro force, will shortly be married to Jean Rosenzweig, of Philadelphia.

M. Lessy, manager of the Philadelphia Film Exchange, which handles Red Feather features, as well as Universal Service, says the theatre managers are eagerly awaiting the weekly "Feathers," which already in the short time of their appearance on the market have become exceedingly popular with the "fans."

BLUEBIRDS PIPE A LAY OF BUSINESS IN EARS OF JACQUES, BOSTON

The bill of the Bluebird had begun to make a noise in Boston. Frank H. Jacques is in charge of her and he has caged her, temporarily, in the offices of the New England Kriterion Film Exchange at 205 Pleasant street.

From there her sweet tones are echoing throughout New England.

For the New England exhibitor has taken quite kindly to Bluebird films. Mr. Jacques is a fortunate choice for New England manager.

His experience in the film game in this vicinity has been wide and productive of a long list of friendships which are standing him in good stead now.

Mr. Jacques was associated with Frank Howard in the early days of the business in Boston. Later he started the New England Film exchange, the Boston Film Rental Company, and the United Feature Company, the first feature exchange in Boston. In recent years he has been in Brockton.

GARSON TAKES RIGHTS TO "THE NE'ER-DO-WELL" FOR MICHIGAN

Harry I. Garson, of the Broadway Feature Film Company, Detroit, Mich., has just closed a deal with Sol L. Lesser for the rights on "The Ne'er-Do-Well" for the state of Michigan. It is reported that the price paid was $15,000.

Mr. Garson also controls the Broadway-Strand, Detroit, Mich., in which theatre the production will have its premiere for Michigan, after which the picture will be handled as a road show.

Mr. Garson has not as yet decided how many companies he will send out in Michigan.

In an interview, he said that he made the trip from Detroit to New York for the sole purpose of purchasing "The Ne'er-Do-Well," and after viewing the picture on the screen, he thought it one of the biggest productions ever filmed.

Mr. Garson only handles the larger productions, and is at the present time exploiting "The Battle Cry of Peace," which production he controls in the state of Michigan.

RAND TRAVELS THROUGH SOUTHERN COLORADO

W. R. Rand, manager of the Triangle Film Corporation in Denver, left on Monday, February 7, on a short business trip, taking in southern Colorado, Pueblo and Grand Junction.

His office reports that Triangle photoplays are booked solid as far ahead as April 1.

DOOLEY WITH WEBSTER, V-L-S-E, SYRACUSE, NEW YORK

Thomas Dooley, formerly manager of the Syracuse, N. Y., branch of the Greater New York Film Rental Company and until recently with the Syracuse office of the General Film Company, has resigned to take a position in the executive force of the Syracuse, N. Y., office of the V-L-S-E under A. N. Webster.

PHILADELPHIA EXCHANGES RESPOND TO INCREASED BOOKINGS; KRAUPA DEAN OF THE EXCHANGEMEN

OF INTEREST to Pennsylvania exhibitors generally is the emphatic statement made by George Beihoff, of the World Film Corporation, that in spite of all announcements to the contrary, the pictures featuring Clara Kimball Young will continue as heretofore to be released through the World Film.

Apropos of Clara, her latest picture, "The Yellow Passport," is breaking all her own and the World's records for popularity around these regions.

This week's decapitated releases falling in the censor boards' discard included Pathé's "New York," Fox's "The Fool's Revenge," and Lubin's "Souls in Bondage" on V-L-S-E program.

The latter was so badly cut, the Lubin Company decided it would not do picture, author or exhibitor justice to show such a mutilated film, so Pennsylvanians will have no chance to see the work of Daniel Carson Goodman who wrote, Edgar Lewis who directed, and Nance O'Neil who starred in this feature.

Atlantic City will be the nearest point for Philadelphians to view this subject.

Action on "The Fool's Revenge" has not been determined. On "New York" no decision has yet been made by the Pathe authorities.

The V-L-S-E people are working day and night to keep up with their recent hundred per cent increase in business. Three A. M. finds J. S. Hebrew and Assistant Manager E. F. Mowery still at their desks. Two new salesmen, J. A. Farrah and R. Binns, have been added to the force.

All this increase is attributed by both managers to the open booking plan used by the exchange, which seems to appeal to the exhibitors in general.

Of the eighteen independent exchanges in Philadelphia, D. Kraupa, owner and manager of the Monarch Film Company, 1220 Vine, is the dean.

With thirty-five years in the show business to his credit, Mr. Kraupa has spent twelve in the film industry, first as exhibitor, later as manager of the Girard Film Company, and now as the "Monarch" of all he surveys.

Mr. Kraupa, who is also secretary of the Philadelphia Film Exchange Managers' Club, has a flood of interesting reminiscences to relate. He feels that sooner or later there will be a consolidation of many big concerns and then the independents will have their day.

With great regret and deep sympathy Philadelphia filmdom received the news of the death of Charles Mack, popular Universal roadman.

Mr. Mack was taken suddenly ill with grip at his post of duty, and died of pneumonia after two days' illness. A young wife and two children survive.

H. H. Buxbaum, manager of the General Film Company, continues to get bookings with a consequent boost in the business of the exchange. The absorption of the Greater New York has naturally added some accounts to the books, but outside of this a fifteen per cent increase is perceptible in the past week or so.

"The Strange Case of Mary Page" is riding on a $20,000 wave of popularity, that amount of booking already showing on the books.

POLICY OF CASH IN ADVANCE FOR WEEK'S RENTAL OPERATIVE IN LOS ANGELES

Cash in advance for one week's film renting service became the policy of all of the thirteen Los Angeles film exchanges beginning Monday, February 14.

This policy was brought about by the Film Exchange Board of Trade of which eleven of the exchanges are members. The other two have agreed to follow this plan.

Prior to this time but two exchanges, those of the Fox and Triangle programs have required cash in advance.

All exhibitors of southern California, southern Nevada and Arizona who are supplied from these Los Angeles exchanges, were notified by letters sent out by C. J. Marley, secretary and general manager of the Board of Trade, three weeks ago.

Before this policy was adopted reports were secured from Boston, New Orleans, the Oklahoma district, and other exchange territories that required cash in advance. If this proves satisfactory here the same policy will be adopted by the San Francisco exchanges.

The Los Angeles Board of Trade has been organized about eighteen months and has brought about a number of improvements in conditions beneficial to exhibitors and exchange men alike.

ANOTHER FLOOR ADDED TO MUTUAL EXCHANGE IN DETROIT

Another floor will be added to the Detroit exchange of the Mutual Film Corporation, according to an announcement by G. J. Trask, manager.

At present the exchange occupies the entire second floor; hereafter the exchange will also occupy the entire fifth floor, the latter being used for supplies and posters.

The Mutual exchange has shown unusual progress, and for a long while Manager Trask has felt the need of additional space.

What he really would like—and what he expects to have some day—is a building devoted exclusively to his business.

KNAPPEN IN CHARGE FOR PATHE AT ATLANTA

Harry L. Knappen, for the last six months manager of the Denver branch of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., has gone to Atlanta, Ga., where he will continue to represent Pathé in a similar capacity.

He will be in charge of Pathé interests in Georgia, Florida, and parts of South Carolina and Alabama.

BUCKWALTER REPORTS BIG INCREASE

H. H. Buckwalter, manager of the Kleine-Edison exchange of Denver, reports a big increase in business since the first of the year.

NELSON OF GENERAL IN CAPITAL MAKES MARK WITH ESSANAY SERIAL

A. J. Nelson, the new manager of the Washington, D. C., office of the General Film Company, already feels himself established in his new quarters.

He expressed himself well pleased with his promotion and with the cordial reception he has received in the national capital.

Already he had made a mark for himself in placing the Essanay serial, "The Strange Case of Mary Page," at Moore's Garden theatre, one of the largest downtown houses, where serials are not used.

He has introduced a novelty in advertising this by each week adding one more of the fashion posters of Edna Mayo, which is especially appealing to the ladies.

"I have traveled pretty much all over the country," said Mr. Nelson, "and I have found that you must handle each section, sometimes each city, differently. I find Washington has its own peculiarities, too.

"It is particular in wanting only the best and that which appeals to the most cultured. I have found conditions very encouraging, more prosperous, than I had expected, and the exhibitors willing for co-operation. I feel the General Film is going to accomplish much in this territory."

V-L-S-E AND BLUEBIRDS INVADE WESTERN CANADIAN PROVINCES

A big film deal is reported in the western provinces, which it is said was completed on February 1. By the arrangements, W. P. Dewes, head of the Rex Amusement Company, and W. P. Nicholas, in charge of the National Amusement Company, both of Vancouver, together with J. A. Schuberg, of the Province theatre, Winnipeg, secured the control of the V-L-S-E productions in western Canada.

The negotiations were carried on with Tom North, of the Seattle branch of the V-L-S-E company. Taking this news, with the fact that the Bluebird company has completed arrangements to establish offices in the West, at Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver, it will be seen that western Canada is about to be invaded.

BLUEBIRD ADVERTISING IN "NEWS" PAVES WAY FOR MITCHELL IN OMAHA

Jake Mitchell, new manager of the Bluebird exchange in Ohaha, made his first trip out of the territory last week and returned highly enthusiastic over prospects. "Every exhibitor in Nebraska and Iowa is looking forward to the best and biggest spring they ever had," he declared.

He said the advertising followed by the Bluebird producers in MOTION PICTURE NEWS and elsewhere had paved the way for his visit in a splendid manner.

EXCHANGES IN OMAHA ACTIVE

District Manager C. L. Worthington of the Fox Company spent several days in Omaha last week.

He has traveled considerably about the Middle West, he said, and finds every exhibitor everywhere enjoying prosperity, with the outlook for better business yet.

Manager C. W. Taylor of the General exchange in Omaha was in Des Moines last week conferring with Manager C. J. Jefferies of the office there, regarding the division of territory and the transferring of accounts to the office in Omaha, which is now a distributing and buying point.

W. W. Drum, district manager from Chicago for the west central division of the World, was in Omaha last week conferring with Manager Ph. Goldstone.

The head offices of the World are elated at the amount of business done from the Omaha exchange, he said.

CARMICHAEL, DENVER, GETS ACCOUNTS IN NEW MEXICO; CREE REPORTS BIG SERIAL BOOKINGS

MANAGER CARMICHAEL of the Fox Film Corporation, Denver, Colo., has just returned from a trip through New Mexico, and reports that business is far better in that territory than it has been for two years, and he secured a number of new accounts.

He also says that his company has added to its force Norman Cohn of New York, and has added another room to its offices.

The Denver and Salt Lake branches of this corporation have been placed under the jurisdiction of Harry Leonhardt, who will make his headquarters in Chicago.

W. H. Cree, manager of the General Film Exchange, Denver, reports that the Essanay Serial "The Strange Case of Mary Page" will be a record breaker as the bookings are pouring in very fast.

Gene Gerbase, city salesman for the General, is turning the trick very nicely as several new city accounts have been added through his efforts. Cree also stated that since the first of the year business has increased remarkably and that he looked for 1916 to be a banner year in his territory.

J. J. Unger, western representative of the Metro Pictures Corporation, is making a ten day stay in the Queen City. Unger has entire charge of all Metro exchanges from Denver to the Pacific Coast and makes his headquarters with the Metro Exchange of Frisco.

J. S. Bailey, manager of the Denver Metro Exchange, reports that business is hitting the high mark and that with the assistance of W. T. Binford as roadman, 1916 will be a big year for Metro Features.

H. L. Knappen of the Pathé Exchange, Denver, reports that "Madame X," featuring Dorothy Donnelly, played the Paris theatre, Denver, five days. Bookings on this picture are pouring into the Pathé exchange.

The first serial of "The Iron Claw" to be released by Pathé at an early date, was shown to several exhibitors.

Although this picture has never been shown in Denver, it already has a great number of bookings throughout the territory.

H. T. Nolan, former manager of the Swanson-Nolan Universal Exchange of Denver, is now manager of the Swanson-Nolan Supply Company, also of that city.

This company has one of the most up-to-date show rooms in the city and the fact that the employees have been working day and night to be able to fill the orders, predicts a prosperous future for this concern.

Ward E. Scott, manager of the Mutual exchange, Denver, reports that on account of the snowbound conditions existing in the southern part of Colorado, he has been unable to supply several of his accounts.

Manager Tompkins of the Princess theatre, Colorado Springs, purchased a late model automobile of the Moon brand, and extended an invitation to Scott to make the trip from Denver to Colorado Springs in the new machine, but Scott was unable to accept the invitation.

BROWN IS MADE MANAGER FOR BLUEBIRDS IN LOS ANGELES

C. E. Brown has been appointed manager for Bluebird Photoplays in Los Angeles, with surrounding territory also under his charge. Mr. Brown is especially adapted to the work through his previous association.

For several years he devoted himself to promoting phonograph sales on the Coast, and has been publicity promoter for Vancouver, when he traveled throughout the United States distributing information concerning that province.

He was publicity promoter for the Moose Jaw Board of Trade and handled the publicity campaign of Richard Loney and Company, the largest real estate dealers in the Canadian Northwest.

METRO OFFICES IN CHICAGO AND NEW YORK IN CLOSE RIVALRY

J. S. Skirboll, district manager of the Metro Pictures Service, has returned to Pittsburgh after a visit to Chicago, Kansas City, Des Moines and St. Louis offices of his firm.

He reports business excellent and states that the Chicago office is in second place of all Metro offices.

It is now a race between the Chicago and New York offices, and the prospects for Chicago being in the lead are very good.

METRO'S BUSINESS IN KANSAS CITY ON INCREASE

Entering the Kansas City offices of the Metro Pictures Service, one at once notes the number of new employes working there. This must be an indication that the Metro business in the Kansas City territory is good.

It is a known fact that this company now has something like fourteen theatres in Kansas City that are using this service.

WESTERN FILM EXCHANGE, IN KANSAS CITY, ROBBED

The Western Film Exchange, in the Gloyd building, Kansas City, which carries a line of supplies, was robbed early in February. Five hundred carbons and a number of smaller articles were stolen.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

Ohio Censor Scissors Snip Without Rhyme or Reason

"THE pen is mightier than the sword" has to take a back seat, for the scissors of the Ohio censors are the mightiest in the world.

The aforesaid "skizzers" have even turned aside the trusted blade of D'Artagnan, as the censors have just ruled that all duelling, kidnapping, fights and murder must be eliminated from the film bearing the name of the famous character. Imagine how the shorn play would appear! Other slashes made by the scissors are as follows:

"Souls in Bondage"—Take out sub-titles, "I'll kill you" and "You fool" and shooting of woman.

"Primitive Stain"—Cut to three feet scene showing fight between man and woman, all fight scenes to 5 feet each and scene where man is choked to death.

"Madame La Presidente"—Cut to five feet scene between woman and official in his home, where her actions are suggestive; sub-title ending, "There is life in the old dog yet"; scene where woman and man appear, in which her skirt is pulled off and later where her entire dress is removed.

"Love Will Conquer"—Cut fight in cabaret to five feet and sub-title, "Quick, spear him from ambush."

"Acquitted"—Cut out scene of murder; scene where one man sells drug to another; third degree picture to three feet; ravings of drug fiend to three feet, and scene where man blows out gas for purpose of suicide.

"Extra Man and the Milk-fed Lion"—Cut out scene where man chokes and forcibly kisses girl.

"Sammy Versus Cupid"—Take out all close-up scenes in prize ring.

"Lillo of the Sulu Seas"—Cut out scene where man puts drug into glass and pours wine on it; cut to three feet all scenes showing men almost nude; cut fight scene to three feet, and all fight scenes in the third reel.

"Girl and The Game No. 7"—Cut all fights to five feet each.

"New York"—Cut out scene woman smoking; scene at table where girl lies back in man's arms while she smokes a cigarette; to three feet scene of girl dancing on a table; to five feet scene where drunken woman smokes a cigarette; take out sub-titles, "You bet I'll come to your party. This virtuous life is hell"; "You can't leave me now when I am about to be a mother"; "You're only my guardian, you know, and I'll do as I d——d please," and "God! How beautiful you are tonight. What a fool you were to marry a man as old as King." Also cut out all scenes of woman posing in the nude, murder and scene in cabaret where man at table catches girl by her foot as she dances by him.

"Pudd'nhead Wilson"—Cut sub-titles, "What you gwine to do for this chile, Marse? He's yours, too"; "You dirty nigger, how dare you touch a white woman?" "I've been working here . . . ain't I, nigger?" "I ain't your nigger any more, Marse Tom"; "I'll pay you by buying one of Driscoll's yaller gals for you"; "I hate all yellow girls. I don't feel like a nigger," "You're my son, nigger"; "Out of my way, you old fool; I'm going to kill that nigger," and "Chambers, negro and slave." Take out from sub-titles all reference to the word "nigger," cut out sub-title about man riding ahead of his master, scene where white man resents affectionate fondling of his mother, and scene where white man forcibly takes girl in his arms.

"Poor Little Peppina"—Cut out scene where child is stolen from bed.

LOTTERY LAW INVOKED BY VANCOUVER BOARD OF TRADE

QUICK action has resulted from a protest made by the council of the Vancouver Board of Trade against drawings conducted in that city by various stores and theatres.

Acting on Mayor MacBeath's request for information on the legality of the proceeding, R. L. Maitland, police court prosecutor, announced that it was against the criminal code of Canada, and referred to the recently decided case of the Hudson's Bay Company in Alberta.

The mayor stated that this interpretation of the law left him no alternative in the matter, and he advised the chief of police to notify the offending merchants that no more drawings are to be held after February 19, when the police commission meets, and is expected to issue a recommendation along these lines.

There seems, however, to be a disposition to allow those who have announced drawings for certain dates after this time to finish the contest now in hand, so that they may suffer no financial loss, but no new contests are to be started in the few days remaining before the time limit set.

Another angle of the situation has been brought up by Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, a well-known local lawyer, who has announced his intention of communicating with Ottawa in an effort to have the Dominion government exempt lotteries conducted for patriotic purposes.

An automobile has recently been presented to the Vancouver branch of the Patriotic Fund by Sir Charles, and countless articles are continually being raffled for some charitable purpose connected with the war.

It is believed that the National Amusement Company's contest will not come within the statute prohibiting lotteries, as the prizes to be awarded will be given to those selling the largest number of admission tickets to its theatres, and the element of chance does not exist. Many of this company's houses will be affected, however, as most of them have two or three gift nights each week.

CLEVELAND EXHIBITOR, A FIGHTER, WINS FIRST BOUT IN SUNDAY OPENING CONTEST

Arnold Goodman, proprietor of the new Wind-A-Meer theatre at East Cleveland, O., has forced an election on the question of Sunday closing and won the first stage of his fight with the city council and ministerial forces of the Cleveland suburb.

"Each time I am arrested my house gets a fine advertisement and each Sunday the attendances increase. The signatures to the referendum petitions show that the sentiment of East Cleveland is overwhelmingly in favor of Sunday motion picture shows," Mr. Goodman says.

The election will take place within thirty days. Ex-judge W. W. Hole, at the last meeting of the East Cleveland city council, stated that even if the ordinance is repealed the state law still makes it illegal to open on Sundays.

East Cleveland ministers have demanded that the city respect the state law no matter how the election goes.

Since Cleveland, East Cleveland's big neighbor, ignores the state law, Mr. Goodman does not think the East Cleveland authorities will defy public opinion if the election, as seems assured, goes in his favor.

ATTORNEY APPEARS FOR CLEVELAND EXHIBITORS IN THEATRE TAX PROTEST

Attorney Ben J. Sawyer, speaking for the motion picture exhibitors of Cleveland, appeared before the license committee of the city council and opposed the proposed motion picture theatre tax.

Mr. Sawyer stated that more than half the motion picture theatres of Cleveland are either losing money or just breaking even. "Admission fees have remained stationary while expenses have soared," Mr. Sawyer said.

"Motion picture managers do not get any special service from the city. It is seldom a fire warden has to visit a theatre.

"We don't get as much service from the city as the average householder, for we have no garbage or rubbish to be collected," he added.

The proposed ordinance fixes a fee of three dollars for each one hundred seating capacity. Councilman Meyers, its author, seeks to obtain sufficient revenue to pay the salary of a motion picture theatre inspector.

The city council is divided on the proposal. Councilman Smith says all license legislation is vicious.

CRAWFORDSVILLE, IND., MADE A CENSORSHIP MARK

Crawfordsville, Ind., will have local censorship of motion picture theatres.

The Crawfordsville city council has taken upon itself to regulate all films shown in that city. The censorship committee consists of Councilmen Schenck, Burroughs and McGeath, City Attorney Murphy, Prof. Thompson, principal of the Lincoln colored school, as well as the members of the board of safety.

Councilmanic censorship resulted from the attempt of Prof. Thompson to have the film, "The Nigger," put under the ban. He declared that the film would create race trouble in Crawfordsville.

City Attorney Murphy told Prof. Thompson that the United States Government was founded upon freedom to express opinions and that, in some instances, this freedom was abused.

He stated that the film could be stopped only on the ground that it was immoral.

RAINIER PAYS FINE AND GOES BACK TO FINISH THE SHOW

Ralph Rainier, of the Boyer Opera House at Kendallville, Ind., who was recently arrested and fined on a charge of running his show on Sunday, was arrested the second time recently.

He gave bond and then went back and finished the show.

CHILDREN ADMITTED TO THEATRES IN TORONTO IF WITH ADULTS

It has finally been decided that children may enter any moving picture show in Toronto, provided they are accompanied by an adult.

Formerly, it was necessary for the child to be with its parents, before the theatre man could admit it.

NATIONAL HOUSE PASSES FAKE ADVERTISING BILL, PROVIDING FOR $500 FINE OR 60 DAYS IN JAIL

THE House of Representatives has just passed the Johnson fake advertising measure, which provides "That it shall be unlawful in the District of Columbia for any person, firm, association, corporation, or advertising agency, either directly or indirectly, to display or exhibit to the public in any manner whatsoever, whether by handbill, placard, poster, picture, films, or otherwise; or to insert, or cause to be inserted, in any newspaper, magazine, or other publication printed in the District of Columbia; or to issue, exhibit, or in any way distribute or disseminate to the public; or to deliver, exhibit, mail or send to any person, firm, association or corporation any false, untrue, or misleading statement, representation, or advertising with a fraudulent intent to deceive, mislead, or induce any person, firm, association or corporation to purchase, discount, or in any way invest in or accept as collateral security any bonds, bill, share of stock, note, warehouse receipt, or any security; or with a fraudulent purpose to deceive, mislead, or induce any person, firm, association, or corporation, to purchase, make any loan upon, or invest in any property of any kind; or use any of the aforesaid methods with a fraudulent intent or purpose to deceive, mislead, or induce any other person, firm, or corporation for a valuable consideration to employ the services of any person, firm, association or corporation so advertising such services."

The prosecution under the proposed law is to be in the police court upon information which must be filed by the United States district-attorney for the District of Columbia.

The penalty attaching hereto for violations in the case of a person, firm, or association, upon conviction, is to be a fine of not more than $500, imprisonment for not more than sixty days, or both, such fine or imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

A corporation so convicted is to be subjected to the fine and its president or such other officials as may be responsible for the conduct or management thereof is to suffer the imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

CENSORS IN CITY OF BROTHERLY LOVE KEEP BUSY IN "SLEUTHING" EXHIBITORS

BANNING pictures was not the only activity of the Pennsylvania censors last week. Some of their waking hours have been spent in levying fines.

The amounts imposed run the gamut from small sums to up in the hundreds. The offense is in almost every case the heinous crime of failing to eliminate enough of certain scenes which through misunderstanding of the board's orders were left a few feet longer than the censors thought proper.

J. W. Pope, of Mutual, whose trial came off as announced, fared better than most, being fined only twenty-five dollars and costs. In this case the picture, "The Buzzard's Shadow," showed a man pouring poison. The case hinged on the words "act" and "action," the censors ordering the act out which Mr. Pope construed as meaning the actual pouring, but the censors said it should have included the preliminary handling of the poison bottle as well.

J. H. Butner of Triangle was fined one hundred dollars for a similar misconstruction of order eliminations.

On this ascending scale, the Metro people were fined $300. It was claimed by the censors that "Tillie's Punctured Romance" was shown in Harrisburg theaters lacked certain eliminations that had been ordered.

As this same copy had been running over a year without any trouble, the manager, J. D. Clark, claimed the fine was unjust and paid it under protest.

The case will not be allowed to rest here, but will be taken into court. Morris Wolf, who has successfully opposed the censors on several occasions, has been retained by Metro as its attorney.

Several exhibitors have also suffered. Their specific crime is the exhibiting of a picture with a stamp of approval a little less than the required four feet.

HEARING BEFORE RAILROAD COMMISSION PLANNED IN 'FRISCO FOR FILM-CARRYING PROHIBITION

THE recent ruling of the railroads prohibiting the carrying of moving picture films on ferry boats and passenger trains by exhibitors or their representatives is being strongly contested by both film exchange interests and exhibitors in the San Francisco field.

Through their prompt action the date on which the order is to go into effect has been postponed until March 1 and in the meantime legal action is being taken to prevent the ruling from being enforced.

A complaint has been drawn up by the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco and the matter will be given a hearing before the State Railroad Commission.

This will show that no accidents have ever occurred in California in the transportation of film and will set forth the losses that will accrue to both exchange interests and exhibitors if the new rule is enforced according to the present plan for its enforcement.

It is likely that a practical demonstration of the safety of the present mode of carrying film in metal cases will be made before members of the Railroad Commission by subjecting boxes of films to unusually severe tests.

A GROUP OF AMERICAN STARS: VIVIAN RICH, GEORGE PERIOLAT

EUGENIE FORDE (Center), ARTHUR TAVARES, AND EDYTHE STERLING

GUNNIS-DAVIS IS ASSISTANT TO MIDDLETON FOR GAUMONT

In the making of the Gaumont five-reel feature, "The Haunted Manor," Director Edwin Middleton is being assisted by J. Gunnis-Davis.

Mr. Davis has been transferred from the Gaumont company, which has been making "I Accuse."

In the latter production, which has now been completed, Alexander Gaden is the star. It will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture February 21.

"The Haunted Manor" will follow "According to Law" as a Gaumont March release. It will be seen on the screen February 20.

ABEL AT HEAD OF V-L-S-E IN CHICAGO

Sydney E. Abel, who has been in charge of the Cleveland branch of the V-L-S-E organization since last July, has been promoted to take charge of the Chicago office of The Big Four.

Mr. Abel was with the Vitagraph and Mutual companies before joining the sales force of the V-L-S-E in Cleveland. The Chicago office, to which Mr. Abel succeeds, is the second largest operated by the V-L-S-E.

Film Contributions to Actors' Fund Pour in Big

As a Result of the Campaign of Allied Motion Picture Interests to Raise $50,000 in 15 Weeks, Los Angeles Sends in $2,500 from Preliminary Benefits

THE campaign of the allied motion picture interests to raise $50,000 for the Actors' Fund of America in fifteen weeks, inaugurated ten days ago, has already reached large proportions under the direction of Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the executive committee.

Individual offerings from many theatre proprietors, players and others have begun to reach Treasurer J. Stuart Blackton at the offices of the finance committee in Locust avenue, Brooklyn.

Los Angeles sent in $2,500, as a result of preliminary benefits held in twenty-two picture, vaudeville and legitimate houses in the city.

De Wolf Hopper, Theodore Roberts, Victor Moore and other favorites appeared personally before audiences which taxed the capacity of the amusement places. Mayor Sebastian, of Los Angeles, lent support.

From all over the country mayors are accepting the invitation of the film men to co-operate with them in making Monday, May 15, a day unprecedented in theatre patronage and popularity.

Every one of the 20,000 picture playhouse proprietors is expected to donate a share of receipts to the fund on that day, the final one, of the campaign.

Many exhibitors have also announced their intention of sharing receipts with the Actors' Fund on another and earlier day as well.

Marcus Loew has put his chain of seventy vaudeville and picture theatres at the service of the fund on May 15.

He will donate ten per cent. of the gross receipts of his picture houses, and five per cent. of the day's revenue in combination picture-vaudeville theatres.

A carnival and ball, to which every motion picture actor and actor of prominence will lend his presence, is planned for early May in Madison Square Garden, New York. Walter Moore, of the H. C. Miner Lithographing Company, has been appointed chairman of the general committee on lithographing and bill posting.

He will name a committee of ten, the concerns in that line of the industry will be furnished with publicity material and petitions, and it is expected that under Mr. Moore's direction every employe in the lithographing and bill posting field will take a personal interest in advancing the cause of the Actors' Fund.

Four American Stars in Important Roles for Mutual

Arthur Tavares, Former Light Opera Actor, Supports Madge Kirby in Vogue Comedies; Vivian Rich, Star of Many Successes, Is Seen in "Life's Harmony"

FOUR members of the American Film Company's aggregation of screen players—Arthur Tavares, Vivian Rich, George Periolat, and Eugenie Forde—are among those who have important roles in photoplays made for Mutual patrons.

Tavares, who is supporting Madge Kirby in Vogue slapstick comedies, was a well known light opera star before going into pictures.

Frequently, when the Vogue company is not busy in a scene, he picks up a guitar or mandolin and strums the strings in accompaniment to his voice.

In a forthcoming Vogue, Tavares enacts the role of a proprietor of a Spanish inn, in which setting Rube Miller, Madge Kirby and Alice Neice register comedy situations.

Miss Rich, star of many dramas produced by the American Company, appeared to advantage in "Life's Harmony," where she was seen opposite George Periolat and Alfred Vosburgh. Periolat, remembered for his work in "The Diamond from the Sky," has delineated with skill a large number of character roles.

He is a man of vigorous physique and in "The Silken Spider," a Masterpicture, he was called upon to utilize his physical powers in a realistic fight.

Eugenie Forde recently appeared in "The White Rosette," first as the unfaithful wife of a baron, and later when the action moved to modern times, as the cold, glittering society woman.

This picture, produced by Donald MacDonald, contained a set accurately reproducing the New York Stock Exchange and its activities.

WEEKLY MEETINGS OF ST. LOUIS SET FOR FRIDAY IN NEW ASSOCIATION QUARTERS

The weekly Friday meetings of the Theatre Managers' and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association, of St. Louis, will be held hereafter at their new headquarters in the Majestic theatre building, at 1020-24 Franklin avenue.

POWELL CAST WITH BILLIE BURKE FOR KLEINE-HUGHES SUBJECT

BILL IN KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE FOR CENSORSHIP AND OPERATORS' LICENSE

A bill introduced in the Kentucky General Assembly on February 14 by Representative Ryans, of Louisville, provides for a state board of censors to pass upon motion picture films before their presentation to the public and to license picture theatres and machine operators.

It is now so late in the session of the legislature that the general opinion held by local exhibitors is that the bill will probably not be brought up for passage.

Exhibitors, however, are keeping a sharp eye on the legislative proceedings at Frankfort, and if the bill should be reported favorably to the house by the committee to which it has been referred, the motion picture men say they are prepared to offer strong opposition to its becoming law.

Two other bills pertaining to the regulation of films and theatres which were introdueed earlier in the session and which have been already explained in the pages of Motion Picture News, have not been reported to the house to date.

GOLDBURG LEAVES OCEAN FILM

Jesse J. Goldburg, the organizer and heretofore vice-president and general manager of the Ocean Film Corporation, has severed his connection with that organization commencing the week ending February 12.

Mr. Goldburg's successor, if any, has as yet not been announced, nor have the company's plans with respect to the future been given publicity.

Mr. Goldburg has not determined upon any connection in the immediate future, although he is considering several offers which have been made him immediately upon his informing a few of his friends in the industry of his contemplated change.

NEW PLAN TO BOOK BRUCE NATURE PICTURES

The Educational Film Corporation of America, which owns and controls the Robert C. Bruce Nature Pictures that have been playing at the Knickerbocker Theatre for the past few weeks, are soon to announce a new plan of booking which, it is claimed, will make a strong appeal to every exchange man and exhibitor.

This company is now located in its new offices at 729 Seventh avenue.

First of Daniels Comedy Series from "V" Ready

Stage Comedian Undergoes on Screen Humorous Adventures Penned by Paul West—C. Jay Williams Directed the Picture, Released Through V-L-S-E

THE first of the series of comedies produced by the Vitagraph company, featuring Frank Daniels, of comic opera fame, is now ready for release.

In them, Daniels is presented in the role of Mr. Jack, who undergoes a number of humorous adventures, under the guiding pen of Paul West, who wrote the comedies, and under the direction of C. Jay Williams, who produced the multi-reel films in which Daniels made his first bow to the motion picture public.

In the first of his "escapades," Daniels is the Major, eight weeks behind in his rent. He is forced to prepare his own dinner over a lamp, when a ray of light comes in the shape of an invitation to attend a dinner given by Mrs. Giltrox.

The Major goes and flirts and has a splendid time, although he wonders at the cause for the long delay in serving the dinner.

The butler is despatched to ascertain the cause of the delay, but comes back with a biscuit in his eye which the cook has implanted there.

Some of the men guests try their luck with similar results. Mrs. Giltrox now calls for volunteers and the gallant Major steps to the front.

Instead of subduing the cook, the latter makes him don an apron and help her. She bombarded him with all sorts of kitchen utensils, and drives him out.

Back in the ball-room the Major describes the engagement, proclaiming himself the victor, and making himself appear brave in the eyes of the guests. The cook, by her entrance, puts him to further rout.

Frank Daniels is supported by a capable cast of Vitagraphers, among them being Kate Price, the heavyweight comedienne; and Betty Howe, the latest addition to the stock company.

The comedies will be released through the V-L-S-E, being the first single-reel production, except the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial, to be booked through this agency.

New York Run Like "Nation" Is Plan for Beach Film

Sol L. Lesser, Who Bought from Selig the Rights to "The Ne'er-Do-Well" for the Entire Country Announces Elaborate Showing in First Class Theatre

"THE Ne'er-Do-Well," which was accorded its premier showing in New York at the Candler theater recently, will shortly be given a Broadway run and will be handled along the same lines as "The Birth of a Nation," according to an announcement by Sol L. Lesser, who bought the rights for the entire country from the Selig Polyscope Company, makers of the film.

Rex Beach, author of the story, was an interested spectator at the Candler showing and in an interview after the performance said that it was with great pleasure that he saw the characters of his book portrayed in life on the screen.

He made special comment on the fact that the characters were cast very near to those described in the book.

Many prominent people were present in the audience, which packed the Candler to the doors, among them were: Rex Beach and his wife, Leroy Scott, Louis Joseph Vance, Mabel Normand, Ellis Parker Butler, Mrs. Ada Horah, Miss L. Campbell, Margaret Wycherly, Bayard Vieller, F. Ziegfeld Jr., Julian McCree, Harry Jordan, Hugh Ford, Acton Davies, Ben Stern, Charles McDonald, Roscoe Arbuckle, Jesse Lynch Williams, M. H. RADICAL CHANGES FOR TRIANGLE POLICY FORECAST

Los Angeles, Feb. 17.

Harry E. Aitken, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, arrived in Los Angeles Saturday, to spend a week with the producers. Adam Kessel and Charles Baumann will arrive within the next day or two, and it is the general understanding that important matters with regards to the improvement of the Triangle program will be considered in company with the producers, and that in all probability radical changes will be made in the policy of the program.

It is now believed the length of the program will be reduced, and that it will not exceed nine reels weekly, consisting of two Keystone subjects and one drama. No definite statement has been given out.

PATHE POSTERS ARE SELECTED AS EXAMPLES OF GOOD ART

The Washington Irving High School for Girls, New York, the largest girls' high school in the country, is having a poster exhibition in which are shown the best types of poster art.

The Pathé one-sheet posters of Dorothy Donnelly, Lois Meredith, Pearl White and Jeanne Eagels are honored by a prominent place in the exhibition, being the only motion picture posters thus distinguished.

FRANK KEENAN REHEARSES FOR FOURTH INCE SUBJECT

Los Angeles, Feb. 17.

Frank Keenan is back at the NYMP studio after a vacation of six weeks, and is now engaged in rehearsals for his fourth Ince Triangle subject. This will be a story laid in the North and South, and several massive colonial sets are now being built at Inceville, and interiors constructed at the Culver City studio.

The third Keenan subject is now ready for shipment East, and is entitled "The Stepping Stone." Mary Boland, who appeared with Willard Mack in "The Edge of the Abyss," appears opposite Keenan in his third subject.

KALEM REPORTS ETHEL TEARE SUBJECTS POPULAR

Reports from General Film exchange managers indicate that Kalem made a wise move in establishing Wednesday as Ethel Teare Day in its schedule of releases and surrounding that player with a capable company of fun-makers in subjects that would feature her personality. Every General Film exchange in the United States and Canada buying film has already placed a standing order for one or more prints of the Wednesday specials and reports that exhibitors have given them an unusually favorable reception.

The rise of Ethel Teare to stardom in the short space since her first appearance in small parts in Kalem "Ham and Bud" subjects places another name on the long list of stars discovered and developed by Kalem which includes such well known present Kalemites as Lloyd V. Hamilton, Bud Duncan, Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby, and many others equally well known to film fans.

HEARING ON SUNDAY CLOSING FOR BOSTON EXHIBITORS

There has been so much misunderstanding of the methods used by chief of the district police, John H. Plunkett, in censoring films submitted for Sunday exhibition in Boston that he has invited exhibitors and exchangemen to confer with him at the State house next Thursday afternoon.

At that time he promises to make clear the reasons why his censorship of Sunday films is so drastic.

The film men welcome the opportunity to get together with him. The meeting will no doubt be proof of the fact that by cooperation much may be accomplished which would be attempted only with futility under misunderstandings.

"Short Reel Pictures Never Lost Favor"—Selig

Company Which Has Curtailed Production of Five-Reel Subjects Returns to Its "First Love," the One-Reelers—Revival of Strong Demand for Split Reels Predicted

IN interviews appearing in certain metropolitan newspapers certain film authorities continue to voice opinions that short length films are doomed, while others vehemently assert that the one- and two-reel pictureplays will always be indispensable to a well-balanced program.

One significant action was recently taken by a large film manufacturing company which has curtailed production of five-reel subjects to return to its "first love," the single reelers.

William N. Selig, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, is one prominent film manufacturer who has staunchly held to his ideas of the worth of pictureplays in one reel.

While it is true that the Selig company is noted for its longer dramas, yet Mr. Selig has never permitted his single-reel productions to suffer, and has gone right ahead releasing one-reel pictureplays, while others have eliminated this class of film from their programs.

"There will always be a demand for short length films of worthiness," said Mr. Selig recently. "We have spared no expense or care in the stories and the production of our one- and two-reelers, and our sales have jumped within the past few months to a figure that is most gratifying.

"The public will always demand good comedies and dramas in one and two reels, and I should not be surprised to witness a strong revival of the split-reel film. Feature films have won decisive and lasting favor, it is true, but shorter length films have never really lost favor with the public."

NEWS VALUABLE TO NEWSPAPER MOTION PICTURE DEPARTMENTS

We want the "News"; in fact, we want it very badly, as we find it a valuable help to our motion picture department.

GEORGE CLARKE, BELASCO PLAYER, IN MANY LUBIN SUCCESSES

George Clarke, Lubin character leading man, was born in Birmingham, England, and began his stage career shortly after leaving Lemington College.

His first American experience was with the late Charles Frohman at the Star theatre, New York.

After a short time he joined David Belasco, in whose employ he remained until two years ago, at which time he became identified with the Lubin Manufacturing Company.

Mr. Clarke appears in "A Man's Making," "Souls in Bondage," "The Fires of St. John," "The Uplift," and other Lubin films.

CONDENSED VERSION OF "ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN" SERIAL IN CHICAGO

"The Adventures of Kathlyn," in eight reels, an abbreviated version of the original serial, will be shown for the first time at the Fine Arts theatre, Chicago, on February 19.

This is the first time in the history of the business, it is said, that a serial has been revived. Elaborate arrangements have been made for its presentation.

An orchestra of thirty-five will furnish special music, the ushers will appear in Hindoo garb, and there will be appropriate interior and exterior decorations.

POLICE QUASH THEATRE NUISANCE IN CLEVELAND

Prompt and vigorous action by Police Prosecutor Russick has eliminated the stink ball and electric snuff nuisance from Cleveland motion picture houses.

Exhibitors say the most important step was not the prosecution of youths caught in the act, but the confiscation of the stock of retail storekeepers and the warning issued to manufacturers of these offensive substances.

An analysis of the confiscated stock shows that the articles contain a certain amount of poison and as such are prejudicial to health.

Southern Hospitality Extended to Gaumont Players

Board of Trade and Citizens of South Jacksonville, Fla., Are Hosts at Jolly Picnic on February 13—Two Mayors and City Officials Present

THE Board of Trade and citizens of South Jacksonville, Fla., in general were hosts at a jolly big picnic, complimentary to the Gaumont Company, February 13.

More than five hundred participants left the South Jacksonville ferry and Gaumot studio at twelve-thirty by boat and rode in machines to the picturesque country home of Col. J. H. Mundy, president of the Board of Trade, where an elaborate picnic dinner had been set.

In the party were Mayor Bowden of Jacksonville, Mayor Meyers of South Jacksonville, members of the Board of Trade of South Jacksonville, and many of the Jacksonville city officials.

During the dinner both Mr. Bowden and Mr. Meyers and Col. Mundy were heard in warm speeches of welcome, to which Richard Garrick, supervising director of the Gaumont Company, responded eloquently.

Music by an eight-pieced orchestra, furnished a splendid program during the meal and later served pleasant incentive for the dancing.

A feature of the afternoon was the photographing of many humorous incidents of the day, pictures that are to be released in the Mutual Weekly in the near future.

South Jacksonville's co-operation with the Gaumont Company in the production of Masterpictures has been one of the most pleasing conditions of the company's winter stay there and has added materially to the accomplishments of the company.

Mr. Garrick, in a well-chosen speech, voiced the sentiments of all of his players when he expressed his appreciation and gratitude.

Many humorous incidents gave added zest to the afternoon, as for instance when Mr. Garrick offered a prize of one hundred dollars to the winner in a half-mile spurt between the "two Gaumont kids," James Levering and Charles W. Travis, and again when he all but created a riot by asking the players to select the prettiest girl, the handsomest man, the homeliest girl and the ugliest man from among the players.

In the Levering-Travis offer, Gerald Griffin was ready to challenge the winner, but in the stress of the day's fun, the event was not staged.

Among the Gaumont players present were Richard Garrick, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Travis, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Gaden, Mr. and Mrs. Alan Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Vail, Mr. and Mrs. Earl O. Schenck, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vernot, Mr. and Mrs. John Mackin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Perchet, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Middleton, Mr. and Mrs. R. D. McDonall, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Richard Kloopfer, Lucille Taft, Marguerite Courtot, Mrs. Courtot, Juliette Courtot, Iva Shepard, Gertrude Robinson, Helen Morton, Mildred Gregory, Matilde Baring, Olive Trover, Mabel Best, Gladys Thornton, Marie Bain, Sidney Vaughn, John Reinhard, Howard Hall, Robert Clugston, James Levering, W. C. Butler, E. K. James, Albert Macklin, Henry Pemberton, Charles Graham, Gerald Griffin, Walter Pritchard, Quincy Stockton, Edwin Goetler, H. L. MacEacheon, Joseph Ford, R. G. Phillips and William Striker, and others.

Literary Lights Make Pilgrimage to Universal City

Julian Hawthorne, Son of the Famous Novelist, Himself an Author of Note, Pays High Compliment to the Motion Picture Metropolis on West Coast

UNIVERSAL CITY has recently been host to a number of newspaper men and literary personages, who were enthusiastic over their visit to the motion picture municipality.

Among these were Julian Hawthorne, son of the famous novelist, and himself an author. Mr. Hawthorne's remark was:

"When you tell the story of Universal City, you tell pretty much everything about motion pictures."

Others who spent several hours looking over the big plant were four representatives of the Scripps syndicate of newspapers.

They were: Ward C. Mayborn, of Denver, general business manager of the Denver Express, Memphis Press, Evansville Press and Terre Haute Post; F. R. Peters of Evansville, Ind., editor of the Evansville Press and Terre Haute Post; Alfred O. Anderson, of Dallas, Tex., editor of the Dallas Dispatch, Houston Press and Memphis Press, and J. C. Harper, general counsel of the Scripps organization.

"Can't wait till I get back to Evansville," said Editor Peters, "to tell the story of what we have seen to our papers," and the others were equally complimentary.

Censorship Agitation Will Prove Boomerang—Irwin

V-L-S-E General Manager Declares Efforts of A Few Misguided People to Throttle Freedom of the Screen Will Eventually React to Advantage of Entire Motion Picture Industry—Once the Public Is Aroused to the Situation It Will Dispose of Censorship Quickly Enough

THAT the hue and cry for legalized censorship now being made in Washington by professional reformers, and threatened in New York State, will not only result in its own undoing, but will so arouse public conscience that the censorship statutes in states such as Ohio and Pennsylvania will ultimately be revoked, is the prophecy of Walter W. Irwin.

Mr. Irwin is General Manager of the V. L. S. E., Inc., Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, and one of the active opponents of pre-publicity censorship in both film and legal circles in this country.

Throttling Freedom of Screen

"The efforts being made upon the part of a few misguided people to throttle the freedom of the screen," said Mr. Irwin during the course of an interview last week, "will act as a boomerang—that is, will react to the advantage of the entire motion picture industry.

"Moreover, the censor boards themselves are unwittingly doing a great work for the industry in helping us overcome the trials and vicissitudes which all young and great industries must experience.

"In the first place, so ignorant, intolerant, arrogant, in some cases malicious and spiteful, have been the acts of these boards, that they are fast becoming the heedless instrument of their own destruction; for the very character of their conduct is gradually causing the busy American public to take notice, and to realize that such power in the hands of a few is not only dangerous to the principles of liberty, but is an insult to our intelligence.

Public Being Aroused

"In the second place, the acts of these censors is fast impressing upon the public the fact that the motion picture is the most important and powerful vehicle of thought transmission so far known to man; so powerful that it is being punished for its very intensity; and that the industry, itself, possesses an intelligence and dignity so important to the educational welfare of the people, that they cannot afford to allow it to be subjected to injustice.

"In the third place, nothing so quickly makes for the destruction of jealousies and antagonism betwen the various branches of the industry, and for the creation of mutual respect and proper business ethics, as a fight against a common and unfair enemy.

"Almost up to the present time, there has existed, either with or without cause, an unfriendly feeling, approaching hostility, between the manufacturers and exchange men on the one side, and the exhibitors on the other side. The most dangerous and common enemy, however, the enemy of censorship, has caused the manufacturers, exchange men and exhibitors to thoroughly realize that each branch is just as important as the other two; that the interests of the three are interdependent; that an attack upon one is an attack upon all; that each is entitled to respect and confidence; that working together, they constitute a powerful protection, not only for themselves, but for the public welfare, and that no longer must they be "A house divided against itself."

United Against a Common Enemy

"Thus, without the common enemy, the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., formed solely for the purpose of amalgamating all interests to promote or defeat propaganda benefiting or destructive to the industry as a whole, would not have come into being.

"So strenuous is the life of the American people that they are slow to become interested, but once aroused to the gravity of this issue, we of the motion picture industry need have no fear of the decision. The great American public may go wrong temporarily in some things, but it has never been known to go wrong on an issue involving the fundamental principles of our liberty. Wherever an injustice is done, the public is quick to right it, upon it becoming acquainted with the facts.

"Consequently, I think we may view the outcome of the present agitation with absolute confidence, provided we do our share in helping our enemies to continue the present fermentation, until the public fully realizes what the motion picture means to it, and what we stand for.

Legalized Censorship Defeated Before

"We have ample evidence to justify this confidence. Every attempt made to foist legalized censorship upon the people of this country has met with disaster. Away back in 1789 President Adams tried to restrict the freedom of the press which had been gained only after years of darkness and the shedding of much blood, and went down to ignominious defeat for re-election.

"Over in Pennsylvania, only a few years ago, Samuel Pennypacker sought to discipline the press which had made his official life, as Governor, far from a happy one, and succeeded only in bringing down upon his head a storm of ridicule such as few public figures have ever suffered.

"But we do not need to go out of our own circle to satisfy ourselves that the American people will never relinquish the principles for which this great republic was founded.

"Out in Los Angeles, recently, a local board of censors sought to impose their private prejudices upon an entire community. The outraged public sentiment which was directed at them, not only resulted in their resignations, but forced the authorities to permit the exhibition of the picture to which the little group of seven short-sighted individuals had so strenuously objected. Mass meetings were held, editorials promulgated, and the entire community aroused to the point where the mistaking of its temper was impossible.

Absurdities of Censorship

"To what lengths such censorship would go if it were permitted to exercise itself unchecked, is illustrated by a recent request of a feminine member of the Kansas Board of Administration to have the music rendered in moving picture theatres censored, on the ground that the morals of the commonwealth were imperilled by the present liberty permitted in the musical accompaniments of moving picture films.

"With such suggestions being put forward, when censorship has but the merest footing in our social life, we can imagine what the demands might be if it were given an actual hold.

"All we of the moving picture industry need to do is to present these facts to the millions to whom our product brings the worlds of art, history, science, religion, mechanics, surgery, etc., and to the scores of others who appreciate that this product is an influence in keeping some of their neighbors from injurious indulgences."

Mutual Cameraman Gets Striking European Scenes

Darmour, Star Man on "Weekly" Staff, Who Joined Ford Expedition and Later Parted Company with Peace Pilgrims, Brings Back Unusual Winter Pictures

LAWRENCE DARMOUR, star cameraman of the Mutual Weekly staff, is home again from Europe and the Ford Peace Expedition, with a lot of interesting stories and quite a few films.

Darmour is only twenty-one years old. It is said he was the youngest member of the Ford expedition. He met a number of picturesque characters on the ship, as well as on the Continent, but he did not spend all his time "shooting" them.

It appears that the young photographer parted company with the expedition in order to take some exclusive winter sport pictures up on Holmenkollen, the mountain where the celebrated Swedish skiing contests are held.

He got snowed-in and had to stay on the mountain five days. Not satisfied with that he went prowling around with his camera in the Norwegian Alps about Finse, four thousand feet above the sea.

Darmour is said to have accomplished a scoop over the newspaper persons in the Ford party. He discovered that a certain member of the Ford staff was leaving the party to return to the United States when the peace ship was held up at Kirkwall.

This person was prevailed upon to carry back with him a number of rolls of negative, which is reported to have reached the Mutual Weekly before the first of the mailed reports of the correspondents left Europe.

Putting in Rough "Business" for Smooth Comedies

Arbuckle Uses Bordeau as Human Battering-Ram at Eastern Keystone Studios in Scene for "The Bright Lights," a Play to Banish Black Gloom

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE used Joe Bordeau as a human battering ram at the Keystone studio in Fort Lee, N. J., the other day, and Joe still lives, although he was driven like a wedge through a 12-inch wall with such force that a gap was opened large enough to admit the bulky "Fatty" to a Bowery dive, where his country sweetheart, Mabel Normand, was held a prisoner.

This scene will furnish the big thrill in "The Bright Lights" when that new Keystone comedy is released to Triangle exhibitors.

Joe says he'll be at the Knickerbocker the first night to see how he survived an experience for which they use 42-centimeter shells in Champagne.

For more than two weeks Arbuckle has been preparing for this scene. He came from California with a determination to show Mack Sennett that New York was just as fertile a field for the Keystone brand of comedy thrills as the Pacific coast.

He made a good start in "He Did and He Didn't," and then approached "The Bright Lights" with eagerness as he looked over the story and saw that much of the action would take place on the Bowery.

Personal representatives began to scour the East Side for types, and the mechanical department started work on the construction of a huge set which shows a complete Bowery dive, a cellar affair with bar and sitting room, over which a shoe shop and a Chinese laundry are situated.

Mabel has been lured from the country and is imprisoned on the Bowery. "Fatty" discovers her whereabouts and invades the resort with a number of sailors, who are spoiling for a fight.

All are thrown out by the gang which uses the place as a rendezvous. Kid Broad recruited this gang for Arbuckle, and did a good job.

Several men who have delivered knockouts in the prize ring gave a touch of verisimilitude to the numerous fights which occurred frequently in this set.

At least one broken nose emerged from the fray in which "Fatty" returned with reinforcements and knocked down the enemy's battlements with the battering Joe Bordeau. The ease with which additional sailors were obtained showed the value of preparedness.

When the last gangster had been counted out "Fatty" broke through an inner door where the fair Mabel was cowering. Then, in the debris which covered the set, the director prepared for the final thrill.

As the wall was pierced by tough Joe Bordeau the foundations of the building were to be so shaken that the shoe shop and the laundry would drop and mingle with the lower level.

The shoe mender made the drop all right, but when the three Chinese acrobats engaged for the occasion started in to earn their per diem they showed a lack of teamwork.

Their signals got crossed and they began to go with gravity before the cameraman got the whistle. Everyone else joined in and made a wreck of the set.

"On the set to-morrow at 10 o'clock made up!" said "Fatty" in disgust, as he turned to give instructions about having the set replaced during the night.

PETITION FOR CENSORSHIP IN ST. LOUIS

E. V. P. Schneiderhahn, attorney for the Federated Catholic Societies of St. Louis, presented a petition to the Board of Aldermen last week which was signed by 11,846 persons, urging the passage of a bill to establish a censorship board.

The petition was referred to the legislative committee.

Julius Stern Recommends List of Universal Pictures

Company Triples Scenario Staff Since Opening Studios at Universal Heights, New Jersey, and Increases Acting Staff—Subjects Show Marked Improvement

WITH a dozen directors at work on the stage, Universal Heights, New Jersey, is today in point of footage produced and number of directors one of the most active of all Eastern studios.

The staff of directors, under the general direction of Producing Manager Julius Stern, comprises Ben Wilson, Lucius Henderson, Harry C. Myers, Henry Otto, Stuart Paton, Edwin Stevens, W. J. Kelly, Robert Hill, William Garwood, Allan Holubar, Matt Moore and Rex Ingram.

"The improvement in Eastern Universal pictures upon our moving into the new studios," said Manager Stern, "was apparent almost with the first picture taken there. Lighting, settings, photography—there has been no question about the improvement.

"I will name concrete pictures, that I invite anyone to see, that will bear out these claims.

"See 'The Poet's Progress,' with Matt Moore and Jane Gail; 'The Sheriff of Pine Mountains,' with Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips; 'The Girl Who Feared Daylight' with Mary Fuller; 'Easy Money,' 'Love's Spasm,' 'Lathered Trust,' 'Model Husband,' 'Hash House Heiress,' and 'Object, Matrimony,' all with Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby.

"With Violet Mersereau: 'Love's Triumph' with Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips; 'The Humming Pigeons,' with Edith Roberts and Stanley Walpole; 'The Captain of the Typhoon' with King Baggot; 'Aschen Brodel' with Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips; 'The Invisible Husband' with Matt Moore and Jane Gail; 'Hetty Gray, Millionaire,' with Mary Fuller; 'Elusive Isabel,' a five-reeler, with Florence Lawrence; 'Jim Slogan,' with King Baggot.

"'The Ways of Providence,' with Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips; 'Thrown to the Lions,' a five-reeler, with Mary Fuller; 'Why Mrs. Kenworth Lied,' with Mr. Moore, Miss Gail and Augustus Phillips; 'Held for Damages,' with Harry Benham and Edna Pendleton; 'The Experiment,' a five-reeler, with Violet Mersereau.

"'The Unconventional Girl,' with Edith Roberts, Stanley Walpole and Sydell Dowling; 'The Blind Man Who Saw,' with Ben Wilson and Joe Girard and Clara Byers; and 'Behind the Curtain,' with Dorothy Phillips and Allan Holubar.

"These are given in their general order of production, which will be their general order of release. See any of them or see all of them; they all show the quality advance that Universal Heights has brought to Eastern production.

"Since coming to the Universal Heights studio, we have tripled our scenario staff. We believe we have the best scenario brains in the East in the enlarged department. We have augmented our acting staff, too.

"In the past few weeks I have engaged for Eastern productions Harry Millarde, of the Kalem, Sidney Bracy of the Thanhouser, Stanley Walpole, of the Eclair, Lionel Adams, of the Vitagraph, and Augustus Phillips, of the Edison—stars every one."

CHICAGO REEL FELLOWS CLUB BREAKFAST DINNER HELD ON FEBRUARY 16

World Film and Paramount Reaffirm Censorship Stand

Illinois Exhibitors, Protesting Against Attitude of Feature Companies, Are Told by General Manager Spiegel that Federal Regulation "Will Do Away With Class of Productions Which Are Bound Ultimately to Create Havoc in the Business"—Hodkinson Indorses Letter as "Comprehensive and a Very Good Answer"

ARTHUR H. SPIEGEL, President of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation and General Manager of the World Film Corporation, was the recipient, last week, on behalf of his companies, of the following official notification from the Motion Pictures Exhibitors' Association of Illinois.

Immediately upon receipt of this notification, Mr. Spiegel went into executive session with W. W. Hodkinson, of the Paramount Company, who represents the Paramount group interests of the pro-censorship controversy, with the result that the following correspondence ensued:

Letter to Mr. Spiegel

"Chicago, Feb. 9, 1916.

"Equitable Motion Pictures Corp.,
"130 W. 46th St.,
"New York, N. Y.

"Gentlemen:

"At the last regular meeting of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Association of Illinois, held Friday, Feb. 4, at which time the annual election of officers took place, the following resolution was unanimously passed by a very large and representative gathering of exhibitors:

"'That we, the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of Illinois, desire to go on record as unalterably opposed to any form of legalized censorship, National or otherwise, and that we most heartily disapprove of the recent attitude of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, as well as the Metro and Paramount, in their endorsement of, and favoring legal censorship.'

"The Secretary was instructed to forward a copy of the above resolution to the Feature Film Companies in question, and also the trade papers.

"Yours truly,
"MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' ASSN.,
"Illinois.
"By J. H. Frundt, President.
"By Sidney Smith, Secretary."

Mr. Spiegel's Reply

Mr. Spiegel responded, after his conference with Mr. Hodkinson, as follows:

"February 14, 1916.

"Motion Picture Exhibitors' Ass'n, Ill.,
"57 E. Van Buren St.,
Chicago, Ill.

"Gentlemen:

"We have carefully noted the contents of your communication of the 9th inst.

"We regret that the attitude of our company as well as that of the Paramount and Metro has met with the disapproval of your association; but we wish to assure you that, in our opinion, our action will ultimately result to the best interests of everybody engaged in the motion picture industry.

"The companies mentioned in your letter who have expressed themselves as being in favor of proper national censorship gave this question most serious and thoughtful consideration before arriving at any definite conclusion, and our final decision was based on the fact that proper national censorship would surely finally result in great benefits for producers, distributors and exhibitors. We are striving to promote the best interests of this industry and to establish its permanency. We know and you know that there is a certain class of pictures being produced today which is objectionable not only to the exhibitor but to his patrons, and pictures of this character should be suppressed solely because their suppression will surely work for the best interests of the industry.

Industry Supported by Masses

"The motion picture industry, as an industry, has thrived simply because the motion picture theatre is a place for the masses—for men, women and children. But when a certain kind of pictures is produced which will surely result in keeping men, women and children out of the theatres, then it is quite evident to every one that the industry will be seriously harmed.

"It is hoped and desired that proper national censorship will do away with a class of productions that is bound to ultimately create havoc in the business. And it is further believed that once we have proper national censorship, all other forms of state and municipal censorship will be finally abolished.

"We, and I think I may state the other producers mentioned in your communication, are opposed to State Censorship, as we think it unfair and unwarranted; but we realize the urgent necessity for National Censorship—first, because it is bound to result in our general good; and, secondly, because we feel that once we have proper National Censorship, it will be a stepping stone to the complete abolishment of all forms of State Censorship.

"In conclusion, we wish to assure you that our sole purpose in this entire matter is to create a condition which will finally result for the best interests of every one engaged in this industry.

"Very truly yours,
"WORLD FILM CORPORATION,
"Arthur H. Spiegel, General Manager."

Hodkinson Gives Endorsement

W. W. Hodkinson's endorsement of Mr. Spiegel's response to the Illinois Association is given herewith:

"February 17, 1916.

"Mr. Arthur H. Spiegel,
"World Film Corporation,
"130 West 46th Street,
"New York City.

"My dear Mr. Spiegel:

"I have read and return herewith your letter dated the 14th, addressed to the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association at Chicago, which is in answer to their letter of the 9th, addressed to you.

"I think it is a very comprehensive and good answer, and trust that you will send it as it is.

"With kindest regards,
"Yours very truly,
"W. W. HODKINSON."

Kalem Studios on West Coast Busy Places These Days

"There Is No Fool Like an Old One" to Show Wisdom of Laughter for Screen Enjoyment, and "Ham" Comedies Are Expected to "Bring Home the Bacon"

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Feb. 17.

DIRECTOR William Beaudine has just completed the one reel Kalem comedy "There Is No Fool Like an Old Fool," written by M. E. M. Gibsons and featuring Ethel Teare.

It tells the story of Uncle Adam of the Eveless Eden Club who induces his nephew to become a member or forfeit his millions. How the nephew succeeds in convincing the uncle that the idea was wrong makes an interesting comedy. Jack Macdermott appears as the nephew.

The "Ham" comedy players are at work on a subject now, dealing with the attempts of Ham and Bud to buy a kiss at a charity ball. The price was one dollar each, and the pair by consolidating their bank accounts had a total of eighty cents.

The story contains some real foundation for high finance. Norma Nichols, new leading woman of the company, is the vendor of the "tulip salve."

Members of the "Hazards of Helen" company have again cheated death, as in an accident last week they all escaped serious injury when an automobile containing four people turned turtle at a turn in a mountain road near Los Angeles.

Helen Gibson was chasing the auto on a motorcycle and fortunately was far enough behind that she could pass with safety after the turning-over occurred.

This made it possible for the cameraman to continue at the crank and secure a film of the entire accident for a coming "Hazard of Helen" subject.

The war burlesque comedy, "Ham Agrees with Sherman," has at last been completed, the last scenes being made, representing those of an aeroplane flight in which Ham and Bud take part.

The machine was so small that it was necessary for the comedians to crouch down beside the aviator, and thus were completely hidden from the camera's eye.

A very realistic fall was secured when the monoplane crashed to the earth from a height of about thirty feet.

FISCHER TO OPEN OFFICE IN TWO CANADIAN CITIES

It is announced that Henry Fischer, manager of the United Film Service, will in the near future establish offices for his company in Winnipeg and Vancouver.

JEANNE IVER MAKES HIT IN FIRST SCREEN PLAY, "ONE DAY"

Out of a score of applicants it remained for an Ohio girl to secure the stellar role in the B. S. Moss production, "One Day." The girl is Ruth Mac Tammany, who hails from Akron, Ohio. Her professional name is Jeanne Iver, and she is well known as a classic dancer and soloist.

JEANNE IVER

Miss Iver has also displayed talent for dramatic work, fostered by thorough stock experience. "One Day" marks her first screen appearance.

STERN SIGNS STANLEY WALPOLE FOR UNIVERSAL

Stanley Walpole, of Eclair fame, has been engaged by Manager Julius Stern for the Universal Heights studio, where Walpole will be leading man for Edith Roberts, "youngest leading woman in the movies."

His first work in this capacity will be found in "An Unconventional Girl," a two-reel drama.

He appeared in the Eclair pictures some years ago while they were released on the Universal program.

Before the pictures "got him," Walpole spent eight years on the legitimate stage, five years of which were under the management of J. C. Williamson of Australia, from which far-off land Walpole hails.

In fact, Walpole has just returned from Melbourne, where he played eight months in repertoire for Mr. Williamson after finishing his Eclair picture engagement.

GARWOOD AGAIN IN UNIVERSAL PICTURES MADE EAST

William Garwood, one of the many leading men employed by Universal is to appear in pictures produced in the East once more.

About three months ago Mr. Garwood was sent to Universal City, Cal., to take part in the "Lord John's Journal" series. As these pictures are all completed Mr. Garwood is now in the East again and will resume work at the Fort Lee, N. J., studio.

Previous to this Mr. Garwood has only acted in the capacity of leading man but with his return to the Jersey plant, he will be promoted to a director's position. His work in this line will not interfere with his activities before the camera.

"SPOILERS" RIGHTS SOLD FOR SIX MORE STATES

"The Spoilers," Selig's screen version of Rex Beach's Alaskan tale, has finally been secured by Sol L. Lesser and M. Rosenberg for exploitation in the States of Kentucky, Maryland, Virginia, South Carolina, Delaware and the District of Columbia.

Offices have been opened under the name of the L. and R. Feature Film Company, Bank of Commerce Building, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Selig held this production for over a year, as he was unable to secure a buyer who would be willing to pay what the territory was worth.

M. Rosenberg, president of the Northwestern Feature Film Company, of Portland, who recently purchased the rights for "The Ne'er-Do-Well" for Washington, Oregon and Montana, reports a two weeks' record-breaking run at the Clemmer Theatre in Seattle, and a one-week run at the People's Theatre in Portland. Both these theatres will play return engagements.

MILLER BROS. OFFER SHOW OUTFIT FOR PICTURES

The 101 Ranch Wild West Show outfit, now wintering at the 101 Ranch, at Bliss, Okla., will probably be converted into a motion picture outfit until the opening in the latter part of April.

The show will be rehearsing February 20, and already the performers and other members of the big aggregation are beginning to gather at the ranch. It struck Col. Joe Miller as a good idea to use the outfit for pictures until the opening, and while as yet no contract has been closed, Mr. Miller says he has already several offers. He will not be ready before March 1, and is anxious to make a permanent contract for the entire summer.

SELZNICK TO SPEAK BEFORE NATIONAL PRESS CLUB

Lewis J. Selznick, President of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, has been invited by the National Press Club, of Washington, D. C., to address its members on the occasion of the next "Inside Dope" night.

It will be held early in March. Mr. Selznick's assigned topic will be "Marketing the Movies." Ralph Graves, chairman of the club's entertainment committee, issued the invitation.

COHN HAS WAITING LIST OF TEN THEATRES

Manager Cohn of the Notable Feature Films, of Denver, reports that business is great. He has a waiting list of ten theatres.

DOROTHY GREEN'S FIRST METRO ROLE IS IN SUPPORT OF EDMUND BREESE

Dorothy Green, last seen in the William Fox production of "A Parisian Romance," has been engaged by Popular Plays and Players for exclusive appearance on the Metro program.

Her first Metro role will be in support of Edmund Breese, in a five-part production, as yet unnamed. Following this, Miss Green will be starred alone, it is announced.

Among some of Miss Green's best features are "A Wonderful Adventure," with William Farnum, and "Her Mother's Secret," with Ralph Kellard.

DOROTHY GREEN

Miss Green is a native of Russia, and came to this country at the age of three.

CLEVELAND EXHIBITORS THINK OF PROMOTING BALL LIKE ONE IN PITTSBURGH

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, Feb. 19.

A number of Cleveland motion picture men are scouting around with the idea of ascertaining what chance for success there would be for a motion picture ball in Cleveland on similar lines to the recent Screen Club ball in Pittsburgh.

Gray's Armory, where President Wilson recently spoke on preparedness, is spoken of as the most likely building for the ball, if the people interested in the idea can be induced to take the initiative.

STRAND, MONTREAL, BREAKS RECORD WITH BERNHARDT SUBJECT

The Strand theatre, Montreal, makes the statement that while up to January its record receipts had been attained during a showing of "Neptune's Daughter," this record has been smashed by over $200 during the first week of the showing of the Bluebird Feature, "Jeanne Dore," starring Sarah Bernhardt.

"POOR LITTLE PEPPINA"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

AN exhibitor from the Middle West, who happened to be present at the private showing of this latest Mary Pickford subject at the Broadway theatre, New York, remarked: "This is a picture that will please the children immensely. Mary Pickford can act this kind of a part better than anybody else can."

He didn't mean, we discovered, that he thought it a children's picture exclusively, but he did mean it would delight children because it was clean, wholesome, true to life and perfectly natural. And we don't know any higher testimony to the worth of "Poor Little Peppina" than that. The exhibitor said grown people would like it also, and in no less degree would like everything about it, unless, perhaps, they found it a little too long, and possessed of a considerable amount of repetition.

Probably most people will see it in five reels. At least we think they should, particularly as Mary does not enter until the beginning of the second reel in the version we saw.

The story, by Kate Jordan, is slender, but Mary Pickford and her brother Jack and several Italian actors of astonishing ability in pantomine make one glide over its few improbabilities quickly enough.

It shows Mary, kidnapped by the Mafia in Italy, and finally compelled to flee to America as a stowaway in boy's clothes. On shipboard she meets Hugh Carroll who eventually restores her to her parents, and incidentally gains her as his wife, one is led to infer.

Throughout the picture Mary is, of course, inimitable, but she did two small bits of acting which we have never seen surpassed for their kind. One involved her posing for her picture on the deck of the ship. Hugh Carroll brought out a camera, and Mary, who has become famous through her extraordinary ability to forget that the camera is watching every pose of hers in the studio, stood on the deck the perfect picture of awkwardness and self-consciousness.

She looked just as most people do when they have their pictures taken. The other incident took Mary attired in masculine garb, of course, up to the bar, and caused her to place a foot firmly on the rail.

A huge schooner of beer was put in front of her, and her pantomime in getting rid of it without drinking it, was delightful.

There are some beautiful exteriors in this picture, especially the Italian backgrounds. The exhibitor from the Middle West praised them highly. A studio set reproducing a street scene in Naples caught his eye also. We thought it a wonder ourselves. Other settings are excellent also.

"Who directed this picture?" the exhibitor asked.

"Yes, well he is a good director," he said after we had told him Eugene O'Brien was the man.

As for the players, they all seemed to please him. There were Cesare Gravina, Antonio Maori, Ernesto Torti, Francesca Guerra, N. Cervi, and Mrs. A. Maori. Besides, Eugene O'Brien, Edwin Mordant, Edith Shayne, W. T. Carleton, had conspicuous roles.

"THE POOL OF FLAME"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

UNIVERSAL exhibitors have not yet forgotten the "Terence O'Rourke" series in which J. Warren Kerrigan was starred. and consequently they will have the opportunity to judge as to whether "The Pool of Flame" will please their patrons, for this Red Feather production is molded after the fashion of the former series.

The author, Louis Joseph Vance, has furnished a story full enough of adventurous and romantic action in which Kerrigan and his supporting players find themselves through their abilities and past experiences thoroughly at home.

Lest there may be any misrepresentation caused by reference to the "Terence O'Rourke" series we will add that "The Pool of Flame" has absolutely no connection whatever with the former pictures of the same character.

The plot follows the same lines and some of the parts are the same, but the feature rests on its own plot and its own merits and is consequently a separate and distinct picture.

The fact that some familiar names and faces appear will, on the other hand, further interest those who previously witnessed the O'Rourke series.

Otis Turner took charge of the direction. He has shown himself as an ardent follower of minute details in the matter of properties and in only a few instances where Indian soldiers are shown in military costume has he missed fire.

These cases, however, are so insignificant that slight if any notice will be taken of them.

For the rest, his settings, both outdoor and indoor are generally correct and impressive and the work of the cameraman does full justice to them in every instance.

The story concerns itself with the adventures of Terence O'Rourke who has in his possession the Pool of Flame, a priceless jewel stolen from the head of an Indian idol.

MARY PICKFORD IN UNFAMILIAR GARB: AS "PEPPINA" IN THE CURRENT FAMOUS PLAYERS PHOTOPLAY

Table of Contents will hereafter be found opposite Accessory News Section Cover

Duke Victor, a penniless and villainous character, wants the diamond so that he will be able to pay his debts and marry Princess Beatrix, whom O'Rourke also loves.

The course of the plot takes the characters through a series of exciting adventures until at last the jewel is restored to its place in the idol by O'Rourke, who claims the reward and is thus able to ask the hand of the Princess.

While the theme is quite slight, there is a sufficient amount of business to ever keep up the interest. Lois Wilson makes an attractive figure of the Princess, Harry Carter plays with his usual skill as the villain, Duke Victor, Maude George is a relentless pursuer of the jewel, while L. H. Holland, Frank MacQuarrie, Earl Page and Bertram Grassby complete the cast.

IN THE PALACE

"VIRTUE TRIUMPHANT"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THE aspiring actress had her difficulties with a hard-hearted manager are again used as a theme for a photodrama. This familiar situation has been given an ingenious twist, and acted by a very capable cast, makes interesting entertainment.

The story, which was written by Ouida Bergere, is not melodramatic, as the title connotes; the episodes, while unusual, are not improbable, and the action is always coherent and logical.

THE PREMIERE IS SUCCESSFUL

Fritzie Brunette is called upon to play two characters, one that of a young girl, and the other that of an aged woman. If a subtitle did not make this clear, it would be hard to guess that she assumes both roles.

Jack Pickford and his intelligent collie both appear to good advantage. Edward Piel is a natural and convincing heavy.

Thomas Burt, a theatrical manager, makes love to his leading woman, Helen Lord, and when she repulses him, she is dismissed and blacklisted. Her money gone, and in a starving condition, she is found in the park by Billy Boyd, an unsuccessful young dramatist. Together they devise a scheme to sell Billy's play, and get an engagement for Helen.

They disguise themselves as a famous English authoress and her son, and call on Burt. The pseudo-authoress offers Billy's play as one of her own, and promises to let Burt produce it, provided that she can select the leading woman. The manager consents, and is enraged next day to find that the actress selected is Helen Lord. However, he has signed a contract to produce the play, so he puts it on, and it is very successful. Billy and Helen then announce their engagement.

"FOR A WOMAN'S FAIR NAME"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS picture is notable for two things: suspense and a refreshing version of the eternal triangle. Perhaps we should not say eternal triangle, because in this case the wife is absolutely faithful, and the friend a man of sterling character.

All the trouble arises through an automobile accident in which the wife is injured, and the friend forced to pose, for a time, as her husband.

Even then there would have been no trouble if the friend's half-brother, a drug fiend and the villain of the play, had not been in the same roadhouse into which the injured woman was carried.

His knowledge of this fact he holds as a club over the two, threatening to tell the husband if he is not permitted to marry the husband's sister.

All these threads of action are worked up into a story, which arouses the spectator's interest, often to a high pitch. Except for a few improbabilities, the plot material is well handled, and contains genuine power for arousing sympathy or the reverse.

THE SECRETARY IS REPRIMANDED

This means also that the characterization, both by the author, Marguerite Bertsch, and the players, is sharply defined. Robert Edeson appears as the husband, and has some fine moments of emotional acting.

Harry Morey, really the hero of the story, performs with accustomed ability. Eulalie Jensen is a striking figure as the wife, and Belle Bruce is pretty and pleasing in an ingenue part. The villain's role is taken by William Dunn, who makes a real character out of it. Jack Brawn is seen as a butler.

The element of suspense to which we referred above is helped along considerably by three incidents: the automobile accident, the accidental shooting of the husband's sister by the drug fiend, and the suicide of the latter in a struggle with the police.

The atmosphere is that of wealth, and this makes possible the display of some typically handsome Vitagraph interiors and exteriors. The lighting is very good. Director Harry Davenport has done his work in a thoroughly acceptable fashion.

The picture is clean. We hope it gets the success it deserves.

"THE BLACKLIST"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE various components of a good picture have been well combined in this subject. It is a thoroughly good picture—good enough to make the little flaws which are to be found in every subject inconspicuous and unimportant.

It is one thing to build up a good story, to provide dramatic situations, to express human emotions, but it is another thing to "get across" these elements. It seems to us that not once do the telling points in "The Blacklist" fail to register.

It is the style of picture in which the interest keeps about ten feet ahead of the projecting machine; there is no danger of anyone walking out while the film is running.

Blanche Sweet does some really artistic work as the daughter of a miner and the teacher of the school for miners' children. She works directly, with a wistful appeal which wins the sympathy from the first, and holds it.

"HE WILL RECOVER"

Apparently the story is built upon the troubles at the Ludlow mines in Colorado, a year or so back; the incidents of the riots and murder at that time have been closely followed, and a melodrama has been skilfully constructed and elaborately produced.

It aims to teach a lesson in the relations between capital and labor, but it is doubtful if the didactics will live through the human interest of the story. William C. DeMille and Marion Fairfax wrote the scenario and Mr. DeMille directed the production.

The miners, all living on the company's property, are oppressed by the mine guards. Moreover, they suffer from the blacklist, which is used to subdue those who protest at the oppression. One miner who attacks a guard for insulting the pretty little school teacher, Vera, is killed, and the superintendent offers no redress.

Then the miners are roused to organize. The owner visits the mines, has a talk with Vera and, while inclined to make the conditions easier, refuses to concede the miners' demands. So a strike is called.

The superintendent has his way and the striking miners are evicted from company property and take refuge in the hills. The owner, who has fallen in love with Vera, tells her the eviction order does not apply to her, but she goes with her people.

One of the guards is killed, and the strike-breakers surround the camp of the evicted miners and attack it with rifles and a machine gun, in violation of the owner's orders. Men, women and children are shot down.

Previously lots had been drawn by the strikers to decide who should kill the man responsible for the outrage, and the lot fell to Vera. She makes her way to the owner's office and shoots him; then she attempts to shoot herself, but is prevented.

The owner recovers, marries Vera, and the two work out a plan for more human treatment of the miners. Charles Clary, Ernest Joy and Billy Elmer do some excellent and convincing work in the various parts.

THREE COMEDIES FROM THE E. AND R. JUNGLE

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TWO of the latest products of the E. and R. Jungle Film Company feature those clever comedians, Napoleon and Sally, who, though they be chimpanzees from out the primitive jungle, are able to act with skill and understanding.

The third subject shown for review with the Napoleon and Sally pictures, features about every animal in the collection of jungle inmates held in captivity at the studio, and is one of the cleverest and funniest of one-reel comedies.

"What D'ye Think o' That" is the title of a one-reel comedy by Frances Willey, featuring Napoleon and Sally. We could almost vouch for a long string of laughs in the reel, even though the chimpanzees had not made their appearance.

It is a familiar plot, but a clever one, and the chimpanzees have been given real parts—they are not dragged in merely for their own sakes.

Two mischievous bell-hops steal a pair of chimpanzees from a trainer and send one to an old man and an old woman who contemplate marriage.

The man wears a wig and the chimp steals it; the woman finds her precious false teeth have disappeared at the last moment. The wedding takes place and each member of the ceremony attempts to hide from the other the terrible loss.

The apprehension of the bell-hops finally clears up the mystery of the chimpanzees and the lost essentials of the wedded couple.

In "Uncle's Little Ones," Napoleon and Sally again have generous opportunities to prove their comic abilities before the camera. The story is by Lillian Browne Leighton and the author also carries the principal human role.

The story concerns the inheritance of a widow. Her uncle leaves her his two charges, and she prepares to welcome a couple of children, but the chimpanzees arrive instead.

Having started off with that big laugh the film continues to show how the animals prevent any definite culmination to the widow's romance.

Napoleon and Sally are called upon to perform a varied series of stunts without the assistance of players, and they acquit themselves entirely creditably. With the writer it strikes a humorous cord to watch the two chimps, attired in civilian clothes, acting very much like a pair of mischievous kids.

They go about their business so seriously, although at times they exhibit a noticeable sense of humor, that the effect is uproarious. Also we fail to see anything offensive in the sight of the beasts.

"A Jungle Cure" presents everything in the animal line, from lions to snakes. Two young men have a liking for spirits, and their friends decide on a cure.

They employ an animal trainer and various of the circus animals and place them in the rooms of the riotous young men just before they return from a spree.

Confronted with snakes, monkeys, bears, chimpanzees, tigers, lions and the like for about nine hundred feet of film, the boys decide that it's "never again" for theirs, much to the gratification of the jokers.

The subject has been handled with a fine appreciation of its possibilities. The animals stationed in the rooms are removed as soon as the boys exit in fright.

When they return, the jungle inmates have vanished, and naturally the boys think that they have been seeing things.

The animals, by the way, have been directed in such a manner that even though they are probably quite tame in real life, they appear truly ferocious on the screen.

Incidentally the actors who play the young cut-ups are good comedians, while the photography is good. None of the essential components of a satisfactory comedy have been neglected in the effort to produce a capable animal picture.

PHONE, TELEGRAPH AND WIRELESS ARE TOO SLOW FOR FOX ACTRESS, WHO USES CARRIER PIGEONS

THE carrier pigeon en route from the California studios to the home office of the Fox Film Corporation in New York, has reached Milwaukee.

The bird is carrying to Mr. Fox a message from Dorothy Bernard, who is seen in "Fighting Blood," which was made in California. Annette Kellermann, star of the million-dollar picture being made in Jamaica, has also dispatched a message to Mr. Fox by means of a carrier pigeon.

"GOLDEN LIES"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THE omnipresent, omniscient people in the audience who tell those around them just how the film is going to end will probably go wrong on this one. The suspense and denouement are handled adroitly, and the unusual story has the Maupassant unexpected finish.

Bryant Washburn, who plays heavy or heroic parts with equal facility, is cast in the latter kind in this drama. Carefully avoiding the affectation that a less capable actor would fall into, the finesse he employs is most effective. Elizabeth Burbridge's forte is ingenue parts, but she can get away with emotional work when it is required. Patrick Calhoun's villainy is a bit too deep-dyed at times, but for the most part his interpretation passes muster.

In a subtitle the director has a blind girl say, "This necktie does not match my husband's eyes." It is hardly fair to the producer to mention this, however, since the film is otherwise excellently handled.

Thomas Devlan, a worthless young man, is engaged to Vera Walton. His brother Edward, a hard-working fellow, is also in love with her, but respects Tom's prior claim. In an accident Vera is blinded for life, and Tom goes to South America rather than marry her. This desertion prostrates Vera, and so, to relieve her depression, Edward writes her love-letters, purporting to come from Tom. Finally, to carry out the illusion, he marries her.

They are very happy, until one day Tom comes back, and threatens to expose the plot. When he tells Vera of the deception practiced on her, she tells him that she has been aware of it for some time, but that Edward's unselfish devotion has won her heart.

"A WOMAN'S POWER"

(Brady-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BROMIDICALLY speaking, Charles Neville Buck might have written specially for the screen, so well do his stories appear when given that medium for circulation.

"A Woman's Power" was based on one of Mr. Buck's stories, and as a whole it is an acceptable and enjoyable photoplay, although there are one or two points that fail to meet the demands of a critical audience.

One of two, however, about covers these points, and to offset them there is Mollie King, who herewith makes her debut as a picture star.

Miss King is most attractive when she appears, and besides being attractive she is skilled in the art of pantomime acting.

She appears as Minerva Rawlins, daughter of a Kentucky mountaineer, one of Mr. Buck's favorite characters.

Minerva is loved by Newt Spooner, a mountaineer who is hot on the trail of Falkins, a man on whose testimony he was previously jailed. Minerva attempts to dissuade him from this purpose, but to no avail.

With the outbreak of the Spanish war, Falkins forms a volunteer company and Newt, together with one of his clansmen, Red Pete, enlist. Newt vows to get even, but time and again is restrained by Red.

In the Philippines, Falkins finally manages to make friends with Newt, but the latter still is waiting his chance. Red Pete deserts his company and goes over to the enemy, and Newt is his captor and his accuser on a charge of desertion.

Then at last he realizes that a man may accuse his own friend of a crime and still care for him, and he returns to Minerva a much better man.

It is a little disappointing to see poor Red the advisor and good friend go to his death, merely to accomplish the author's purpose of teaching Newt a lesson. Red wasn't given villainous traits at any time in the story, and his disastrous finish grates on the sympathies. The battle scenes laid in the Philippines are decidedly realistic, and they come to alively head when the Americans entirely wreck a Filippino village. The army life shown is too a close follower of actual detail.

Douglas MacLean gives a most acceptable performance as Newt, while others are Charles Mitchell, Simeon Wiltse and N. J. Thompson. The supernumeraries employed in the battle scenes were handled to effective advantage.

"NEARLY A KING"

(Famous Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

AT the Broadway theatre, New York, last week, where "Nearly a King" was shown, every young woman who was Nearly a Queen in the affections of her escort probably forgot for the time being the mere male person at her side, in contemplation of the hero in the picture.

John Barrymore had the chief role and was in fine romantic form for a part in a swiftly moving story on "The Prisoner of Zenda" order. This comparison is not meant to be invidious, for "The Prisoner of Zenda" is a mighty good subject for photodrama. Neither is it meant to imply that the plot is a duplicate.

The picture has a touch-and-go in the scenes that keeps up interest throughout. At certain stages things get pretty lively. Probably the most spectacular episodes consist of the capture of Merriwell by the soldiers of the regent of the kingdom on his arrival within its borders and his escape to the room in the palace occupied by the princess.

The royal guard drag him from his horses the moment he enters the grounds and attempt to rush him off to prison. But his captors do not get far with their prisoner, for he knocks one down, grabs a sword from the hands of his fallen antagonist and lunges right and left at his other foes. Then begins a battle for life between one man and an ever-increasing multitude as the alarm is spread to the regiment in reserve at the barracks.

The hero rushes up a flight of stone steps and tumbles men off to the ground below.

Even when five soldiers with drawn swords appear at the top of the stairs and attempt to take him unawares while he is busy with the horde pressing up, step by step, the young man, supposed by the regent to be a London cab driver married to the princess under pretense of being the heir of a neighboring principality, shows that his forte is not to drive horses but to drive a crowd of yelling soldiers before him like a flock of sheep.

Of course the situation might seem somewhat far-fetched, but if an audience took exception to everything in drama that did not exactly square with a literal minded insistence upon "the probabilities," a great deal of the joy of life would be missed.

And, anyhow, what good is a "hero" if he isn't able to lick a dozen strong men before breakfast, just to give himself the right kind of an appetite for the meal?

The picture opens with John Barrymore sitting in his room confronted by the fact that he is "at liberty." And speaking of improbabilities, perhaps here is one, if you are looking for such flaws—an actor like Barrymore worrying over the needs of an engagement!

The actor's valet timidly submits a scenario and asks for a reading from his master. Upon recovering from his surprise—the actor reads the script.

He is delighted to find it unlike the hundreds of other scripts he had read in a search for a good medium for his talents.

The story is all about an heir to a throne who likes a ballet dancer better than a princess his dad insists upon his marrying. So he decides to marry the danseuse and leave the country. But he needs a double to impersonate him, and finds the right person in Merriwell. The princess lives in a country called Bulwana—not spelled "Bull-wana"; neither is the accent on the first syllable—and the hero almost loses his life before being able to claim his bride in the turbulent principality.

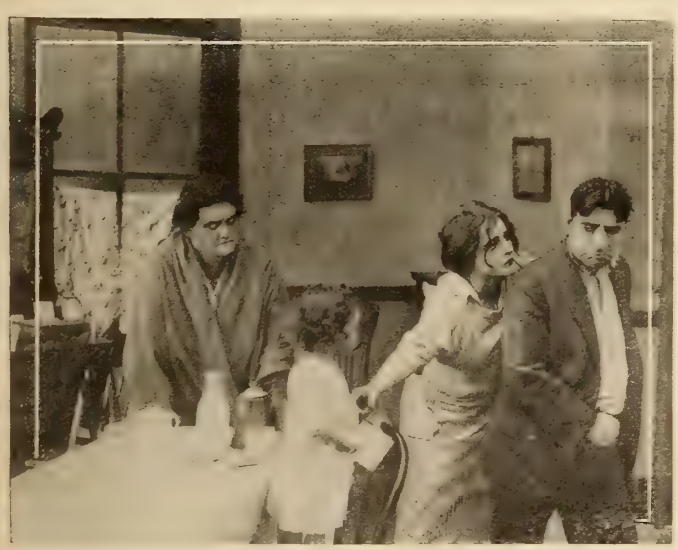
The story ends with a surprise that gets the hero out of difficulties in a logical manner, and makes you suddenly cease wondering how the decreed death of the imposter-husband by the regent can be averted by convincing and simple means, without resorting to the makeshift of an unnatural change of heart in the vindictive regent.

Just as the soldiers are about to seize Merriwell the young woman at his side suddenly commands them to desist, reminding the temporary ruler that she has just come of age, his regency is ended, and as queen her subjects are to take orders from no one but her.

"THE HEART OF NEW YORK"

(Claridge—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS



THE opening of "The Heart of New York" shows Father Knickerbocker, in colonial clothes, powdered wig and square spectacles, gazing from a lofty position down on the metropolis. This personification of New York and its spirit, founded on the cartoons now so familiar, is very striking in the picture.

Father Knickerbocker makes another novel appearance in sounding the theme of the story. He is seen holding three babies in swaddling clothes, peering benignly into their small faces.

The youngsters represent the three persons whose destiny the spectator follows through years of change in different ways of living.

There is the child of the laborer, the daughter of an editor, and the son of a politician. Bill Madden, the first, begins life under the difficulties besetting a poor but ambitious young man. Through sheer force of determination he manages to rise from his early environment to a position of dignity and wealth.

Bill Madden's sister, Mary, working in a department store, attracts the attention of Victor Brown, the son of a powerful politician. The young man, repulsed by the girl, decides to possess her by abduction.

THE GUNMAN'S WIFE PLEADS WITH HIM

He takes her to a dwelling presided over by a woman whose course of life has deadened all human feeling, and attempts to hold Mary captive until she should consider his attentions in a more favorable light. Another woman, who hopes to regain the affections of Brown by removing the cause of his latest infatuation, aids Mary to escape.

Madden comes to the house in time to save his sister, and seeks the man responsible for such an outrageous attempt to curtail her liberty. His clues lead him to the home of the young man, and Madden thrashes the miscreant before the eyes of the elder Brown, who, incensed by the reprisals of the indignant brother, orders a gunman to waylay and kill Madden.

The politician's son is shot by mistake, and Madden is accused of the murder. But he is cleared by the testimony of the gunman's wife, grateful for help from Madden. Madden in the meanwhile had become acquainted with the daughter of the editor in a mutual interest in welfare work, and their marriage is solemnized after the acquittal.

Walter McNamara, director of "Traffic in Souls," produced the film.

"A LEAP YEAR WOOING"

(Kalem—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EXHIBITORS ought to be and no doubt are particularly interested in "A Leap Year Wooing," for it is the first of the comedies in which Rose Melville, creator of Sis Hopkins, is featured.

There is nothing that should interfere with the success of this famous comedienne on the screen. Her business is original, it is clean and moreover its eccentricities are funny.

We do not, and we presume the Kalem company does not guarantee "A Leap Year Wooing" to send its patrons rolling around a theatre floor with laughter, but it is a picture that can be advertised and boomed because it has a funny plot and funny business in which Sis is ably assisted by one Henry Murdock and a number of others in straight parts.

LEAP YEAR METHODS

Sis is the slavey in the house of Phineas Lee. It is leap year, and being rather unpopular with the male sex, Sis advertises for a husband.

Several apply for the job, and there are a number of laughs when they all think Mary Lee is the husband-seeker.

One of their number, Sudden Sam, who persists violently in his love making with Mary, gets thrown into the kitchen by her fiance and there he goes right on making love to Sis.

This delights her to the extreme, but it is by no means the end of the picture. A crook of the gentleman variety makes love to Mary and they decide to elope, but Sis gets in the car thinking that the man is Sudden Sam.

When both discover the deception they go back to the house, where the police await the crook and Sudden Sam awaits Sis.

Sudden Sam is played by Henry Murdock, an actor whose speciality is falling. He is in comedy make-up, and he is liable to get a laugh whenever he appears.

Others are Mary Kennedy, Robert Ellis, Arthur Albertson, Richard Purdon and Olive West. Ellis also directed.

LOOKING AT SEGMENTS OF "THE RED CIRCLE," THE SERIAL FROM THE HOUSE OF PATHE

"THE IRON CLAW"

(Pathé—First and Second Episodes—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THE newest Pathé serial has performed its first duty admirably: it has aroused the interest, and has kept it in suspension. The story promises to be an absorbing one, and it is so presented as to make all of its points tell.

The action is sharp and fast, but more than all, it is presented by a cast of players which have made themselves popular all over the country. They include Pearl White, Creighton Hale and Sheldon Lewis, and the trio is, or should be, enough to fill many a house where "The Iron Claw" is shown.

The serial is being produced by Edward Jose, from stories by Arthur Stringer, picturized by George B. Seitz. The action is clear and in most cases logical, and the dramatic situations have been well built up and handled.

The story is, of course, melodramatic to the last degree, but it is melodrama of the sort which has a wide appeal.

THE ESCAPE

The "Iron Claw" is the nickname of Legar, a notorious criminal. Twenty years before the opening of the story, Legar attempted to steal the wife of Enoch Golden, a millionaire.

Golden caught him and punished him by depriving him of his left hand, and marking his face permanently with hot irons. With an iron claw in place of the lost hand, Legar has devoted the rest of his life to revenge upon Golden.

One of the first things he did was to kidnap Golden's little daughter, Margery, and in the first episode we see Margery as a young woman, in the power of Legar and his band of criminals.

Legar gets a note from the mysterious "Laughing Mask" saying it is necessary to correct some of his methods, but Legar ignores the warning.

Legar sends the girl as a "present" to a wealthy friend, but the "Laughing Mask" makes his way into the house, rescues her and restores her to her father, who has not seen her in twenty years.

In the second episode, which is entitled, "The House of Unhappiness," Margery is installed as the daughter, and is happy for the first time since childhood. Legar sends Golden a note ordering him to return the girl.

Golden ignored the order, and the next day he and all his close friends get warnings that something is about to happen to them. It happens in the form of fires, which start mysteriously in their homes and offices.

Golden's young secretary finds that these fires are started by means of a "ray projector," by which Legar and his crowd project the flames from a high building overlooking the houses they wish to burn. The building is located, but Legar escapes.

Unwilling to be the cause of so much misery, Margery leaves her father's house, returns to the den of the crooks, and gives herself up. The episode ends with the girl again in the clutches of Legar, and with her father and his secretary bringing powerful influences to bear to rescue her.

The serial should have a drawing power as great, if not greater, than any the Pathé people have yet issued.

"THE MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER"

(Kleine—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

TEN of these one-reel comedies have already been prepared and are to be released at the rate of one a week through the Kleine service. The casts are made up of well-known comedians, popular throughout the country, which they have covered thoroughly on the various vaudeville wheels.

Chief among them is Harry Watson, of Bickel and Watson, who portrays the ragged hobo, Musty Suffer. He is assisted by his partner, Bickel, by Crimmins and Gore, and other people, all of which impresses us as being remarkably capable.

Mr. Watson has created a real comedy character in Musty Suffer. He has the assistance of able direction, and in several cases trick photography has been used to good effect, giving as a result a good, fast comedy film.

The plots are not startlingly new, but novel features abound, and there is no place in any of the films shown for review where the action drags or the interest wanes.

The comedies are cleverly titled. Those already seen are: "Cruel and Unusual," "Keep Moving," "Hold Fast," "Going Up" and "Look Out Below." They are all to be classed as of the slapstick order, but their humor is fresh and clean. Elaborate sets and beautiful exterior views enhance the attractiveness of the releases.

The titles—and this is something out of the ordinary—have a direct bearing on the story in each case. The stories, of course, are impossible, but they are presented in the way which makes us all laugh; and not only laugh, but feel a certain sympathy for Musty in his incredible adventures.

It is too much to say that comedies such as these strike any human element, but they certainly strike the human risibilities, and that is just what the exhibitor needs to fill out a program the kernel of which is something on the dramatic line. Comedies such as these make an excellent relief to the average five-reel dramatic feature, and almost any exhibitor will find them useful.

"THE STRANGE CASE OF MARY PAGE—EPISODE 5"

(Essanay-General—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THE element of mystery is skillfully balanced and the solution kept as dark as ever in this episode, entitled "The Alienist." Henry Walthall continues his accomplished and convincing portrayal of Langdon, who is defending Mary Page in her trial for the murder of Pollock.

Edna Mayo, besides doing some strenuous emotional acting, wears a number of stunning "Lucile" gowns, which ought to delight feminine picture goers.

The makers of this serial hit upon a novel idea in telling most of the story through testimony in the courtroom. In this episode it is the Doctor who relates from the stand his experience with Mary Page's peculiar mental aberration, which he describes as due to "repressed psychosis."

She is shown rushing out of her home in a frenzy after a violent struggle with her father. Langdon finds her lying unconscious on the ground, and takes her to the Doctor, who operates, but fails to find that the trouble is insanity.

THE OPERATION FAILS TO CLEAR THE MYSTERY

Again, the Doctor's wife is in the millinery shop when Pollock attempts to force Mary Page to agree to his plan. When she refuses, they struggle, and she becomes violent again.

The Doctor continues his testimony until a juror, seized with illness, collapses in the jury box. The episode ends with Langdon in the theatre manager's office.

He finds there bits of a letter from the manager to Pollock. Piecing them together he discovers that Pollock was warned to keep away from the theatre and Mary Page.

Parts of the preceding episode are picked up in this one, for the sake of recalling to the spectator the previous action, and this tends to eliminate confusion, though some confusion is inevitable in so complicated a plot.

Of course, any photoplay in which Henry Walthall appears, has a screen star of great ability, but it ought to be said also that the whole cast is excellent.

We have already mentioned Miss Mayo. Others are Sydney Ainsworth, Harry Dunkinson, John Cossar, Frank Dayton, Frankie Raymond, Edmund F. Cobb, Frank Hamilton, Arthur Bates, and Frances Benedict.

Careful direction by J. Charles Haydon brings out effectively the points of the story.

"THE ADVENTURES OF KATHLYN"

(Selig—Ten Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

EVERYBODY remembers the first moving picture serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and its great popularity. The Selig company has uncorked another brand-new idea in condensing the original twenty-seven reels of this continued photoplay to ten thousand feet. The new version was given a trade showing in Chicago, and opened last Saturday at the Chicago Fine Arts theatre for an indefinite run.

It was a man's size job to eliminate seventeen reels and retain ten that would set forth a straightforward, interesting story. Those who had this assignment deserve unlimited credit for their efforts.

There is an occasional break in the continuity of the plot, but any one with average intelligence can readily bridge the gaps.

The idea has been to boil out the trivial and unnecessary parts, leaving a residue of big thrills and strong climaxes. The only drawback in this scheme is that the suspense element is minimized.

While it formerly took Kathlyn two reels to extricate herself from each danger, she now manages to escape after a few hundred feet. But she is immediately plunged into another dilemma, so interest in her predicaments is constantly rekindled.

The see-sawing of the heroine between success and failure is hard on the emotions, and ten reels of it leave the feelings pretty much lacerated.

Had it been possible to amputate the story an additional two or three thousand feet, it would have been advisable, but the production had already been pared to the quick.

The fertile imagination of Harold McGrath supplied the innumerable plot complexities revolving about Kathlyn, an American girl in East India, who becomes involved in the political intrigues of a petty principality, and experiences scores of dangers.

Hundreds of wild animals are used in the production, and Kathlyn Williams' well-known ability to subdue lions, tigers and other jungle creatures, is constantly featured.

The sets are unusually elaborate, and the entire picture has been done on a large scale. The supporting cast, including Thomas Santschi and Charles Clary, is strong.

"THE PAWN OF FATE"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

GEORGE BEBAN, actor, and Maurice Tourneur, director, in combination have produced a worthy and finished picture. Mr. Beban does some telling work in his rendering of Pierre, Norman peasant who is deceived into thinking he is a genius, and induced to go to Paris, only to be humiliated there by the artist. The latter's motive is visible enough: He is in love with Marcine, wife of the peasant.

Although the opportunity for anything more than whimsical character work is not given Mr. Beban until the moment of his humiliation, he rises to the chance when it does come. A terrific fight between the artist and himself is staged, a whole room is wrecked, and the artist is finally seriously wounded. Beban's impersonation throughout is sympathetic, and the fine points of his acting "get over" to the audience with excellent effect.

His support is far above the average. John Davidson's interpretation of the role of the artist is an excellent study, and Doris Kenyon is seen to fine advantage as Marcine. There are also a number of striking types in the picture.

We have referred already to the fine quality of Mr. Tourneur's work as director. It deserves detailed comment, not only because of its artistic quality, but chiefly because it is certain to win profound interest, if not applause, from spectators. The things we shall remember longest about his direction here are the introductory scene showing Beban silhouetted against the pink of an evening sky, his driving home of his sheep in the twilight glow, the excellent stage effects showing Paris by night, and the street scene in Normandy.

Some of the incidental touches in this picture are equal to any we have seen. One shows a dog, a remarkably intelligent animal, rounding up the sheep in a fashion that makes an audience respond immediately. Another is a series of scenes revealing Pierre's tender care of his animals. He finds a lamb with its leg broken, takes it home and binds up the broken limb carefully. Then the lamb licks his face in gratitude. The picture is filled with touches of this kind, and they are evidences of superior direction, as well as of superior authorship, the credit for the latter going to Mr. Beban.

The story in itself is not very robust, but it has been built evidently with an eye to Mr. Beban's abilities. The material presented has been worked over several times, and as a whole is nothing more than a version of the eternal triangle. But Mr. Tourneur has vivified it with his artistic direction, and Mr. Beban has created an appealing and finely-drawn characterization.

"FIGHTING BLOOD"

(William Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A LOT of what is called heart interest has been worked into this romance of a fighting parson. William Farnum has the stellar role, and it is one eminently fitted to his abilities. His struggle to turn the other cheek when his enemies taunt him wins sympathy; and his prowess in hand-to-hand combat arouses admiration.

There are several of these fight scenes, but the most striking takes place in a saloon where Mr. Farnum, in the character of Lem Hardy, finds that he must whip the camp bully before he will be allowed to preach. The fight is excellently staged with a view to working up the maximum interest in the spectator's mind; and this it does in a fashion that has probably never been excelled in the long history of fistic battles on the screen.

After Hardy whips the bully, the latter becomes his friend, and sits, revolver in hand, keeping order in the church service while Hardy preaches. Of such material is the plot made, and there is no question whatever about its power over an audience.

Most of the credit goes, of course, to Mr. Farnum. He has created a real character—one worth creating. Splendid support is provided him by Dorothy Bernard in particular. She appears as Evie, with whom Hardy is in love. Their ways separate when he is railroaded to prison on a false charge of theft. Later, after she has married a man responsible for Hardy's conviction they meet in the West, where Evie has sunk very low and become a character in her husband's gambling house. Her rescue from this life is effected when her husband is killed; and her reformation begins at the church service as Hardy preaches the story of the Magdalene. Miss Bernard's interpretation is unusually sympathetic and appealing.

Others in the cast are Willard Louis, Fred Huntley, Henry J. Herbert, H. A. Barrows, Dick Le Strange.

Oscar C. Apfel wrote the story and provided effective direction. The Mojave desert in California supplied many of the backgrounds, and others were taken in the San Bernadino mountains. Once or twice the theme tends to become melodramatic, but its total effect is strongly dramatic.

WALLY VAN STAGES SCENE WITH 250 EXTRAS FOR VITAGRAPH SUBJECT BY THE WILLIAMSONS

WALLY VAN, Vitagraph director, filmed one of the most difficult scenes in his motion picture experience recently, when he used 250 people in a masquerade ball scene in the big studio in Flatbush, Long Island. An orchestra of thirty pieces furnished the dance music, and a number of professional dancers did turns that were well worth seeing. In taking the scenes Mr. Van introduced some new and original lighting effects.

SCENE SHOWING SECTION OF BALL ROOM SET IN COMING VITAGRAPH SERIAL BY C. N. AND A. M. WILLIAMSON

On account of the number of people engaged, and the consequent noise and confusion, Van was put to his utmost to bring order out of the chaos. Standing on a raised platform with a huge megaphone he shouted himself hoarse.

At least a dozen rehearsals were necessary before he could obtain the desired ballroom gaiety and abandon.

The scene is one in a new serial by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, in which Earle Williams is featured.

The results stamp Wally Van as a director of drama. Heretofore he has been known for his comedy work both before and beside the camera.

"THE PRICE OF HAPPINESS"

(Equitable-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

ENVY of wealth has served as a subject for numerous photoplays, but its endurance does not seem to have been dulled, for it appears in "The Price of Happiness" as the mainspring of the action.

Mary Boland, the central figure, has the role of a shoemaker's wife, who longs for the happiness brought, as she imagines, by money.

Three girl friends of hers—an opera singer, a millionaire's wife, and a lady of pleasure—excite her constant envy, and she comes very near succumbing to temptation in the form of a rich society man.

Her disillusionment is brought about by a melodramatic train of incidents, in which she discovers that her friends were not what they seemed at all. Then she is quite content to go back to her husband's humble shop.

Miss Boland is an appealing figure as the wife. She does not photograph especially well, but her work is nearly always expressive and sympathetic. Carlotta De Felice, as the woman of the underworld; Marion Singer and Enid Francis, as the two other girl friends; Roland Bottomley, as the society man; David Wall, as the husband, perform capably. Others are Albert Bechtel, and Adolphe Majou.

As you have probably guessed already, there are a number of scenes depicting gay night-life, in one of which a couple of dancers appear in semi-undress.

The sets are not particularly elaborate, but they serve well enough. Edmond Lawrence, who directed the picture, keeps to conventional lines of direction, by which we mean he does not attempt any strikingly original effects. Nevertheless, the story moves along smoothly, and without jarring the spectator.

Like many other so-called sex pictures, "The Price of Happiness" borders on the sensational, without actually being so. It does point a good moral.

INDUSTRIAL CHANGES NAME TO ROTHACKER FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER announces that hereafter his company will be known as the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, successors to the Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago.

In explanation Mr. Rothacker states that the primary reason for this combination is that various companies have been formed and named to trespass upon the name "Industrial," and as a direct result the trade has in several instances been confused, and in a number of specific cases people have actually done business under the impression that they were dealing with the Rothacker Company, whereas, as a matter of fact, they had been misled by a name intended to trade upon the prestige gained for the word industrial by the Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago.

Mr. Rothacker desires to give publicity to the fact that the Industrial Moving Picture Company, as an Illinois corporation, will be continued and maintained, and that violators of its corporate rights will be vigorously prosecuted.

The policy and plans of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company will be given in detail to the trade at the time the formal opening of their new laboratory and studios is officially announced, which will be very soon, probably about April 1.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Burglar's Dilemma." (Biograph. Mon., Feb. 28.)—Here is a re-issue, with a notable cast and a good story. A novelist's brother becomes jealous of the other's popularity, attacks the author in his home, and believes he has killed him.

He hides just as a boy, who is in the clutches of a burglar, enters through a window. The guilty man allows the boy to be suspected of the crime, and the lad, put through the third degree, is about to confess, when the supposed dead man comes to life.

The brother accepts forgiveness, and the novelist takes care of the lad and saves him from further contact with the burglar. In the cast are Lionel Barrymore, Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Robert Harron and Charles H. West.

"What Happened to Peggy." (Biograph. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 29.)—An interesting story built on the well-worn theme of a mix-up in identities. Jack and Peggy, who have never seen each other, are destined to wed by Jack's mother.

They are to be brought together for the first time at a house party. A servant working at the college which Peggy attends, steals some jewelry and escapes.

At a railroad station where they stop for luncheon, the girl changes coats with Peggy, and when the alarm goes out Peggy is held as the thief, while the real criminal goes on and impersonates Peggy at the house party.

The deception is discovered, however, and when Jack and Peggy, who have now become acquainted, reach the house, the servant escapes from a bedroom window. She jumps into an automobile and flees, pursued by Jack and the police.

A freight train bars her at a crossing, and she is captured. Claire McDowell, Vola Smith, Jose Ruben, May Adams, May Capwell and Mrs. C. Wallace are in the cast.

"Politeness Pays." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 19.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"The House of Surprise." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 29.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Sammy Bennett, son of a millionaire, disguises himself as a tramp, and goes to the country in search of adventure. He enters the grounds belonging to Ruth Wilton, an heiress, who has left the city to escape her fortune-hunting suitors.

Thinking that he is a burglar, she shoots at him, wounding him slightly. Remorseful, she nurses him back to health, falling in love with him during the process. When she discovers his identity, she marries him, knowing that he is not in love with her fortune.

Elizabeth Burbridge and John Junior are the leads.

Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of London." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., Mar. 1.)—Five hundred feet showing sketches of interesting places in London, the balance of the reel made up of scenes taken of the winter sports of Montreal.

"Beyond the Law." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Mar. 4.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Moir and MacGreggor are partners in the ownership of an Alaskan gold mine. When they have cleaned up all the ore, Moir locks his partner in a shanty, and leaves him there to die.

MacGreggor's daughter, Hattie, suspects foul play, and enlists the aid of Rivers, another miner. Rivers finds MacGreggor, and hearing his story, kills Moir. Taking the gold, the two go back to the settlement, where Hattie is married to her father's rescuer.

In the cast are E. H. Calvert, Marguerite Clayton, Hugh Thompson, and Jack Meredith.

"Winning the Widow." (Kalem. Tues., Feb. 29.)—There is nothing more funny than the spectacle of Lloyd V. Hamilton in his eccentric role of Ham, attempting to look coy and kittenish.

The opportunities furnished him in this comedy for such actions are plentiful enough to warrant it a laughable reception.

Save for a portion of padding, "Winning the Widow" offers a lively story besides, and then there is Bud to furnish added amusement.

"A Riddle in Rascals." (Kalem. Wed., Mar. 1.)—A comedy written and produced by William Beaudine, featuring Ethel Teare, who is quite unable to bear the brunt of such a trite plot.

The scenes are too long and many of them bear a certain sameness to one another that grows tiresome. Jack MacDermott plays opposite pretty Ethel.

"The Girl Telegrapher's Nerve." (Kalem. Sat., Mar. 4.)—A railroad story produced by Guy Coombs, with Anna Nielson in the girl telegrapher's part.

The reel has a good bit of suspense, is well worked out and has a mildly stirring climax. The photography, however, is quite poor, while the engines employed in the chase are very much out of date.

"The Uplift." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., Feb. 17.)—A drama of underworld life depicting the reformation of two sisters. It is by Clay M. Greene and has a good cast including Helen Wier, Helen Greene and Francis Joyner.

The picture is interesting in some respects, chiefly as to theme and character development, but there is an over abundance of padding with a large number of street scenes in which the players do nothing but enter and exit. Photography and setting are highly acceptable.

"A Temporary Husband." (Lubin. Sat., Feb. 19.)—One of the best comedies that Billie Reeves has appeared in for some time. Mark Swan is the author, and the humor in his story, and particularly in his subtitles, is bountiful. Carrie Reynolds heads the support.

"The Repentant." (Lubin. Mon., Feb. 21.)—A pleasant drama which, though it gives little heed to time, leaves a gratifying impression.

It shows the manner in which gladness was brought into a man's life by religion. L. C. Shumway and Jay Morely in two of the principal roles do good work.

Leon Kent wrote the scenario and his story moves with a swiftness that is most satisfying.

"The Grinning Skull." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Feb. 28.)—This is a good conventional drama, possessing an interesting story, and with acting occasionally overdrawn, but usually excellent. The interiors and locations are exceptionally well selected. The directing was effective.

Lewis Cody takes the principal part, that of an illegitimate son, and his work has quiet forcefulness. The support, which is strong, is given by Eugenie Besserer, Virginia Kirtley, Marion Warner, Fred Hearne, Leo Pierson, and Richard Morris.

Donald Harvey, the sponsor for a very successful charity, enlists the support of several wealthy people, since they know he possesses a large income that makes him eligible.

They still entertain him when it is found that he never had a father, but they dismiss him abruptly when his income is cut off. The only ones who befriend him are a minister and his daughter. Later Harvey comes into a large fortune, and the society sycophants who snubbed him, try to regain his good-will, but he marries the minister's daughter.

"The Uncut Diamonds." (Selig. Sat., Mar. 4.)—There is a good final punch in this release. The type of story, and the capable acting ought to make it an acceptable subject. There are improbabilities, but they are not glaring ones.

The cast is composed of Fritzie Brunette, Edward Piel, Frank Clark, and Lillian Clark.

On the recommendation of the district attorney, a young girl accused of complicity in a diamond theft, is released on probation, and given a position as maid to the daughter of a diamond merchant. Through Jen's influence, Chuck Wilson, her sweetheart, who is an ex-crook, reforms. One night a large packet of diamonds are discovered to have disappeared from the dealer's safe. Wilson is accused, but he proves that "the diamond merchant himself took the gems while walking in his sleep."

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"The Happy Masquerader." (American. Three reels. Tues., Feb. 29.)—An interesting release with a theme fundamentally old, but cleverly refurbished, and well-acted by the principals. The suspense is worked out with good results, and the general tone of the piece is high.

Winnifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen are uniformly good, and the rest of the players, with the exception of occasional over-acting by George Fields, furnish excellent support. Charles Newton, Dodo Newton, and Ward McAllister appear.

As the result of a wager, Richard Thorn changes places with a taxi chauffeur for a period of three months. Thorn wants to prove that a man can be happy, whatever his surroundings may be. The chauffeur is continually drunk while posing as Thorn, and by threatening a banker with financial ruin, forces him to promise his daughter in marriage to him. At the last minute Thorn prevents this and marries the girl himself.

"Johnny's Jumble." (Beauty. Wed., Mar. 1.)—This is one of the drawing-room farces usually produced by this company. The situations are humorous and free from vulgarity. The players are ideally suited for this kind of production. The cast is composed of John Sheehan, Carol Halloway, John Steppling, Marie Van Tassell, Mary Talbot, Rae Berger, and Dick Rosson.

When some unexpected guests drop in on Johnny and Carol, a young married couple, they are in a panic, for they have no cook. Johnny rushes to an employment agency, but enters the wrong door, and gets into a matrimonial bureau.

The girl he engages to cook for him thinks that he wants to marry her, and innumerable complications arise, until the true state of affairs is discovered.

"Love, Dynamite and Baseballs." (Vogue Thurs., Mar. 2.)—This slapstick comedy not shown for review; the story follows. A count and a baseball pitcher both try to win the hand of a girl. After fighting a duel with the Count, using baseballs for weapons, and employing other rough-and-tumble methods, the slab artist finally proves to the girl that he is the one she loves.

The cast is made up of Jack Dillon, Arthur Moon, Priscilla Dean, and Russell Powell.

"Embers." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Thurs., Mar. 2.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Margy of the Foothills." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., Mar. 3.)—The cast of the "Buck Parvin" series has turned its attention to straight Western drama, and this is their first release of this kind.

The players make excellent Western characters, but are somewhat limited by the conventionality of the story. The first two reels drag in spots, but the third has many good thrills.

Unusually beautiful locations, presented by gilt-edged photography add much to the interest of the piece.

Art Acord, Dixie Stratton, Lawrence Peyton, Joe Massey, and Charles James are in the cast.

Margy Gregg, the daughter of a ranch owner on the Mexican border, numbers among her suitors Ben Marlin, a clean-cut young American, and Carrillo, an influential man of Spanish descent.

Finding that he is making no headway with the girl, Carrillo has his gang of bandits kidnap her. Discovering this plot, Marlin overtakes the marauders, and in a desperate fight with them, is wounded.

Experiencing a change of heart, Carrillo beats back his own men, and saves Margy and her brave lover.

"Dad's College Widow." (Beauty. Sun., Mar. 5.)—Using a perennially recurring theme, the players have in this instance managed to squeeze some new laughs into old situations. The cast that did this consists of Orral Humphrey, Lucille Ward, Simone Cavens, Dick Rosson, and King Clark.

Hearing that his son is infatuated with the "college widow," the old man arrives on the scene, and is himself smitten with her charms. But it doesn't get him anything, for his enterprising offspring cops the queen.

"All Bowled Up." (Vogue. Sun., Mar. 5.)—This slapstick comedy not shown for review; the story follows. Two pals have two things in common—they both love to bowl, and they both love Madge.

Each tries to foil the other by slapstick methods, and finally one of them is blown out of sight by a bomb he had intended for the destruction of his pal.

The cast includes Rube Miller, Madge Kirby, Alice Neice, and Arthur Tavares.

"The Shrine of Happiness." (Balboa. Five reels.)—Exquisite hand coloring has lent unusual beauty to this film, especially in the exterior scenes, in which the luxurious vegetation of California is shown at its best.

The story, however, is of the most conventional type, and nothing is done by either actors or principals to lift it out of the ordinary.

Jackie Saunders is featured as the daughter of a miner, who dies, and leaves her a paper addressed to a wealthy man in the city.

She makes her way to this man's home, and discovers that he is a former partner of her father, under obligations to him for his life. The girl is received, given a home and a fortune, and educated.

Her benefactor and his younger brother both fall in love with her, but she loves the older man. He thinks the disparity of ages too great, however, and gives her to his brother, whom she consents to marry only because she believes it will make the older man happy.

On the eve of the wedding, the bridegroom-elect discovers the true state of the girl's feelings, and he magnanimously disappears, leaving a note which makes the couple happy. Paul Gilmore and William Conklin are also featured in the cast.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Two reels. Twelfth Episode. Week of Feb. 28.)—Richard Stanton is again the hero of "The Milk Battle," neither Tom nor Bruce Larnigan appearing at all.

Why they are both left out is a question not to be solved, but the changing of hero is apt to weaken the interest.

There are several scenes here showing realistic strike riots and the two reels by way of their sensational action build to a strong climax, which point arrives when the head of the Milk Trust receives a knife thrust that was intended for Dorothy Maxwell.

"The Lords of High Decision." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., Feb. 28.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of February 19.

"Cupid Trims His Lordship." (Nestor. Mon., Feb. 28.)—One of Al Christie's favorite plots, yet an excellent subject.

Lee Moran as his Lordship and Eddie Lyons as the preferred suitor are rivals for the hand of Betty Compson. Lee makes a most eccentric and uproarious figure of the bogus lord. Harry Rattenberry, Stella Adams and Gus Alexander are others.

"Lord John's Journal." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Feb. 29.)—This chapter entitled "The Eye of Horus" has considerable action that is exciting and quite a bit that is too involved to insure great enjoyment.

The members of the Grey Sisterhood succeed in procuring both the valuable diamonds, one of which they steal from Marie Odell. But Lord John sets his wits to work and after much plotting and several hot encounters with the guardians of the stones he succeeds in procuring both.

"Some Heroes." (Imp. Split reel. Tues., Feb. 29.)—A fairly good comedy number produced by Edward Sedgwick, featuring himself and Victor Potel. It makes much of a burlesque fire scene, and has much business throughout that is quite funny. On the same reel with "The Land Above the Clouds."

"The Land Above the Clouds." (Imp. Split reel. Tues., Feb. 29.)—Showing various views of water-falls, mountain ranges and other interesting places concerning Pike's Peak, Colorado.

"Blue Blood but Black Skins." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Mar. 1.)—Dan Russell, Louise Orth, Ray Griffith and a large supporting company appear here, all in black face.

The reels have a good bit of funny acrobatic action while the plot is quite straight enough to hold the laughs together. There are minutes when the business grows a little tiresome but on the whole it is a good number.

"The Heart of Bonita." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., Mar. 2.)—A Lynn Reynolds production laid in Central America, concerning a revolution and a romance.

The scenes, photography and atmosphere are convincing, in some cases being very pretty.

There is a good bit of comedy in the opening scenes, but it does not last long and afterwards the story becomes uninteresting and vague, uninteresting because of the absence of hero or villain and vague because of weak development. Myrtle Gonzalez, Val Paul and Fred Church are the leads.

"Love Laughs at the Law." (Joker. Thurs., Mar. 2.)—Concerning the love affair of the son of the town sheriff and the leading chorus girl in a traveling and broken theatrical troupe. Allen Curtis directed his usual company in this and while it amuses at times it hardly measures up to the Joker standard.

"Shackles." (Big U. Thurs., Mar. 2.)—Not shown for review.

"The Hoax House." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Mar. 3.)—Fine comedy at the start and after a little uninteresting action fine comedy all the rest of the way.

King Baggot and Edna Hunter furnish the fun. They set up as psychics and get all mixed up in their prophesies, causing two family upheavals. Ray Schrock is the writer and Henry McRae Webster the director.

MARGUERITE COURTOT, GAUMONT STAR, AND HER FAVORITE PET, "DOLLY DIMPLES," PHOTOGRAPHED IN FLORIDA

"In the Heart of the Shell." (Rex. Fri., Mar. 3.)—An H. C. Matthews drama with an appeal directed toward juveniles in particular. Baby Early does excellent work while Elsie Albert is featured with her. The photography is somewhat hazy in places.

"The Lion's Breath." (Nestor. Fri., Mar. 3.)—Not shown for review.

"The One Woman." (Bison. Three reels. Sat., Mar. 4.)—This is a fair drama of smugglers and the secret service with a strong love interest added by the secret service agent and the leader of the opium gang.

The interest lags somewhat at first, as the action is too full of unnecessary cutbacks. However, there is a good vein of suspense which heightens as the climax is reached.

Edna Maison, Douglas Gerard and Tom Delmar are the principals. Delmar wrote the scenario which was produced by Henry Otto.

"Uncle Sam at Work," No. 11. (Powers. Sat., Mar. 4.)—Not shown for review.

"Saved by a Song." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Mar. 5.)—Ben Wilson appears here as the ex-convict who wants to and does finally go straight.

His production is very sentimental, and a little overdone, while little opportunity occurs for character development.

The scenes are very good, particularly the grocery store setting, and the country scenes. A. H. Bushby, Dorothy Phillips, Joseph Girard and Peter Pan comprise the supporting cast.

"The Blackmailer." (Laemmle. Sun., Mar. 5.)—Showing the neat manner in which a woman refuted the malicious attempts of a blackmailer.

Aside from the fact that the picture requires a great deal of explanation through subtitles, that cut into the scenes, the subject is easily up to the standard of all Rupert Julian's works.

Calder Johnstone prepared the scenario, while Julian and Elsie Jane Wilson are practically the only members of the cast.

"Gertie's Awful Fix." (L-Ko. Sun., Mar. 5.)—An average L-Ko concerning the mixup which the flirting of two married couples causes. It is laid in a hotel and the situations are familiar, once or twice quite risque but withal very funny.

It develops that the whole thing has been a dream in the end. Gertrude Selby, Reggie and Dave Morris are the principals.

PREMIER RELEASE

"The Impersonation"

IN FIVE REELS

Featuring this charming bit of femininity

MISS NEVA GERBER

ASSISTED BY SUCH WELL KNOWN SCREEN ARTISTS AS LAMAR JOHNSTONE—REX DOWNS—MAY CRUZE AND OTHERS OF EQUAL NOTE

Using the European war as a background the author has succeeded in evolving a plot which, while embracing the leading features of the great conflict, does not give offense to any of the participants.

In the role of Rhoda Lyons, a Western girl who is studying abroad when the war breaks and unwillingly drawn into the maelstrom of conflicting forces, Miss Gerber combines the daintiness of innocent girlhood with the intense dramatic action of the Western character, which seeks obstacles for the sheer joy of overcoming them.

WM. PARSONS (Smiling Bill)

President and General Manager

National Film Corporation of America

Announces the making of

King Cole Comedies

for

The Pathé Exchange, Inc.

First Release About April 1st

EIGHTEEN single reel subjects with "Smiling Bill" as the principal have been released on General, Mutual and Pathé programs, and without an exception, were the most popular releases of the period. Exchangemen heard many compliments from exhibitors regarding these comedies, and but one kind of complaint, the lack of more of these subjects on their respective programs. Every exhibitor who showed one subject used every one that he could secure.

With better facilities, better stories, better directors and supporting people, the King Cole Comedies will be far superior to past releases.

STOP—LOOK—LISTEN

Sooner or later you will need King Cole Comedies to build up your program, and here's a tip—Book these comedies before your competitor has an opportunity.

Studios: Hollywood, Cal., and Tampa, Fla.

The British Edition OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Advertising rates very low.

Sample copies on request.

THE British edition of "Motion Picture News" is put forth with a serious purpose and is the result of considerable preparation.

Two years ago we contemplated such an edition.

Our motive was quite natural. Since the British exhibitor books regularly so many American pictures it simply follows that an American picture journal, comprehensive in news and advertising matter, must be useful to him.

TRUE, the British journals also cover this field. But we are at the fountain head of American news. We review the pictures first, we give all the advance news of production, we are on the ground with a large staff whose work covers first hand the whole field of American production.

Our idea has never been to compete with the British journals, but rather to be an adjunct to them. They are in intimate touch with the British exhibitor and renter: we bear this same relation to the American maker of pictures which concern so largely the British exhibitor and renter. We are only interested in bridging this gap.

Two years ago a member of our staff visited London, and returned with several plans. One involved negotiations with a prominent London publishing house to issue a combination British and American journal.

All of these plans have resolved themselves into our present one, which seems most direct and practical.

FIRST, we take all the subject matter of each week's American edition of "Motion Picture News" and eliminate the news matter and departments which are not pertinent to the British exhibitor and the British market in general. We eliminate, in other words, the useless reading.

To this more or less condensed information we add—and this is the very heart of our plan—an honest estimate each week of the American pictures which are about to be exported to Great Britain.

THIS reviewing work is in charge of a British film man, Reginald Warde. He sees each week all American releases. He sees them through British eyes and through the eyes of the British exhibitor and his sectional needs. This service the British exhibitor can get in no other way.

The British edition goes to a selected list of 5000 exhibitors throughout the United Kingdom.

WHERE DO YOUR PROFITS GO?

Rita Jolivet

ON occasions when your box-office receipts fall like the mercury in a thermometer and you discover that the other fellow is getting your patrons away from you, have you ever had a heart to heart talk with yourself to learn the reason why?

HAS it occurred to you that his success is ALL IN THE PICTURES, and wouldn't it exasperate you to know that in a great many instances he pays no more for pictures "with a pull" than you are compelled to pay for pictures that are poor and possess no drawing power?

SCORES and hundreds of exhibitors find themselves in this position today—and through no fault of their own. The door is closed to what they want.

HAPPILY, the cure for this condition is in sight. You can increase your profits by buying right—in the OPEN MARKET and the first six of our WEEKLY SPECIALS to be released in March and April are not offered as features possibly good, but as features ABSOLUTELY AND INCONTESTABLY good. That is the point we most insist on.

FIRST. The distinguished actor, MR. HAMILTON REVELLE, will be seen in the gripping, vital drama entitled "SINS OF THE FATHER," in four parts.

SECOND. MISS RITA JOLIVET, the beautiful survivor of the "Lusitania," in the exciting, thrilling drama entitled "HER REDEMPTION," in which the big shipwreck scene is the principal thrill, in four parts.

THIRD. "DENISE," by Alexander Dumas, which is an adaptation of the greatest play of human emotions, in four parts.

FOURTH. RITA JOLIVET in "LOVE'S SACRIFICE." An uniquely beautiful spectacle with equally unique situations powerfully acted, in six parts.

Hamilton Revelle

FIFTH. "A WOMAN'S AWAKENING" from the story by Abel Gance. Something entirely new in screen drama, which bids fair to arouse the patriotic spirit, in five parts.

SIXTH. "UNDER THE MASK," by M. Thiery, featuring MARIE CELIAT, a drama which in point of dramatic intensity outrivals "Camille." Coupled with "THE POISONED KISS," featuring MISS RITA JOLIVET. A wonderful program.

Universal Camera
For Motion Photography

A view of the instrument assembled without the case.
The mechanism is as carefully and scientifically constructed as the movement of a standard watch.

They Made Us Do It!

The popularity of the Universal Camera has caused a demand for these instruments far beyond our ability to supply them.

Every Camera has been sold from one to ten weeks before it was completed.

To better meet this demand we have secured larger quarters—more than four times the amount of floor space—and we will immediately double our equipment and capacity.

We have always maintained the very finest workmanship and highest efficiency in the construction of every Camera that we have ever made, and every instrument that we have sold is giving entire satisfaction to its owner.

Every instrument is backed by an ironclad guarantee, the purchaser takes no risk when he buys a Universal Camera.

Send now for our demonstrational catalogue, and place your order as early as you can conveniently do so.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

57—Under question 56 you state in the answer that the right angle carbon setting as shown in Fig. 40 is the most efficient from the illuminating point of view. If this is so, why isn't the right angle arc generally used and applied for projection with D. C. at least?

Ans.—It is true that the right angle arc offers the greatest exposure of the positive crater to the condensing lenses, as illustrated in Fig. 40.

You can almost conceive that the positive crater could be consumed in such a manner that it would be parallel with the plano surface of the rear condenser which would, of course, offer the greatest possible exposure of the light, and the highest efficiency.

It is, however, a practical impossibility to consume the positive crater so that it will give a steady illumination when its surface is parallel with the condenser, operating with the line of projection on a horizontal line, as illustrated in Fig. 40.

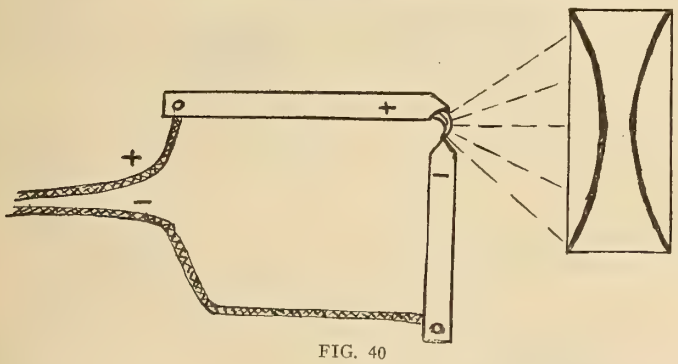

FIG. 40

The reasons offered for the inability of properly consuming the carbon so as to expose the crater like Fig. 40, is the presence of the magnetic blow-out effect as well as the increased lifting effect of the heated air, about the arc, which tends to make the arc climb towards the top edge of the positive crater.

We can, however, conceive that if we took the entire projector and tilted it forward so that the positive carbon, as illustrated in Fig. 40, with the condensing lenses would sit in the vertical position, that the upper carbon under this condition would hold the crater so as to project under maximum efficiency in the downward direction through the condensing lenses.

We know that such a condition of projection is most unusual and would not be called for under normal conditions, and there would still be the disturbing element of the magnetic blow-out effect.

Experience proves that the magnetic blow-out effect on the right angle arc with the positive carbon sitting perpendicular, is not great enough to disturb the illumination from the positive crater until after the amperes at the arc has been increased above 35.

58—Is there a condition under which the right angle arc with the positive carbon set perpendicular could be used to advantage?

Ans.—Where it is necessary to project an image on a horizontal screen which may be either transparent when viewed from below or opaque when viewed from above, the right angle carbon setting will be found proper and very efficient.

Such practical condition may be called for with sidewalk projection, or if it should be necessary to illuminate a transparent roof from above where the roof might be constructed of leaded glass.

Another condition is such as the illumination of certain parts of a building from above, or in warfare, the right angle carbon setting with the positive carbon in the vertical position would be of advantage if it was desired to illuminate the ground or any object from an aeroplane, for instance.

59—Judging by the answer to the foregoing question, it looks as if under certain conditions it would be absolutely necessary to operate with the positive carbon sitting in the perpendicular position which requires the right angle arc setting.

Is there any means that could be employed in conjunction with this carbon setting to secure stability of the arc when the amperage flowing over the arc is more than 35?

Ans.—Yes, the control of the magnetic effect on the arc has been known to a few experimenters and designers skilled in the art and they have employed a certain combination of magnet coils and in some instances magnet cores, of either the permanent or electro magnetic kind, by means of which an absolutely perfect control of the formation of the positive crater has been obtained with the carbons in any position.

Copyright, 1916, by J. H. Hallberg.

60—Is it necessary to employ the right angle projector arc lamp for motion picture machines?

Ans.—The ordinary motion picture machines as used in theatres don't require the right angle arc lamp because the position of the carbons and the arc lamp relative to the line of projection is generally such that it is not necessary to use a right angle arc lamp in order to get practically full exposure of the positive (+) crater.

There is, however, a new motion picture machine which has been under development for several years, called the "Vanoscope," in which the line of projection is not direct from the arc to the screen but through the medium of a set of rotating prisms or reflectors in which advantage is taken of the higher efficiency obtained through the use of the right angle arc with the positive carbon set vertically.

The arc in this lamp will be under magnetic control and I have recently had the pleasure of conducting the experiments on the magnetic control for the right angle arc of this machine and the results obtained have been wonderful with currents ranging anywhere from 30 to 100 amperes at the crater of the positive vertical carbon.

For the type of machine mentioned, the right angle arc is the more efficient, but with ordinary machines the simpler construction of the regular lamp having the two carbons set in normal alignment is just as satisfactory.

Theatre Building Is Very Active in New Orleans

Since Opening of Two Largest "Legitimate" Houses in the City as Motion Picture Theatres, Practically Every Large Exhibitor Has Thrown His Hat Into the Ring With Announcement of New Amusement Structure Planned

Special to Motion Picture News

New Orleans, La., Feb. 20.

A PERIOD of unprecedented activity in theatre building is on in New Orleans. Since the opening of two of the largest legitimate houses in the city as motion picture houses, practically every large exhibitor in this territory has thrown his hat into the ring with an announcement of a new theatre. Never before in the history of the city has the town been as picture mad as it is at present.

Demand for stronger and better programs, for newer and more up-to-date furnishings, a spoiled public, are principal reasons for the building activity.

At least a dozen new picture houses have opened in New Orleans since January 6. The first to open was the Crescent, for many years a legitimate house, with Paramount Program. Then Ernst Boehringer took over the Greenwall, another large legitimate house, and installed the Triangle.

On the heels of these two events came the announcement of definite plans by the De Soto Building Company for the erection of the Strand theatre in Baronne street.

These details have been published in preceding issues of Motion Picture News. Rapid progress is being made on the site. Announcement of the program to be run is expected from Leo Fellman, president of the building syndicate, within several weeks.

Pearce Interests Announce New Theatre

The Pearce interests are the latest to get into the game with an announcement of a new theatre. They are spending $20,000 in remodelling a building at 908 Canal street, at present occupied by E. Offner, jeweler. The local syndicate will get possession of the building March 1 and will start fitting it up at once.

The style of the Bijou Dream, one of their string of theatres, in St. Charles street, will be carried out in the new Canal street property. The seating capacity will be four hundred and fifty.

Including the sum to be expended on this, their newest picture house, the Pearce syndicate will have spent in excess of $300,000 on motion picture properties in New Orleans. The result of this heavy expenditure is six handsome picture theatres in this city—The Tudor, Trianon, Bijou Dream, Dreamland, Grand and Electric theatres. The total annual rentals paid by the Pearce syndicate will now be $50,000.

Fred W. Pearce is now in New York arranging a number of important details in connection with the proposed extension.

There are a number of other houses to open their doors to the New Orleans public before March 1. Jac Miller, prominent exhibitor of New Orleans, and formerly owner of the Hippodrome theatre, let go that property and has opened his new Empire theatre at 1008 Canal street.

A. F. Billet opened his College theatre in St. Charles street, on February 20. Mr. Billet has a cosy little theatre with a seating capacity of 450 and the Triangle service has been secured.

Within a week announcement of plans for New Orleans' newest and most unique airdome is expected. A company to construct the airdome is being formed now by a number of young business men of New Orleans.

The airdome is to be built at Villere and Lafayette streets and is to have a seating capacity of 2,000. It will be the largest airdome in this territory.

Airdome to Cater to Everybody

According to present plans, the promoters will cater to men, women and children. Smoking benches will be provided amid a clump of trees within the theatre enclosure.

Swings at the rear of the theatre have been provided for the kiddies. It is expected that the new airdome will be opened not later than Easter Sunday.

Percy J. Prosser, Jr., owner of the Keystone theatre in St. Andrew street, is also in the building vortex, and has plans for the erection of a new house in the 900 block of St. Andrew street.

The Saenger Amusement Company, one of the largest exhibiting firms operating in Louisiana, headquarters in Shreveport, recently announced the increase in capital stock to $250,000.

It has been spreading out since, taking over several new houses, including the outright purchase of the Lyceum theatre, Monroe, and the securing of a four year lease on Sugar's theatre in the same city, formerly a legitimate house.

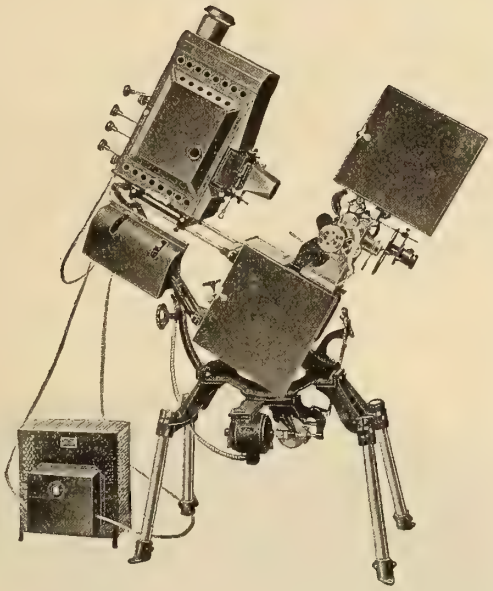
They are also planning to enlarge the Hippodrome theatre in Shreveport. Plans and specifications for the remodelling of their Saenger theatre in Shreveport are fast nearing completion.

These plans call for one of the handsomest theatres in Louisiana. It will have downstairs seating capacity of 820 and a gallery of 520, a total of 1,340 seats.

A. A. Moncrief is opening his newest house, which will be exclusively for colored people, at 1611 Tulane avenue, New Orleans.

G. B. Mars, one of the most progressive of the suburban Crescent City exhibitors, has remodelled his Mars theatre to seat 1,000, and he has also installed many conveniences for the comfort of his patrons.

Theatre Operations in Other Parts



A. J. Zimmermann is opening a house in Ramsey, La. It is yet unnamed.

On February 17, Bert Kern, manager of the Central Amusement Company, opened the remodelled Happy Hour theatre, on Magazine and St. Andrew streets. The house formerly seated 350, now seats 890, and is an example of the progress that suburban exhibitors are making, since the house is a little more than a year old.

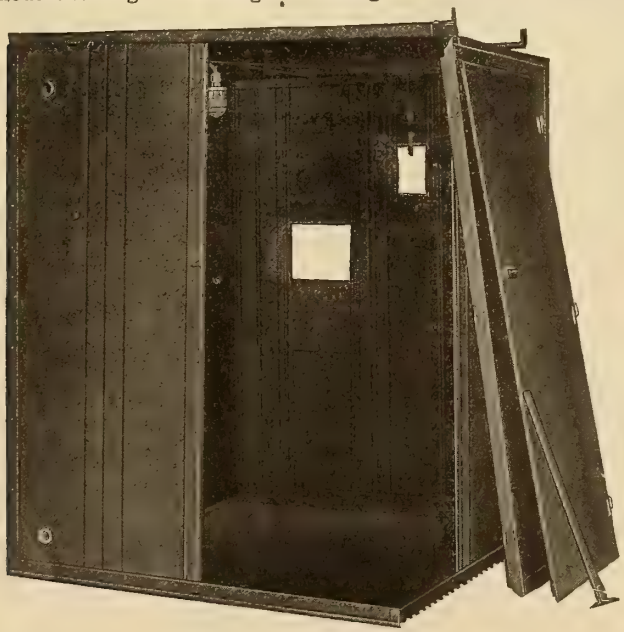
Grinden Booth Meets Wants of Traveling Exhibitors

Structure Is Solidly Built and Can Be Handled in Two Crates—It Weighs 490 Pounds, Is Absolutely Fireproof and Has Been Passed in Every State Except One—Prevention of Removal of Appurtenances Through Front Openings in Absence of Operator Is a Feature



I HAVE had the pleasure of making a personal inspection of the new portable steel projector booth, designed by an expert operator, and manufactured by the Grinden Art Metal Company, 417 to 425 Marcy avenue, Brooklyn, New York.

The illustrations herewith illustrate this new portable booth. It measures 5 feet by 5 feet by 6 feet high, and it has capacity for one machine to be used by traveling exhibitors.

What struck me as being a most important feature is the solidity of construction employed in making this booth, and the solidity is obtained by a special method of ribbing the heavy sheet steel.

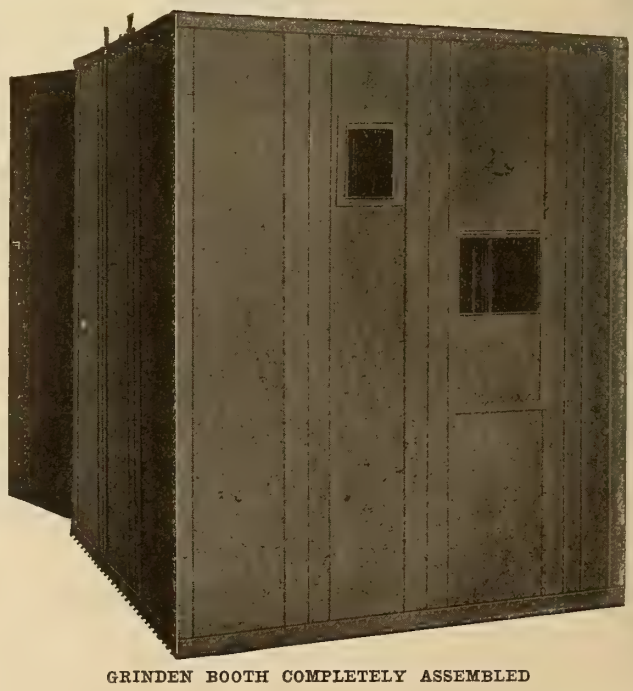
The booth can be handled in two crates, and it weighs only about 490 pounds complete. It is absolutely fireproof, and is passed for use in all states excepting Massachusetts, so I am advised by the manufacturer.

The booth construction is so strong, due to the use of bayonet joints and reinforced seams, that you can stand on top of it without buckling or bending the ceiling.

GRINDEN BOOTH PARTIALLY ASSEMBLED

Another feature is the fact that the shutters covering the projection and out-look openings when dropped from the inside cannot be opened from the outside, making a perfect safe within which the traveling operator can keep his machine, lenses and supplies, so that when the door is locked there is no danger of anyone removing a lens, shutter or part from the equipment through the openings in the front of the booth.

I herewith render the manufacturer's description of this booth, which is clear and explicit, and can highly recommend it for use by the traveling or temporary exhibitor.



The material used consists of patent leveled steel, No. 20 and No. 18 gauge. A neat flat surface, free from waves or buckles, is thus obtained.

Each section is made with a patented lock method, which insures absolutely tight joints. No screws or bolts are used in assembling it.

The flooring is made of ribbed formation giving one-half inch air space under the booth.

It is flat and not wavy, as is usually the case with other booths, and substantial enough to sustain any weight which may be placed on it.

The door is of plate steel reinforced by neatly formed channels, which are welded to the plate and is very substantial.

GRINDEN BOOTH COMPLETELY ASSEMBLED

It is closed by means of a strong coiled spring attached readily to both door and frame.

The drop slide shutters are well reinforced and are held open by means of a cord and fusible link.

They both close by gravity, and by a very simple but ingenious method are locked automatically. It is impossible to open the shutters from the outside.

The opening in the booth for the projection of the picture is so arranged that by raising or lowering the shutter any pitch of the projecting machine can be obtained and at the same time conform to the ruling of the authorities as to the size of it.

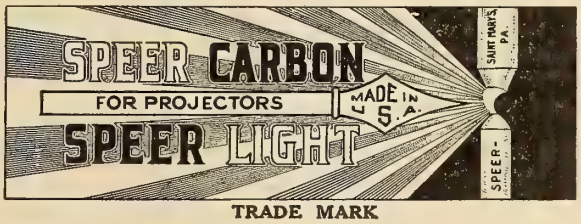
January the 19th, 1916.



Gentlemen:—

Complying with your request for a report on projector carbons shipped us, we are glad to state that we are more than pleased with them. In fact, they are far ahead of any we have used, either American or foreign. We find they burn smoothly, noiselessly and absolutely without flutter, something we have never found in any other make. Our picture is 100% better since we began using them. Wishing you all success, which your product is bound to bring you, and assuring you we shall be glad to recommend Speer Carbons to any who may inquire, we beg to remain

Two cable openings are made, one at the top and bottom. Both openings may be closed by means of a small swinging shutter.

A removable shelf is made for the convenience of the operator, which can be applied by simply locking it in position. When required an opening for ventilation in the roof can be made with a door to close by gravity, operated with the sliding shutters.

All surfaces are thoroughly cleaned and given one coat of brown paint baked on, which practically forms an enamel surface.

One Man Can Erect Booth in Half an Hour

The booth can be assembled easily within a half hour by one man, and with a helper this time can be much shortened. Each section is numbered consecutively. The piece into which each part fits is numbered in a similar manner so that there is no chance for error.

The flooring is first laid, each section fitting easily and snugly into each other, and section No. 1, which forms the first side member, is fastened securely into the floor angles by means of a bayonet lock. Section No. 2 locks into No. 1 in a similar manner.

The remaining sections follow consecutively until the side members are complete. The roof is then placed on in three sections, each one being locked to the other by means of a specially shaped channel key, and the whole roof is then fastened securely to the sides.

The door is hung very quickly, and the closing spring for same fastened by hooking it.

The booths are arranged so that the door can be placed at the back or side of same as desired.

The standard size is 60 inches wide, 60 inches deep, and 74 inches high. Owing, however, to the construction, it is possible to furnish any size other than standard which may be required.

The net weight of the booth complete is 490 pounds. It can be packed in a crate 30 inches wide by 24 inches high, by 6 feet 6 inches long. The crate would weigh approximately 100 pounds. The booth sells for $110.

DEVICES FOR CONVERTING ALTERNATING INTO DIRECT CURRENT

J. A. S., Belle Haven, Va.—I will appreciate your kindness if you will give me a few instructions in reference to moving picture machines. I am now using a Powers 6-A machine, with a rheostat 110 A. C., 30 ampere, 60 cycle, and am getting quite a little flicker from arc on picture.

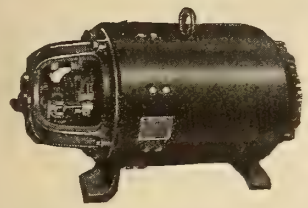
I am not very well posted on the projection part of the business, but have been advised that I should use a machine that would convert A. C. to D. C., and I want to know just what kind of a machine I need, and where I can get the same.

Do you know anything about the B. & H. compensarc or the Fort Wayne compensarc, and where I could get the same? Would such an instrument take care of my machine and save a part of the current now used by rheostat? I will appreciate your kindness in supplying me with this information.

ANS.—The operation of a moving picture machine on 110-volt, 60-cycle current, with a 30-ampere rheostat, is a difficult and unsatisfactory proposition. Not only on account of the excessive flicker, but also on account of the small amount of illumination possible.

If you have a regular Powers 6-A equipment, the rheostat which goes with it is adjustable from 25 to 45 amperes, and in view of the fact that with A. C. your carbons are kept closer together for a 40-volt arc with the rheostat, you may be able to get almost 50 amperes through the standard Powers rheostat, although its rating is 45 maximum.

You have evidently tried to get the best out of the rheostat you have, and under very best conditions A. C. will give a poor light, and you are correctly informed concerning the use of a machine for converting alternating into direct current.



Of the devices for transforming alternating into direct current, the most satisfactory all-round type machines are called motor generators.

These consist of a motor adapted to operate on the A. C. circuit, to which is directly connected a generator so designed that it will operate one motion picture arc adjustable by means of a field controller for a large range of amperes at the arc without loss of current in the usual rheostat necessary to control a moving picture arc.

In other words, these machines are automatic and operate without rheostat in series with the arc, and can also be had for the control of two arc lamps at the same time.

Another type of machine is termed a rotary converter, which is made on only one frame, taking in A. C. on one side through collector rings, and the current serves the purpose of driving the armature, but in addition to accomplishing this effect most part of the current also passes directly through the armature winding, which is inter-connected on both the A. C. and D. C. side, so that it really serves as a rectifier to straighten out the A. C. for use as D. C. in the picture machine.

With this type of machine there is no field controller furnished as it cannot be used for the control of the voltage to an appreciable extent, and therefore the D. C. voltage is maintained practically fixed at about 70 to 80 volts.

A transformer is also furnished with the rotary converter, to which the A. C. line is connected, and on this transformer there are provided steps by means of which the voltage on the D. C. side can be modified somewhat, but these connections are not made so that they can be changed while the machine is in operation, as it is intended that this machine should operate at a constant D. C. voltage after it is once set.

With rotary converters of any make a rheostat such as you are using is employed, and is connected in series with the arc on the D. C. side of the rotary. It is evident that this rheostat consumes the difference between the 50-volt arc recommended for D. C. and the line voltage which may be between 70 and 80.

Taking as an example a system operating with 70 volts D. C., with 50 volts at the arc, we find that the rheostat uses up and dissipates 20 volts, and if the arc is maintained at 60 amperes there is a loss of 1,200 watts, or slightly over one k. w. in the rheostat with the rotary converter.

If your current is ten cents per k. w., the increased cost is between ten cents and twelve cents ampere per hour to operate a rotary converter as compared with one of the motor generators above mentioned, especially designed for the purpose of controlling a picture arc.

There is also obtainable on the market the mercury arc rectifier, which is a device employing a large glass tube within which mercury is placed under vacuum, and this device performs the peculiar function of transforming alternating into direct current, without the use of rheostat in series with the arc.

On this account the mercury arc rectifier is a very efficient device, and many of them are in use. The only possible objection to the mercury arc rectifier lies in the use of a glass bulb, which is subject to depreciation and breaking just like an ordinary incandescent lamp.

Motor generators, rotary converters and mercury arc rectifiers are made by as many as twenty different manufacturers, and I recommend that you pursue the advertising pages of the NEWS and other publications to find the different names of the makers, and also suggest that you communicate with your dealer or distributor, who will be glad to give you all the information you may desire.

It is not within the scope of this department to recommend any one maker or device, and have set forth the advantages and disadvantages of the different types.

HOW TO CLEAN A CANVAS SCREEN

A. M. H., Iroquois, S. D.—I am remodeling a theatre here, and would like to have the following questions answered:

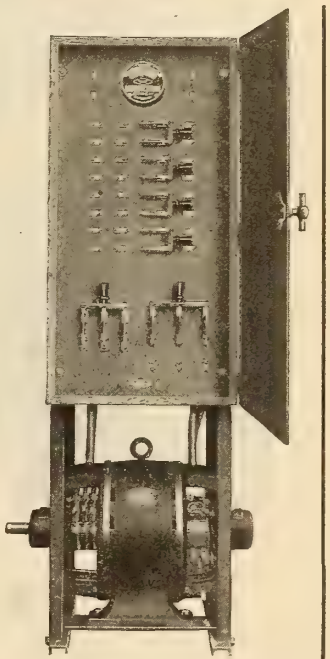
If D. C. is the best light for projection, what kind of a machine should be used to change a 110-volt A. C.?

What I want to know is this: How can I make the best possible and cheapest light out of a 110-volt current? Should I use cored carbons in both holders or only in one?



Also how should a canvas screen be cleaned, and how often?

ANS.—I refer you to my answer to inquiry from J. A. S., Bellehaven, Va., which will appear in this same issue, concerning the different devices for the transformation of alternating into direct current.

The answer given covers the field entirely from its practical point of view, and it is up to you to make the selection you want.

I always recommend cored carbon top and bottom with all arcs for A. C., and also with D. C. arcs above 35 amperes, because it is quite an advantage to use a cored carbon in the lower negative holder, as well as in the upper positive holder, on account of the steadying effect introduced at the arc, especially when low voltage

REEL DISSOLVING

This is the machine they are all talking about, and the only one on which two arcs can be burned simultaneously and reels dissolved into each other without the starting of the second arc disturbing the light on the picture being projected by the first.

Our emergency panel provides A. C. for the lamps in case the rotary should be out of service and eliminates the cost of compense-arcs for emergency purposes.

The placing of the converter in base of panel board makes it a self-contained outfit and cuts the wiring and installation cost in half.

machines are employed which require no rheostats in series with the arc, or rheostats offering only 20 to 30-volt drop.

A canvas screen, if it is not coated with a compound, can of course be taken down and washed, or it might be cleaned in a similar way as wall paper is cleaned, by rubbing it with a specially prepared bread mixture or other patented mixture now furnished for the purpose.

You should, however, coat your screen with a curtain compound in order to make the surface clean and opaque, which will considerably increase the efficiency of your projection.

There are compounds on the market which give the screen a bluish gray tint, which is very desirable to bring out the half-tones, and to subdue the high-lights in projection, and these compounds can be had at very reasonable prices, costing anywhere from three dollars to ten dollars for the entire coating of your screen, depending on the kind and quality. Your dealer or distributor can supply this compound.

THE CEILING, AS AN ARCH FOR ILLUMINATION, IS NOW MADE TO "WORK AS A LIGHT FORCE"

ONE of the most interesting things in studying the question of illuminating a theatre is the effect which this illumination has upon the eye.

It is known that a picture, which is not exactly steady or which flickers a trifle, has a temporarily unpleasing effect upon the eye, which may last for some moments after the picture has been taken off the screen.

It is therefore advisable that in changing from the motion picture to the illuminated auditorium, you do so with the least possible contrast.

It was with this aim in view that many manufacturers began making indirect light systems and putting the ceiling to work as an illuminating force.

The ordinary incandescent lamps make a decided and definite glare as soon as they are turned on. Each individual lamp becomes a point of aggravation, and it is some time before the retina of the eye becomes used to the sudden change.

The two cuts herewith show the result on the eye of the two extreme forms of light, namely, normal and abnormal.

By studying these illustrations one will see the exaggerated and the normal conditions. Considering the fact that when the picture is in operation, the eye is more or less out of the normal, it is easy to realize how unwise it is to switch on ordinary incandescent lamps, which will shine directly into the eyes of the audiences, thus intensifying their already somewhat distorted visions.

By installing a system of indirect lighting such as that manufactured by the National X-Ray Reflector Company and others, it is possible to illuminate a theatre at the end of a performance in such a way that the effect upon the eye is to immediately restore it to a normal condition.

This does away with the usual intermediate condition of distortion brought on by the glare of incandescent bulbs to which the eye is subjected between the time the picture is on and that when the patron reaches the open air.

This indirect lighting is a diffusion of light; that is, it is thrown directly upon the ceiling, which acts as a reflector in toning down the harsh qualities, making it soft and pleasing.

A Really Portable Practical Motion Picture Projector

Thousands of lecturers, teachers and salesmen are demanding a really portable, easy-to-operate, fire-proof projector. One that will take standard size film and project without the slightest flicker. The Portoscope is up to standard in every respect—the standard of modern cinematography. You can supply this great demand by selling the PORTOSCOPE.

One of 3 Models—Model No. 1

Price $135

Complete with all equipment. Ready to operate.

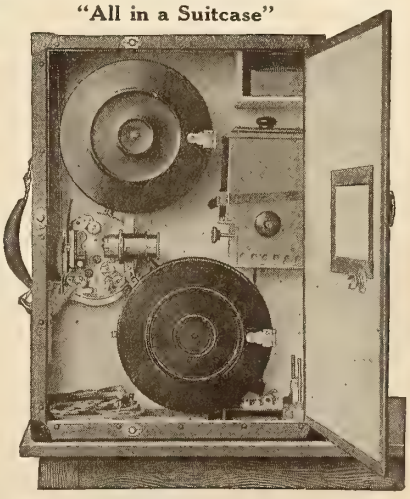
THE PORTOSCOPE

The Portoscope has won the hearty approval of professional and business people who have improved their work with Portoscope Visual Instruction. It is portable and practical. Takes a regulation film—has absolutely no flicker. It is perfect mechanically—sturdily constructed to withstand the hard usage to which a portable machine is subjected, but nothing sacrificed in durability to eliminate weight.

Compact—Size of Suitcase

The Portoscope is built into a carrying case, which is the size of a suitcase—weight about 30 pounds. Simply constructed. Any one can set it into operation in two minutes. Any table furnishes suitable stand.

When a booth is required we supply same—a portable, light, fireproof booth, easily set up and taken down. But with our standard equipment there is



No Booth Needed

The Portoscope is absolutely safe. The Portoscope Fire-Shutter is positively automatic. The fire-proof film magazines are enclosed in an asbestos-lined case, making the entire outfit doubly safe. The case door must be closed before it is possible to operate the machine.

Safely Shows "Still" Pictures

The Portoscope Heat Eliminator makes it possible to stop the machine and show detail in any certain picture—no chance of film fire. This Heat Eliminator permits only cool, strong white light to strike the film.

"All in a Suitcase"

Has Stereopticon Attachment

The Portoscope can be instantly adjusted for stereopticon purposes. There are also many other distinctive features too numerous to mention here.

MEZZANINE NO MAKESHIFT IN NASHVILLE HOUSE, BUT IS MEANT TO BE THE "BIG THING"

WASSMAN'S Knickerbocker, the new motion picture house now being erected on Sixth avenue, just north of Church street, Nashville, Tenn., when completed will, it is claimed, be one of the most up-to-date picture theatres in the South.

The new theatre, which will be completed about the middle of February, is of entirely fireproof construction. Not a piece of wood or inflamable material has been used, but steel and reinforced concrete throughout. A unique plan for ventilating the new house has been adopted.

Under each chair is a ventilator, of the mushroom style, through which cool washed air can be sent in the summer time, and warm air in winter. This system of ventilation keeps a house at almost any desired temperature, and is highly recommended by the leading architects engaged in theatre construction in this country and Europe.

Another feature of the new building is the spacious mezzanine floor. In most houses the mezzanine is used for an overflow. In the Knickerbocker, however, the plans are to make it really the "big thing."

The appointments have been given greater attention, if such a thing is possible, than on the lower floor. Comfortable boxes have been arranged for, and everything possible for the greatest comfort and convenience of the patrons, including a magnificent lounging and rest room for ladies.

The price for seats will be higher in the mezzanine floor than on the first floor. Another new idea to be inaugurated in Nashville, with the opening of the Knickerbocker, will be a smoking section. This has been taken care of, so that the smoke will be carried off almost instantaneously, and without causing any inconvenience to those seated in other parts of the theatre, who object to tobacco smoke.

The thearte property extends from Sixth avenue through to the boulevard, with entrances on both. The screen will be placed at the Sixth avenue end of the theatre.

A huge thirty thousand dollar Kimball pipe organ will be located in a concrete room directly behind and above the screen, with apertures so arranged as to throw the sound waves down into the audience. The echo organ has been placed at the other end of the theatre.

Manager Wassman said: "When the Knickerbocker is completed I will have something to show to the people of Nashville that represents the acme of motion picture construction.

"I don't believe I have overlooked a single thing which will tend to promote the safety, comfort and convenience of the patrons of the new theatre.

"I believe that even the most skeptical, when they see the new place, can say nothing but 'well done.'

"As for the pictures, all I have to say is that the good people of this city know that I have never given them any but the best, regardless of the price charged.

"For the Knickerbocker I have secured bookings that will be without a peer or even a rival. I have too much at stake to try to present inferior photoplays."

DE LUXE PHOTOPLAYER INSTALLED IN HIPPODROME, LANCASTER, PA.

THE Hippodrome theatre of Lancaster, Pa., is owned by George M. Krupa and Elsie E. Krupa, his wife, who jointly manage this up-to-date beautiful nine hundred seat house.

The Hippodrome theatre has done a good business during the past winter, and Mr. Krupa looks for a continuation of prosperous times.

One of the main features of the Hippodrome theatre is the long lobby of 125 feet, beautifully decorated and furnished. This lobby permits the holding of large crowds unable to get into the theatre at the first show.

The Hippodrome uses the Paramount service primarily, and the music is furnished by a De Luxe fotoplayer, especially designed for the Hippodrome theatre by the American Photo Player Company, of 62 West Forty-fifth street, New York City.

LOBBY OF THE HIPPODROME THEATRE, LANCASTER, PA.

The screen in the Hippodrome is surrounded by velvet curtains, and after each picture is completed, the operator drops a cream colored silk curtain over the screen, and then raises it before the beginning of the next picture.

Mr. and Mrs. Krupa have lived in Lancaster for thirty years, and are well known by all of the people in the town, as well as surrounding towns.

KIMBALL ORGAN COMPANY OPENS OFFICE IN PHILADELPHIA; COMPANY PLACES MANY ORGANS IN THEATRES OF THE CITY

THE Philadelphia business on Kimball organs is growing so rapidly the heads of the organization in New York found it essential to establish a Philadelphia branch.

Headquarters were recently opened at 144 Eleventh street, near Walnut, with William B. King, formerly of New York, as manager.

Within a comparatively short period Kimball organs have been erected in the following theatres within Philadelphia and vicinity: Arcadia, Regent, Locust, Leader, Alhambra and Globe; Colonial and Bijou, Atlantic City, N. J.; Princess, Reading, Pa., and Savoy, Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Now almost completed is a large Kimball for the new Fifty-sixth Street Theatre, Philadelphia.

April will find the largest Kimball organ in the entire East installed in the Victoria Theatre, of Philadelphia.

As is now the demand by picture patrons, all these instruments are equipped with full orchestral effects.

WISCONSIN FILM CIRCLES HUM WITH CONSTRUCTION ACTIVITY

H. F. THIEL, of Marshfield, has awarded the general contract to Krasin Brothers, of Marshfield, for the remodeling of the Rembs & Strum building into a photoplay theatre. Plans are being made for 500 seats. An entire new front will be put in with steel beams, two fire escapes, and a fan ventilating system.

The city of Ripon contemplates the erection of a city hall and opera house to cost $30,000. It is expected that the work will be started this summer. J. E. Carter, city clerk, is in charge of the work.

Plans have been completed for the erection of a photoplay theatre for R. B. Guyette, Sheboygan Falls. The building is to be of brick construction, one story high, 40 x 90 feet, having a seating capacity of 500.

The building will have a composition roof metal ceiling, steam heat, ornamental and stucco plaster, indirect lighting, metal laths, etc. W. C. Weeks, of Sheboygan, is the architect in charge of the work.

Architects Parkinson and Dockendorfer, of La Crosse, have plans in progress for the erection of a photoplay theatre for Otto Bell, proprietor of the Royal theatre, Sparta. The building is to be of brick and concrete construction, one story and part basement, 50 x 100 feet, costing about $16,000. The house is planned for a seating capacity of 600.

A fire destroyed the interior of the Pearl theatre, Defere, Sunday, February 6, just before the spectators assembled for the first show. The loss is over $3,000.

A $100,000 motion picture theatre is to be erected on Third street, Milwaukee.

Otto L. Meister, vice-president and manager of the Vaudette theatre company, has secured a ninety-nine-year lease on the property just north of the Vaudette theatre.

The site has a frontage of fifty feet on Third street and extends back to the alley.

The entire front of the new film house will be studded with jewels secured from the Temple of Jewels at the world's exposition in San Francisco.

Construction work will be started shortly and the theatre will be ready by about Sept. 1. It will have a seating capacity of 2,000 and will be known as the White House theatre.

PENNSYLVANIA EXHIBITORS KEEP THEATRES UP TO MODERN BUILDING PACE

THE Becker theatre at Seventh and Dickinson streets, Philadelphia, formerly run by Becker Brothers, is now under the management of George Herman, who also is part owner. The Becker, a 780-seated house, is well patronized by South Philadelphians in its vicinity. The new manager is endeavoring to make it a straight ten-cent house, to which end he has installed a $4,000 Wurlitzer organ, besides a complete orchestra under the leadership of Joseph Glassner. A Mirroroide screen has also been added to the equipment. Continuous performances are run from 1 to 11 p. m.

The Regent theater at New Castle, formerly the Park theatre which was bought four weeks ago by Charles Freeman and M. Marks, has been opened to the public. The house had been closed several weeks while it was being remodeled and redecorated.

J. A. Hummell, formerly manager of the Opera House at Shinnistown, has sold that place to George Wilkinson and has purchased the Luna theatre at Brackenridge.

John Wishart and C. A. Wagoner of Dunbar have advertised for bids on the erection of a new theatre at Connellsville. The theatre is to be a two-story brick and concrete building and is to be located in Pittsburg avenue. Wagoner and Dunbar are well known in the motion picture business of that section of the state and have the reputation of running first class theatres. The new building will cost in the neighborhood of $10,000 and will be reinforced with steel girders. Work will be rushed on the building in order to get the theatre opened as quickly as possible.

R. L. Hampton has sold his motion picture show in the Honeybrook fire hall, Honeybrook, to the fire company of that town. Shows will be given every Saturday night under the management of William L. Troub.

William H. Reichenbaker has remodeled his store on Main Street, Honesdale, and will open a picture theatre there.

TEXAS EXHIBITORS ACTIVE; 1,200-SEAT HOUSE IN SAN ANTONIO NEARLY READY

EMMETT AND EMMETT are now running the Hippodrome theatre Tyler, which has heretofore been operated by Lewis Brothers.

Cox and Sharrett have purchased the Queen theatre, Aubrey, from H. V. Simpson.

On March 15 C. C. Lindsey will open a motion picture theatre at Lubbock, with a seating capacity of 500.

J. C. Stevens has leased the Bell theatre at Austin, for the 1916 season.

Rudolph Ort has purchased the opera house at Boerne and will run it as a moving picture theatre.

The New Mission theatre, Beeville, was opened recently.

Laurence F. Stuart has been appointed manager of the Old Mill theatre at Dallas, succeeding Ben F. Lewis, who has purchased the Pearce theatre at Houston. Mr. Stuart is only 23 years old, and has been advanced from usher, head usher and assistant manager to manager.

Chaucer Caver, manager and owner of the Majestic theatre at Stephensville, announces that he will soon commence the erection of a theatre building, in the Carlton Block, with 500 seating capacity.

Work is nearing completion on the Strand theatre at San Antonio. The building is positively fireproof and seats 1,200 in auditorium.

VICTORIA IN NASHVILLE HAS AN OVERHAULING

THE Victoria theatre, Nashville, located in the Arcade, has had a house cleaning. The new company which owns it consists of substantial business men of Nashville, who see great possibilities in this place if properly conducted. At a later date the house will be thoroughly overhauled and put in as up-to-date condition as any house of its size in Nashville. Since the new company has taken charge business has been of a very flattering nature.

George K. Brown, local confectioner of Chattanooga, has contracted for the lease of the building now occupied by the Theato motion picture theatre. He will take the building over on July 1, it is understood, as a future measure to take care of his increasing confectionery business. The Theato is Chattanooga's oldest picture theatre. It was formerly managed by Howell Graham, pioneer exhibitor of that section.

It is probable that there will be erected in the downtown section of Chattanooga in the near future an up-to-date amusement house, consisting of a motion picture theatre, a billiard hall and bowling alley. E. L. Goldstein, of Chicago, was in that city for several days looking over the situation. Before leaving for New Orleans he asked a local real estate man to select a suitable site.

SAMUELS, OF FOTOPLAYER, NOTES WIDESPREAD IMPROVEMENT IN BUSINESS CONDITIONS

M. J. SAMUELS, vice-president of the American Photo Player Company, 62 West Forty-fifth street, New York City, manufacturing the Fotoplayer, pipe organs, etc., for motion picture houses, states that business conditions throughout the United States are greatly improving, and that he is in touch with many of the leading exhibitors who are contemplating installing instruments in their theatres.

He states that the company has closed contracts within the past ten days for a $12,500 pipe organ and Fotoplayer for one of the leading exhibitors in Pennsylvania, as well as a $5,000 Fotoplayer for another Pennsylvania exhibitor, and a $3,000 Fotoplayer for a new house to open during the present month in Brooklyn.

In the opinion of Mr. Samuels, the coming spring will show great improvement in the business among the exhibitors, reflecting the great prosperity throughout the country.

The wonderful, new Curtis portable art lamp (the indirect Eye-Comfort system) will flood your foyer with a beautiful, dignified, mellow light.

You must realize the "endless chain" advertising power when awed patrons insist upon their friends going to see and marvel at the charming lighting system installed in your foyer.

Send us a rough floor plan sketch of the foyer, giving length, width and ceiling height. State color of ceiling and decorations. Mark location of the doors. We'll tell you how many lamps will be required and what they will cost—and it won't cost you a cent for this important information.

Let us give you some mighty interesting data regarding X-RAY PROJECTORS—the exterior flood lighting system that has been proved the most effective and satisfactory illumination for theatre fronts. The Woolworth Tower in New York is lighted with X-RAY PROJECTORS, and it is the most-talked-of lighting installation in the world.

ROTHAPFEL ENGAGES MIROSLAVA, SERBIAN SOPRANO, FOR THE KNICKERBOCKER, NEW YORK

DIRECTOR S. L. ROTHAPFEL, of the Knickerbocker theatre, New York, promises a genuine musical surprise in his program for the week of February 20 in Mlle. Miroslava, a Serbian opera singer, who has been driven to America's hospitable shores through the vicissitudes of war.

Miroslava is a native of Vukovard, near Belgrade. She sang with the Royal opera of Nish, and also at Belgrade and Vienna. At the outbreak of the European conflict she was engaged at Breslau.

Mlle. Miroslava is a dramatic soprano of pronounced power, and enjoyed the distinction of being especially engaged for "Siegfried" at Beyruth. Her contribution to the Knickerbocker program will include "Elizabeth's Prayer," from "Lohengrin," and an aria from "Thanhouser."

The augmented orchestra, under the direction of Hugo Riesenfeld, will play as an overture the "Polonaise," from "Eugen Onegin," by Tschaikowsky.

NEW CLEVELAND THEATRE WILL NOT OPEN UNTIL THE AUTUMN

THE Stillman, the big downtown photoplay house which is being built near the Hotel Statler on Euclid avenue, Cleveland's main thoroughfare, does not look as if it would be finished before the fall. The Stillman will have a seating capacity about double that of any existing downtown motion picture house.

King and Solomon have sold the Rex theatre, South Main Street, Celina, to Dan Fisher. Mr. Solomon still retains the management.

The Grand Amusement Company has purchased property at Walnut Street and Dickson Avenue, Mansfield, and will start the erection of a $75,000 motion picture theatre there as soon as possible. The house is to be without a balcony, the orchestra floor rising gradually to the level of a second story in the rear. Present plans indicate that the place will be ready in early July.

The Columbia theatre, Dayton, will shortly be remodeled, so that its seating capacity will be doubled to an even thousand.

"NE-ER-DO-WELL" TO HAVE MUSIC SCORE FOR ORCHESTRA PREPARED BY SCHIRMER

SOL LESSER, controlling the United States rights of the Selig production, the "Ne'er Do Well," announces that proper music scores have been prepared by and printed under the supervision of G. Schirmer, Inc., the music publishers of New York, to accompany each film.

This should be an inducement to managers of theatres in renting, as they will be assured of proper musical accompaniments in their presentation of the film.

SWANSON-NOLAN COMPANY SELLS SEVENTY-FIVE MACHINES SINCE OCTOBER

THE Swanson-Nolan Supply Company, of Denver, is having a very prosperous outlook for the coming year. This company opened its office October 1, and up to date have sold seventy-five moving picture machines.

The Empress theatre, of Boulder, have just ordered a complete new equipment from the Swanson-Nolan company.

HENDERSON, OF BARRE, VT., RETIRES; LEASES HIS TWO THEATRES

RICHARD E. HENDERSON has retired from active interest in his two theatres at Barre. John Hoban, who has controlled the Barre opera house for ten years, has leased Mr. Henderson's Pavilion, while the Dreamland has been secured by Guy Dindo, for several years an operator. The new Monitor picture theatre, Brattleboro, is in readiness for business.

SATIN GOLDFIBRE SCREENS, INC., MOVES TO 2030 PENOBSCOT BUILDING, DETROIT

THE Satin Goldfibre Screens, Inc., has moved from the Dime Bank Building to 2030 Penobscot building, Detroit. Production will be conducted on a larger scale than before.

Upholstered Chairs

Make Your House Popular
You Can Afford Them Now

THE most essential appointment in any theatre is an easy chair from which to view the presentation on the stage. Have your chairs made right and upholster them in Du Pont Fabrikoid, Craftsman Quality, and you are sure to draw the crowd.

75% of the upholstered seats made are covered with leather substitutes. Fabrikoid leads all others in elegance, durability and economy. Years of hard service in theatres have proven this to be a fact.

FABRIKOID, Craftsman Quality reproduces the appearance of grain leather and wears next best to that expensive article. Warranted superior to coated split leather and so-called "genuine leathers." Fabrikoid will not crack, split, peel or stick to the clothing. Kept sanitary with soap and water.

FABRIKOID is reasonable in price. Investigate Du Pont Fabrikoid when ordering new seats or recovering worn ones.

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

ARIZONA

C. J. ALDEN, who has conducted the Dime theatre at Globe, has closed the same and purchased the Martin theatre in the same city.

Another change at Globe is that Alfred Radogliotti has leased the Elk's theatre.

The firm of Lackey and Evans has sold the Royal and Orpheum theatres at Bisbee to G. E. Reeves.

Motion picture theatres are taking the place of the dance halls of early days in the new gold mine town of Oatman, Arizona.

Gold was discovered there a few months ago, and the town has had a mushroom growth in every respect, evidenced by the fact that it now has three motion picture theatres. State laws of Arizona prevent the operation of saloons and dance halls, and the miners and prospectors have found the films will serve to furnish amusement. The town doubles in population monthly.

The second theatre there was recently opened by K. G. Sweetland, and Thos. L. Thomas, who until recently conducted the Fairyland theatre in Los Angeles, has gone to Oatman to open the third house.

CALIFORNIA

Work is to be commenced at an early date on the moving picture house to be erected at Redwood City, for the use of Ellis K. Arkush. The house will have a seating capacity of six hundred and fifty.

R. H. Hargadine, who had charge of the moving picture theatre in the mines exhibit at the recent exposition at San Francisco, has taken a lease on the Victory theatre at San Rafael, in conjunction with J. Brenman, and has opened this as the Marin theatre.

The All Star theatre on Sutter street, in the Fillmore district of San Francisco, is now being conducted under the management of Morris Atlas, who has the Flag theatre on Stockton street. The All Star has been dark for some time.

A theatre was a seating capacity of at least 1,000 is to be erected at Burlingame, for George W. Gates.

S. Thompson, of Colfax, is planning a circuit of twelve houses for the spring and summer season in the small communities near that place.

The Castle theatre at Newcastle has been reopened by F. E. Setley.

Work on the American theatre, on Market street near Seventh, San Francisco, is progressing very rapidly, and this splendid house will be rebuilt and redecorated in time to be opened some time in April.

Many rumors are current here as to the class of attractions to be offered, but it is generally understood that moving pictures will be featured. The cost of remodeling the structure will amount to at least $60,000.

An attempt is being made to prevent the construction of the new theatre of Turner and Dahnken at Eleventh and Franklin streets, Oakland, a petition for an injunction having been filed in the superior court by the Iris Motion Picture Company.

According to this concern it purchased the Lyric theatre on Broadway from J. T. Turner and Fred Dahnken, Jr., about three years ago at an expense of $8,000 and closed the house to cut down competition. The contract of sale, it is alleged, provided that Turner and Dahnken should not start another house within one thousand feet of the one conducted by the Iris Motion Picture Company, this proviso to expire at the end of ten years.

According to the petition the new house of Turner and Dahnken is less than five hundred feet away.

CANADA

W. Lajeunesse has completed plans and has already awarded contracts for the construction of a picture theatre at Ontario and Orleans streets, Montreal.

It is to be called Theatre Orleans and aside from being modern in every detail it will present an imposing appearance when completed. One hundred thousand dollars will be expended in its erection and equipment.

CONNECTICUT

Negotiations have been completed whereby former Councilman Benjamin Krentzman, of Meriden, becomes sole owner of the Crystal theatre on Colony street and the Meriden airdome on Church street, buying out the half interest of Gustus A. Rudloff, who has been successful in the show business there for the past six years. The money involved is about $4,000.

ILLINOIS

Harris, Kussel and Company have leased a large plot of ground at East Garfield boulevard and Michigan avenue, Chicago, and will erect a building included in which will be a motion picture theatre. The present plans call for a 1,500 seating capacity.

A building permit has been issued for the construction of a $3,500 brick motion picture theatre at the corner of Main and Illinois streets, Danville. The contract was issued to J. C. Barker, Chicago contractor, who will begin the actual work of construction as soon as the present cold spell ceases. Misses Lillian A. Bailey and Marie Ormiston will be owners and proprietors of the theatre.

The Joy theatre, Mt. Carmel, has opened under the management of John Coleman. Extensive repairs have been made on the building.

INDIANA

George Brookins, of Columbia City, who recently sold the Lyceum, Palace and Airdome theatres in that city, has bought the Star theatre at Elkhart. The house, which seats 400 persons, will be closed while alterations are made to increase the seating capacity. The name probably will be changed to the Lyceum theatre.

Ray Braun, who was formerly an assistant to Charles Sweeton, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Evansville, has bought a half interest in the Royal Theatorium, Walnut and Morris streets.

Dale Loomis has become manager of the Wallace theatre, which has been leased by Scott and Loomis, owners of the Victoria theatre, Peru, to take the place of Manager Shull, whose lease expired several weeks ago. Mr. Loomis will make some changes on the stage and interior in general.

Doc Hodgesett is now manager of the Theatorium at Newcastle.

G. C. Bramble has become manager of the Princess theatre, 858 South Meridian street, and the Royal theatre, in West Market street, Indianapolis. Mr. Bramble has been an exchange salesman as well as an exhibitor.

Charles West and Lewis Murray have leased the Clinton theatre, and will remodel it.

Orloff Sebring, formerly manager of the Royal theatre, Indianapolis, has become manager of the Isis theatre, at Peru, succeeding Wilbur Mitchell.

Gene Ford has sold the Family theatre at Covington to A. B. Bower, of Bedford. Mr. Bower will not run Sunday shows.

O. M. Sebring, of Sullivan, will appeal the case of operating his theatre on Sunday, in which he was fined recently one dollar and costs.

The K. G. theatre at Rochester, which was bought recently by Clyde and Sydney Wilson, will discontinue the week-end vaudeville.

IOWA

G. A. Toppings has sold his theatre, the Royal, at Lemars, to Bausman and Boyd, who in turn have resold it to M. Noltz.

W. C. Aurend has sold the Rex, at Hartley, to R. I. Stewart.

The Palm, Clear Lake, has closed, the town being too small for two houses.

R. D. Fallons has sold the Princess at Union to Clarence Haldersen.

The Majestic at Humboldt has been closed and the fixtures sold, as the town was considered too small for two houses.

C. S. Hoffman, owner of the Lyric at Sac City, has leased the opera house and now controls the situation in that town.

G. L. Meholin has opened the Empress, Rockwell City, a brand new house built in an unusual manner. It has no lobby, the entrance being a mere vestibule. It is a modern little house, with fine projection and interior finishing.

J. H. Pooler has bought the Princess at Ida Grove from Johnson Brothers and is improving the house.

KANSAS

A fire in the Lyric theatre, of Frontenac, recently did but slight damage and the show is again open to the public.

KENTUCKY

The Princess theatre, a motion picture house at Henderson, was destroyed by fire early on the morning of February 13. The loss is estimated at $15,000. The Princess was a new theatre, built by Louisville promoters.

MAINE

The New Central theatre in Old Town has been closed for the past few months, but Manager Fernandez recently opened it again and has had good houses. He will continue to conduct picture shows there on Saturday night, and if the attendance warrants will have it open permanently.

Pearl Crockett has purchased the old Gordon clothing shop in Brooks and is fitting it up as a picture theatre.

MICHIGAN

Fred DeLodder, 732 Crane avenue, Detroit, will build a theatre at the corner of Mack and Holcomb avenues, which is only a short distance from the Maxine theatre at Mack and Baldwin avenues.

The Rialto Theatre Company, capitalized at $120,000, Detroit, will build a theatre at Gratiot and Mt. Elliott avenues. Work will start not later than April 1. C. Howard Crane is the architect. The seating arrangement will be on the Roman stadium style, along the lines of the Majestic theatre, Detroit. It will seat about 1,500. J. C. Ritter of the Boulevard Theatre Company is president of the company, which has offices at 1573 Gratiot avenue. After the construction of this playhouse, another will be built at Gratiot and Van Dyke avenues, where the company has secured additional property.

The Majestic theatre, Battle Creek, recently purchased by William Roget and Charles Broceus from William Caldwell, will be closed for a week in the spring, during which time it will be entirely remodelled and redecorated, and a new front built.

Joseph W. Poisson has purchased from H. W. Beecher the motion picture house on Leonard street, N. W., Grand Rapids, for $8,500.

Plans for a motion picture theatre to be built at Grand avenue and Michigan street, Grand Rapids, for Thomas Graham, are being prepared by Architect George T. Appleyard. The building will be of brick and tile, with a seating capacity for 600.

MISSOURI

The New Princess motion picture theatre at Kirksville, will open about the middle of March. It has a seating capacity of 800, and will be under the management of Sam Kennedy.

A balcony is to be built into the Appollo theate, at Thirty-second and Troost avenues, in Kansas City, by Manager F. D. Scott. This is considered one of Kansas City's best suburban houses.

A. H. Neeves is to erect a motion picture theatre at the corner of Thirty-sixth and Troost avenues, in Kansas City. The contract for the building has been let. It will cost $25,000.

NEBRASKA

G. H. Hulfish, of Lincoln, is building a new theatre, which he will open shortly. It has not been named.

Miller and Clarks of Surprise, opened a new house last week, buying their Motiograph through the Laemmle Film Service in Omaha. J. J. McCarthy went to Surprise to install the new machine.

E. I. Ramsel, formerly manager of the Omaha Film Exchange, has taken I. M. Garman's place as manager of the Acme Amusement Company, Lincoln, which has the Orpheum, Lyric, Wonderland and Electric Park theatres.

C. J. Robertson of the Home theatre, Blair, has bought out Mr. Garner. He will remove the fixtures from Garner's house, and sell them, closing the place.

C. White of Clarkson, has just opened the Opera House, a new motion picture theatre seating 600. The remarkable part of this is that Clarkson has a population of only 800, and the theatre depends of course, for much patronage from the rural district. The theatre is equipped with a stage, balcony and is completely and modernly furnished.

Roy Towsly is installing a Powers 6-A machine, chairs and complete equipment, in his new house at Ansley.

Manager Ballinger at York has installed a new Simplex, and a Minusa screen.

L. B. Bothwell of Reynolds has installed a new Powers 6-B machine.

J. Emerick of the Joyo theatre at Havelock, has sold out to Roland Meyers of Germantown, who has taken possession.

Vavra and Tinker have sold the Lyric, at Crete, to Theodore Kemples.

Bert Gardner has opened the Lyric at Beatrice, showing features.

A. G. Nelson has reopened the Jewel, at Beatrice, to show vaudeville and features.

NEVADA

H. C. Oastler and L. Van Schoiack have purchased a lot on Bridge street, Winnemucca, and will commence work on a moving picture theatre as soon as weather conditions permit.

NEW YORK

A petition filed by Weinstein brothers to operate a theatre on King street, Troy, has been granted. The house will be named after the street upon which it is located.

The Lyceum theatre, Troy, which has been operated by F. F. Proctor as a picture house, has been closed and it is uncertain as to whether it will open again with motion pictures.

The Wardin Realty Company of which John Shelberg is secretary has filed plans for a theatre and store building, Webster Avenue and 167th Street, New York City. The improvement wiill cost $35,000.

Latest reports have it that Marcus Loew has taken a lease on the Roof Garden atop the New York theatre, New York City.

During the past few years this amusement place has been under various managements, which have endeavored with more or less success to operate a cabaret show there. The New York theatre is located on Broadway between 44th and 45th streets.

What is known as the Roof extends over the Criterion theatre as well as the former house. Mr. Loew has presented pictures in the New York theatre for some time and according to the reports he will make alterations on the roof so that it will accommodate 1,800 persons. Mr. Loew secured the place at a guarantee of $400 a week.

Plans and specifications for the proposed Pontiac picture theatre on Broadway, Troy, has been presented to contractors.

The new Strand theatre, Philmont, held its formal opening on February 22.

NORTH CAROLINA

The New Edisonia, a house located at 202 North Tryon street, Charlotte, has reopened after extensive improvements. The admission price remains at five cents.

OHIO

Among the many new motion picture theatres now rapidly approaching completion in Cleveland are Ball Park and the Southern. Ball Park theater gets its name from the fact that it is located near the baseball ground. The Southern is on West 25th street. Both houses will have a seating capacity close to 1,000.

What is Wrong With the Picture Theatre Music?

By Mack A. Edwards, Heights Theatre, New York City

Many Exhibitors Fail to Realize Importance of Best in Music and Competent Musicians to Interpret It for Patrons —Man Who Thinks That It Does Not Matter Whether a Piano, Piano and Drums, Organ or Orchestra Furnishes the Musical Accompaniment Is Far Behind the Times.

The following article submitted by Mack A. Edwards, should be of value to the producers of feature photoplays, if for no other reason than to make them realize that there are competent musicians who are highly interested in giving proper musical entertainment, synchronizing with screen action that producers often spend small fortunes to make possible in their screen versions of photoplay stories.

Mr. Edwards is an enthusiast, and his article proves that he has made a thorough study of the necessary musical equipment for modern and up-to-date picture theatres.

There is no doubt that the near future will see vast changes in the musical equipment of every picture theatre. However, it is doubted that any exhibitor would refuse to musically surround himself properly when the commercial value of picture theatre music dawns upon him.

Mr. Edwards cites a fact where he himself heard an orchestra try to accompany a ball scene wherein the guests were dancing a waltz to the weird strains of the "Hungarian Lustspiel."

The exhibitor who is inflicted with such an orchestra leader cannot be expected to rave regarding the value of music in a picture theatre. When an opportunity comes to this exhibitor to obtain an orchestra leader that can and will play to the pictures, he will realize the commercial value of picture music, and likewise be an enthusiast.

There are still many musicians who are dreaming of long ago and imagine that music in the picture theatre is the one thing, instead of being but a part which is only important when it properly synchronizes, and does not conflict temperamentally with the action on the screen.

While there are today many musicians competent to the present possible extent of following pictures, nevertheless there are hundreds of opportunities for the good musicians who are willing to make a study of picture theatre music with a view of mastering it and not give to this new field only hours of playing instead of that intelligence which our Maker has given to every human.

There is still a slight feeling of indifference on the part of many capable musicians regarding picture theatre work, but it is gratifying to note that this is fast dying out, and I really believe that when the musician realizes that the photoplay theatre has opened a wonderfully new field for his musical endeavors, the exhibitor will then likewise realize that music is indispensable in his theatre.

It would be wise for the musicians to realize that when they have mastered pictured playing as a business as well as an art, they will have no difficulty to sell their services to picture theatre managers, for good remuneration.

SOME time ago a well-known theatrical manager committed himself in making the statement to me that music in picture houses does not make any kind of odds, as the patrons apparently did not seem to appreciate it.

He was of the opinion that it made no difference what the music consists of, whether piano, piano and drums, organ or orchestra.

Let me state right here that the gentleman in question is quite a few years behind the course of time and has failed to keep up his pace with the advancement of the motion picture industry.

Of course, the pictures constitute the show, but the music is the audible part of the entertainment, and for this reason it is apparently second in importance to the theatregoers.

Those live-wire exhibitors who have recognized this fact have endeavored in many ways to make the musical part of their entertainment just as attractive to the public as they would an elaborate feature photoplay.

Today the market is flooded with an overproduct of the best of feature pictures and exhibitors all over the country seem to be at a loss what to do in order to increase their receipts.

Where to Look for the Trouble

If those exhibitors would only turn their attention for a few minutes to the orchestra pit, they might find out where the trouble is. The fault is probably right there.

A low-salaried piano player, in other words, an "ivory-banger," gifted with a small repertoire, who plays the same thing day in and day out, always playing something, but never playing anything at all causes the trouble.

In addition to that, you will sometimes find a drummer who cannot resist making all the noise in his power. And in the face of that the manager expects his patrons to sit there and enjoy his show, when the noise—music is no name for it—that emerges from down below takes the attention away from the picture and works havoc with their nerves.

The popular demand of the motion picture patrons of today is the orchestra, organ or some other real musical instrument. Theatres which cannot afford an orchestra are installing an organ, and some of them even prefer both because it relieves the monotony and makes possible a continuous musical program.

Pictures nowadays have to be "played-up-to" in detail, and I have found many orchestra leaders who do not give this subject the proper care and attention which it deserves.

In many theatres the leader does not seem to care whether or not his musical selections fit the various situations and scenes of the film. His music is not even in a general keeping with the story.

A few days ago, for instance, I visited a theatre which was advertising in bold red type a "Symphony Orchestra." I entered just in time to see the beginning of a five-reel feature.

The orchestra, which consisted of nine men, started off with the "Hungarian Lustspiel Overture," and the leader never once looked at the picture. In one scene a ball was shown with the couples dancing a waltz to the strain of the 4-4 movement of the Hungarian music played by said orchestra.

The conflicting situation was simply awful. The next scene was a moonlight garden with a couple strolling around telling the old, old story.

The Leader Paid No Attention to Picture Changes

Mr. Leader never seemed to notice the change, but went right into the last allegro movement of the overture, finished it and stopped, while the pianist played some kind of indifferent chords and runs, waiting for the next number to be started, which began after a five-minutes' rest. The sudden change from orchestra to plain piano was so abrupt that it was annoying, to say the least. If there had been an organ used in this orchestra it would have done away with this sudden change in the music.

The management would have had better results and would effect a financial saving.

To those exhibitors who cannot employ a full orchestra of 18 musicians for their entertainment, I cannot too strongly suggest the installation of an organ in conjunction with two or three additional orchestral instruments, such as a solo violin, 'cello, saxophone or flute or a "one-man orchestra," providing it is well operated, and then really make the music a serious part of their entertainment.

The organ, if properly played by a competent musician, will lend dignity to the theatre and make an evening's entertainment which will be worth while. Organ music is pleasing to all, because it is soft, sweet and melodious.

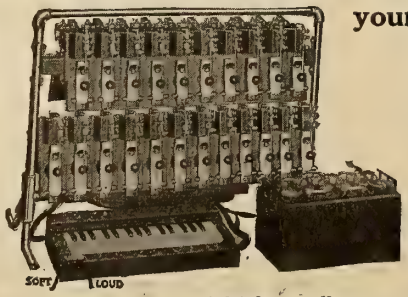
There is nothing more impressive than a violin or 'cello solo rendered with a competent organ accompaniment. No matter where this combination has been attempted, the result has been to the advantage of the exhibitor who tried it.

Music was on this world before anyone ever dreamt of all our modern inventions of today, but in many theatres where everything else in the way of improvements has been installed, the musical part of the entertainment is still far behind the times.

Theatregoers nowadays want refined, good music, and lots of it, and now is the time for exhibitors to take notice and realize this fact.

DON'T GET THE IDEA

because of their conspicuous success in large installations, that the W. W. KIMBALL COMPANY is high priced and not interested in the musical equipment of smaller theatres.



For every great instrument, such as the three and four manual organs in the Globe Theatre, Boston; the Orpheum, New York; the Arcadia, Philadelphia; the Colonial, Seattle; the Clemmer, Spokane; the Columbia and National Theatres in Portland, there are scores of Kimballs costing $5,000.00 and under—equally successful—in the moving picture theatres of the country seating from 400 to 2,000. Chicago alone has seventy-five such Kimball organs.

Let us figure with you, whatever your problem.

Note: This picture's strength depends entirely upon the use of serious musical numbers. You cannot get too much depth into your heavy pathetic or romantic numbers. The lighter numbers suggested are not long but are very necessary for giving your program dramatic color.

The slow numbers you select should be of a strict legato type, and played as broadly as possible.

Nos. 1, 4, 6, 9, 12, 13, 15, 17, 23 and 27 are all slow numbers with a positive dramatic suggestion, having a pathetic or dramatic appeal as designated in plot.

No. 2, 11, and 19 are light 2/4 or 4/4 intermezzo movements. These are strictly relief numbers, and must not be slow movements.

Nos. 5, 16 and 24 are intermezzo trots as are used for dancing. Screen action must be followed with these numbers.

Nos. 3, 22 and 26 are concert waltzes with slow introductions, having a pathetic appeal.

No. 7 should be a slow waltz movement played legato and in minor key.

Nos. 10 and 18 should be slow waltz lento movements not in minor key.

Nos. 8, 14, 20 and 21 are short melodramatic numbers as suggested in plot.

No. 14 plays very long.

The picture is especially well adapted for organ and can be played on organ throughout. When orchestra and organ is used, numbers 5, 16 and 24 should always be played by orchestra.

Dear, Sir:-,

I want to say one good word for the'Vim'comedies, they certainly are great and veryfunny especially'Pokes,& Jabes' they certainly are great these comedies are giv ing the 'Chaplin' comedies a very good race and I belive if they keep it up they will draw better than 'Chaplin'

I would advise any exhibitior that they are makeing a big mistake by notbooking the 'Vim' comedies they are good moneygetters.

I certainly appreciate your kindness by putting these comedies on my program and hope they continue always.

With all good wishes and best regards,

GENERAL FILM SERVICE

"THE GREATEST ADVERTISEMENT AN EXHIBITOR EVER HAD"

THE words are those of a man who has made an exhaustive study of the moving picture industry—the Vice President of one of New York's largest advertising agencies—used in connection with the "OPEN-BOOKING" policy of the V. L. S. E.

"Because," continued the speaker, "under the system which permits the exhibitor to pick and choose that which is best suited to his patronage, (instead of having to take that which is given him) he can now, for the first time, guarantee to give his public what it wants.

"In other words, the elasticity of the open-booking policy makes the public its own booking clerk. And the exhibitor who spreads this broadcast, and backs it up, has a force with which to win public approval, unequalled by any other advertising.

"Of course, the story of giving the people what they want is an old one in every line, but the fallacy of such claims in the moving picture field heretofore, is instantly apparent, when it is considered that the cut and dried contract allows of absolutely no alternative, but to take that which is booked, whether it is good, bad or indifferent."

Scores of exhibitors all over the country are discovering for themselves the profit-making features of the "OPEN-BOOKING" plan. Thousands of photo-play theatre-goers are awarding their support to the exhibitors who are free to give them the best, and only the best. This is evidenced by the fact that each week's business of this company for months past has shown a material increase over the preceeding week. As soon as you avail yourself of the advantages of this policy and prove to the satisfaction of your patrons that you can give them what they want you may count upon sharing in this prosperity to the fullest, also.

We should be glad to advise with you as to the best methods of acquainting the public that your theatre is so conducted that they make their own selections of features. Will you say the word?

Dear Sirs:

In these days of overproduction, when the market is glutted with film of every calibre, it is indeed refreshing to be able to express appreciation for the consistent photoplays of merit that you are releasing.

From a quality, and box-office point of view you have the entire field lashed to the mast. With such pictures as "The Caveman", "Great Divide", "Misleading Lady", "Battle Cry of Peace", "My Lady's Slipper", each registering a bulls-eye, the exhibitor using your service can readily cast his troubles to the winds, and keep his box office in a constant happy frame of mind.

Trusting that you will keep up the high standard you have set. and with many wishes for good luck, I remain,

Yours truly.

HEARST-VITAGRAPH

HV

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE

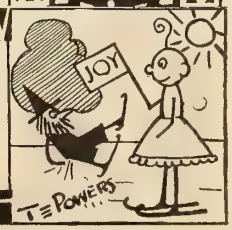
The most terrible war in history is raging—

And somewhere with the troop trains—with the gunners of the big Jack Johnsons—is a man with the lens—filming important events for the HEARST-VITAGRAPH.

A short time ago the schooner Carolina sank in the Gulf Waters, one hundred miles out from New Orleans. A HEARST-VITAGRAPH man was there with his camera in time to grind it in its final plunge.

When the Villa bandits recently murdered seventeen American miners and engineers one early morning, a HEARST-VITAGRAPH frontiersman was on the scene three hours afterward.

With these intrepid camera men in every section of the world, it is no wonder that the HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS PICTORIAL marks an epoch in news and picture gathering.



It is no wonder that successful exhibitors DEMAND the HEARST-VITAGRAPH NEWS REEL and will take no other.

George Bronson Howard

The genius who created "God's Man," the most talked-of recent novel, presents a startling theme in "The Social Pirates"—a series of fifteen two-reel episodes, each a complete story.

Two clever heart-breakers use sharp wits and fascinating beauty to deal justice to parasites and schemers who prey on the unsophisticated. Can you see the opportunity—handled by a Bronson Howard, staged with the screen mastery that gave you "Stingaree"—and with charming Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby in the leads?

They'll bring your patrons back week after week—they'll start the talk that means new business—they'll gain publicity for your house that will be invaluable.

From Seth D. Perkins, manager of the New Garrick Theatre, Los Angeles, comes a telegram reading:

"AM NOW EXHIBITING DAVID HORSLEY PRODUCTION 'VENGEANCE IS MINE!' STARRING CRANE WILBUR. BROKE HOUSE RECORD AND HAVE ARRANGED RETURN DATE."

As the New Garrick Theatre has been doing big business it can be seen that this David Horsley production exerted extraordinary drawing power; and as Mr. Perkins has booked "Vengeance is Mine!" for a return date it is evident that his patrons were more than pleased with it.

And so it is with all David Horsley productions. They make good in the box office and on the screen.

Current and forthcoming five reel productions of the same high artistic calibre and attraction value are: "A Law Unto Himself," featuring Crane Wilbur, released Feb. 28; "The Heart of Tara," with Marvel Spencer, Margaret Gibson, William Clifford and the Bostock Animals, released March 4; "The Hidden Law," with Margaret Gibson, William Clifford and the Bostock animals, released March 25; "The Love Liar," featuring Crane Wilbur, released March 27.

In addition, a David Horsley Cub Comedy production in one reel, featuring George Ovey, is released every Friday.

Bookings for these releases obtainable through exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation,

MARCUS LOEW B. S. MOSS AARON J. JONES

—Titanic Triumvirate—

Immediately volunteer percentages of receipts in their chains of vaudeville and moving picture theatres on Monday, May 15th, final and culminating day of the whirlwind, nation-wide movement.

Writing to Samuel Goldfish, Chairman of the Executive Committee, they voice these sentiments:—

MARCUS LOEW:—"Every person identified in any capacity with the moving picture industry should welcome the opportunity to put the Actors' Fund of America permanently beyond financial need. I know no more worthy human charity. The men and women of the pictures will be proud and prompt, I am sure, in responding to the call. It is in their power to establish a new record in the history of American benefactions, and their only chance to help their fellows of the spoken drama. And the picture-loving public can show its approval by packing the theatres of the country on May 15th."

AARON J. JONES:—"Success and good luck to this great philanthropic undertaking. It is with great pleasure that I donate ten per cent of the gross receipts from all of our theatres for the motion picture campaign for the Actors' Fund of America on Monday, May 15th, 'National Tribute Day.' I want to see every theatre in the United States keenly interested in the work of collecting $500,000 by May 15th. You will get the co-operation of every one in the film business, especially exhibitors, regardless of any business rivalry, because the object is so noble a one."

B. S. MOSS:—"Consider me heartily in accord with all the other men in the film business in this humanitarian undertaking. I will do the best I can to foster and promote the campaign. It is with great pleasure that I offer what theatres are in our charge for the cause. Personally I thoroughly believe in this great philanthropy, I think the results will be immense, and that you will get the $500,000 by May 15th."

Children and Motion Pictures

IT is very instructive to note that at last week's hearing on censorship at Albany the entire discussion centered about the motion picture and the child. At least, it should be instructive—very instructive—to every producer and exhibitor in this country.

THE sole reason for the introduction of the bill for state censorship—this by Chairman Ahearn's own definite admission—is to keep children from seeing pictures they should not see.

The sole object of the worthy if narrow-minded prelates who favored censorship was to protect the child mind from pictures only fit for adult minds.

TO put it more plainly; if picture theatre audiences in New State State were not mixed, not composed of children and adults there would be no Ahearn bill calling for state censorship of all motion pictures.

To go further, if the Ahearn bill, instead of demanding that all pictures be censored from the viewpoint of children, called for the strict segregation of adults and children at picture theatres, it would accomplish entirely its present end and it would be an exceedingly difficult bill to combat.

THE proposition, of course, to censor all pictures down to the level of fitness for children is to make of the motion picture a nursery entertainment; it is to rob the world's third great vehicle of expression of the treasures of art and literature, past, present and to come; it is, in short, preposterous, fundamentally and specifically.

And as such the proposition must appear to every honest-minded and well-informed person in the universe. Not so conclusive, however, is the argument that parents must keep their children from seeing pictures they ought not to see, just as they must keep them from stage plays and from newspapers, books and magazines they ought not to read.

WE are facing conditions here, not theories.

Motion pictures appeal vividly to children from one end of the country to the other. We know they do. They are much more attractive and understandable than newspapers, books and magazines. The price of admission is one that every grown child can readily earn, or beg successfully from most any family exchequer.

It is indeed difficult to argue for parental control, however fair and logical the idea. Evidently parental control is lacking and upon a considerable basis.

The obvious answer is—why not give separate and regular shows for children?

A number of exhibitors are already doing this. Children's days and matinees are successful. And judging from the inquiries and information received almost daily by MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the vogue of children's shows is spreading very fast. All speed to it.

HERE, it would seem, is a fundamental which, in the swift development of the pictures' amusement field, has been largely overlooked.

In the publishing field, the matter of interesting children is a most important factor. The vogue of the comic supplement shows upon its face that it plays a leading part in the sale of the Sunday newspaper. The women's magazines of millionfold circulation have prominent departments catering to children. Many successful publications and book publishing houses appeal exclusively to children.

SO much for cold type and still pictures. The much more vivid and appealing motion pictures, the new vehicle of expression which, far more than any other, is especially adapted to children, has as yet made no serious and definite progress in a field all its own.

Women's clubs are taking up the problem. In many cities women are viewing pictures at the exchanges, making selections and arranging entertainments. At the big convention of the Women's Federated Clubs to take place in New York in May, the main topic of discussion will be motion pictures for children.

The National Board of Censorship is sending out each month a list of pictures selected for children.

THE movement is under way. But in the meanwhile, what is the exhibitor doing? And we may also ask, what is the producer and distributor doing?

Children's days or matinees can be made successful. They can be made to increase the week's gross receipts.

Intelligent advertising is required, of course. This can be done by announcements through the local schools, for one thing. The women's clubs will help.

AND aside from the commercial aspect there is this to be considered—by producer, distributor and exhibitor alike—very seriously considered.

If we had pictures for children and picture shows for children, and if children were kept out of all other shows, we would have no state or federal censorship which today is so imminent that it threatens the livelihood of every one in this industry. And it is equally true that until this selection of pictures and audiences is brought about censorship on a general scale will be actual or imminent.

Vol. XIII March 11, 1916. No. 10

The Pennsylvania Censors' Annual Report

WE have read and listened to many attacks upon the motion picture since legalized censorship became an issue. But for bias and bigotry, reckless insinuation and even more reckless accusation, we must unhesitatingly award the palm to the Pennsylvania Board of Censors, for their annual report, just published and reproduced in this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Their elaborate indictment of the motion picture industry as being sunk in a slough of melodrama we can pass over with a word.

We admit the indictment but, to use a legal phrase, we plead that the acts as set forth do not constitute a crime, as the censors declare.

OUR good enemies, the censors, too rashly assume that melodrama is vile and vulgar. They fail to consider that they are, in the same breath, branding the millions of lovers of melodrama, the world over, as no less vile and vulgar.

If it is true that the majority are never wrong, then the censors cannot be right. As a matter of fact, the love of melodrama—and it has a supreme hold upon the masses of people—is based upon the healthy, normal enjoyment any healthy, normal human being feels at seeing evil overthrown and good triumph.

A melodrama, despised and rejected of the critics though it be, owes its popularity with the people. To that fact—that, no matter what the odds, the villain or villains always lose, and the hero or heroine, or both, always win.

If it be degeneracy to love the sight of right victorious and wrong defeated, then the censors are welcome to their theory, and all it implies.

BUT that is not the supreme injustice of the report. Wantonly, without the slightest excuse, the watchdogs of Pennsylvania morals lift up their voices in lugubrious lament at what the term the overthrow of the "old revered arts of acting, playwriting and producing" by the motion picture.

"The attendance upon picture exhibitions has become nearly a mania with many classes of people."

"Towns which supported one or two theatres where the actor was seen in the flesh and bone now have none."

"The people who used to speak of the merits of this actor or that whom they had seen now come to know only through a picture made of him in California."

"The dramatic editor has been set aside. The space he formerly occupied with his useful (sic) criticism, is filled with the puffery of the latest 'release' of some firm which has taken photographs of some scenes of a play featuring this or that film star."

THIS is the tenor of their wail.

It reminds one of the complaints our grandparents used to make that the fine old stage-coaches of their younger days had been replaced by horrid steam trains.

It is entitled to considerably less consideration than the perfectly natural astonishment of a Colonial gentleman who should suddenly return to this earth and be dumfounded at the absence of knee breeches and periwigs.

THE point is, what business is it of the Pennsylvania censors to hold a brief for the stage, against the motion picture?

Why should Mrs. Niver and Mr. Breitinger and Mr. Oberholtzer feel offended because the motion picture has taken the place of the stage in many towns throughout the country?

Is this animosity one of their official duties as censors? Are they paid by the state—or rather, by the motion picture industry—to mourn for the departed glory of the stage, assuming that it has departed?

Surely they have not been retained by the theatrical interests as official mourners for them. Perish the thought!

THEN why drag in the stage?

Why bemoan the fact that we see actors in "pictures made in California?"

Why lay floral wreaths upon the biers of dramatic editors, whose columns the theatrical and circus advance agents filled with just as much "puffery" as the motion picture has?

Why, in the name of good taste, in the name of that degree of fairness which is, apparently, incompatible with the censor temperament, why drag in the stage?

JUST one final word about the censors' proposal that they be given authority to confiscate any film shown without their authority within the limits of the state.

Before any body of officials is given additional authority, it is just well to make sure that they are capable of using the authority they already possess competently and justly. We do not think that the Pennsylvania censors have demonstrated this.

Their annual report proves that they understand neither the motion picture, nor the motion picture public nor their position as motion picture censors.

Pennsylvania Censors Plan Drastic Move on Films

Board in Communication with Ohio for the Purpose of Calling a Congress of State Censors to Make War on Industry—Keystone State Film Slashers in Annual Report Seek to Justify Their Actions in Bitter Attack on Motives of Manufacturers

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 25.

SEEKING to justify censorship by what is perhaps the most violent attack ever made on the motion picture industry, the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, in its annual report, relentlessly assailed the motives of film manufacturers and vigorously recommended amendments to the law which, if adopted by the Legislature, would permit the confiscation of films and otherwise tremendously increase the already heavy burdens of censorship in this state in a way that would make them almost intolerable for producers and exhibitors alike.

But what is a far more than statewide menace to the industry, is the disclosure made in this report that a definite movement is afoot for interstate co-operation among legalized censors by which it is proposed to extend "the protected area to include adjoining states, especially New York and New Jersey," on the ground that "the enlargement of the territory in which pictures are cleaned by censorship would exert an important influence at the source of supply and determine manufacturers to improve the character of their product."

Moreover, it is made known by the report that the Pennsylvania Board has been in communication with the Ohio board concerning a Congress of State Censors, and "it is proposed that such a meeting shall be held in Philadelphia early this year with a view to reaching some agreement, if possible, as to common action in the several states."

In connection with its recommendation for amendments to the Pennsylvania law aimed at tightening the screws on the motion picture business, the board asks for power actually to "confiscate a film shown within the state without authority, as is done by ordinance in the city of Portland, Oregon; for more inspectors to detect violations of the law; for more power to suppress advertising posters which the board deems objectionable, and authority to bar from Pennsylvania the use of any seal but that of the State Board."

Object to "National Board" Seal

The report particularly specifies that it desires to suppress the seal of the "National Board" which it attacks harshly as a device to deceive the public.

The Pennsylvania Board of Censors consists of J. Louis Breitinger, chairman; Mrs. E. C. Niver, vice-chairman, and Dr. Ellis P. Oberholtzer, secretary. The report has been most carefully prepared in excellent diction and it is doubtful if it could contain more bias as against the motion picture business if it were prepared for the specific purpose of discrediting every branch of the industry. Yet this is a public utterance of a body appointed under the law to pass impartial judgment on films which it is desired to exhibit.

The report throughout is an indictment of manufacturers, distributors and exhitibors of motion picture films whom it openly accuses of deceit, trickery and misrepresentation of the motives for which pictures are prepared, declaring that prurient and salacious themes are introduced under pretense that they teach moral lessons.

The report near the outset reviews the wonderful growth of the industry, and then launches forth into a studied and sweeping attack, as follows:

"The attendance upon picture exhibitions has become nearly a mania with many classes of people. The production waxes with the consumption, and throughout the country the old and revered arts of acting and of playwriting and producing, the management of theatres, dramatic criticisms, etc., have been injuriously influenced, when not entirely done away with by the motion picture.

"Cities which formerly had many stages on which dramatic companies appeared now have but few and the audiences are small.

"Towns which supported one or two theatres where the actor was seen in the flesh and bone now have none. These theatres have become motion picture houses.

"The people who used to speak of the merits of this or that actor whom they had seen now come to know him only through a picture of him made in California. The amusement notices in the columns of the newspapers are picture advertisements.

"The dramatic editor has been set aside. The space he formerly occupied with his useful criticism is filled with the puffery of the latest "release" of some firm which has taken photographs of scenes of a play featuring this or that film star.

Pictures Must Be Reckoned With

"The moving picture, therefore, is a factor to be reckoned with earnestly. It is the only cultural influence enjoyed by millions of persons. The price of admission, five or ten cents, brings it within everyone's reach, daily.

"It attracts child as well as adult, the lowest as well as persons of a higher intelligence. It displaces the book whose plot and action now may be had in an hour in a series of pictures thrown upon the screen.

"The story is presented to multitudes who never would have read it, and much more vividly than by following the printed page. The theme may be materially changed, new episodes will be interpolated to suit the convenience or whim of the director, unsavory incidents in the book will be emphasized, even titles will be cast aside in the interest of sensationalism as when 'La Gioconda' becomes 'The Devil's Daughter'; 'La Tosca,' 'The Song of Hate'; 'The Jewels of the Madonna,' 'Sin'; and 'That Lass O' Lowries,' 'Secret Love.'

"But that the people get but the plot of Shakespeare without the word, the plot of an opera without the song, and have at the end only a more or less accurately pictured story lying back of what we have been taught to esteem so highly in literature and music, is not a great matter to that crowd which takes its drama in a rush at a picture house.

"The manufacturers today are brought into close quarters with one another. The competition is keen. The taste for what is prurient and salacious is well known, and the temptation to satisfy it is so great as to overcome the scruples even of those who earlier had been regarded as respecters of proper rules in the conduct of their business.

"The demand for plots and themes, for new situations and for new scenes is so tremendous that the makers are willing to go to the greatest lengths to find material for their pictures.

"When those who are entrusted with the work of censorship in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Chicago and other parts of the country are asked if the pictures are improving in character, they are constrained to say that this is not the case.

"The character of the American output seems not to be better, while there is an increasing disposition on the part of the manufacturers to object to the advisory oversight of boards established to interpret and express the moral sense of the community.

"In order that they may go to the people with an immoral and degrading story, they let it be known that they are showing us that 'The wages of sin is death'; that there is retribution in the world for evil-doers; that they are sociologists making excursions for good ends into the underworld; that they are betraying and seducing girls to teach some fine lesson.

"Such devices will fail to convince the public that the moving picture stands in any necessary relation with the agencies of good order, so long as it takes a course well explored by the writer of the old dime novel and the melodrama, and almost wholly neglects a field in which with travel and other educational pictures it could make itself so valuable and influential in directing public feeling and thought.

Seventy-Five Per Cent. Melodramas

"We believe as a result of observation that at least seventy-five per cent. of the pictures which are manufactured in this country are plainly melodrama or are so influenced by the melodrama as to be assigned, properly, to this general class.

"At least twenty per cent. of the remainder are comedies, for the most part of a coarseness unknown at any time in the history of the American theatre upon the cheapest variety stage.

"The melodrama is distinguished for its lurid delineation of one or another kind of crime. The habitual visitor of the moving picture house, therefore, lives in a world in which women are betrayed; men and women murder other men and women or kill themselves; fight follows fight; until every standard of conduct of the beholder is in the most imminent danger of debasement.

"Probably few persons have the acquaintance of women who keep revolvers in their bedroom table drawers or go abroad with guns concealed in their blouses, ready at a moment's notice to kill themselves or others.

"Men do not strike and knock down, wrestle and choke, shoot and kill each other in the well-appointed homes of America; yet in every picture under this present melodramatic influence such scenes occur. Lust, hate, vengeance and every variety of villainy, are portrayed, until they seem to be a part of all men's daily experience.

"It is necessary to go back in memory only a short way to recall scenes in pictures brought into the Pennsylvania Board's projection rooms, of men tied together and set adrift in boats loaded with rocks that they may certainly sink; men tied to logs which are being run through sawmills, or strapped to railroad irons in front of moving trains; torture scenes of a variety of horrible kinds; burning at the stake; vivisection; the ravings of lunatics; burial alive, the head protruding that it may be stung by some viper; the catching of a man in a trap to be left for devouring wolves, etc.

"Boards of Censors exist for the purpose of condemning such pictures or parts of pictures, when the whole can be rid of its obnoxious parts.

"The Pennsylvania Board has set its face inflexibly against the pictures which deal with the betrayal of young girls, so common that their coming into our projection rooms is a daily occurence.

"It cuts from any film childbed scenes which are now so frequently found in pictures.

Teaches Moral Lessons

"It orders and attends to the excision of scenes in pictures having to do with the white slave traffic; with the use of habit-forming drugs; with the life of the underworld; with the career of criminals; and such views of movements as may directly incite to crime.

"The Board cannot believe that the motion picture theatre is a medium for teaching the youth of Pennsylvania moral lessons, through melodrama, which it could much better get through the old channels in the church or school, nor will it be turned from its way by appeals for freedom to lay bare or advertise the sordid relationships of life in the name of literature or the dramatic art.

"The history of the drama and of acting in drama are so familiar; the canons of good taste, to say nothing of the moral standards established for the guidance of the human family, are so well established, that appeals to us by motion picture photographers to allow them to indulge their fancies for some vulgar whim or, worse than this, in the hope of increasing their private gains, in the name of 'Liberty of Speech' can be permitted to fall on deaf ears.

"No valid excuse in the name of the drama or of any art can be offered for many of the pictures which even large and leading manufacturers now send out over the country.

"The exhibitors themselves realize the indispensable need of censorship, and in many cases in communities of the better class where there are no state or municipal boards, they run off the reels in their theatres and view them before a public showing is made.

"The confidence of the people gained by an oversight of film will strengthen the industry; it will bring substantial advantages both to manufacturers and exhibitors.

"The question of the oversight of the banners, posters and other advertising material used in connection with motion pictures has also received the attention of the Board, as the Act of Legislature directs.

"This material is often evil beyond the content of the film to which it relates. It is intentionally and deliberately offensive. If there is a horrible crime or a hair-breadth escape in the picture, that scene is chosen for emphasis in the banners.

"If a woman is shown scantily clothed, she is thrown in lurid colors upon the 'paper,' to be hung in front of the theatre door to catch the eye and entice the footsteps of the passerby.

"The Board regrets that its powers are not greater with respect to a matter of so much public importance. It does maintain a general surveillance of the subject in its projection rooms in Philadelphia and in its offices in Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, and through its inspectors as they visit the theatres in the state.

"When the posters are frankly lurid or openly immoral, and invite the public to view that which is not to be found in the picture, this 'paper' is called in and condemned.

Want Protected Area Extended

"No greater need exists at present in Pennsylvania, from the standpoint of censorship, than an extension of the protected area, to include adjoining states, especially New York and New Jersey. So long as these fields remain open, the opportunity for the free passage of objectionable film across our state boundaries is great.

"The enlargement of the territory in which pictures are cleaned by censorship would exert an important influence at the source of supply and determine manufacturers to improve the character of their product.

"Knowing that it would be condemned in many states, they would soon cease issuing it in this form.

"The Pennsylvania Board has been in communication with the Ohio Board concerning a Congress of State Censors, and it is proposed that such a meeting shall be held in Philadelphia early this year, with a view to reaching some agreement, if possible, as to common action in the several states.

"The law of Pennsylvania governing motion picture censorship would be materially strengthened if the Board were given the power to confiscate a film shown within the state without authority, as by provision of ordinance in the City of Portland, Oregon, and other cities.

"Such an amendment would, in the opinion of this Board, be beneficial to the service.

"Another amendment which it recommends would bar from films shown in Pennsylvania any seal but that issued by the State Board. The seals of other states, and particularly of a body supported by the manufacturers, called 'The National Board,' in New York, confuse exhibitors and public alike.

"The exhibitor, if he be uninformed, will believe that 'The National Board' has an authority co-extensive with, if not superior to, the State Boards.

"Everyone is deceived, which is at times the plain intention of the manufacturer, who will put the mark of approval upon his picture without in any way consulting the so-called National Board. These foreign labels are a hindrance to the proper administration of the act, and in so far as they are attached to film shown in the State of Pennsylvania, they should be put under the ban of the law."

Censor Bills Up for Hearing in Jersey and New York

Delegation to Albany Finds Strong Bias Toward Merits (?) of Measure Drafted by Chairman Ahearn, and Members of Codes Committee Appear to Have Made Up Their Minds Before Session Was Called by the Body —Seabury, Counsel for Board of Trade, Exposes Viciousness of Censorship, at Trenton

THE censorship farce was re-enacted at Albany on Wednesday, February 23, when a hearing was held before the Codes Committee of the New York legislature upon the Ahearn bill for state censorship of motion pictures.

These proponents of the bill appeared: Reverend W. J. Mooney of St. Joseph's Church, Albany, N. Y.; Reverend J. H. Dunny, Superintendent of the Diocesan Schools and of the Council of School Superintendents of the Parochial Schools of New York state, and H. C. Barber, Superintendent of the Society of the Prevention of Crime, New York City.

Those who appeared against the bill included: Lee A. Ochs and Samuel H. Trigger for the M. P. E. L. of New York state; J. W. Binder and T. W. Alexander of the M. P. Board of Trade; Doctor Cranston Brenton and Orrin G. Cocks of the National Board of Censorship; W. P. Capes of the Mayor's Conference Committee of New York state; A. S. Friend, vice-president of the Lasky Feature Play Company and representing also the Paramount, Famous Players and World and Equitable companies; Attorney Banzhof, representing D. W. Griffith; W. Stephen Bush of Moving Picture World; James P. Holland, president Federation of Labor of New York state; James Lemke of the I. A. T. S. E.; H. J. Smith of the Operators' Union of Rochester, N. Y.; exhibitors from upper New York state, including Messrs. Linton of Utica, Weinberg and Bitten of Troy; Wm. A. Johnston of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Chairman Ahearn was eminently fair and pleasant; but the committee, while cordial to the opposition, seems hopelessly prejudiced in favor of censorship, almost reminding one in this connection of the Adirondacks Justice of the Peace who slept through a trial and finally brought it abruptly to a conclusion, stating that he had his mind made up in the beginning.

Quick Action Necessary

It is quite apparent that if this wild and widespread movement for legalized censorship is to be checked before the industry is hopelessly wrecked an educational campaign of considerable scope is highly necessary.

Two or three hours' hearing before a committee is scarcely enough to explain the fundamental and specific faults of censorship.

Lee A. Ochs, president M. P. E. L. of the state of New York, presided for the opposition and opened the discussion by stating that in his seven and a half years' experience as an exhibitor he had never had a complaint from his patrons against his pictures. He said that the exhibitor and the public were fully qualified to censor pictures.

During the discussion Chairman Ahearn, the originator of the bill, stated that his sole aim was to safeguard the children of the state from pictures not fit for children. This also was the sole aim of prelates who appeared for the bill.

Barber Attacks Binder

These gentlemen based their remarks upon the preposterous ground that fifty per cent. of all pictures produced today are immoral and that children constitute fully twenty-five per cent. of picture theatre audiences.

Attorney Barber's address was of the same superficial and radical character as characterized his appearance at the federal censorship hearing. Part of his speech was devoted to a personal attack upon J. W. Binder.

The main arguments of the opposition were to the effect that it is preposterous to censor all films down to the level of the child mind; that state censorship would prohibit the profitable production and distribution of pictures in a national way; and that adequate censorship of all motion pictures in New York State would call for a force of at least several hundred censors and assistants.

Film Advocates Advance Arguments at New Jersey Hearing; Kuhlke Defends His Bill

ON the same day that one contingent of motion picture men was combating the New York state censorship measure another equally powerful delegation was protesting before the municipal corporations committee of the New Jersey legislature against the passage of such a measure at Trenton.

Dr. Hespe, the president of the Hudson county exhibitors; Charles C. Hildinger, of the Hildinger enterprises, Trenton, and strong delegations from Jersey City, Newark, Passaic and Paterson were on hand.

The Board of Trade was represented by William M. Seabury, the general counsel; P. A. Powers, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Mr. Bush of the World Film Corporation; Paul Cromelin; and Lesley Mason of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

In addition, the I. A. T. S. E. was present in the person of M. A. Carney and Fred C. Ruhlmann appeared on behalf of the American Federation of Musicians.

Nearly three-quarters of an hour's delay was experienced before the hearing was called to order by Mr. Dalrymple, who presided in the absence of Chairman West of the corporations committee.

The proponents of the bill, headed by Assemblyman Kuhlke, the author of the assembly measure, addressed the committee at length. Members of the Holy Name Society were prominent in advocating censorship.

Vice-President De Paul, of the Trenton Branch, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, also recommended the measure.

Mr. Seabury led for the film interests, dwelling upon the legal aspects of the state and federal censorship situations. Paul Cromelin, following him, addressed the committee on behalf of the producers, and exposed the practical viciousness of censorship.

Then, because time was growing short, the exhibitors took the floor, Dr. Hespe making the plea on behalf of the theatre managers. Mr. Powers arrived late, but in time to make a forceful plea for the manufacturers whose investment within the state of New Jersey represented millions.

The utmost courtesy was shown to the motion picture men by Mr. Dalrymple and his associates, who regretted that they could not grant more time for the speakers of both sides.

Two bills are before the New Jersey legislature at present—the Kuhlke measure, in the assembly, and a copy of the Pennsylvania law; and the Egan measure, introduced into the senate at the instance and under the guidance of the Holy Name Society.

A companion bill of Kuhlke's, that permitting Sunday opening, is also of interest to the exhibitors of New Jersey at this juncture.

V-L-S-E IN DENVER UNDER HARRIS INCREASES BOOKINGS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Denver, Colo., Feb. 19.

The V-L-S-E Exchange, under the management of Frank Harris, reports an increase in business; also that M. T. Zydias, representing a Dallas syndicate, is negotiating for the rental of "The Battle Cry of Peace" for a period of twenty days.

Zydias is running this production in a Dallas theatre at the present time with satisfactory results. Harris states that Zydias is very anxious to run this feature in Fort Worth, El Paso and several more cities in Texas and Arizona. Harris expects to close the deal within a few days.

"KATHLYN" REVIVAL DRAWS CROWDS IN CHICAGO

The revival of "The Adventures of Kathlyn" at the Fine Arts theatre, Chicago, has brought large crowds to the theatre, besides arousing interest throughout the industry.

It is the first motion picture serial to be revived in feature film form, and the Selig company may decide to release it in special service. The re-issue is in ten reels.

Censor Boosters in Maryland Make Peculiar Move

Baltimore Film Circles Suspicious of the Source of Attempted Bribery Talk and Feel a Plan Is on Foot to Discredit in Eyes of Public Men Opposed to Measure

Special to Motion Picture News

Baltimore, Feb. 25.

MARYLAND motion picture interests, and in fact the public generally, are watching with keen interest the result of a sensational expose of a rumor which was sprung in the House of Delegates of the Maryland Legislature on Monday night, February 21, in reference to the Motion Picture Censorship bill.

The bomb was exploded by Delegate Lloyd Wilkinson, of Baltimore, who declared that reports had been circulated that a fund had been collected to be used to defeat the bill.

Mr. Wilkinson has been opposed to the bill. He is a member of the ways and means committee of the house, which committee has the censorship bill under consideration.

Mr. Wilkinson, after having heard of the reports, insisted that the committee bring the bill before the house and have the question of censorship thrashed out on the floor.

It is expected that the bill will be brought out of committee and placed before the delegates within the next day or two.

As a result of the reports, Mr. Wilkinson insisted that Speaker Laird appoint a committee of five to investigate the rumors in connection with the alleged fund. The investigation committee will probably be appointed before the end of this week.

In his address, Mr. Wilkinson said in part:

"On Thursday evening last (Thursday February 17), the ways and means committee, of which I am a member, gave a hearing to a delegation composed of members of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., and various Maryland exhibitors and exchange men, in opposition to the bill, as well as to another delegation in favor of the measure.

"After that hearing a report came to my ears that a fund of $15,000 had been raised and was to be used to defeat this bill. Without justification, without reason, my name was used in connection with this fund.

"There is also a report that after the hearing of Thursday night another member of the committee declared that he had been called to the telephone and informed that 'if he would forego the bill and go to sleep, it would be worth $5,000 to him.'

"I have been opposed to this bill since its introduction. I am opposed to it because I am not a man of means and cannot afford to attend the high-priced theatres. I go to motion picture shows two or three times every week.

"The only man who ever approached me on this question was a gentleman who conducts a motion picture theatre in my neighborhood. He certainly has a right to appeal to me for my support.

"I think it is the duty of this house to cleanse itself of these foul reports. I believe that a committee should be appointed to investigate the whole subject. For myself, I have no fear.

"I have been a member of this house during several terms, and I defy any man to say that I have ever received one cent for any position which I have taken on any proposition.

"We owe it to ourselves that these reports should be traced to their sources and the guilty party or parties brought before the bar of this house."

The motion picture interests of Baltimore, as well as the state, are somewhat mystified regarding the source of the reports. There it a general feeling that the reports were placed in circulation by those who wish the bill to pass, and have taken this course for the purpose of discrediting those who are opposed to the measure.

GAUMONT ISSUES PUBLICATION FOR CAMERAMEN

With Gaumont Gossip going to newspapers and the Gaumont Advance Sheet to picture theatres, the Gaumont Company has added to its list of publications another sheet called Pocket Edition of the Mutual Weekly. It is edited by Pell Mitchell, and sent to cameramen throughout the country who take news pictures.

It contains a great deal of information useful to cameramen, and will be sent to any cameraman who writes Editor Mitchell at the Gaumont Studios, Flushing, N. Y.

VIVIAN MARTIN IN SOUTH FOR HER SECOND FILM SUBJECT

Relief for War Sufferers from Fuller-Tribune Fund

Every Motion Picture Fan Sending Donation Will Receive an Autographed Photo from the Universal Star—First Woman Contributor Is to Get a Prize Doll

IN conjunction with the New York Tribune, and through a nation wide campaign in the moving picture theatres, Mary Fuller, the Universal star, is raising a fund to aid in the alleviation of the suffering of families made destitute by the European war.

The fund will be known as the Mary Fuller Fund, and Miss Fuller has sent a check to the Tribune for $500 with the request that it be divided equally among the destitutes of the nations at war.

To every motion picture fan who makes a donation Miss Fuller promises to send an autographed photograph of herself. Picture theatre managers will show a slide of appeal, bearing a message to picturegoers from the star.

Each patron will receive a small subscription card, bearing a likeness of Miss Fuller, and if the fan will fill in the amount and send it to the New York Tribune he will be credited with the donation and will receive in return an autographed photograph.

A 100-FOOT DIVE IN THE FORTHCOMING KELLERMANN-FOX PICTURE, NOW BEING MADE BY HERBERT BRENON IN JAMAICA

The woman or girl sending in the first contribution will be presented with a beautiful doll, it is announced. This doll was dressed by Miss Fuller, who will make the presentation in the Tribune office.

The Mary Fuller Fund has been in process of formation for several weeks. The American Red Cross and prominent society women of New York have identified themselves with the project.

All funds will be sent to the New York Tribune and by it turned over to the Red Cross at Washington for transfer to the State Department.

American ambassadors in the war-stricken countries will see that the amount is properly distributed. The fund will be divided equally among sufferers of all nations.

Plans are under way for a New York benefit, in which not only motion picture stars, but persons from the dramatic, vaudeville and musical comedy stage will participate.

Sarah Bernhardt has sent to the fund fifteen original autographed photographs of herself which will be distributed each week for fifteen weeks to the person making the largest single contribution for that week.

Stars of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company have prepared interesting souvenirs which will be distributed while the fund is being collected.

"CITY OF ILLUSION" IS NEXT IVAN RELEASE

The next feature production to be made by the Ivan Film Productions will be "The City of Illusion," a six-reel drama which has been written by Ivan Abramson, the versatile author of former Ivan successes.

Expensive and elaborate settings are being prepared in the Ivan studio for the new production on which work will be started immediately.

"Ince's Big Film," In Making 10 Months, Almost Ready

Massive Multiple Reel Feature, Yet Untitled, Required 121,000 Feet of Raw Stock Exposed for 12,000 Footage in Final Form—One Set Cost $35,000 and Required Thirty Carloads of Lumber and $4,000 Glass Besides Tons and Tons of Cement in Its Construction

WHAT undoubtedly will be regarded as one of the most important and significant announcements ever made in the history of the motion picture industry emanated from Inceville this week in the nature of a statement from Thomas H. Ince to the effect that the massive multiple-reel feature which has been in course of production for nearly ten months is virtually completed and soon will be ready for public showing.

While it still remains to be entitled, the production is now and since its commencement has been alluded to in West Coast photoplay circles as "Ince's big picture."

The producer, however, at present is devoting considerable time to the selection of a title, which, it is understood, will be announced in the course of another fortnight.

Although Ince and his chief author, C. Gardner Sullivan, for months previous had been maturing in their minds the basic theme of the story, actual work on its production was begun June 6, 1915.

From that day until the fifth of January, 1916, the task of photographing the some 600 scenes continued. Then the film, in its entirety, was turned over to the cutters who, under Ince's personal supervision, are now rapidly completing their work.

Elaborate Music Score for Picture

When the production has been given Ince's final stamp of approval, it will be delivered into the hands of Victor L. Schertzinger, who will devote his time, uninterruptedly, to the arrangement of the incidental musical score, and with this work finished, it will be presented in public exhibition.

Through what medium the production will find its way to the screens of the country is a matter that has not, as yet, been definitely determined.

Adam Kessel, Jr., president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, is now in Los Angeles, from New York, and is conferring daily with Ince on various matters appertaining to the big picture's premiere.

An idea of the magnitude of the production may be gained from the fact that more than 121,000 feet of film were exposed in the making of it.

This footage, of course, represents retakes, added scenes and waste. The length at which it will be shown, however, will be between 9,000 and 12,000 feet.

The plot about which the story revolves still remains unannounced, although modern warfare—its horrors and its utter uselessness—is admittedly its underlying note. It is an original work of C. Gardner Sullivan.

What is, perhaps, the largest, costliest and most substantial setting ever constructed for a photodramatic spectacle was used in this subject.

It was erected at an approximate cost of $35,000 and still stands majestically atop one of the hills at Inceville, enduring the elements as successfully as though it had been intended as a permanent structure. This setting represents the palace, house of parliament, prison, royal court and adjacent building in a mythical kingdom, which is the locale of the piece.

Thirty Carloads of Lumber for Set

The first spadeful of earth, in preparation for the erection of the set, was turned in May, 1915, a full month before actual photography began.

Not until November was the set in readiness for use. Thirty carloads, or approximately 600,000 feet of lumber, were used in the construction.

Glass valued at a total of $4,000 was necessary for the hundreds of windows, while tons upon tons of cement and plaster were used as the other principal materials.

Ten tons of cement were required for the steps of the two largest buildings. The sidewalks with their curbings measured some 1,200 feet. Twenty men were employed for three months laying them and the parkings within them.

Trees, shrubbery, and lamp posts were among the natural adornments that were placed within the boundaries of the set. The entire setting covered an area of six and a half acres.

Mr. Ince, in making it, enjoyed the undivided collaboration of Raymond B. West, who is looked upon as one of the foremost photographic experts in the industry.

The cast which will be seen in the production embraces players who, with one exception, have been under the Ince direction throughout their respective motion picture careers.

The big role was played by Herschel Mayall, the well-known leading man of the speaking stage, who has been appearing in Ince productions for the past four years.

Next to Mayall, in point of importance, is Howard Hickman, whose work also, it is predicted, will merit enthusiastic praise.

The remainder of the cast is made up of J. Frank Burke, Charles K. French, Lola May, George Fisher, Ethel Ullman, Jerome Storm and J. Barney Sherry.

LEVINNES DIRECTS "FOUR MONTHS" FOR AMERICAN FILM COMPANY

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 25.

Carl M. LeViness, who was a former director with several Coast motion picture companies, has been given the direction of an American Company and is starting his first production.

The photoplay is "Four Months," by Karl Coolidge, and is an unusual drama in three parts. The principal roles will be taken by Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh, and George Periolat.

Horsley Announces Principles for Congress Race

There Is a Number of Sound Planks in His Platform, but the Main One Deals with Freedom from Interference and Oppression for the Picture Industry

DAVID HORSLEY has announced the platform upon which he will make his race for the nomination at the primaries in August as a candidate for Congress from the Tenth District of California.

He goes on record as favoring: Fair play; equal rights; free speech; a free press; liberty for motion pictures; truth and frankness; flood control at Federal expense; full development of Los Angeles and its harbor; protection of American industries through tariff legislation; preparedness against attack; protection of American citizens in Mexico even at the cost of intervention, and the upholding of the rights of the United States everywhere in the world; peace, even if we have to use force to get it; the fortifying of the Pacific Coast against attack.

He signifies his opposition to: favoritism; censorship of the platform and pulpit; censorship of the newspapers; censorship of motion pictures; censorship of the stage; plunder of the people through tariff legislation; baiting the railroads and corporations into bankruptcy.

The main plank of his platform, it is announced, is freedom from interference and oppression for the motion picture and those arts with which it is closely allied, whether by censhorship or any other way.

Speaking of his candidacy, Mr. Horsley says: "For myself, I have always believed that our great industry should have representation at Washington.

"The fight I am about to make is not mine alone. It is one in which the entire industry should take part, for whatever benefit is to come from it will be for the good of all of us. With the proper support we will win."

CULVER CITY BUILDING LEASED BY NYMP FOR CUTTING ROOM

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 24

The Culver City Theatre and building, near the new Culver City studio, has been leased by the NYMP Company and Thomas H. Ince. A portion of the building will be used for cutting rooms, and Triangle plays will be shown here on Wednesday and Saturday evenings.

Thomas H. Ince is manager of the theatre, and the opening bill consisted of "Old Heidelberg" and "Fickle Fatty's Fall."

Ten Thousand People Crowd Second Milwaukee Ball

At Event Held in Municipal Auditorium Mayor Bading and Margaret Clayton Led the Grand March—Bryant Washburn and Other Stars on the Floor

Special to Motion Picture News

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 25.

OVER ten thousand people jammed the huge municipal Auditorium Saturday night, February 13, the event being the second annual ball of the Milwaukee Motion Picture Exhibitors Association.

The attendance broke all the records of the huge hall. Not even President Wilson on the occasion of his last visit here some weeks ago appeared before so great a throng as did Margaret Clayton, Bryant Washburn, Hobart Henley and Edward Babille, who were the guests of honor.

The appearance of Washburn and Miss Clayton in the hall was the occasion for a veritable ovation, and young girls and matrons fought their way through the densely packed humanity that surrounded his box to shake his hand.

It was a very representative and orderly crowd, however, and despite the immense size of the throng there was no disorder at any time. Among the occupants of the boxes were Mayor G. A. Bading and Mrs. Bading, Judge John J. Karel, Judge Bert Hedding, Judge John Gregory, City Attorney Daniel Hoyne, District Attorney Winifred Zabel and many others equally well known.

In addition to inviting the various photoplay stars from Chicago, the committee in charge of the arrangements invited all of the theatrical folk playing in Milwaukee, including the members of the Shubert Theatre stock company.

The grand march, which was held under difficulties on account of the thousands that were on the floor, was led by Mayor Bading and Margaret Clayton.

Others in line were Bryant Washburn and Mrs. Bading, Ione McGrane and Harry Minturn, leads with the Shubert theatre stock company, Mr. and Mrs. Babille, Mr. Henley and Mrs. F. D. Day.

At one end of the hall were a number of display booths occupied by the various film exchanges. The feature of this display was a live gold rooster at the Pathe booth.

This rooster, which attracted wide attention, was the idea of William Ashton, who is in charge of the local Pathe branch.

Other features of the display were the red feathers given out at the Universal booth and the distribution of magazines at the Metro stand in charge of Edward H. Hoyt.

Others who had booths were the General Film Company, Paramount, Moving Picture Operators' Union and the Mutual Film Company.

Following the ball a dinner was served in the banquet hall of the auditorium by the exhibitors. All the members of the exhibitors association as well the Mayor and the other guests of honor attended.

Speeches were made by the Mayor, Judge Karel, Washburn, Miss Clayton, Henley, Edward Babille, F. D. Day and Frank Cook.

The talk delivered by Miss Clayton was the feature of the evening and she was roundly applauded.

The following committees were in charge:

Arrangement Committee: Chairman, H. Trinz, Geo. Fischer, Otto Meister, Chas. Phillips, Harry Graham, P. Langheinrich and B. K. Fischer.

Floor Committee: Chairman, Paul Langheinrich, Ed. Trinz, J. B. Olinger, Max Kantak, Joe Schwartz, M. Rice, Joe Zinkel and N. Hoyer.

Reception Committee: Chairman, J. Grauman, Otto Enders, Otto Preusser, David Feinberg, Richard Laufer, G. Bradock, Ed. Trinz, Al. Berg, Frank Hensler and Phil. Gross, Jr.

Exhibit and Program Committee: Chairman, B. K. Fischer, Sam Trinz, Frank Cook, Otto Meister, Orville Sprecher, Otto Preusser, A. Reis and Thos. G. Lee.

A CORNER OF THE CROWD AT THE MILWAUKEE EXHIBITORS' BALL

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA COMMITTEE OF ACTORS' FUND FIRST MONEY RAISING CAMPAIGN

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 24.

The southern California committee of the Actors' Fund of America, has completed the first of the series of campaigns to raise money for the million-dollar endowment needed to insure the permanency of the organization.

The closing week of the campaign was a strenuous one, and known as Actors' fund week at the Los Angeles theatres.

The mayor of the city designated this by a special proclamation, and with the exception of one or two houses, all took part.

Some theatres added a few cents to the admission price, while others had offering boxes placed at the aisles.

Every evening prominent people of the photoplay colony appeared at the theatres and gave short talks regarding the actors' fund.

Included in this long list were: David Wark Griffith, Thomas H. Ince, Victor Moore, Theodore Roberts, Frank Reicher, Crane Wilbur, Constance Collier, Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, Tyrone Power, Master Georgie Stone, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Murray, Anita King, Wilfred Lucas, Dustin Farnum, William H. Thompson, Frank Keenan, Willie Collier, William Duncan and others.

BURNET AND KUHN FORM ADVERTISING AGENCY

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 25.

A new advertising agency was organized this week by J. Sidney Burnet and Paul R. Kuhn, who formerly were associated with the Mahin Advertising Company, of Chicago. Both principals are well known in Chicago and New York advertising circles.

The new company will be known as the Burnet-Kuhn Advertising Company and will plan, write and place advertising campaigns in newspapers and magazines.

It has established offices at 625 New York Life Building, 39 South LaSalle street, Chicago.

"DOORS OF DOOM" REQUIRED EXPERT ENGINEERING ADVICE FOR RESCUE SCENE

"At the Doors of Doom," a current Lubin production, required the services of a civil engineer in its making. One of the thrilling scenes is the rescue of the hero from the interior of an immense siphon which spans a canyon.

It required engineering skill to place the siphon at the proper point to take the inrush of water which threatened the hero's life.

MADISON WEEKS CAST FOR A GAUMONT

Madison Weeks, who has had an opportunity to display dramatic ability in his home town of Jacksonville, Fla., in a stock company there, will make his screen debut in "According to Law," now being filmed with Mildred Gregory in the star role.

EDESON CAST FOR NEW CURWOODS STORY BY VITAGRAPH

Robert Edeson is to apear in another Vitagrah feature, it is announced by that company. The actor has been re-engaged for a feature film of the Northwest to be filmed at Port Henry under the direction of William Humphrey. Director Humphrey and his company left New York for that place on Tuesday last.

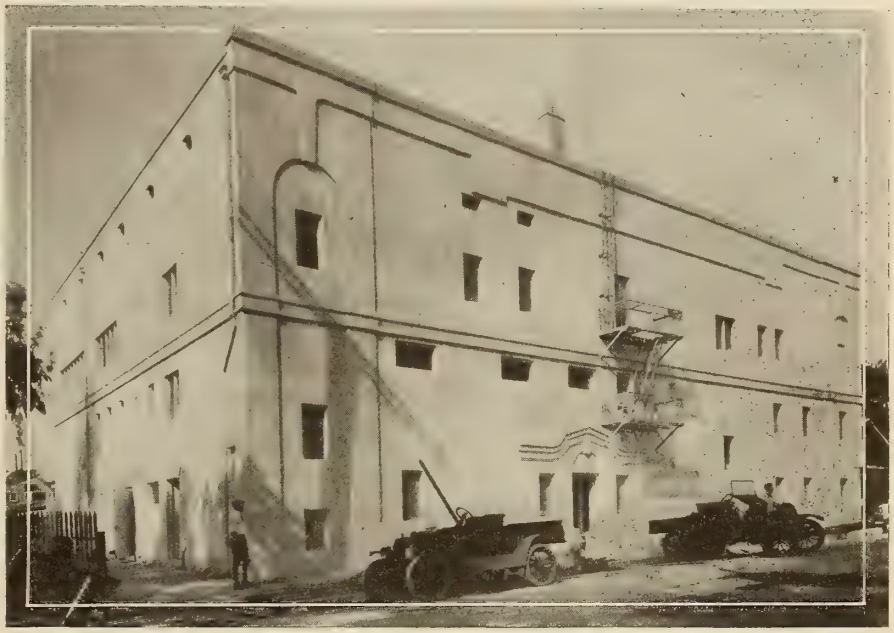
The production in which Edeson will be seen is another of James Oliver Curwood's tales. Curwood has given the screen some powerful works, and his latest, "Fathers of Men," is said to surpass his previous efforts.

Featured with Edeson will be Naomi Childers, one of the most beautiful of the Vitagraph's many actresses. Harry S. Northrup, Emmanuel Turner, Carolyn Birch, Betty Howe, Bobby Connelly and others will be seen in the cast and at present are at Port Henry.

SEVENTEEN-YEAR-OLD WINNER OF BEAUTY CONTEST NOW A THANHOUSER PLAYER

Pearl Shepard, who was chosen as the most beautiful girl at the recent movie ball at Madison Square Garden, New York, will have an opportunity to become a motion picture star through Thanhouser films.

Miss Shepard, who is seventeen years old and a graduate of a public school in New York, won the beauty contest over a hundred entries.



PEARL SHEPARD

She will now take her place in the Thanhouser stock company where Florence La Badie with coach her.

It is announced that she will probably be seen in a picture in which she will work with Doris Grey, who secured a place in the Thanhouser organization by winning the recent Boston beauty contest.

Lasky Laboratory Means an Outlay of $125,000

When in Operation It Will Give Employment to Seventy-Five People—Interior Lighting System Installed by Special Representative of the Eastman Kodak Company

NEW LABORATORY AND THEATRE AT THE LASKY STUDIOS, HOLLYWOOD, CALIFORNIA

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Feb. 24.

THE new laboratory of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, at Hollywood, California, has the distinction of being the most modern and efficient building of its kind in America.

When complete, and fully equipped, it will represent an outlay of $125,000, and when in operation it will give employment to seventy-five people.

It was designed by Cecil B. DeMille, director general of the Lasky Company, and Alvin Wyckoff, director of photography. The completed plans represent three months of careful study.

The building is solid concrete, three and one-half stories in height, and in addition to the rooms used for the developing and printing of motion picture film, contains a fully equipped theater with a seating capacity of 150.

This theater is to be used for the entertainments given by the members of the Lasky Company, as well as for the projection of the pictures.

There is not a door between any of the dark rooms and the drying room, sunlight being excluded by cleverly arranged light breaks. The interior lighting system was installed by a special representative of the Eastman Kodak Company, who was brought to the Lasky studio for that purpose.

The light is so diffused that it is possible for the employee to work in the dark rooms in a light practically as clear as that of day.

With the new arrangement, every employee upon entering the building, goes into a large locker room and there changes to his or her laboratory costume of white, with white rubber soled shoes and white gloves.

The building is so arranged that from the negative developing room to the shipping room, the film never doubles on its course, but moves systematically forward; as fast as the work of one department is finished, the film is sent directly to the next, so that there is no crossing and recrossing and doubling back.

One of the unusual features of the building is a director's cutting room. In this the director and his assistants can prepare his production entirely remote from any outside disturbance.

For the testing of each positive before it is shipped to the distributing company, a number of small projecting machines have been installed, presided over by a competent inspector.

In the basement of the building the huge filtering, heating and refrigerating plants are located. In the drying rooms the filtered air changes every minute and a half, while in the remainder of the building, washed and cleaned air is changed every three minutes.

By means of the unusual, automatic refrigerating and heating system, an even temperature is maintained inside the building throughout the entire year.

Throughout, the building is equipped with the most modern machinery, the perforating and printing machines having been especially made for the Lasky Company. Under complete operation the plant will have a capacity for turning out 500,000 feet of perfect film a week.

ALMA HANLON CAST WITH THEDA BARA FOR FOX

Alma Hanlon, well known ingenue, will be seen in "Gold and the Woman," a William Fox production in which Theda Bara is starred.

This picture contains a notable cast, including H. Cooper Cliffe, Carleton Macy, George Walsh, Frank Whitson, and Pauline Barry.

EXHIBITORS' DEMANDS CAUSE RE-ISSUE OF "HEART PUNCH"

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company has received so many requests for "The Heart Punch," with Jess Willard in the leading role, that it has been decided to re-issue this one-reel drama, and every Universal exchange throughout the country is now ready to fill orders for "The Heart Punch."

In view of the fact that Jess Willard is matched to meet Frank Moran at Madison Square early in March, many of the exhibitors in all parts of the country sent in demands to exchanges for another showing of the Jess Willard picture which prompted the Universal to send it out as a special release.

HUMPHREY AND BERGER CO-DIRECT A "BEAUTY"

Orral Humphrey, famous as Marmaduke Smythe in "The Diamond from the Sky," and Rea Berger, a character actor who has gained wide popularity in American productions, are now co-directing one of the American "Beauty" companies.

Both men have had long film experience. Their comedies will be of the "character comedy" sort.

One of the new variety to be released is "Persistent Percival," which will appear on the Mutual Program March 12.

Cleveland Film Folk Agree on Pay-in-Advance Plan

General, Mutual and Universal Will Extend Credit for 5 Days to Members of League in Good Standing—Association Must Make Known Standing of Exhibitors to Renting Cos.

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, Feb. 26.

NEGOTIATIONS extending over several weeks have resulted in an agreement being reached between the exhibitors of Cleveland and the managers of the various film exchanges affected on the payment in advance question.

At last Tuesday's meeting of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League the following resolutions, drafted by C. M. Christenson, manager of the Cleveland Mutual Film Corporation exchange, were unanimously adopted:

Beginning with Monday, February 28, 1916, the following procedure is agreed upon between the General Film Company, the Universal Film Company, the Mutual Film Corporation and the members of the Exhibitors' League: The film renting companies above mentioned will extend credit for five days to members of the league in good standing, for example, payment for the current week's service may be made not later than 11 o'clock a. m. Saturday.

It is understood by all parties hereto that exchange accounts run as follows—the week starting with a Monday and ending with a Sunday.

It is also further agreed that any member of the league customer wishing to cancel film service shall give the exchange one week's written notice.

It is further agreed by the film exchanges that in case they wish to terminate any member customer's service, the customer is to be given one week's notice before cancellation.

All members of the Exhibitors' League in good standing shall make application to any one of the above mentioned film companies for credit, and the film company will ask for credentials before the credit is extended, as per Article No. 1. The membership card number will be recorded on all film contracts.

It is herewith agreed that the secretary of the Exhibitors' League shall keep the exchanges supplied with a list of the members in good standing, and supplement such list from time to time with names of new members.

It will be the duty of the secretary of the Exhibitors' League to notify the above mentioned exchanges immediately of the suspension or expulsion of members from the league.

It will be the duty of the above mentioned exchanges to suspend credit, as per Article No. 1, to any member of the league who may be suspended or expelled, until such time as they are in good standing, and the exchange has been so notified by the secretary of the league.

It is also herewith agreed that before a new member is accepted to membership in the league his application must have the endorsement of the committee appointed to act on applications, and must be voted on by the members of the organization at a regular meeting.

It is further agreed that a credit standing must be established to the satisfaction of the commitee appoined to act on applications before a new member can be elected to the league.

Special representative Charles A. McGown was authorized to have a number of cards printed for distribution among members of the Federation of Women's Clubs of Cleveland.

On these cards the women interested in "better pictures" and "family programs" will record their opinions of the various pictures they see at the different motion picture houses to which they are invited by the exhibitors.

"We want to get somewhere in this business," Mr. McGown said. If we can get some idea of the kind of pictures the women are likely to endorse perhaps we can arrange programs for them when they are ready to do something tangible.

"We do not want them to act as a board of censors and to criticize. We want them to tell us which pictures they approve."

To-day collection boxes are placed in more than 170 motion picture theatres in Cleveland in connection with the general movement to raise funds for Associated Charities, one of the largest of Cleveland's philanthropic bodies.

William Gillette a Screen Actor with Essanay

Celebrated Legitimate Player Will Appear in Photoplay Versions of "Secret Service" and "Sherlock Holmes," Released as Multiple Features Through V-L-S-E

WILLIAM GILLETTE has joined the ranks of screen stars. He has just contracted with Essanay to appear in photoplay versions of "Secret Service" and "Sherlock Holmes," which will be released as multiple reel features on the V-L-S-E program.

Mr. Gillette has already begun work before the camera for "Sherlock Holmes," which will be the first release. "Secret Service" will follow shortly after.

This celebrated legitimate star has never before consented to adapt to pictures the plays which he wrote and made famous by his playing of the leading roles. It is said he rejected a number of offers from producers, until he agreed to play for Essanay.

William Gillette was born in Hartford, Conn., July 24, 1855, the son of Francis Gillette, long a United States senator from Connecticut.

His elder brother, Edward Hooker Gillette, also entered politics, having served in Congress as a representative from Iowa, to which state he moved from New England.

Following graduation from a preparatory school young Gillette chose the stage as his profession and played in stock companies while completing his education with special courses at the University of New York, Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Boston University.

In 1877 he undertook theatrical work exclusively and played with stock companies successively at New Orleans, New York, Boston, Cincinnati and Louisville.

By this time he had won national recognition and decided to attempt the staging of several plays which he had written for himself. This he did with encouraging success and since he has written everything in which he has appeared.

WILLIAM GILLETTE

"Sherlock Holmes" added to his fame and later "Secret Service" upheld the reputation he had won.

Mr. Gillette is a member of the National Institute of Arts and Letters and makes his home in New York the greater part of the year.

DALY PRODUCING "AT PINEY RIDGE"

William Robert Daly is producing the celebrated play, "At Piney Ridge," by David W. Higgins. Fritzi Brunette will enact "Cindy," a role which will show her emotional powers. This is a Selig film.

THREE DRAMATIC SCENES IN "HER GOD," AN EQUITABLE FEATURE STARRING GAIL KANE

UNIVERSAL NEEDS SHORT COMEDIES AND DRAMAS FOR EASTERN COMPANIES

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company is in urgent need of one and two reel comedies and dramas for its eastern companies, especialy material which can be used to feature such stellar people as Mary Fuller, Violet Mersereau, Ben Wilson, Matt Moore, Jane Gail, Harry Benham, Billy Garwood, Dorothy Phillips, King Baggot, Florence Lawrence, Ethel Grandin, Hobart Henley and Edith Roberts.

The script desired should call for short casts and very few sets and with a plot or story so arranged as to be well produced inexpensively, in modern American environments. The comedies should be spontaneously humoristic and should not call for slap-stick. Only scripts from established writers are desired and the company is in a position to pay from $25 to $100 a reel for acceptable material. Writers should bear in mind that these scripts are only for the requirements for the eastern studio, and should be sent to the Scenario Editor, 1600 Broadway, New York City, sufficiently stamped with stamped and self-addressed envelope for return of manuscript or reply. The needs of the western studios will be made known shortly.

EQUITABLE COMPANY IN DESERT 11 WEEKS FOR "HER GOD"

Equitable announces that it is lavishing both time and money upon Gail Kane's forthcoming feature, "Her God."

Fourteen weeks have now been consumed in the making, eleven of which were spent by the company on the deserts of Arizona and New Mexico and three weeks on construction of ancient adobe villages and huts.

It will require three weeks more to complete interiors. April 3 has been set as the release date.

ASHER GOES TO CLEVELAND FOR LESSER

E. M. Asher, special representative of Sol L. Lesser, left a few days ago for Cleveland and Chicago in the interest of "The Ne'er-Do-Well." Mr. Asher will be absent from the New York office about a week.

Indianapolis Agog Over Convention on March 2-3

All Leading Exchanges Will Have Exhibits and a Floor of Hotel Severin Is Reserved for Exhibition Booths—Stars from Principal Companies Invited to Attend

Special to Motion Picture News

Indianapolis, Feb. 25.

MUCH interest is being shown in the first annual convention and ball of the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors, which will be held March 2 and 3 at the Hotel Severin and Tomlinson Hall, in Indianapolis.

Telegrams have been sent to many of the leading photoplay stars of the country, asking them to attend the ball, and several have wired their acceptances.

Among those who were asked to attend the ball are Mary Pickford and Blanche Sweet, of the Paramount program; Theda Bara, of the Fox; Earle Williams and Anita Stewart and Hughey Mack, of the Vitagraph company; Bryant Washburn and Robert Arnold, of the Essanay company; Ruth Roland and Clayton Hall, of the Pathé company; Crane Wilbur, Margaret Gibson and Florence La Badie, of the Mutual program; Olga Petrova and Francis X. Bushman, of the Metro program, and Lillian Walker, Mary Charleson and Katie Price, of the Vitagraph; Alice Brady, Florence Reed, and Robert Warwick, of the World Film Corporation; Mary Fuller, Violet Mersereau, King Baggot and J. Warren Kerrigan, of the Universal; Morris MacDermott, of the Kleine-Edison program, and Lillian Gish and Bessie Barriscale, of the Triangle program.

F. J. Rembusch, the screen man, of Shelbyville, is chairman, and L. H. O'Donnell, of Washington, president of the state association, is acting in the capacity of adviser, and will be one of the principal participants in the activities of the convention.

Ernest P. Hunter, Indianapolis, is secretary; Joseph H. Gavin is treasurer of the arrangements committee. Those in charge of the different arrangements follow: Entertainment and publicity, Fred Sanders; reception, J. C. Lockwood; finance, Ben Barton; program, Bingham, Crose and Cohen.

John B. Hubert, who fell dead February 22, was in charge of the arrangements of the ball. No announcement has been made as to who will have charge of the arrangements in his place.

There are about 725 exhibitors in Indiana, and it is hoped to have a majority of them attend the convention.

The convention will open at 10 o'clock, Thursday, March 2, with registration in Room 1222, Hotel Severin. The convention will open at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at the Hotel Severin with an address of welcome and an address by L. Hugh O'Donnell, of Washington, president of the state association; and the appointment of committees.

A general discussion of things pertaining to the motion picture business and how to build up a program will be held at 3 o'clock. A special entertainment will be held at 8:30 in the evening.

Friday morning the convention will open at 10 o'clock. The manufacturers who have exhibits will give five-minute talks, beginning at 11:30.

J. W. Binder, secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, of New York, will deliver an address at 2 o'clock.

The unfinished business will be taken up at 3 o'clock, and the election of officers will be held at 4 o'clock, followed by new business.

Governor Samuel M. Ralston has promised to attend the ball, which will be held Friday evening at 8 o'clock at Tomlinson Hall.

All the leading exchanges will have exhibits at the convention, and one floor of the hotel has been reserved for the exhibits. The Seeburg Organ Company, of Chicago, of which J. B. Jameson is the representative, is planning to send one of its large organs to the hotel for the convention.

REALISTIC SETTINGS OF CIVIL WAR DAYS FOR "REUNION"

"The Reunion," a Thanhouser-Mutual three-act war drama, with Isolde Illian, J. H. Gilmore and Ethel Jewett, has been provided with realistic settings typical of Civil War days, according to the manufacturer's announcement.

It is a love story of a veteran of the war and his sweetheart, who waited fifty years for him to claim her.

BELL GETS RIGHTS FOR THREE STATES FROM KANE

William H. Bell, president of the W. H. Bell Feature Film Corporation and of Popular Features, Inc., Chicago, Ill., left New York City February 19 for home after spending two weeks there.

Mr. Bell attended many trade, as well as private, showings of pictures while there and made arrangements for a number of productions.

Mr. Bell's interests are becoming quite extensive. He has found it necessary in order to take care of his business in the northwest to organize a new enterprise.

This is Favorite Features, Inc., with headquarters in Minneapolis, of which he is general manager. M. Gottlieb is resident manager.

For this new office Mr. Bell secured an attractive line of subjects and as a leader he bought from Arthur S. Kane, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, the rights for Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota of "Somewhere in France."

This is the five-reel French war picture obtained by Donald C. Thompson, which now has been placed in nearly all territories of the country.

ROTHACKER WILL BRANCH OUT BEYOND INDUSTRIAL FIELD

Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, successors to the Industrial Moving Picture Company of Chicago, announces that with the completion of his new laboratory and studios he will extend his operations beyond the industrial field, and will make public his plans in this regard when the new plant is formally opened next April.

Mr. Rothacker has been a motion picture manufacturer for more than six years. He is one of the vice-presidents of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, director of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago, and president of the Typewriter Film and Slide Company.

Gertrude McCoy Joins Gaumont in Jacksonville

Actress Will Appear in 5 Reel Masterpicture De Luxe "Quality of Faith," Directed by Garrick, in Accordance with Policy to Star Well-Known Screen Players

THREE OF THE LATEST POSES OF GERTRUDE McCOY

GERTRUDE McCOY, a motion-picture favorite here and abroad, has joined the Gaumont players at the Jacksonville, Fla., studios.

She will be starred in a five-reel Masterpicture De Luxe, "The Quality of Faith," by Charles T. Gardiner, and will be directed by Richard Garrick.

Like a good many others who have achieved success before the camera, Miss McCoy took her first screen lessons under the direction of D. W. Griffith at the Biograph studios.

Then she was for a time with Pathé. Her longest association—covering five and a half years—was with Edison. Her prominence is attested by the fact that a number of theatres have been named after her.

Before appearing in pictures Miss McCoy was on the legitimate stage. She is also a writer of photoplays, among them: "United in Danger," "What Could She Do?" "On the Stroke of Twelve," and "Through Turbulent Waters." She is a native of Rome, Ga.

The Gaumont company announces that its engagement of Miss McCoy is in line with its announced policy of starring in its five-reel productions photoplayers already famous on the screen. These productions are released through the Mutual Film Corporation as Masterpictures De Luxe.

Eleven Regular and 3 Special Companies at American

Latest Addition, Under Direction of Edward Sloman, Will Work in Five Reel Features, with Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie Dividing Honors

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Feb. 24.

WITH eleven regular and three special companies soon to be producing at the American studios at Santa Barbara, the "Flying A" plant will be one of the largest and busiest picture producing concerns in the country.

The new regular company will be under the direction of Edward Sloman, formerly with Universal, Balboa and Lubin, and will produce only five-reel features.

Winnifred Greenwood will divide honors with Franklin Ritchie, late of the Biograph and Ince organizations.

Although the personnel of the rest of the company has not yet been announced, several well-known actors and actresses who have signed contracts with the American recently will probably be in the casts of the pictures to be made.

These new people include Gypsy Abbot, Hylda Hollis, Julia Harrington, Clarence Burton, Charles Wheelock and Harry Keenan.

The place in the three-reel company directed by Thomas Ricketts, which has been filled for some time by Winnifred Greenwood, will be taken by Lizette Thorne, who has played a variety of roles for the American. Edward Coxen and George Field will still remain with this company.

One of the special companies will soon produce "The Mystery of the Submarine," a strong serial of ten installments of three reels each. The plot is a unique one, which contains vast possibilities for unusual effects.

Although the scenarios are being prepared under the supervision of William Pigott, scenario editor, neither the director nor the members of the serial company have yet been announced.

Audrey Munson, the model who posed for many of the statues for the San Francisco Exposition, will be featured in the third special company.

This will film an artistic allegory in at least seven reels. Miss Munson's contract makes it necessary to start production in about a month.

Another special company will be headed by Frank Borzage, who will also direct, and Eugenie Forde, and a five-reel unconventional feature is now being written especially for them.

Although the plans do not include more than this one picture, it is probable that several features will be produced later.

ILLUSTRATING "ALL BOWLED UP" AND "PERSISTENT PERCIVAL," TWO VOGUE-MUTUAL COMEDIES

POPULAR PICTURES ABSORBS SUN PHOTOPLAY

The Popular Pictures Corporation, in which Andrew J. Cobe is interested, has taken over the Sun Photoplay Company, Inc., and established headquarters at 218 West Forty-second street, New York.

The merger of the companies was completed last Tuesday. A. C. Langan, former president and general manager of the Sun Photoplay Company will fill an executive official position and also act as a director of the Popular forces.

Exactly what the scope and future activities of the newly merged companies will be has not yet been announced. A directors' meeting will be held shortly at which the future policy of the corporation will be outlined and made public.

Mr. Cobe is widely known throughout the country as an active factor in the motion picture field.

BEAUMONT, ESSANAY, A FIGHT FAN

Harry Beaumont, who takes one of the leading parts in "The Discard," latest Essanay multiple reel feature, is a fight fan.

He is now writing a two-reel comedy drama, built on the humorous efforts of two near-champions to reach the top. Beaumont will play the lead himself.

Best Theatres Book 7 E. and R. Animal One Reelers

Policy of Clean, Rapid Action Comedies, Featuring Highly Trained Beasts, Meets with Quick Response from Exhibitors on Lookout for Novel Plots for "Family Programs"

ALTHOUGH no general announcement has yet been made concerning the productions of the E. and R. Jungle Film Company, the members of this Los Angeles studio have been busily at work for the past few months. Its output is one-reel comedies featuring the two cleverest chimpanzees in existence, Napoleon the Great and Sally His Mate.

To date seven comedies have been released, six of them starring Napoleon and Sally, the other exhibiting about every remaining inmate of the E. and R. Jungle.

"From Jungle to Trouble," "Uncle's Little Ones," "A Jungle Cure," "What D'ye Think of That?," "Pa's Family Tree," "The Adventures of Sally" and "The Jungle Kid" have already found their way to the screens of the progressive theatres throughout the country.

Representatives of Marcus Loew, William Fox, B. S. Moss, B. F. Keith and F. F. Proctor, after seeing the first few of the subjects immediately signed up for the entire output of the company, which totals one a week.

The novelty, cleanliness and laughable plots of the pictures combined with the funny appearance of the chimpanzees were important factors in the immediate success of the pictures.

The policy of the E. and R. Jungle Film Company now firmly established through the medium of its first releases, is to produce nothing but clean cut, rapid action comedies. Slapstick in its customary meaning plays no part in the pictures.

Clever stories that give the chimpanzees real parts which they justly deserve are being written by authors of proven ability.

Napoleon and Sally do more than merely walk through the scenes of their pictures. Each member of the pair was recruited from the vaudeville stage and they have brought to the screen any number of stage tricks which serve them well before the camera.

They are not shy at all, and they go about their work with obvious understanding, entering into the spirit of the picture with appreciative intelligence.

Messrs. Edwards and Rounan, respectively the E. and R. of the Company, have secured the services of Louis W. Chaudet as director of the comedies.

Mr. Chaudet has had a long experience in the direction of animal pictures and knows his business thoroughly.

He was formerly employed by Selig and while with that company produced the first motion picture serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," which relied largely on the introduction of wild animals for much of its interest

Mr Chaudet's experience with Selig fits him specially for the position he now holds and he was selected by Messrs. Edwards and Rounan because of this wide experience in the handling of animals.

The productions of the E. and R. Jungle Film Company are absolutely independent. Though it has received offers from various program and feature houses for the sole rights of the pictures, the heads of the company have adopted the state rights method of marketing the subjects. This course has been pursued with great success.

Peacocke with California to Adapt "Kismet"

Man Who Has 400 Produced Photoplays to His Credit Will Scenarioize "Arabian Nights" Tale for Ten Reel Exploitation of Otis Skinner, Under Beyfuss Management

THE California Motion Picture Corporation has engaged the exclusive services of Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, an experienced and successful scenario writer.

He will make the adaptation of "Kismet," which the California will produce in ten reels with Otis Skinner in the stellar role.

Alex E. Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager of the corporation, arrived in New York Monday morning at ten o'clock. At noon he had signed a contract with Capt. Peacocke and the next day the latter was on his way to the California studios in San Rafael.

Capt. Peacocke has written more than four hundred produced photoplays, most of them original stories.

Among the best known are: "Neptune's Daughter," "Married by Telephone," "The Closed Door," "The Nautch Girl and the Tiger," and "A Girl and Her Money." His adaptations number several of the country's greatest dramatic successes.

"The Unwritten Law," a picturization of the Edwin Milton Royle play, was adapted for the screen by Capt. Peacocke. This latest California production features Beatriz Michelena.

Capt. Peacocke, who was educated at Eton, England, was an officer in the British army before beginning his literary career. He is the author of more than two hundred short stories and several novels.

HAHN IN SUPPORT OF MME. PETROVA

Philip Hahn, a new Metro player, appearing in support of Mme. Petrova in "Playing With Fire," played a prominent role in the Passion Play, at Oberammergau.

He played the role of the Christ in the Famous Players production of the Passion Play.

THELMA FRANCIS, "U" PRIZE WINNER, SHOWS TALENT

Thelma Francis, who was given a permanent position at Universal City by President Laemmle as the result of her selection by a committee at the New Year's Eve Carnival Ball of the Southern California

THELMA FRANCIS

Motion Picture Exhibitors Association as the most beautiful girl present, has shown distinct talent for picture work, according to Director Joseph De Grasse.

Reports from Universal City say Miss Francis has become one of the most popular of the recent arrivals there.

STURGEON COMPLETES "GOD'S COUNTRY—AND THE WOMAN"

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 24.

All scenes for the Rollin S. Sturgeon six-reel subject from the James Oliver Curwood novel, "God's Country — and the Woman," have been completed, and the Vitagraph producing manager is now cutting the subject. It will be ready for shipment within a short time.

Work was taken up last week on the filming of a pretentious fifteen episode serial from an adaptation of the Jack London story, "The Hearts of Three," prepared by Charles Goddard.

William Duncan has been chosen as the featured player for this, and Carmen Phillips, late of the Universal producing staff, will play the feminine lead.

The story is laid in Panama, and the filming will require considerable traveling.

"POOR LITTLE PEPPINA" MAKES RECORD AT BROADWAY THEATRE

Never in the history of the Broadway Theatre, New York, since its conversion into a motion picture house by Paramount has any film approached the record made by "Poor Little Peppina," according to Manager Langfeld.

It was necessary for the management to call for police assistance to handle the crowds which stormed the theatre to see this latest Mary Pickford release.

All Time of Palmer-Gaumont Staff on News Cartoons

Events of the Day Treated in a Humorous Fashion by Artist of Renown Will Replace "Keepin' Up with the Joneses," Released Through Mutual

RETURNING to the cartoon idea which he was the first to present upon the screen, Harry Palmer will now devote the entire time of his Gaumont staff to the making of animated cartoons which are humorous reflections upon the news of the day.

This will replace "Keepin' Up With the Joneses" upon the split-reel with Gaumont's "See America First" series, a Mutual weekly release.

"The Gaumont company was the first to animate the news of the day in humorous fashion," said Mr. Palmer when questioned regarding the return to the original work, "and it was only to meet conditions that we changed to 'Keepin' Up With the Joneses.'

"The situation has developed along the lines we originally planned, and am glad to say that now am returning to my first work in the animated field. Being the father of these animated news cartoons, naturally I am delighted to find that we are to make them again.

"The first of the new series will be released by Mutual, February 27. The work upon them is progressing rapidly at the Gaumont studios, Flushing. An outline of the pictures we are making for the first release will give an idea of the series in general.

First on the screen will be that target of all cartoonists, Theodore Roosevelt. He is shown throwing his hat into the ring and laying about valiantly with his Big Stick.

"Then, of course, there must be reference to President Wilson's habit of note writing, all in a spirit of lightness and not at all with political bias. William Jennings Bryan is not forgotten. The series closes with some cartoons upon Preparedness.

"We found that 'Keepin' Up With the Joneses' was entertaining, but we felt that there would be greater general interest in the news cartoons such as I had originated.

"There is greater pleasure in it for the artist, because there is the infinite variety which is not possible where week after week we were bound to scenarios of the Jones family. This way we have the whole world at the end of our pens."

Mr. Palmer was a cartoonist of national reputation when he turned to the screen with the first animated cartoons of news events.

In addition to working on metropolitan newspapers, he had spent two seasons in Canada during political campaigns as official cartoonist for one of the great parties of the Dominion. One of his best known series of newspaper cartoons is "Babbling Bess."

Oklahoma Leaguers Pass Anti-Censor Resolution

Organization in Convention at Oklahoma City Also Elects Officers for the Ensuing Year—Ralph Talbot Is President and B. Momand, First Vice-President

Special to Motion Picture News

Oklahoma City, Feb. 25.

RESOLUTIONS against censorship of motion pictures were adopted and other matters of interest of exhibitors taken up at the annual convention of the Oklahoma branch, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, held last week in Oklahoma City.

The convention was attended by more than one hundred of the four hundred exhibitors of the State, the delegates while here attending also the hearings before the State corporation commission on anti-trust charges filed by the league against the Mutual Film Corporation, General Film Corporation and Universal Film Company, operating in Oklahoma.

The resolutions against censorship follows:

"Whereas, censorship is a transgression upon the rights of the people of this country and we have been informed that there has been and now is a bill pending before the national congress known as the Smith-Hughes bill for the purpose of censoring motion pictures.

"And, whereas, the adoption of that bill would deny that part of the Declaration of Independence which declares that government can exist only with the consent of the governed.

"And, whereas, the picture, like the press, is only a means of conveying man's ideas to society, and the law governing the press is adequate to govern the motion picture,

"Therefore, be it resolved that the Motion Picture exhibitors of Oklahoma, in convention assembled, do protest against this censorship bill."

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: Ralph Talbot, Tulsa, president; A. B. Momand, Shawnee, first vice-president; S. H. Jones, Altus, second vice-president; L. W. Brophy, Muskogee, secretary; J. L. Olie, Chickasha, treasurer; B. H. Powell, Oklahoma City, retiring president, national vice-president for Oklahoma.

Delegates elected to the national convention to be held at Chicago in July include W. C. Wood, Lawton; Carl Gregg, Tulsa; W. C. Wirt, Enid; H. W. McCall, Oklahoma City; Morris Lowenstein, Oklahoma City; S. H. Jones, Altus, and John Slocum, Mangum.

Oklahoma City was selected as the convention city for 1917.

A "Dutch Klatch" at the Lyric Theatre, and a banquet and smoker at the Lee-Huckins hotel were included in the entertainment features.

Fred J. Harrington, of Pittsburgh, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, attended the convention and took an active part. Many other representatives of the distributing film companies at Dallas, Kansas City, Chicago and Atlanta were present.

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS PLACED IN AMERICAN, SALT LAKE

Denver, Col., Feb. 24.

The Bluebird Exchange reports that Carl Stearn has placed the Bluebird productions for three days each week in the American theatre, Salt Lake City, Utah. This theatre is one of the largest exclusive motion picture theatres in the United States.

The first release, "Jeanne Dore," featuring Sarah Bernhardt, has been booked at the American for three days starting March 14. This will mark the introduction of Bluebird Photo Plays in Salt Lake City.

FRANCES NELSON BACK FROM FILM TRIP IN ADIRONDACKS

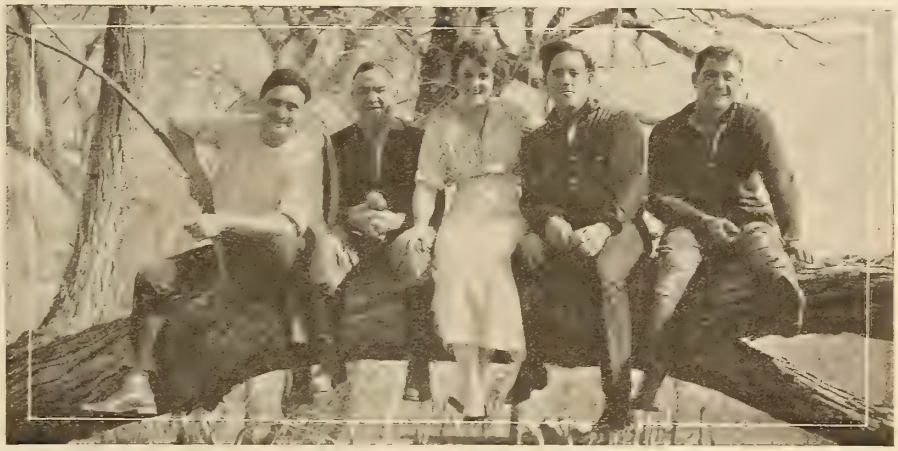
Frances Nelson, with Robert Warwick and a supporting cast of World Film players, has just returned to New York from a four-weeks' sojourn in the heart of the Adirondacks, where they filmed exteriors for a new feature dealing with New York and Alaskan life.

FRANCES NELSON

The location selected for the company was a summer camp and the log huts were designed to permit a free circulation of air rather than as winter quarters.

In addition there came two blizzards and a cold wave. Director Emile Chautard was more than satisfied in his search for Alaskan local color.

COHN BOOKS PARAMOUNT FEATURES SOLID TO APRIL



Denver, Col., Feb. 24.

The Paramount Exchange, under manager M. Cohn, has booked the Paramount features until the later part of April.

Jack Scott, assistant to Manager Cohn, shows signs of being seriously affected with spring fever. We all hope it will not prove fatal to Scott.

Recreation for "Girl and Game" Players on Desert

Company Working in Spearman Railroad Series Watch Rodeo from Branch of Huge Tree —Helen Holmes Collects Relics from Indian Reservation

ALTHOUGH to people accustomed to the broad latitude of city life, the Nevada desert offers little of interest to the members of "The Girl and the Game" company, their time is so much taken up with the interesting development of this famous railroad series by Frank H. Spearman that the hours fly.

While idle moments in daylight hours are few and far between, each member of the cast finds some opportunity for the pursuit of personal fancies.

Helen Holmes is an admirer and connoisseur of Navajo relics, curios and tribe-made wares; and she owns a valuable collection accumulated on various journeys to the interior reservations of the country.

This charming little lady is also a great lover of nature, and avails herself of every opportunity to saunter into the wilds. Dogs and horses are her animal hobby, and she always owns one or more of each. Her latest is an Airedale pup presented to her by the city of Las Vegas.

The principal members of the cast recently enjoyed watching a genuine rodeo, seating themselves collectively on the branch of an immense tree near the field of sports.

"Scarlet Runner" Introduces Wally Van in Drama

Screen Version of Popular Novel by the Williamsons Is Vehicle for Actor Who Made Reputation in Comedy—Picture Will Be Released in 12 Episodes by Vitagraph

"THE SCARLET RUNNER," taken from the popular novel of that name by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, is now being filmed under the direction of Wally Van for the Vitagraph Company.

This feature is practically the debut of Mr. Van into the realms of drama and romantic pictures, for his worth hitherto has been solely in the line of comedy.

In this release Wally is destined to lose the sobriquet of "Cutey" which has made him a favorite for many years in Vitagraph films.

"The Scarlet Runner" will be released in twelve episodes, each one complete in itself and each one telling one of the thrilling adventures of the gentleman chauffeur made famous by the Williamsons.

Earle Wiliams, a favorite in the world of photoplay, will be seen in the principal role, while the feminine lead is to be changed with each episode.

Practically all of the prominent Vitagraph actresses will be seen with the exception of such leading players as Anita Stewart, Lillian Walker, Edith Storey and others.

Wally is having adventures of his own in filming "The Scarlet Runner," which was picturized by George Plympton.

The "Runner" is an automobile built specially for use in this production and as the exteriors must have scenes and architecture typical of England where the plot is laid, extensive traveling has to be done in the big limousine.

Contrasting with this feature are two of Wally's latest efforts—"Levy's Seven Daughters" and "Putting Pep in Slowtown," and it will be interesting to see the results of this director's versatile talents.

SAVED BY SNOW IN 150-FOOT DROP FOR "BEYOND THE LAW"

Dropping 150 feet down the steep slope of a gigantic hill and saved from serious injury by alighting in a deep snow was the experience of one young woman in the cast "Beyond the Law," for which pictures were taken at Virginia, Minn., near the Canadian border.

It was not intended that she should fall so far, but the hill was built that way, and once started, there was no way of stopping her.

Luckily she escaped the sharp ledges of rock in her swift slide. E. H. Calvert and Marguerite Clayton play the leading parts in this play, which is taken from Henry Oyen's "The Snowburner Pays."

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advise or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City

COURTESY AS AN ASSET IN CONDUCTING A THEATRE SUCCESSFULLY

W. FRED BOSSNER, manager of the Department of Theatres of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, interviewed relative to his recent work in New Orleans, where he reopened the Crescent theatre as a photoplay house, gives some pertinent observations on how to conduct a theatre successfully.

"Here's my fundamental principle," he said when asked to put the situation in a nutshell. "Be at the door to greet them and send them away smiling; keep the atmosphere during the interval clear, clean and pleasurable. It is the impression made upon an exhibitor's clientele that helps most materially to make theatre-going a universal habit.

"How can you create that impression? Begin its creation by having a clean and attractive entrance—one that will be pleasing to the eye and cause the most skeptical person to want to walk into the foyer and look at the pictures of your feature in their tasteful frames.

"Every time a ticket is sold have the seller of that ticket say 'Thank you' and 'Thank you' with a smile. Be at the door to greet your patrons with a word of cheer and happiness. Don't think that because you are showing the best pictures that can be obtained you are able to sit down in your easy chair and watch the money rolling into your coffers. You have a province to perform.

"Your interior should be tastefully arranged and well-lighted. Be sure your seats are comfortable. There should be plenty of space between the seats and width enough for comfort. Have your pictures properly projected.

"When your patrons leave, talk to them again. Ask them how they liked the pictures. Ask them to write their personal criticisms, favorable or adverse, and you in turn treat each one personally. Keep those people on your mailing list. They are interested in your theatre. Keep in touch with them each week.

"The courtesy of your employees is something upon which you can build big business. Investigation will prove that all large and successful institutions insist upon the greatest possible amount of courtesy being shown to patrons. A few moments spent in any large department store will satisfy the most skeptical on this point."

Every exhibitor should put these ideas into practice, if he has not done so already.

SERVICE TO PATRONS SLOGAN OF COLISEUM, SEATTLE

Service to patrons is apparently the watchword of the Coliseum theatre, Seattle, one of the largest and most beautiful in the country. Recently "The Great Divide" was being shown there, and was drawing capacity business.

Throughout the week of the showing a veritable torrent of rain, sleet and snow fell. But the management, thoughtful of the crowds, erected awnings on the street in front of the theatre, and at its sides, to protect those waiting to gain admission.

VICTROLA PLAYS HAWAIIAN MUSIC FOR "ALOHA OE"

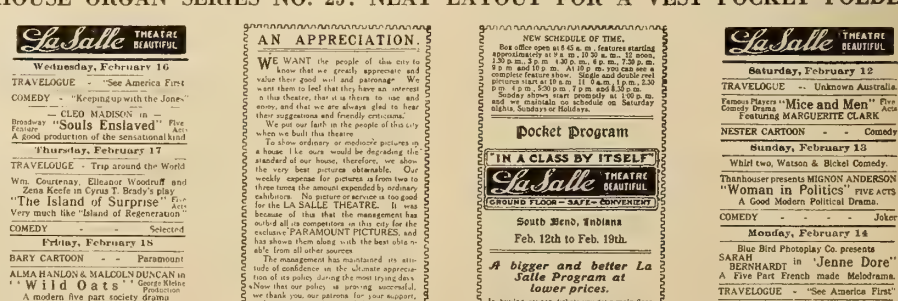
Ingenuity on the part of H. D. Graham, of the Merrill theatre, Milwaukee, resulted in giving a touch of realism to certain scenes of "Aloha Oe," which he ran some weeks ago. The stunt was inexpensive, including merely the cost of an express wagon to bring and return a Victrola from the dealer.

Hidden from the view of the audience the Victrola played the "Aloha Oe" record during the scenes showing Mack at the cafe where he heard the music that called him back to the island. It was a decided hit with the spectators.

"MARY PAGE" ADS FEATURE CLOTHES WORN BY STARS

No certain exhibitor, but all of them in the Iowa-Nebraska territory, are featuring the clothes worn by Edna Mayo and Henry B. Walthall in "The Strange Case of Mary Page."

As an advertising idea, it is making a decided hit.



"What woman is not interested in clothes?" asked C. W. Taylor, manager of the General Exchange, Omaha, speaking of the idea. "About every exhibitor has used this idea in newspaper advertising. In a few places they have co-operated with clothing store managers to advertise it along with the store in the papers and in bills, neat posters in the store windows." Walthall's clothes, like those of Miss Mayo, are different in every episode, making the advertising plan applicable to both men and women.

THEATRE SEATING 600 LOCATED IN TOWN OF 800

The Opera House, Clarkson, Neb., just completed by C. White, who is now acting in the capacity of manager and owner, has a seating capacity of 600, although located in a town with a population of only 800. But it is out on the farm belt of Nebraska, where every farmer, with his family, takes at least one night and generally two or three, a week, to go to a picture theatre for his entertainment.

He is showing Fox pictures, and advertising in the local paper, using the telephone, heralds, postal cards and other means.

AN APPRECIATION.

WE WANT the people of this city to know that we greatly appreciate and value their good will and patronage. We want them to feel that they have an interest in this theatre, that it is theirs to use and enjoy, and that we are always glad to hear their suggestions and friendly criticisms.

We put our faith in the people of this city when we built this theatre.

To show ordinary or mediocre pictures in a house like ours would be degrading the standard of our house, therefore, we show the very best pictures obtainable. Our weekly expense for pictures is from two to three times the amount expended by ordinary exhibitors. No picture or service is too good for the LA SALLE THEATRE. It was because of this that the management has outbid all its competitors in this city for the exclusive PARAMOUNT PICTURES, and has shown them along with the best obtainable from all other sources.

The management has maintained its attitude of confidence in the ultimate appreciation of its policy during the most trying days. Now that our policy is proving successful, we thank you, our patrons for your support, and assure you that we shall maintain our high standard, and with your continued patronage shall make this house the most popular and successful in the city.

HOW THE WINNIPEG TRIBUNE PHOTOPLAY DEPARTMENT LOOKS—NOTE THE CALENDAR OF FEATURES

WINNIPEG TRIBUNE AN EXPONENT OF FAIR PLAY AND REASONABLE ADVERTISING RATE FOR EXHIBITORS IN ITS CITY

EXHIBITORS who have been unable to get adequate consideration from their newspapers ought to be glad to hear what has happened in Winnipeg, Canada. It is a story of fair dealing, with the Winnipeg Tribune in the featured role. And the whole thing hinges upon the crucial point in the exhibitor-newspaper situation: a just and reasonable advertising rate.

Note what The Tribune does: it charges exhibitors the same rate as any commercial business house in the city.

Result No. 1: The Tribune publishes on an average each month as much paid motion picture advertising as the two other papers combined. Result No. 2: The other Winnipeg dailies have reduced their rate to exhibitors. Previously, they were classing them with the legitimate theatres and charging them the theatrical rate. Result No. 3: An excellent photoplay department in The Tribune.

The attitude of The Tribune toward picture theatres in its city is summed up well in the statement of A. B. Marker, of The Tribune Advertising Department—a statement which we vouch for in full because we have examined issues of the paper:

"We have co-operated with them (the exhibitors) in every possible way, giving them daily write-ups, and running good live moving picture news. On Saturday we run a calendar of feature photoplays, showing at the local houses. During the week days, short and breezy write-ups are given to every theatre under an attractive heading. Booster ads are also run from time to time."

Mr. Marker omitted to say that The Tribune photoplay department on Saturdays covers two pages. This places The Tribune in the front rank of newspapers which are doing their full duty by the motion picture, so far as space is concerned.

"We believe we have established in this field a moving picture page that is a credit to Winnipeg," says Mr. Marker. Not only a credit to Winnipeg, but a credit to Canada and the newspaper business, too.

CREATING "CAPACITY" FOR SMALL HOUSES IN NOVEL WAY

A. H. Brown and R. A. Babbett, of Washington, D. C., have hit upon a most novel plan of creating "capacity" for small houses by offering the same program in two neighboring houses, under the caption of The Washington-Regent. Both of these theatres were only doing a fair business, both are beautiful in construction and decoration, both have catered to the best in motion pictures, and to the culture of the resident section in which they are situated, but they were under different managements and therefore neither was doing as well as it might.

Realizing that capacity is the solving of high-class picture problem, Mr. Brown bought out the Regent, and as he already had the Washington, hit upon the idea of uniting the two houses by offering the same program. Unfortunately, the structures are not near enough together to be turned into one, but are in close enough proximity for the posters of each to be read at the same glance.

"The scheme has worked admirably," commented Mr. Brown, "better than I had anticipated. By uniting the two houses we have secured a capacity of 700, which makes it possible for us to give the very best pictures, a five-piece orchestra in each house, early runs, and more evenly divide the patrons. Previously there were times when one house would be overcrowded while the other was hungry for spectators."

POLITE SERVICE TO PATRONS WINS INCREASED RECEIPTS

In keeping with the policy of the Belvedere theatre, Lynchburg, Va., to cater to the elite, Manager Guy Barrett has uniformed his ushers in tuxedos and insisted upon special effort being taken by his employes in rendering the most polite service and treatment patrons of any theatre could expect.

Barrett, since taking charge of the Belvedere, which is one of the smaller picture houses, has gained the confidence of the public in such a way as to cause the box office to reflect a healthy condition.

PRINTS THEATRE PROGRAM ACROSS FRONT PAGE OF NEWSPAPER

A novel stunt in the way of advertising has been put out by Manager Smith, of Smith's theatre, in Hazelwood, a suburb of Pittsburgh. He gets a number of copies of the Pittsburgh newspapers and takes them to a printer and has the program of his theatre printed in red ink across the face of the front page. Then he has them distributed in the neighborhood of the theatre. He says it has been the means of drawing many patrons to his theatre and keeping it crowded continuously.

This is the first time this stunt has been tried in this section, and it seems to have been a good one, as the amount of business done by Mr. Smith in his theatre has been more than doubled, according to latest reports.

USES NATIONAL GUARD TO BOOM "BATTLE CRY OF PEACE"

Emmett Cornell, manager of the Eckel theatre, Syracuse, N. Y., used unique ideas in advertising "The Battle Cry of Peace," which is said to have drawn the greatest crowd that ever witnessed a motion picture or theatrical entertainment in that city.

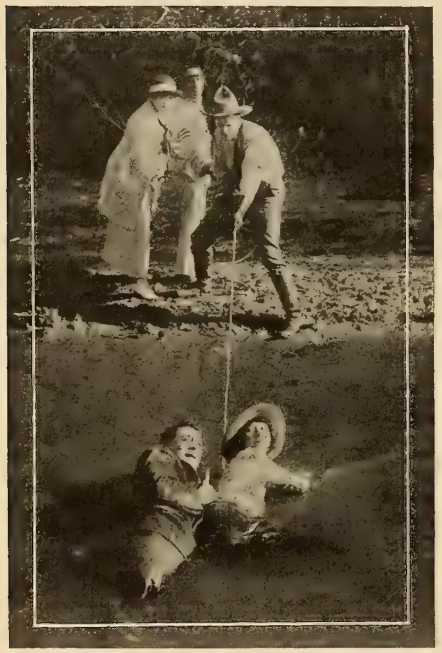
One of his stunts was this: He visited the captain of Battery A and gave him passes for every member of the Battery, to be used on the first day. In return, the Battery loaned him for display in the theatre two field guns of latest pattern. Four men were assigned to work in two squads and in uniform paraded up and down the lobby as on picket duty. Furthermore they advertised the picture wonderfully after seeing the first performance of it.

FARRAR-TELLEGEN WEDDING BRINGS OUT NOVEL LIVE WIRE STUNT

Stanley Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, with his usual live-wireness, pulled off a clever stunt when the news of Geraldine Farrar's marriage to Lou-Tellegen appeared.

Parts of pictures in which the newlyweds had appeared separately were quickly put together in one consecutive whole.

The same night this film was thrown on the screen at the Stanley. It attracted much favorable comment from an appreciative audience.



Looking Ahead With The Producers

BORZAGE COMPLETES "THE WAIF," WITH VIVIAN RICH, FOR THE AMERICAN

THE American director, Frank Borzage, has just completed the production of C. B. Hoadley's three-part drama "The Waif," with Vivian Rich in the title role.

The story is of a foundling who so appreciates the kindness of an old farmer who adopts her that she risks her life's happiness and her good name in order to save him from the knowledge of his daughter's betrayal and ruin.

Alfred Vosburgh, George Periolat, Queenie Rosson and George Webb have

HAROLD LOCKWOOD AND MAY ALLISON TO THE RESCUE WHEN NELL FRANZEN AND WARREN ELLSWORTH ARE CAUGHT IN QUICKSANDS IN A SCENE FROM "THE SORRY SCHEME OF THINGS," AN AMERICAN FEATURE good characterizations in the picture which abounds in suspense and heart interest.

The Beauty company directed by Archer McMackin at the Santa Barbara American studios, has been temporarily transported back through the ages to mediaeval times in order to film "Billy Van Dusen's Ancestry," a comedy by Al Santell.

The rotund Billy climbs the branches of his family tree to determine who his forefathers were, and suddenly finds himself in the days of knights and ladies.

There in an atmosphere of castles, moats, drawbridges, portcullis and men-at-arms, he gets into several humorous situations that put yards of chuckles in the picture.

John Steppling, John Sheehan, Carol Halloway and Mary Talbot carry on the principal action.

The theft of a valuable necklace by a society crook of the "Raffies" type, and the adventures of a woman detective in trying to recover it make thrills in "The Trail of the Thief," a three-reel drama by J. Edward Hungerford which is being directed by Thomas Ricketts.

Winifred Greenwood, Edward Coxen and George Field are the principals. A love theme is worked into the plot and adds interest.

Word received at the American studio from Truckee, where director William Bertram and his company of American players are filming the exterior scenes in "Snow Stuff," reports that the filming has been finished.

"Snow Stuff" is the last of the Charles E. Van Loan "movie" stories to be adapted by William Pigott, head of the scenario department at the American, and promises new comedy situations.

Director Thomas Chatterton is staging "The Ranger of the Lonesome Gulch," a three-reel western drama by Karl Coolidge, in which Chatterton, Anna Little, and Jack Richardson have the principal roles.

The climax of the photoplay is reached when Anna Little, as the heroine, is forced with her lover to take refuge in a cabin to escape a gang of drunken Mexicans.

The lover fires all but one cartridge. Shall he use it to keep his sweetheart from falling into the hands of the frenzied men? This is the problem he faces, and it puts a powerful punch in the story.

American director, Jack Halloway, has finished the production of "Overalls," a five-reel feature from story by L. V. Jefferson of Los Angeles, adapted by J. Edward Hungerford of the American staff.

The locale is that of a railroad construction camp and excellent atmosphere was obtained at Point Concepcion, where the Southern Pacific is using the largest steam shovel on the Pacific Coast for some extension work.

The play moves swiftly and combines good comedy and character delineation. William Stowell, Rhea Mitchell, Estelle Allen, Warren Ellsworth, Jack Prescott and Sylvia Ashton, all have important parts in the picture.

"EMBERS" PICTURES SPIRITUAL LOVE AND PHYSICAL ATTRACTION

"Embers," a five-part American Mutual Masterpicture, released March 2, is a pictured analysis of the difference between spiritual love and physical attraction. Arthur Maude and Constance Crawley, the principals, are supported by William Carroll, Nell Franzen and others.

PARSONS AND MISS HUTCHINSON RETURN EAST

William Parsons, "Smiling Bill" of the National Film Corporation of America, and Kathrine Hutchinson, have returned East to Tampa, Fla., where they will take up the making of comedies to appear under the King Cole Pathé trademark.

Miss Hutchinson is to play leads and ingenue parts in the comedies. She has had a number of years' experience on the legitimate stage and vaudeville and a number of important engagements for picture companies.

For almost four years she was leading woman opposite Paul Gilmore in the stage productions of "The Havoc," "Captain Alverez," "The Bachelor," and "The Mummy and the Hummingbird" which was the company's greatest success.

In pictures she has played in support of Mary Miles Minter for Metro, and with Mary Fuller in "The Strength of the Weak," "Tale of the Sea," and "The Orchid."

Mr. Parsons took with him a number of scenarios purchased on the West Coast, among them two from L. V. Jefferson. One is entitled "Humpty Dumpty," which opens with scenes at a girl's seminary where they are practicing archery and using an egg on top of a wall for their target.

Just when the egg is broken, "Smiling Bill" makes his appearance at the seminary ruled by a man hater.

The second subject to be filmed is "The Initiation," dealing with a man who loves popularity.

Warner are among the more prominent Griffith and Ince players who will have the leading parts in the dramatic features of the month.

Mack Sennett will contribute to the Triangle program the pick of his Keystone funmakers.

For the week of March 5 "Daphne and the Pirate" (Lillian Gish) and "Hell's Hinges" (William S. Hart) are the long pictures. The latter is a western play which gives Hart a role similar to those which have made him so popular.

Clara Williams, Jack Standing and Louise Glaum have prominent supporting roles. Daphne is the heroine of a story of the days when Louisiana was a French colony and girls were sent from France to become wives of the pioneers.

A thrilling fight at sea between the "bride ship" and a pirate crew is the spectacular feature. Elliott Dexter is Miss Gish's leading man.

John Emerson in a preparedness play, "The Flying Torpedo," and Bessie Barriscale, starred by Ince in "Bullets and Brown Eyes," give the week of March 12 a decided military atmosphere.

By the invention of a flying torpedo a foreign foe is driven from the shores of the United States. William Christy Cabanne has directed many stirring battle scenes, showing first the advance of the invader and subsequently his complete rout.

In "The Flying Torpedo" Bessie Love is given a big opportunity in the portrayal of a Swedish maid who helps in the discomfiture of a gang of international spies.

Since he was starred in this play John Emerson has become one of the foremost Griffith directors.

He produced "Old Heidelberg" and "His Picture in the Papers" and is now working with Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree on the Triangle contribution to the Shakespeare tercentenary, "Macbeth."

The action of "Bullets and Brown Eyes" takes place in mythical countries which are at war. There is a strong romantic story running through this Barriscale drama.

"Martha's Vindication" and "The Moral Fabric," week of March 19, present Norma Talmadge, Seena Owen and Tully Marshall, and Frank Mills, Edith Reeves and Howard Hickman, respectively.

At the close of the month the Triangle will release two real novelties. "Hoodoo Ann" marks the first appearance of Mae Marsh since "The Birth of a Nation"; and H. B. Warner of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" fame makes his debut as a Triangle-Ince star in "The Raiders."

Miss Marsh is an orphan asylum heroine. Robert Harron is featured with her. In Warner's support are Dorothy Dalton, Henry Belmar, Robert McKim and George Elwell. "The Raiders" is a Wall Street play.

Mabel Normand, Roscoe Arbuckle, Fred Mace and Joe Jackson are Keystone favorites who will be seen in new Sennett comedies during the month. "Fatty" and Mabel will be seen in "The Bright Lights," originally called "The Lure of Broadway."

VITAGRAPH STUDIO TURNED INTO MANICURE PARLOR

The Vitagraph Company recently became a school for manicurists and many of the actors went around with highly polished nails, when Director Harry Davenport was producing a series of comedies written by Paul West entitled "Myrtle, the Manicurist," featuring Jewell Hunt, "The Dance Girl of the Movies."

A manicurists' emporium complete in every detail was set up in the studios. Before, during and after rehearsals and the actual "taking" of the scenes, the pretty manicurists performed their hazardous occupation upon the digits of the actors.

A list of casualties has not yet been reported, but while the set was up, the cry of the maimed and wounded made it difficult for other directors to work.

SANTSCHI EAST FOR FIRST TIME IN SEVEN YEARS

Thomas Santschi has lived in California for the past seven years and his return East to play in the Selig master production of "The Crisis," will be the first time he has crossed the Rockies eastward since leaving Chicago with the little band of pioneer picture players that William N. Selig sent West in the days when California was an unknown quantity to film land.

"FIRES OF ST. JOHN," SUDERMANN PLAY FOR LUBIN, BASED ON MEDIEVAL FOLKLORE

THE meaning of "The Fires of St. John," the Sudermann play which Edgar Lewis, with Nance O'Neil as his star, is building into a Lubin multiple-reel photoplay, goes back to the medieval folklore of the peoples of Central Europe. It refers to a celebration on St. John's Eve, and in Sudermann's play is thus described by one of the characters:

"An old pagan spark has outlived centuries. Once every year that spark is fanned into flames—it flames high and then it is called 'The Fires of St. John.' Once every year we have 'free night.'

"Then the witches ride upon their brooms; with scornful laughter the wild hordes sweep across the tree tops, up, up, high upon the Blocksberg.

"Then it is when in our hearts awake those wild desires which our fates dared not fulfill—then, no matter what may be the name of the law that governs the word on that day, that single wish may be converted into reality.

"And the fires? Those tongues of fire shooting up toward the heavens, they are the spirits of our dead and perished wishes. They are the red plumage of the desires we have petted through our entire lives."

This is described as the meaning of "The Fires of St. John," which the Lubin company is producing on an elaborate scale, it is announced.

The folly of jumping at conclusions is shown in "Four Narratives," a two-reel photoplay, produced by Lubin.

The story is told in four episodes. W. E. Parsons, G. H. Gray and Velma Whitman are in the cast.

SCENE TAKING ON PATHE-ARROW "WHO'S GUILTY?" UNDER WAY; ANNA NILSSON IS THE STAR

SCENE-TAKING on the new "Who's Guilty?" series to be produced by Arrow Film Corporation for Pathé started on Monday, February 21, at the Arrow studio in Yonkers. The preparatory work has been in progress a long while and is now completed as to sets, costumes and locations.

The "Who's Guilty?" series will consist of fourteen two-reel episodes, each episode a complete problem play in itself. The scenarios for these episodes have been secured by W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, from a number of sources in order to secure diversity of ideas and difference of treatment.

The theme was found to be so big that it was found impossible for any one writer to supply all the basic stories. Mr. Shallenberger found it advisable to use not more than two or three plots from any one source.

All of these scenarios have been fictionized for newspaper serialization by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, who is the author of several of the original scenarios as well. She is fictionizing all the scenarios of whatever origin, in the brilliant and interesting style that magazine and newspaper readers everywhere know is Mrs. Woodrow's.

The series will be directed jointly by Howell Hansel and Lawrence B. McGill, Mr. McGill doing the first episode, Mr. Hansel the second, and so alternating to the conclusion.

Anna Nilsson, for several years leading woman with Kalem, and seen more recently as leading woman and star in "Regeneration," "The Scarlet Road" and "To Him That Hath," will be the woman star of "Who's Guilty?"

Miss Nilsson appeared, it will be recalled, in Kalem's first feature, "Shenandoah," and her work in that picture alone should have elevated her to stardom.

The long service she has rendered since then makes her more than welcome as the woman star of the new Arrow-Pathé series.

Tom Moore, who is known wherever pictures are shown, will play opposite Miss Nilsson as the man star of "Who's Guilty?" series. Mr. Moore is a member of the famous Moore trio.

His brother Owen is Mary Pickford's husband, and his brother Matt is also in moving pictures. Tom Moore is more than the ordinary motion picture star in that he has written, acted in and directed more than 150 successful photoplays.

Mr. Shallenberger has employed a fashionable Fifth avenue modiste to make all of Miss Nilsson's clothes for the "Who's Guilty?" series. Copies of the scenarios were sent to the designers so that each gown will fit exactly, from scene to scene, into the part Miss Nilsson plays.

The result, it is promised by the modiste and by Arrow, will make Miss Nilsson one of the best dressed women on the American screen stage.

MacDONALD FILMING "APRIL"

Director Donald MacDonald has started field work on "April," a five-part story of the southern mountains by Clifford Howard at the American studios.

It mingles heart interest and stirring action, and good contrast in characterization is obtained by putting a young fellow of the "blue grass" region in the half-primitive mountain country among the mountain folk where he loses his heart to "April," a wild flower of the district.

The cast includes Helene Rosson, in the title role, E. Forrest Taylor, Harry Von Meter and Louise Lester.

"STRANGE ADVENTURE" A ONE-REEL SELIG COMEDY

"A Strange Adventure" is a one-reel comedy being made by Marshall Neilan at the Selig studio.

This is built around a flirtation at a summer hotel. Jack Pickford, Bessie Eyton and Harry Lonsdale have the principal parts.

FANNIE WARD IS CAST FOR FEMININE DETECTIVE ROLE IN LASKY'S "FOR THE DEFENSE"

GIVING another example of her versatility, Fannie Ward, star of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, has completed a photoplay entitled "For the Defense," in which she plays for the first time on the screen a feminine detective.

There is a promising coincidental feature about "For the Defense," as the author is Hector Turnbull, who wrote Miss Ward's recent sensational photoplay, "The Cheat."

The Lasky company will release "For the Defense" through Paramount Pictures Corporation on March 13. It is a Monday release and will be the week's attraction in the Strand theatre, New York, and other leading motion picture theatres throughout the country.

This will be Miss Ward's fourth Lasky production. The others, in their order, are "The Marriage of Kitty," "The Cheat," "Tennessee's Pardner," from Arthur C. Aiston's production.

In none of these did Miss Ward have a similar role, and to her distinct and charming characterization she now adds that of detective.

Miss Ward will be seen as Fidele, a young French girl, who lands in New York and meets with strange adventures. She is the witness of a murder for which the one man who befriends her in the hostile city is falsely accused of having committed the crime.

Frightened, she runs away from the scene, meets the accused later and returns in time to appear "for the defense" and by her testimony succeeds in freeing him.

Jack Dean, Camille Astor, Horace B. Carpenter and a large cast of principals appear in support of Miss Ward in this production.

"HIS STENOGRAPHER" IS SECOND COLLIER-KEYSTONE COMEDY

"His Stenographer" is the title selected to date for the second Collier-Keystone, and a very notable member of the cast for this, besides the well known star, is Blanche Payson, six feet two inches in height, and weighing approximately two hundred and fifty pounds.

Miss Payson is a remarkable well developed woman, and was selected by the police department of the Panama-Pacific Exposition as policewoman of the Zone where she served during the Fair, and proved that she was fully capable of handling the more than average man who started something there.

In this comedy she appears as wife of Collier, and his day of filming, according to the script begins with being carried from his bed and dashed into his cold "baath."

What she doesn't do in the way of Herculean feats will be eliminated for fear of killing off an actor of repute.

Mae Bush is the stenograph in this subject, Joseph Belmont, a brother-in-law; Alice Davenport, Collier's mother-in-law, Fritz Shade, the janitor. The comedy abounds with the usual Keystone situations.

DIFFERENT THEMES IN 4 BLUEBIRDS FOR MARCH

Four releases, diversified in theme and carrying favorites in the lead, provide the March program of Bluebirds with interesting subjects.

Jane Gail heads the "Rupert of Hentzau" cast as the March 6 release; Mary Fuller is the star of "The Strength of the Weak"; Hobart Bosworth heads the cast playing "The Yaqui," and Marie Walcamp plays "The Flirt," released in the order mentioned.

The six releases that have preceded the March output have gained an excellent verdict for Bluebirds from the exhibitor and the general public.

AMERICAN COMPANY FILMING VAN LOAN — SATURDAY EVENING POST STORY

A company from the studio of the American Film Manufacturing Company at Santa Barbara, arrived recently at Truckee, Cal., to film a story by Charles Van Loan which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post two years ago, and which is a satire on the moving picture companies which had been in Truckee previous to the time of its writing.

The snowfall in the mountains is the heaviest in many years and there are opportunities of getting some unusual snow scenes.

FOUR RED FEATHERS FROM "U" IN THE MONTH

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company will issue during the month of March, four Red Feather photoplays, in which William Dowlan, Hobart Bosworth, J. Warren Kerrigan and Violet Mersereau will be featured.

"The Target" will be the release for March 6, this being a fine western picture in which Hobart Bosworth and Jane Novak are featured.

For March 13, J. Warren Kerrigan will be seen in "The Pool of Flame," being one of those mystery stories in which a jewel gets your interest when the picture opens and holds it. In this five-reel feature, Mr. Kerrigan is supported by Lois Wilson.

William Dowlan will make his initial bow on the Red Feather program on March 20 with "Drugged Waters." William Dowlan will be remembered for the many western features he has contributed to the Universal program.

Violet Mersereau will be featured with Lieut. Percy Richards (The Man in White) in the release scheduled for March 27. The title of this picture is "Autumn," having been written and produced by Oscar Lund.

In order to get the proper atmosphere, Director Lund took the company to Port Kent. N. Y.

Paul Panzer also takes an important part in this picture, as does Clara Byers. "Autumn" is one of those stories in which Miss Mersereau is at her best.

"THE SOWERS," LASKY, READY ON MARCH 30

After a series of productions in which she has appeared as a ragamuffin, an anarchist, an addict to drugs, a mesmerist's subject and other characters, Blanche Sweet, the popular star of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, is to act in the role of "a lady" in the picturization of Henry Seton Merriman's novel, "The Sowers."

"The Sowers," which is a Russian political drama, is being produced for the Lasky company by William C. De Mille, and will be released through Paramount Pictures Corporation in the United States on March 30, and on the same date in Canada by the Famous Players' Film Service, Ltd.

Mr. De Mille and Marion Fairfax made the screen adaptation, by arrangement with Harper and Brothers. The supporting cast includes Theodore Roberts, Thomas Meighan, Ernest Joy, Dick Le Strange, Camille Astor and Horace B. Carpenter.

"MARBLE HEART," FEATURING VIOLET HORNER, SET FOR MARCH 6 BY FOX

"The Marble Heart," featuring Violet Horner, a beautiful blonde-haired photoplayer, is the William Fox release for March 6. This play is said to be a remarkable portrayal of fear. The plot is laid first in the West Indies and then in a provincial French village.

The making of this picture dates back many months when Mr. Fox decided upon its production.

It was at first intended to make it in the Fort Lee studios, but suddenly the decision was reached to send an extra company of players and their director to the Fox West Indian studios at Kingston, Jamaica, and there provide this picture with a real setting instead of the artificial studio type of scenery.

REINHARD REPLACED BY GARRICK IN "ACCORDING TO LAW"

As it was originally planned, John Reinhard was to play the part of William Proctor, the importunate lover, in the Gaumont five-reel feature, "According to Law," which is to be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, de Luxe Edition, March 6.

However, his work in the Marguerite Courtot feature, "Feathertop," conflicted and Director Henry J. Vernot was unable to release him from that production.

Although Supervising Director Richard Garrick, who is directing Mildred Gregory in "According to Law," had announced with great emphasis that he would not himself appear on the screen in this feature, he found that it was necessary to take the part of Proctor at the last minute.

BRENON READY TO TAKE BIRD LIFE SCENES FOR KELLERMANN FILM

Herbert Brenon, who is directing the million dollar Kellermann picture in Jamaica for William Fox, is now about ready to begin taking the bird life episodes which are to form one of the most spectacular and picturesque phases of the big film.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 24.

SAMMY BROOKS, height four feet two inches, and weighing ninety-six pounds, is the latest freak discovered by Manager D. Whiting and Director Hal. Roach, of the Rolin Film Company.

Brooks appeared on the Orpheum circuit as one of Lasky's hoboes, and had other stage experience.

At the studio giant Ben Corday uses Brooks for his morning exercise, lifting him first with one hand and then the other.

Harold Lloyd, who appears as Lonesome Luke in the Rolin Phunphilms, has a standing wager that he and Brooks can both get into the same suit of clothes without the ruse being apparent.

A new effect of the European war has been discovered by Coast film producers, in that patrons of motion picture theatres in England and the British colonies strongly object to seeing German players.

As the result of this, Gretchen Lederer, at the suggestion of producers, has changed her name to Blanche Sedear.

Two hundred Italians from the Los Angeles colony were employed several days last week in the making of scenes for "The Full Cup," a coming five-reel subject.

An Italian chef was employed for these days, and the amount of spaghetti used, if joined together, would almost reach around the world.

The sons and daughters of Italy were so pleased with the consideration they received that as they were departing from the studio, they voiced their sentiments by crying "Viva l' Universal."

Genius in Toes of "U" Dancer

Lena Baskette, age eight years, of San Mateo, Cal., has been engaged by the Universal Film Company. By professional dancers, she is believed to have genius in her toes.

Keystone Daily News appears at the masthead, together with the name of Frederick Palmer as editor, of a mimeographed film news service from the offices of the comedy factory.

Mr. Palmer started the first and only daily news service of a film company several months ago, but later was pressed into service in the scenario department, and the press was stopped. The service gives information regarding coming releases.

C. B. Myers and Stuart Featherstanaugh are producing child pictures for release on the Universal program, and have completed three single-reel subjects, "The Magic Lamp," "Some Fish," and "Storming the Trenches."

Gordon Griffith, Little Irma Salter, Frank Butterworth, John Cook, Katharine Griffith and William Rino are the principals.

The Morosco-Pallas Company, within the next few days, will finish the filming of "David Crockett," with Dustin Farnum in the name part, and supporting cast including Winifred Kingston, Herbert Standing, and others. The direction is by William D. Taylor.

The company spent more than two weeks in Bear Lake Valley during the time the mountains were covered with snow.

Several weeks prior to the filming of this the search for wolves began, and a big collection was secured. Many of the wolves had never been in captivity before.

Vogue Studio Scene of Comedy Fight

The Vogue studio, Gower and Santa Monica boulevard, Hollywood, was last week the scene of a comedy prize fight in which a hundred extras took part for the comedy "Knocking Out Knockout Kelly."

Kelly came to town and stole the affections of a waiter's sweetheart, and the waiter, with the aid of a friend who sat in the audience and operating an air-gun, knocked out the pugilist.

"It's Not What It Seems" is another Vogue comedy which was made by Director Jack Dillon, with practically all exterior scenes.

The filming of this was accomplished during the rainy days of the past, and the entire photoplay was finished in two days. Another coming Vogue subject is "Because He Flirted." The principals of all three of these are Paddy MacQuire, Arthur Moore, Louise Owen and Pricilla Dean.

Director Horace Davey, of the Christie Nestor staff, who has been ill for the past four weeks and in quarantine a greater part of that time, is back at his work, and thus the producing staff is increased to three directors, the other two being Al. Christie and Eddie Lyons.

Mr. Christie is directing the making of "Some Honeymoon," wherein the guests at a wedding wager the bridal couple that they cannot remain in the city over night without receiving unusual and unwelcome entertainment.

They accomplish this by the bride, Billie Rhodes, disguising as a bell boy, and the groom, Lee Moran, doing the part of a chambermaid.

Eddie Lyons is directing the filming of "The Newlyweds' Mix-up," in which he with Betty Compson play the leads, supported by Stella Adams and Harry Rattenbury.

Space Leased at Christie Studio

George L. Cox, employed by the Federation of Women's Clubs of Chicago, is in Los Angeles making scenes for the Child Welfare film, and has leased space at the Christie studio.

He has as his leads, Allen Warren and W. N. Buckley. The picture will consist of five or six reels, and will show the manner in which such institutions as the Westchester Catholic Protectorate of New York, the Jewish Sheltering Home of Pleasantville, the Branch Home of Providence, R. I., Citizenship Schools in Los Angeles, The Diet Kitchen of San Francisco, Tubercular Prevention Institution of Salt Lake, and similar institutions of other cities are conducted.

It will be of an educational nature, teaching infant hygiene, and the officers of the club hope that it will extend the child welfare work. The title of the picture is to be "Uncle Sam's Babies," and will be completed by April 1.

ANITA KING, THE LASKY STAR, PHOTOGRAPHED WITH ONE OF THE TWO FRUIT CAKES PRESENTED HER BY THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILWAY ON HER RECENT TRIP TO SEATTLE, AND THE KEY PRESENTED HER BY THE MAYOR OF FRESNO, CAL.

Two new subjects were taken up last week at the Biograph studio. "Paths That Crossed" is being produced by J. Farrel Macdonald.

This is of the nature of a society drama with a slight touch of melodrama, and will consist of three reels. The cast includes Charles Mailes, Jose Ruben, Clare McDowell and Vola Smith.

"The Man Who Called After Dark" is a two-reel melodramatic story being filmed by Biograph Director Walter Coyle.

The cast of this includes Jack Drumier, Ivan Christy, Jack Mulhall, Vera Sisson, and Gretchen Hartman.

The recently filmed Biograph subject, adapted from the William Hamilton Osborne story, "Murders of Cafe Epicure," has been given the title "The Battle of Truth."

The Curtis-Joker Company is filming "His Highness, the Janitor," wherein the proprietor, disappointed because a count who is intending to come to the hotel fails to do so, uses the janitor to satisfy the desires of his guests to meet the man of blue blood.

The cast includes Gale Henry, William Franey, Lillian Peacock, Milburn Moranty and others.

Two Droll Ones From Joker

The other Joker company has completed two subjects, one is entitled "The Town That Tried To Come Back," the other is "Love Vs. Dyspepsia," a decided burlesque, with Victor Potel as Achilles, little Zoe

NORMA NICHOLS (Kalem)

Beck as Cupid, and Jane Bernoudy as the sweetheart.

These subjects were filmed under the direction of Roy Clements.

Many of the thrills of films have been infused into a one-reel burlesque, entitled "The Great Bank Robbery," made by Carter DeHaven. The cast includes Mina Cunard, W. M. McCormick, Henry Bergman, and Harry Pepp.

The first subject to be made by Craig Hutchinson, who was recently added to the Universal producing staff, is "A Boarding House Tangle," with Ernie Shields, Harry Todd, Marguerite Joslin and Marcia Moore.

The story is that of a young man verging on bankruptcy, unable to pay his laundry bill more than a year in arrears, winning the hand of the landlord's daughter, and thus settling his indebtedness.

The 101 Bison-Jay Hunt company is making "A Strange Confession," wherein a pet monkey steals money and valuable jewels, and the identity of the thief is learned just in time to prevent a young man from being convicted of the crime.

In the cast are Rex Roselli, Colin Chase, Mrs. Jay Hunt and Golda Caldwell.

Many of the animals of the Universal zoo are taking part in a tramp comedy being made by Director Guy Hedlund, recently added to the directing staff. The title of this is "H. Oboe Rhodes—Animal King."

The plot is based on a knight of the road attempting to secure a position at a zoo, and later, after consuming much liquor, sees his hopes come true in a dream wherein the animals do his bidding.

In this subject are Paul Bourgeois, Jean

H. E. AITKEN, MACK SENNETT, AND WILLIAM COLLIER AT KEYSTONE'S NEW STAGE, LOS ANGELES

Taylor, Florence Noar, and Joe Martin, the educated chimpanzee. The story is by Frank Wiltermood.

A two-reel Western subject, titled "Hell's Crown," is being filmed by the Jacques Jaccard Universal company.

Harry Carey appears as Blaze, the terror of the place, who is employed by the ruler of Hell's Crown, a lawless and preacherless Western town.

By the influence of the sheriff's daughter, Blaze comes to realize the wrong and finally goes to the aid of the sheriff in stopping lawlessness.

Others in this are Bill Nye, Olive Fuller Golden, Neil Hart, Hoot Gibson, and Peggy Coudray.

"Best Man" Instead of "Yellow Seal"

Upon orders from the New York office of the Universal company the filming of "The Yellow Seal" series has been discontinued by the William Worthington comtwo-reel subject, "The Best Man."

In this the one to stand up with the groom learns the wedding to be will prove unhappy, and falling in love with the bride-elect prevents the unfortunate marriage by being the principal of it himself.

The cast includes Herbert Rawlinson in the name part, Francelia Billington, Charles Gunn, and Helen Wright.

The E. J. LeSaint Universal company is filming "The Purpose Maze," written by Olga Printzlau.

This is the story of a simple country girl who, as stenographer in the city, retains her simplicity and innocence despite the numerous temptations, and ultimately leads acquaintances to the straight and narrow path.

Stella Rozetta appears in the principal part, with Juan De la Cruze, Gladys Brockwell, George Hernandez and Mark Fenton supporting.

"Alias Jane Jones" is a two-reel film being made under the direction of Cleo Madison, who appears in the name part.

In this a gentleman burglar double-crosses his accomplice, and she resolves to cause his downfall.

This she accomplishes after numerous experiences and turns him over to the police following a reign of terror in a Western city caused by the numerous burglaries he and his followers had successfully carried out.

The story is by William Mong, who plays the part of the burglar, and others of the cast are Ray Hanford, Marguerite

NELL SHIPMAN (Vitagraph-Western)

Whistler, Georgie French, Helen Bailey and Edward Hearne.

Bison Makes "Rival Engineers"

A two-reel railroad drama is being made by the 101 Bison players, under the title "The Rival Engineers."

Lee Hill appears as the lead, L. C. Shumway the heavy, E. N. Wallock the superintendent, and Marguerite Mayburn the girl whose heart the two engineers are rivals for.

Practically all of the scenes are laid in and about local railroad yards, and there will be several thrills, including that of a runaway train.

Old Mr. Graft turns up at Universal City as the head of the patent medicine trust, which will be episode number fifteen of the "Graft" serial.

The scenario for this, as practically all of the previous ones, is by Walter Woods, and Richard Stanton continues as director and leading player. Others of this number are Jack Abbott, Glen White, Nanine Wright, W. Harris and Jane Novak.

This episode is a preachment against numerous patent medicine firms, and their utter disregard for the well being of people who take their dope.

The love of two women for a portrait painter and their numerous attempts to win his love forms the action for the five-reel subject entitled "The Madcap."

Flora Parker DeHaven plays the name part, Vera Doria the other woman, and Richard Sterling the man.

The story is by George Gibbs, scenario by Leanora Ainsworth, and the direction is in charge of William C. Dowlan.

The Grace Cunard-Francis Ford company of the Universal, has completed all unfinished subjects, and has begun the filming of the first episode of a thirty-reel serial which will be released under the title of "Circus Sal" or "Rose o' the Ring."

"Circus Sal" Scenario Miss Cunard's

Scenario for this is by Miss Cunard, who will play the part of Circus Sal, an animal trainer of a traveling circus.

The fifteen episodes will deal with experiences in circus life, and throughout there will be a thread of mystery.

The prologue brings out the secret marriage of the girl's mother and an accident which befell her before the birth of the daughter.

Miss Cunard first appears as the mother, and later as the daughter. The daughter, eighteen years later, does a trapeze and equestrian act. Nightly she is affected with a strange malady of a mental character which is in reality a second personality.

Every evening she is overcome with the desire to destroy. When this is witnessed by an eminent physician he becomes greatly interested in her tigress mania, and follows the circus that he may study this mental disease.

The part of the doctor is taken by Francis Ford.

The subjects completed prior to the taking up of this serial are "The House on the Hill," of one reel; "Brennon of the Moor," two reels; and "The Master Crooks," of two reels.

Scenarios for all of these were by Miss Cunard, and the direction in charge of Francis Ford.

Original scenario is being prepared by F. McGrew Willis for a five-reel subject, entitled "The Jew." Hobart Bosworth will be featured in this subject, and will probably be the last the actor takes up under his present contract.

Up to the present time it has not been stated at the studio whether or not Mr. Bosworth will remain. His present contract was made with the Universal one year ago.

Four misfortunes occurred in one day to members of the Lasky company producing "The Race." The first was that of Victor Moore being arrested for driving with an open muffler.

A few moments later Anita King, driving Barney Oldfield's famous racer, skidded into a "4rd" on wet pavement. Cost, $75. Later, when an explosion scene was made, a rock, four or five inches in diameter, struck Miss King on the head and she was rushed to the hospital at San Fernando.

Percy Hilburn, photographer of the company, has a bump on his head from being hit with a stone during the making of the same scene.

Director George Melford lost his voice as the result of the assistant failing to keep the megaphone at the director's elbow.

Because of these accidents additional insurance has been taken on all the players.

Girl Made Assistant Director

Camille Astor, actress of the Lasky stock company, has been appointed assistant director for the company filming "The Sowers," the Russian political drama founded on the Henry Seaton Merriam novel.

Miss Astor is a Polish girl and exceptionally well versed in costumes and traditions of that country.

In this subject Blanche Sweet, who five months ago went to New York for the sole purpose of purchasing new gowns, will have the first opportunity of wearing them.

Since her vacation she has appeared as a ragamuffin, dope fiend and anarchist.

The Lasky studio during the past week was the rendezvous of considerable literary talent. Harry Leon Wilson was the guest of Tom Meighn, while on a trip with Irving Cobb, George Horace Larimore and Charles Van Loan to points of interest in Southern California and Arizona, and the quartette of pen celebrities spent several days at the studio.

Scenario Editor Wallace C. Clifton and Emma Boll, also script writer for Selig's, in private life Mrs. Clifton, are taking a vacation of a week from their duties at the studio, which they are spending at San Francisco.

The trip to and from the North was made by boat that they could secure atmosphere for a subject they are now preparing.

Grace Darmond, who has been starred by the Selig Polyscope Company, has left that organization.

The E. & R. Jungle Film Company's educated chimpanzees play the part of ghosts in a one-reel comedy now being made and entitled "haunted."

Napoleon and Sallie break away from their owner, a down and out traveling one-man circus, and take refuge in the attic of a house which becomes the home of newlyweds, Ralph McComas and Lillian Leighton.

Chandet as a Rube in an E. and R.

Much of the action of this comedy takes place in this house, where the chimpanzees are finally discovered.

Others in this subject are Charles Carter as the circus manager, and Director Louis Chaudet appears in the character part of a rube.

Work of filming a five-part Mutual Masterpicture, with William H. Clifford and Marguerite Gibson as principals, was begun last week at the Horsley studio by Director Edward Alexander.

The title of this is "The Hidden Law" and is from an original story and scenario by Theodosia Harris.

Bessie Clark, late of the L-Ko Comedy company and previously with other Coast producing organizations, has been added to the Horsley Cub Comedy company to play leads.

Ella Golden, Spanish dancer of national reputation, has been specially engaged at the Horsley studios for appearance in the Mutual Masterpicture, "The Love Liar," now being made by Director Robert Broadwell and featuring Crane Wilbur.

This is a story of a temperamental musician who becomes infatuated with many women, and his last romance ends in a tragedy. The women of his love affairs are played by May Gaston, Lucy Payton, Nan Christy, and Miss Golden.

One of the big scenes in this is that of the interior of a cafe where the musician denounces the last woman as false.

The Cub Comedy company, headed by "the funniest comedian," George Ovey, has just completed filming "The Fighting Chance," and is now taking up an animal comedy entitled "Jerry's Big Game."

Mrs. Richard K. Fox, wife of the millionaire New York publisher, and mother of Carlyle Robinson, manager of the publicity department at the Horsley studio, was a guest at the studio this week, and there met Captain Jack Bonavita.

Mrs. Fox is one of the few women who witnessed the fight between "Baltimore," a trained lion, and Capt. Bonavita at Long Island, seven years ago, at which time the trainer lost his arm.

On this visit she witnessed Bonavita training "Caesar," aged five years, a son of "Baltimore," to leap on him for a scene in a coming motion picture.

Carl M. Le Viness, recently appointed the director of the "Flying A" brand, American companies, has started the production of "Four Months," an unusual drama by Karl Coolidge.

In the story a wealthy young man is told by his physician that he has but a third of a year to live, and he immediately starts, like a modern Diogenes, to find some one worthy of inheriting his fortune.

His search takes him into many adventures and a love affair. Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh, and George Periolat have the principal parts.

Humphrey Starts "Pork Plotters"

When a crowd of would-be speculators mistake a notation to buy pork chops for a tip on the market, there are a lot of laughs put in "The Pork Plotters," a "Beauty" comedy which has just been started by Director-Actor Orral Humphrey.

The comedy is by Al. Santell, and the principal roles are taken by Humphrey and Lucille Ward.

An American company, under the direction of Arthur Maude, was in Los Angeles last week to "shoot" several scenes for "Revelation," a five-reel production for which the scenario was written by J. Edward Hungerford.

The action of the photoplay is laid in Paris, and Maude, with the aid of a "prop" lamp-post, like those which line the streets of the French capital, was able to obtain excellent atmosphere for the feature.

FILMING THE BEERBOHM TREE PRODUCTION OF "MACBETH"—THE PHOTOGRAPH AT THE RIGHT SHOWS D. W. GRIFFITH SUPERVISING A SCENE

Maude, Constance Crawley and William Carroll head the large cast of the play.

An old-fashioned country newspaper office gives the principal setting for "The Man from Manhattan," an original five-reel photoplay which Director Jack Halloway has just started at the "Flying A" plant.

The story contains a number of true to life types that give good contrasting comedy to the stirring action of the play, which deals with politics and the power of the press.

There is a love theme, logically introduced. Rhea Mitchell, William Stowell, Jack Prescott, Warren Ellsworth, Perry Banks, Joe Taylor, and Charles Wheelock all have important parts in the plot advancement.

MAYO BEGINS "PLAYTHING OF THE GODS" AT LUBIN WEST COAST STUDIOS

Special to Motion Picture News

San Diego, Cal., Feb. 24.

At the Lubin studio in Coronado the past week Director Melvin Mayo commenced work on a three-reel picture called "The Playthings of the Gods."

It is the story of a banker who is determined that his son shall follow him in business, but the son has aspirations to be an artist, finds his mother sides with him and secretly maintains a studio. The father discovers this and disowns him.

The father is apprehended in embarrassing situation with the pretty daughter of his private secretary, and is killed by the latter, although the model-wife of the son is suspected of the crime, as she had been seen in the presence of the elder man before the shooting.

The secretary, at the right moment, confesses; the girl is released and all comes out well, some of the banker's fortune coming to the son through the mother.

The cast of characters includes C. K. Van Auker, formerly with Griffith, as John Raymond, the banker; Alan Forrest, as Earl, his son; Adelaide Bronti, as the mother; Sydney Deane, as James Carlson, the secretary; Ruth Saville, formerly with the Essanay, as Claire Travers, the artist's model; Evelyn Page, as Madelaine, Carlson's daughter; Walter Spencer, formerly with the American, as Tony, another artist. Perry Evenvold is doing the camera work for the production.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

WITH the big ball over, or nearly so, and Charlie Chaplin back at work, things are settling down into a businesslike pace.

If March intends to come in like a lion, we know where it, or she, can get a job. Mary Fuller has acquired the habit of taking breakfast in the cage with a lion; D. W. Griffith, as we have noted, is playing with lions as a regular thing; Crane Wilbur thinks no more of hurling a lion off a cliff than he does of having a tooth pulled—in fact, it seems that every actor or actress who wants publicity in this department tries to get it by lion.

And, in addition, we wish producers would quit calling us up and asking us to find them an actor or actress who wants to go to work, or tell them where they can buy a scenario.

We know where to find diamonds lying around in the park, but we have no time to spend hunting up jobless actresses or unsold scenarios.

We now open the diaphragm on Jules Cowles, character actor. We show him in a full set, clipping the out-of-town newspapers at the Court of St. James, known to the rabble as the Metro Publicity Office.

In issuing a challenge to wrestle all the masked marvels of the silent stage, Mr. Cowles inadvertently puts us in possession of long-sought information.

Says he, over his own X mark: "Last December, in one of the Metro Feature pictures, it was necessary to throw a bull by the horns. Cowles accomplished this somewhat hazardous and difficult feat, for which he was paid a roundly* sum. He is not satisfied, however, for since that engagement he claims everyone addresses him —even his correspondents—as 'The Metro Bull-thrower'!"

We are not surprised that Mr. Cowles is holding down this job. What simply takes us off our feet is that such a task is being accomplished by one man.

*Paid, evidently, in coin.

While on the subject of publicity, we learn that as publicity men, the forces at the Ince studios on the Coast, are champion one-steppers.

They have been holding a series of contests out there recently, and, among others, K. O'Hara, Mary Mackivor and Barney Bernard have won cups.

In her recent advertising—to be more explicit, on page 1250 of the last issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS—a certain actress takes occasion to refer to "pussy-footing scenario writers"; and less than an hour after reading this, we heard a scenario writer declare that in the future he will offer his wares direct to scenario departments, and won't "monkey with half-baked actresses."

Therefore, we conclude, the film industry is composed of one big happy family, with the score standing 50-50 at the end of the first round.

Metro suddenly added Clifford Bruce to its list of stars last week. He was signed up to play the leading role in the newest Popular Plays and Players picture for which Edmund Breese was originally cast. Dorothy Green will play opposite him.

Neal Burns, Christie Nestor comedian, has broken forth in song, he having successfully gargled the following lines to the tune of "Mother" and the praise and encores of members of the Nestor producing organization:

N is for the nifty little stories,
E for the example which they show,
S means situations that are funny,
T stands for the troupe whom you all know,
O for originator Al. E. Christie,
R for recognition, you'll agree,
Put them all together, they spell Nestor,
A word which means a laugh to you and me.

An announcement, accompanying the more or less recent Screen Club and Exhibitors' ball, said that Edwin Thanhouser might be quoted in these words:

"Any girl in New York is welcome to enter. I am sure there are thousands of them, pretty, able and ambitious, who are anxious to, and certainly can make good on the screen.

"I shall be delighted to take the winner of the contest into my company and give her all the chance in the world to become as big a star as Florence La Badie."

Viewed from at least three angles, this is a pretty big order—even for Edwin Thanhouser.

To hark back to this same ball, which we understand is now a thing of the past, inasmuch as last night the Madison Square Garden was reported as practically deserted, we were told to go upstairs and look at Arthur James, who was described as being the coolest and most reposeful man of the whole Metro repair crew.

We found him. He exhibited all the dignified repose of a jack-rabbit out ahead of three bird-dogs. He agreed to answer our questions when he "got back." We're still waiting.

One minute and twenty-four seconds after last week's issue was off the press we received this:

"New York, Feb. 15.

"Special to Just to Make Talk:

"Louise Carbasse, etc., etc., will remain lovely as long as she stays with Universal.

"H. H. VAN LOAN."

That makes one thing already accomplished for law and order. Thus we forge ahead toward our great goal.

Another Universal publicity man informs us that recently Juan de la Cruz won a drinking horn for telling the best story at a meeting of the Southern Club.

The story was that of the hook-worm victim too lazy to move from a nail which was sticking into him. We believe the judges showed excellent taste—in fact, the story has always been our favorite.

There is a drinking horn shown in relief on the column of Trajan in Rome, which we have heard was awarded to the man who first told the story.

"National Motion Picture Tag Day" Is Fund Plan

All Screen Favorites Signify Their Intention to Act as "Taggers" for Raising Money Contributions for Actors' Relief—Studio Beauties Impressed Into Service

A "NATIONAL MOTION PICTURE TAG DAY" is the newest scheme planned by the committee in charge of the work of raising $500,000 for the Actors' Fund of America on behalf of the allied motion picture interests.

All of the screen favorites have signified their intentions of becoming "taggers" for the fund. A delegation of the prettiest girls from each studio, wherever located, will be selected for the purpose. The public will be given opportunity to purchase autograph photogravures of actors and actresses.

The campaign is gaining headway throughout the country, under the direction of Samuel Goldfish, chairman of the executive committee.

It is expected every one of the 20,000 playhouse proprietors will donate a share of his receipts to the fund on May 15, the final day of the campaign, to be officially known as "National Tribute Day." Contributions are already coming in from all parts of the country.

Aaron Jones of Chicago, controlling more than three score theatres, and B. S. Moss of New York, with twenty theatres under his management, were quick to follow the example of Marcus Loew in volunteering to donate percentages of their receipts.

Mr. Jones has undertaken the burden of the active work of the movement in Chicago, and Mayor Thompson is acting as honorary chairman for the committee in the western metropolis.

This committee is composed of ten men prominent in the Chicago amusement world.

They in turn have appointed other committees of ten men each.

Charles R. McCauley, chairman of the committee on cartoons and animated announcements, reports that Flohri, of Judge, will execute the portrait of the actress who donates the largest sum to the campaign.

McCauley is preparing a dozen subjects in animated cartoon "trailers" which the committee is confident will have strong appeal to the theatre going public.

No Shakespearian Roles for Sothern in "V" Films

Veteran Actor Will, However, Appear in 3 Subjects Specially Written for Him with Idea of Featuring the Company's Women Stars with the Noted Stage Player

E. H. SOTHERN, one of the foremost actors on the American stage, who recently signed a contract wilth the Vitagraph Company to appear in motion pictures, will apear in three feature films to be announced later.

Contrary to popular expectations, Mr. Sothern will not be shown in any of his Shakespearian roles.

Mr. Sothern will appear in at least three photoplays for the Vitagraph in connection with some of their stars. Anita Stewart of the "Goddess" fame and other film successes will support the veteran actor in a romantic drama.

Lillian Walker, the Vitagraph "Dimples," will appear in a multiple-reel comedy production. Edith Storey of "The Island of Regeneration," "Price for Folly," "Dust of Egypt" fame will act in a drama with Sothern.

The plays will be specially written to make use of the different abilities of the actresses. Mr. Sothern is spending his spare time at the Vitagraph plant in Flatbush studying the different effects and how they are obtained.

By the time he commences actual work, about May 1, he will have gained enough knowledge and experience, so that he will be able to start right in without delay.

He is deeply interested in the new art and looks forward with eager anticipation to seeing himself as others have seen him.

Announcements will be made later.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Australia a Growing Market for Best Pictures

Special to Motion Picture News

Sydney, N. S. W., Australia, Feb. 2.

THE year 1916 brought with it the formation of two new film producing concerns in this city, namely, the Vita Film Corporation and the Australian Famous Feature Film Company. The first production of the former corporation, "A Maori Maid's Love," five reels, was exhibited in this city a few weeks ago. It certainly could not be classed as a masterpiece. Reduced to three reels it would make a good, pleasing feature.

The subtitles in their present state are crude and need revision. Director Raymond Longford had a hard task when he posed the Maori maids before the camera and deserves credit for the results obtained. Besides writing and directing the story, Mr. Longford played the leading male lead, that of a surveyor who won the love of a little Maori maid, and subsequently deserted her.

Their daughter, played by Lottie Lyell, who has been appearing in locally produced features for some time, has numerous adventures, and eventually marries Jim (Ed. J. Rolfe), a young miner.

The film was produced in New Zealand and has many beautiful backgrounds.

"The Martyrdom of Nurse Cavell" is the title under which the first production of the Australian Famous Feature Company will be released. Vera Pearce, who is at present appearing at the Tivoli theatre, as "Queen of the Follies," will play the title role, supported by Harrington Reynolds, lately starring in the stage production of "The Rosary."

Miss Pearce played opposite Arthur Shirley, now in the States, in the four-reel feature, "The Shepherd of the Southern Cross" (Australasian Films) some eighteen months ago, and the camera did not in the least detract from her any of her wonderful charm.

The production is being produced by Post Mason, who until recently was connected with Australasian Films. As the title suggests, the story is written around the death of Nurse Cavell, and I am of the opinion that it will be one of the "usual war melodramas." If so, it seems a pity to waste such talent as that possessed by Miss Pearce and Harrington Reynolds.

The Tivoli Follies are at present presenting a short sketch which to the regular picture-goer will appear to be nothing more than a stage replica of Chaplin's "Night in the Show." Even the stage falls back on the pictures for ideas.

The pictures of the fight between Les D'Arcy (Australia) and "Knockout" Brown (U. S. A.), shown in the city three days after the fight took place, prove conclusively that the Australian had the best of the "battle" all through.

I notice by the announcements appearing in the News that the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation has produced a version of Maxwell Gray's well-known novel and play, "The Silence of Dean Maitland," under the title of "Sealed Lips."

The Fraser Film Company of this city produced this story about eighteen months ago, and it proved such a success that it was impossible to obtain the book itself at any of the newsdealers in this state. Arthur Shirley, Harry Thomas and Lottie Lyell played the leading roles.

There has also been another adaptation of the same play shown here recently; viz., the Barker Company's, an English firm, "Bishop's Silence."

Franklin Barrett, late of Pathé Freres, is at present in this state producing famous Australian novels for J. C. Williamson's, Ltd. He is at present engaged on the film adaptation of Hodder & Stoughton's £1,000 prize novel, "The Pioneers," by Katharine Susannah Prichard. He has secured a notable cast of players, including Alma Rock Phillip and Charles Villiers.

Many were the complimentary remarks passed about the beautiful tinting of the exteriors in the Equitable Company's five-reeler, "The Better Woman," shown at the Crystal Palace recently. This fine picture was the means of introducing Leonore Ulrich to picture patrons of this city.

"The Warning," Equitable five-reeler, shown at the Crystal Palace theatre last week, was one of the best pictures of its kind I have had the pleasure of witnessing since Griffith's notable "Avenging Conscience."

Kolker's display of the human emotions was great, and I think that in this respect he comes next to Henry Walthall. The picture was a success, being exhibited for a second week at the Lyric. Kolker was a good drawing card, as he had previously appeared here on the stage with Margaret Anglin, some years back.

"The Wolf," Lubin, a Success

The Lubin Company may compliment themselves in having produced so notable a feature as "The Wolf," a story of the Canadian Northwest, which was shown at the Lyceum for the week ending January 22. Sydney patrons had a glimpse of the "Eternal Snows" while viewing this film. Ethel Clayton and G. S. Spencer are both popular with the public here. Ferdinand Tidmarsh, who played the "Wolf," bears a remarkable likeness to Dustin Farnum.

"My Old Dutch," in the opinion of most who have witnessed this fine feature, is one of the most human stories ever told through the medium of the screen. The acting of the principals is beyond criticism. In a popularity contest conducted by J. D. Williams, Ltd., this feature won by an enormous margin.

The Strand theatre, one of the largest and most up-to-date houses in Sydney, was reopened under the Waddington management last week, "Cinderella" with Mary Pickford being the main attraction. This theatre has lately been the home of the World Film Company's productions.

The Waddington management propose to present the best of the Paramount and World Film programs at the Strand. The Strand makes the fourth city theatre under the control of Messrs. Waddington, Ltd. J. D. Williams also have four.

On Monday next the first stage production of J. C. Williamsons, Ltd., to be reproduced on the screen, will be the attraction at both the Majestic and Strand theatres. This feature is in five reels, and features Fred Niblo and Josephine Cohan, a team both equally famous in America as in Australia. "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" will surely prove a drawing card on the screen, as it was on the stage.

There is another new theatre to be opened in this city shortly, The Australian. Mr. Walter Brown, the managing director, has been in the business for several years, and in this his latest theatre he has provided the Sydney public with one of the finest photoplay houses possible.

"Julius Caesar" Shown

"The Rosary," Selig-Red Seal play, began its first run here this week. It is rather a curious co-incidence that about two years ago, when the Selig Company's "Spoilers" was being exhibited in this city, "The Rosary" was almost simultaneously being played on the stage. Now it is the reverse, "The Rosary" is on the screen and "The Spoilers" is being presented on the stage at the Palace theatre.

"Julius Caesar," the Cines Company's feature, will be presented here shortly. This, I believe, has been shortened considerably, and has added strength to the story by being so treated. Other foreign features could be similarly "cut down" without detracting any real value from them. The Paramount pictures generally happen to be shortened when they least need it.

"The Russian-Austrian War Films" proved so popular at the Lyceum theatre that they are being exhibited at the Empress theatre for another week's run.

Current attractions include "Wildfire" with Lillian Russell (World Film) at the Grand, "The Only Son" (Lasky) at the Strand and Majestic theatres.

Although none of the Australian picture companies have maintained a regular output, there have been some very notable productions released by various concerns. Australasian Films, Ltd., produced some fine subjects, besides numerous photoplay songs. A short summary of locally produced subjects is as follows:

"The Loyal Rebel" and "Heroes of the Dardanelles" were the two best achievements of Australasian Films, Ltd. The former was in five reels, featuring Reynolds Denniston, in a story woven around incidents leading to the Eureka Stockade, which was an event in Australian history.

"Heroes of the Dardanelles" was a three-reel production featuring several stage stars, and dealing with the adventures of the Australians in Gallipoli.

"The Unknown" and "Ma Hogan's New Boarder" were both two-reel comedies put on by Fraser Films, Ltd. The former was a really good comedy, Keystone in appearance ,and featuring a well-known vaudeville artist, Jack (Porky) Kearns.

The latter production featured a young man, Charles Evans, who gave a really clever impersonation of Charlie Chaplin. The production was too long to be anything more than ordinary.

"Within Our Gates," three reels, was a really good war story, which is exceptional. J. C. Williamsons were the producers, and the production was directed by Frank Harvey, who deserves all the credit that can be given him for making such an interesting picture. Cyril Mackay and Dorothy Cumming played leads "For Australia," another J. C. W. film, has already been referred to in these columns. Martin Keith was responsible for the scenario, which was produced by Monte Luke, and featuring Alma Rock Phillips, a promising young Australian photoplayer.

Production Conditions Good

It is a pity that some "live-wire" organization does not take advantage of the ideal weather conditions existing in this country to produce motion pictures.

In the past Australian made pictures have been the best draw of any, but owing to the number of failures, the fascination of locally produced subjects is gradually wearing off. But still good pictures can, and will some day, be made here, as there are better conditions for doing so here than in most countries, perhaps even America.

For instance, there would be no necessity to transport a company across half the continent for the purpose of securing such and such a scene. Backgrounds of every description can be had within a day's journey of Sydney, perhaps even less.

One theatrical man, who prided himself on being an authority on the subject, stated that the required talent was not to be found here. He forgets that they have been here, and not finding an opportunity to display their talent have gone elsewhere, and in some cases have risen to the highest ranks of the profession, as in the case of Arthur Shirley. Lillie Leslie, Frank Clarke Rupert Julian, Elsie Jane Wilson Mae Busch, Stanley Walpole and others too numerous to mention.

Some day this fact will be realized, and then Australia will take its place with the best picture-producing countries in the world.

HAL. H. CARLETON.

Perhaps a Tax on British Theatres as Well as Films

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

London, Feb. 10.

NOT content with placing an embargo on imported film, the British government is now stated to have in mind the taxation of theatres, music-halls, picture houses, and other forms of entertainment.

Conditions imposed by the war have rendered imperative the tapping of new sources of revenue. The contemplated move, important as it is, has not been altogether unexpected, for so long ago as last September in my letter to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, I mentioned the fear of the course now proposed, being pursued.

The government lately has been impressing upon the public the urgent and growing need for economy and doubtless the amusement tax is a means to this end.

The war if anything has improved rather than injured the amusement business and it is really astounding to be continually in receipt of glowing reports on the state of trade. Even the picture houses in the poorer localities are benefiting by the wave of prosperity.

It must be borne in mind that the workers employed in shipbuilding and munitions centres, are in receipt of extremely good wages, and they can afford to patronize the cinema generously.

Towns in which troops are stationed are also doing extraordinarily well. It is thought that amusements therefore will be well able to bear the coming imposts. When the recent film tax was imposed there was talk about revising the prices of admission, but nothing was done.

The basis of the new taxation has not yet been made known, and will not be so, until after the reassembling of parliament, and the presentation of the budget. Consequently speculation is rife, but the generally accepted theories are that the tax might be:

Form of the Tax

(1.) A tax on tickets, probably in the form of a stamp to be affixed;

(2.) Deduction of part of gross receipts of every entertainment.

The first of two alternatives would bring home the tax to every ticket buyer, and has a precedent in other countries, notably France, where such a tax has been in force for some time.

It is suggested that the tax might be graduated—one penny on every sixpenny seat, two-pence on a shilling, etc.—approximating the scope of the tax in France. Another authority states that in addition to the ticket tax, a proportion of the gross receipts may be required from the amusement hall itself.

Should these taxes be decided upon, it is almost sure that a general revision of prices will ensue. By meeting the tax by a corresponding increase in admission charges, it is not likely to be attended with any serious results.

In these dark days, people want to be amused, and when they are earning good money they will not quibble over a copper or two. The top price at practically all cinemas is one shilling, and the minimum price goes as low as two-pence or three-pence.

The prices are so well graded that no one can have cause for complaint. There are 5,000 picture houses in the British Isles, and the expected yield will pale the film tax (which is estimated to produce £400,000) into insignificance.

Of paramount importance at the moment is the report which has gained publicity of the recommendations of the Government committee for the prohibition of imports of American films and film base.

The Yorkshire Exhibitors' Association has already met to consider the matter and Mr. Gavazzi King said that the Government had appointed committees to consider (1) methods of avoiding the importation of unnecessary, bulky or expensive materials to make way for absolute necessities; (2) ways of reducing luxuries; (3) the extent to which it is possible to prevent the export of gold in payment for imports for which we were not paying by exports.

The committee recommended the stoppage of the import of all film from America, and also of all base on which British films are printed. Withholding of film base would, of course, bring the British film industry to a standstill almost immediately.

Mr. King mentioned that it was not certain that the recommendations would be all adopted, and he suggested the possibility of deputations to Mr. Runciman of the Board of Trade and also the chancellor, and also of every exhibitor in the country being able to screen slides asking patrons to write to his local member of parliament, emphasizing the service of the cinema to the community.

SCENES FROM FIVE UNIVERSAL OFFERINGS: "HER FRIEND THE DOCTOR," "A BEAST OF SOCIETY," "JOHN PELLET'S DREAM," "THE STAMPEDE IN THE NIGHT," "THE DISAPPEARING GROOM"

The importance of the proposals cannot be over-estimated, and while I personally am of opinion that nothing so far-reaching will be attempted, nevertheless it is too much to hope that no further restraints will be placed on the trade in films.

Importance of the Proposals

The fact cannot be avoided, in strenuous times like the present that the people need diversion, and as fully eighty per cent of the films exhibited are of American origin, to suddenly keep back this film might have a very undesirable effect on the regular picture-goer.

Millions of pounds are sent to America for films, and it appears to be the object of the official committees to minimize the payment of gold. The situation would be considerably eased if a much greater quantity of English films were imported into America.

There are plenty of British productions which well merit exportation, and one ventures to think that a system of exchange such as I have indicated, would not only be in accord with the desires of the government, as money need not leave this country, but would be mutually beneficial to the film men of both countries.

As the situation is at present, the Bioscope, the well known British trade journal, points out, the prohibition would have the following probable results:

(1.) Nearly half a million people would be thrown out of employment.

(2.) Over 5,000 well-established businesses would be closed, their proprietors made bankrupt and their premises rendered useless.

(3.) Several millions of capital would be lost.

(4.) Many thousand pounds' worth of printing and advertising would be lost.

(5.) Duty on imported films (estimated to yield £400,000 per annum) would be lost.

(6.) Numerous subsidiary trades would be severely injured.

(7.) The public would lose its most popular, healthy, and economical form of amusement.

Program Includes Thirteen Subjects

At a time when the open market is in jeopardy, the news that the Trans-Atlantic Company is offering 17,000 feet of first class photoplay running the whole gamut of emotion from heart-throbbing dramas to riotous farce comedies for open market release early in March is decidedly encouraging, and will be very acceptable to renters.

This program includes no less than thirteen subjects, as well as a two-reel instalment of "The Broken Coin."

The famous Nestor comedy company is represented by two productions, and there are such well known brands as Victor, Imp, Rex, L.-Ko, Joker and Powers. After the release of such films as "A Shriek in the Night" (Walter Kerrigan), "Stolen Hearts and Pennies" (Ritchie), "The Mirror of Justice" (Sydney Ayres), "The Unnecessary Sex" (W. Garwood and Violet Mersereau), "Inside Facts," and an episode of the adventures of the society crook "Lady Raffles," T. A. Co. will assuredly enhance a worthy reputation.

Keen interest is being taken in the new serial "The Purple Iris" and it is hoped that bookings will be as heavy, if not heavier, than they were for the "Broken Coin."

The T. A. Company is discontinuing the Broadway features and Red Feather photoplays will be substituted. All interest at the moment centers round Sarah Bernhardt in "Jeanne Dore."

As "My Old Dutch" is now being shown in America, it may be interesting to mention that on the release date there were no less than 368 bookings, and "Caste," which was only released last week, received 367, of which one-sixth were six-day bookings.

At the annual dinner and social of Thanhouser Flms, Ltd., the managing director, Mr. Paul Kimberley, was presented on behalf of the staff, by Frank Brockliss of the Lubin Company, with a cigarette box, and Mrs. Kimberley with a bouquet of roses, carnations and tulips.

Of all the war films now on the market, undoubtedly the most popular are those which were taken under official auspices. They are being shown with considerable success at most of the leading picture houses. Of the films themselves, however, film men are not too enthusiastic.

The Board of Trade has issued a return showing that during December America has exported to England £100,000 worth of films, an increase of £58,000 over the previous month.

During the year 1915 a total of £1,113,000 of film has been received from the States, and from other countries £98,000. The total exports of film from England were £195,000.

There has been a new development on the Essanay controversy, and a compromise is to be effected. H. A. Spoor's announcement that his firm is prepared to book Chaplin films as single subjects on separate contracts where so desired by exhibitors, has been received with favor.

What will happen with existing contracts is now a matter for the contracting parties, but Mr. Spoor has shown a willingness to meet exhibitors.

Although Essanay films will still be exclusives, concessions have been made on the original scheme, which one hopes will lead to an amicable working arrangement. The controversy has been in progress now five months, and Charlie Chaplin will again appear perhaps stronger than ever.

Glut of Sex Pictures

A number of sex films have made their appearance lately, and have provoked a fair amount of comment. Here is one extract from the Daily Mail, a leading national journal: "This type of picture came from America, and is declining in favor there, the public having become as surfeited with it as they did with cowboy stories.

"In Great Britain there is just now a glut of such pictures, which began with 'Three Weeks,' went on to 'Five Nights' brary of daring fiction.

"The monetary value of the film lies in the title, which the public know is that of a book which is not upon the shelves of the houses of the ordinary people or has been banned by the libraries.

"It is this fact which constitutes its drawing power. The public clamor to see it, and are disappointed, for the film producer with extraordinary skill can turn a doubtful story often interlarded in its subtitles with texts from the Bible.

"And so when the story comes to be shown it is pronounced to be a great moral story, 'better than any sermon,' and so on. It goes out with the certificate of the British Board of Film Censors, and all is well." These are the remarks which prefaced comment on "The Yoke," and "Burnt Wings."

Amongst the British film productions of the week are "Face to Face" (Hepworth), a drama with superb double photography scenes, showing how a criminal who has masqueraded as another man is exposed in a startling manner at a murder trial.

H. A. Browne & Co., Ltd., comedies "Taming Liza" (1220 feet), "Silas at the Seaside" (430 feet), "Pimple's Double" (880 feet), "A Boarding-school Scandal" (790 feet).

There has been a delay in the arrival of Kriterion Sales Agency films, which are rented in England by H. A. Browne & Co.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

SHURTLEFF MANAGER OF CLEVELAND BRANCH OF V-L-S-E, FORMERLY IN CHARGE OF ABEL

WITH the appointment of Sydney E. Abel as manager of the Chicago office of the V-L-S-E—the second largest office in the Big Four organization—comes the announcement that C. E. Shurtleff has been given charge of the Cleveland branch, formerly under Mr. Abel.

Mr. Shurtleff's rise in the V-L-S-E has been conspicuous even among the many rapid promotions which have marked this organization's career.

Only a few months ago, he was a salesman in the Atlanta office. His record there evidenced such efficiency, that he was moved to Detroit the first of the year, to take charge of the sub-office in that city, which was under the jurisdiction of the Cleveland branch.

He had been there but a month, when the Big Four transferred him to Cincinnati, where he was made a branch manager.

The results which he accomplished there during the short period of his management of the Big Four interests, won for him promotion to the Cleveland territory, which is considered one of the most important in the V-L-S-E organization.

Mr. Shurtleff is succeeded in Cincinnati by C. E. Holah, who is widely known in the film circles of that city and surrounding territory.

The Detroit office is now being managed under Mr. Shurtleff's supervision, by J. M. Duncan, David Kline, who recently was placed in charge of that office, having resigned. Mr. Duncan has been with the Detorit sub-branch for some time.

Other changes in the Big Four ranks include the promotion by E. O. Child, Pittsburgh manager, of Elmer J. Waner, who has been shipping clerk of that branch, to assistant booker; Walter C. Thomas, former poster clerk, to shipping clerk, and James G. Hanna, former night man, to poster clerk.

The Cincinnati office has secured the services of C. L. Kendall, formerly of the Universal. Mr. Kendall has been a booker for almost ten years and is known to practically every exhibitor in that territory.

A. L. Widner, who for several months past has been assistant booker in the Boston office of the Big Four, has been promoted to a position on the sales force of the Philadelphia branch, and will cover Delaware, parts of Maryland and New Jersey.

I. A. Farrah, former manager of the General Film Company's branch office at Harrisburg, Pa., is another addition to the Philadelphia office, covering part of the state of Pennsylvania.

In Seattle, Mr. North, manager of the V-L-S-E office there, has added Frank Swimer to his office force. Mr. Swimer was formerly correspondence clerk with the R. G. Dun Mercantile Agency.

GOLDSTEIN, DENVER, REPORTS INTER-MOUNTAIN ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN A "WINNER"

WILLIAM T. BINFORD, roadman for Metro, working out of the Denver office, has been placed in charge of that office.

W. H. Cree, manager General Film Company, Denver, reports the installation of an exhibitors' service department, which will aid the out-of-town exhibitors in purchasing goods they are unable to obtain in the smaller towns, and also reports that A. E. Fair, roadman for General continues to "shoot" in new business.

Manager Louis Goldstein, of Denver Universal Exchange, reports the intermountain advertising campaign a winner. Over half of the exhibitors in that territory have entered their names as members.

This campaign is being conducted by the publicity department of the Denver office and is creating more interest than any stunt ever pulled in that territory.

The United Film Service, under management of L. D. Purdy, reports business hitting the high mark.

W. S. Rand, manager of the Triangle Exchange of Denver, has returned from his trip through the Southern part of Colorado.

J. J. Unger, special representative and manager of all Metro Exchanges, stopped off in Denver for several days last week and completed plans for the new branch office of Metro at Salt Lake City, Utah.

Unger and J. S. Bailey, manager of the Denver Metro Exchange, left Denver for Salt Lake last week to open the new branch. Mr. Bailey will take charge of that office for an indefinite period.

JOE LEVY GOES TO CHICAGO OFFICE OF FOX

Joe Levy, manager of the Fox exchange in Omaha since it was started there, has been promoted to Chicago and Lester Stern of Chicago has taken the managership in Omaha.

While in charge of the branch Mr. Levy made many acquaintances who soon became friends. To him, say many exhibitors, is due in part credit for the progress in motion picture activities in Omaha's territory within the last year.

FRISCO EXCHANGE BOARD OF TRADE FILES COMPLAINT WITH STATE R. R. COMMISSION

The Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco has filed with the State Railroad Commission a complaint against the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Western Pacific, Northwestern Pacific, San Pedro and Los Angeles and Salt Lake railroads, asking for an order preventing the defendants from prohibiting the carrying of moving picture films in passenger and baggage cars.

The complaint sets forth that during the past twenty years more than one million films have been transported in passenger cars in California without a single accident.

It is asserted that severe financial loss would result to film exchanges and exhibitors from these regulations through the loss in booking and the increased cost of carriage.

The complaint suggests that safety would be fully secured by compelling all persons carrying films on trains and boats to use a key-locked metal case and the board of trade offered such a case as an exhibit.

The complaint further suggests that films be carried on the upper decks of boats and in the sections of trains where smoking is prohibited.

PATHE EXCHANGE IN WASHINGTON, D. C., REPORTS COMPETITION FOR "IRON CLAW"

Pathe Washington Exchange reports that with the opening of the first installment of "The Iron Claw," competition ran very close and the honor went to The Plaza, one of the Moore chain of theatres in the heart of the downtown picture district.

The advance bookings for this film exceeded that of any other serial that Pathe has yet put out, and that is saying a great deal, remembering the wonderful sensations of "Elaine" and "Neal of the Navy" films. This exchange anticipates "The Iron Claw" to break all previous records for a serial in that territory.

AFFILIATED BOOKING OFFICES FORMING IN ATLANTA

Plans are now under way and a charter is being asked at Atlanta, Ga., for the Affiliated Booking Offices. The new concern will deal exclusively in features, both on the percentage with the manufacturers and with the exhibitors.

At no time will a program be served exhibitors. The new company announces it will buy states rights in the South for feature productions. Offices at Atlanta, Ga., and Dallas, Texas, will be maintained.

FIRE DEPARTMENT IN SAN FRANCISCO CONDUCTS INVESTIGATION OF EXCHANGES

A careful survey of conditions as they exist in film exchanges of San Francisco has been made by Stephen D. Russell and John J. Conlon of the fire department, and the report rendered to their chief indicates that these were found to be unsatisfactory in many cases.

A number of film exchanges are located in hotel buildings and not a few make a practice of storing their films on open racks. While there has never been a fire of any consequence in a Frisco film exchange, it is believed that the recent investigation will result in regulations of safeguarding nature.

Improvements are being made steadily by exchanges without regulations and at the present rate it will be but a comparatively short time before fireproof vaults will be installed by most of them.

BEIHOFF RESIGNS FROM WORLD-EQUITABLE IN PHILADELPHIA

George W. Beihoff has given up his managership of the Philadelphia World-Equitable office and hied him to New York. His future plans have not yet been announced.

Harvey B. Day, formerly eastern district manager of the Fox Film Corporation, has severed his connection with that company and is now with the World-Equitable Film Corporation.

While Mr. Day's plans have not entirely crystallized, he is at present managing the Philadelphia office, but will probably extend his activities very shortly.

There will be no change in the staff of the Quaker City office at present. More room is however an urgent necessity and steps will be taken at once to meet this need.

BOEHRINGER OPENS TRIANGLE EXCHANGE SERVING 14 THEATRES

Ernst Boehringer, exhibitor, of New Orleans, has opened a Triangle exchange which will serve fourteen exhibitors in the New Orleans territory.

Mr. Boehringer has contracted for Triangle films to be shown first run at his new Triangle theatre, second run at his Columbia theatre in Canal street and in the remainder of the fourteen houses which Triangle will serve in the New Orleans territory.

Another Triangle exchange will open shortly in New Orleans. This will be opened by the Triangle Film Corporation of New York, and it will serve the territory not covered by Mr. Boehringer.

GENERAL ADDS TWO ROADMEN TO OMAHA BRANCH

C. A. Isaackson and I. W. Rachman have been added to the General Film Company force in Omaha as traveling men. The Omaha branch has begun distributing films, and has taken its place among the buying and distributing centers again.

C. W. Taylor, manager, is having the exchange quarters rebuilt until it will be one of the most attractive in Omaha.

BALSDON, V-L-S-E, BOSTON, SHOWS PICTURES TO INMATES OF RHODE ISLAND PRISON

GEORGE BALSDON, manager of the New England V-L-S-E exchange, who has become greatly interested in showing films to the inmates of the Rhode Island state prison, says to the News man:

"I have just received a letter from the warden, in which he states that since the motion pictures have been introduced into the prison, he has not had a single case of punishment in months; that all such punishment as dungeons, bread and water diets, straight jackets, etc., have been done away with. The guards have been taken off the dining room and the prisoners have been put on the honor system."

Mr. Balsdon calls attention to the fact that, under the auspices of the Eastern Film Company, a scenario writing contest was recently held among the inmates. More than one hundred manuscripts were entered in this contest. Fist prize was won by Howard W. Van Slyke and other prizes were taken by Burnside McCullum and Henry Harrington, with honorable mention for William Trent, E. Glennoris, Charles Quigley and O. Chabot.

"The winner of the first prize," says Mr. Balsdon, "forged a check and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. The prize money he received he immediately forwarded to his employer, on whom he forged the check, and in the letter that Mr. Van Slyke wrote he states that he intends to remit every cent of the amount obtained through the forgery."

Thus may the motion picture pierce the prison walls with a message which even a censor must admit to be nothing except beneficial to all concerned.

The Famous Players Film Company of New England has just sent out to the trade in the New England district a circular letter regarding the substitution of Paramount Pictographs for Paramount Newspictures.

"Paramount Pictographs," says the circular, "is an epoch-making step in the production of motion pictures, and the first real, insistent, connected, continuous attemps ever made to utilize the film for the purpose for which it is truly fitted, the moulding of public opinion and setting before the masses the views of the best thinkers of the world in such a way as can be readily understood and appreciated."

This exchange reports business in a flourishing condition throughout the territory. In Boston just now Paramount is especially strong.

In addition to other theatres Paramount may now be seen at the Park, the Modern, the Bijou and the Exeter street theatres, four of the most prominent houses in Boston.

The Boston Photo-Play Company, Joel C. Leighton, manager, with its office at 100 Boylston street, Boston, now presents to its patrons five big feature films, "Life Without a Soul," a five-reel adaptation of "Frankenstein," by Mrs. Shelly, produced by the Ocean Film Corporation; "The Unfortunate Youth," a five-reel picturization of William J. Locke's novel, also produced by Ocean; "The Waif," five-reel dramatic film, produced by Autoro Film Plays Corporation, starring Matty Roubert; "A Trade Secret," an elaborate five-reel film produced by the Gotham Film Company and presenting Betty Marshall and Frederick de Belleville; and "Her Atonement," and the Association Film Corporation five-reeler, starring Lillian Wiggins.

FARRELL IS OPTIMISTIC OVER BUSINESS CONDITIONS

On his way to headquarters in Atlanta, E. J. Farrell, southern division manager for the General Film Company, stopped off in New Orleans long enough to give an optimistic interview of general conditions throughout his territory, over which he has just traveled.

Mr. Farrell visited in turn Kansas City, Oklahoma City, Dallas, Houston, and finally New Orleans.

He says he finds conditions particularly bright in Oklahoma City, where a period of theatre building apparently has struck the city.

He gives Dallas a clean bill of business health. In that city several new men have been added to the General exchange force.

"But in New Orleans we are making a few new records. In the last three weeks the Crescent City office has been doing twenty-five per cent more business per week than for any other corresponding periods for some time back.

"This means simply that more and more the live exhibitor is clamoring for the single reel program that General has to offer."

PATHE EXCHANGE IN LOS ANGELES MOVES TO "FILM ROW"

The Pathe Exchange in Los Angeles is being moved from its former location on East Seventh street to 732 South Olive, which is the center of film row.

Manager B. E. Loper is having elegant offices prepared, and the home of the Rooster brands will be a very creditable addition to the exchanges of the row.

The other exchanges now located within two blocks in that section are the V-L-S-E, Triangle, Fox, California-Universal, Metro, California Comedy Feature Film Company, George Metcalfe Accessory Company, Mutual Film Corporation, Golden Gate and All-Star Feature Distributors, and the World Film Corporation.

The General Film and Progressive Paramount exchanges are the only ones not in the district, and are located two and four blocks distant.

PATHE OFFICE IN ST. LOUIS INSTALLS VAULT WITH CAPACITY FOR 3,600 REELS

The St. Louis Office of the Pathé Exchange has recently installed a fire-proof vault that will take care of 3,600 reels.

The West End Lyric of St. Louis, Mo., has just finished a four days' run on the Pathé Gold Rooster release "New York." This same subject will be run by the Pageant theatre on the 19th.

On February 13 the St. Louis office of the Pathé Exchange, booked the "Horrors of War" to the Grand Central theatre of that city for an indefinite run.

LEONHARDT LEAVES LOS ANGELES FOR CENTRAL WEST DISTRICT FOR FOX

HARRY LEONHARDT, who for the past nine months has served as coast and mountain district manager for the Fox Film Corporation, Los Angeles, has gone to Chicago, which will be his home office in the future, as he is to have charge of the Central Western States district.

Mr. Leonhardt's territory includes Minneapolis, St. Louis, Omaha, Denver and Salt Lake Fox exchanges, and the appointment comes as an advancement for his excellent work on the Coast where Fox pictures rental service is up to the maximum.

The Coast territory has been changed to include the Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles exchanges, and E. R. Redlich, manager of the Seattle exchange, has been promoted to district manager.

E. S. Coates, formerly bookkeeper and cashier of the Seattle exchange will serve as manager there. Mr. Redlich will have his office at Seattle.

The Fox service in the Coast and mountain states has been built up to the present excellent conditions as the result of the efforts on the part of the exchange managers, according to a statement by Mr. Leonhardt prior to his departure for the East.

"Every exchange man in the Fox service feels that he is in position to improve the service from his respective exchange," Mr. Leonhardt said, "and every man works as though he were a member of the company instead of an employe."

E. J. Lipson, salesman for the Los Angeles Metro Exchange, has just returned from a five-weeks' trip over Arizona and Southern California points.

In Arizona he secured contracts for service from fifteen of the seventeen available houses, and a peculiar feature in connection with this success is the fact that none of the contracts have been cancelled.

Arizona exhibitors, according to exchange men, heretofore had the distinction of being so prompt with their cancellation orders that these would reach the Los Angeles exchanges prior to the time the salesman returned.

On this trip Mr. Lipson and C. S. Holmes, salesman for the Triangle Film Corporation out of Los Angeles exchange, made five towns together and took turn about in calling on the theatre owners first.

In all instances both men were successful in making contracts.

Charles Klopot of California Comedy Feature Film Company is on a business trip to Phoenix, Arizona, where he is making arrangements for the opening of a branch exchange.

Upon his return from Arizona Mr. Klopot will go to San Francisco and open a similar office there.

During his absence the exchange here is in charge of his partner, Jake Cone. The firm recently purchased copies of all the Box Office Attraction subjects, and have rights for these in Western states.

The company expects to conduct a state rights business, and it is probable that exchanges in the northwest will be opened after the ones at Phoenix and San Francisco are formally put into operation.

Ralph Earl, producer of the Pacific Coast edition of Paramount News Pictures whose headquarters are at San Francisco, was in Los Angeles last week securing subjects for early release.

LAURENTE IS IN CHARGE OF MUTUAL OFFICE IN TORONTO

The Mutual Company in Toronto has been occupying a place of interest in the minds of the film men of Toronto this last week, owing to the fact that persistent rumors have been circulating to the effect that the company has once more stopped the buying of new films for release in Canada. There have been certain changes in the personnel of the Toronto office, that tend toward the view that some change is about to take place.

Mr. Harris, who for some months has been the Toronto manager, has sent in his resignation, which has been accepted, and Mr. Laurente, formerly with the Mutual Company, but latterly with Pathé in Montreal, has taken his place. No announcement has yet been made by the new manager.

"The Campbells Are Coming," the Broadway Universal feature which the Universal Company took to Ottawa to show Sir Sam Hughes, the Military Minister, has completed its first week of showing in Toronto and started on the second. Large crowds are reported in attendance.

Unique draping of the building of the Griffins theatre, in Campbells' plaid and the pipers playing outside, have been two noteworthy features of the showing of this military feature.

MARKOWITZ OUT OF CALIFORNIA UNIVERSAL EXCHANGE

D. S. Markowitz, who has been manager of the California Universal Film Exchange, Los Angeles, for the past year, has tendered his resignation, which becomes effective March 4.

It is his intention to enter the producing field, but he has not made a decision regarding this matter.

Abe Markowitz, who has been connected with the San Francisco Exchange of the same company, is scheduled to become manager of the Los Angeles branch.

C. L. Theuerkauf, who has been branch manager for the World Film Corporation, Los Angeles, is to be manager of the Bluebird department of the California Universal Exchange.

HOWELL GOES ON TOUR OF METRO OFFICES IN WEST

Albert W. Howell, auditor for the Central States of the Metro offices, with headquarters in Pittsburgh, will leave on March 4 on a tour of the branches at Chicago, Kansas City and Des Moines to install a new accounting system which he has recently perfected.

He will probably remain in the west until the middle of May or June 1, according to present plans.

DISTRIBUTION OF TRIANGLES IN WESTERN CANADA THROUGH NATIONAL WILL BEGIN SHORTLY

A statement given out in Vancouver last week by W. P. Nichols, managing director of the National Amusement Company, Ltd., contained the information that the National Film Service has secured the Western Canadian distribution rights for the Triangle program, which will be imported in its entirety to the Vancouver headquarters of the company.

The National Film Service, Ltd., is the name chosen for the new film exchange which has just been incorporated, and which last month began the distribution of the V-L-S-E features throughout the western provinces.

The proposition made by the National exchange has been accepted by the Triangle people, and after a few minor details are adjusted the new service will begin.

The new exchange will then be in an enviable position, controlling as it will two of the principal feature programs in the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

In Vancouver, both the Rex and Globe theatres will use first run programs selected from both services, and the same will be true of the Province and Bijou theatres in Winnipeg, managed by J. A. Schuberg, the eastern member of the National Film Service.

Exclusive contracts are about to be signed, it is said, with leading exhibitors in other cities in Western Canada.

W. P. Dewees, manager of the Rex theatre, and the other local member of the company, will take a trip over the route in the near future. He has just made a trip to Seattle in connection with settling the final details of the deal.

EISNER OFFERS FIFTY FEATURES TO MIDDLE WEST EXHIBITORS

More than fifty multiple reel features, a score or more of single reel travelogues, a large number of single reel comedies and the phenomenal dance film "Adelaide and Hughes in Modern Dances" are now being offered exhibitors of the Middle West by Manager Adolph Eisner of the film rental department of the Western Vaudeville Managers Association, which has just moved its offices from the Majestic Theatre Building on Monroe street, Chicago, to the Mallers Building, on the corner of Wabash avenue and Madison street.

Suite 512 has been leased by Manager Eisner and the big stock of films, posters, slides and other exchange paraphernalia are installed and in operation.

MELVIN ADDS MANY CONTRACTS TO KLEINE-EDISON LIST

Arthur C. Melvin, representive of the Philadelphia exchange of the Kleine-Edison Feature Service, was a recent visitor to Washington D. C.

Mr. Melvin added several new contracts to his list and spoke very favorable of the reception of the Kleine-Edison features in that territory.

MAINE EXHIBITORS VISIT BANGOR EXCHANGES

During the past week a number of men interested in the motion picture business have been in Bangor, Me., calling at the film exchanges. Samuel Moscow, general manager of the United Film Company, was there from Boston and inspected the branch of the United, managed by William White, and the other exchanges as well. Mr. Moscow makes about three trips a year through that section.

Among the exhibitors who were there arranging for feature pictures as well as regular service were F. B. Shaw, manager of the Shaw theatre in Corinna; P. J. Powers, manager of the Gem theatre in Caribou; George Ferland, manager of the Star theatre in Millinocket; Joseph Emery, manager of the Star theatre of Bar Harbor; John Goodwin, manager of the Acme Amusement Company.

The Acme Amusement Company has the control of the motion picture houses in Hallowell, Vinal Haven, Winthrop, Kennebunk and Kennebunkport.

Other visitors were H. Wyman, manager of the Park theatre in Dexter; Paul P. Pakes, of the Chick theatre in Milo; J. V. Sawyer, manager of the Jonesport Opera House; F. L. Jones, manager of the Bijou theatre of Lisbon Falls; and O. B. Fernandez, manager of the New Central theatre in Old Town.

ROSHON PHOTOPLAY SERVICE MOVES TO LARGE QUARTERS

Owing to the big increase in business the Roshon Photoplay Service of Johnstown, Pa., has moved its exchange and office from the Garden Theatre building, Main street, to 130½ Market street. At the present time the exchange occupies several large rooms in the building.

Mr. Roshon, manager of the exchange, has increased his working forces and facilities and at the present time is doing an exceptional business.

The service of the company includes some of the big pictures of the day and among them are pictures of the Mutual, Universal and General Service. They have been giving the best of service to the small town exhibitors in that section and their business is going forward with leaps and bonds.

EDWARDS REPORTS RETURN BOOKING FOR TWO PATHE FEATURES

Manager Edwards of the St. Louis branch of Pathé Exchange, advises that he has just closed with the Crystal theatre at Little Rock, Arkansas, for a return engagement of two days each of "Madame X" and "New York," two of the late Pathé Gold Rooster productions.

FRANCE FOUND JANUARY HIS BUSIEST MONTH

F. L. France, roadman for the Feature Film and Calcium Light Company, whose offices are in Pittsburgh, one of the busiest men in the business, has been most successful during the past year. January was his largest month.

PHILADELPHIA EXCHANGEMEN PLACE SATISFACTORY BOOKINGS; DEMBOW MAKES BIG FOX CONTRACT

GEORGE DEMBOW, manager of the Philadelphia office, announces a big Fox contract to run one year with the Colonial, a large Harrisburg, Pa., theatre owned by Wilmer and Vincent. This is for first releases.

Fox has a yearly contract with the big South Philadelphia theatre, the Broadway, to run all new pictures for a week's showing.

Sol Schwartz has been made assistant manager of the New Film Corporation. Although new to the business, Mr. Schwartz must be a born film man. In one week he has proved a big asset to the New Film by securing two hundred dollars' worth of new business.

The friends of J. S. Hebrew (and their name is legion) will regret to learn that he has been suffering from a severe attack of rheumatism. It is hoped that Mr. Hebrew will be back in harness in the next few days.

V-L-S-E finds its roomy quarters inadequate for its needs, and hopes soon to enlarge them.

"The Battle Cry of Peace," in spite of its stiff price of one hundred dollars a day, is so much in demand, five prints are being used in Philadelphia territory.

Smaller exhibitors who can not afford the big price, are asking for dates as soon as the fifty-dollar limit has arrived. Much of this success is attributed to the book of the film which can be sold by exhibitors at ten cents and yet reap a profit. One small theatre used seven hundred books in one day.

S. G. Simpson is no longer with the Tri-State Star Feature Company, of which J. R. Binns is owner and manager. The latest acquisition of the Tri-State, "The Victory of Virtue," had a hard tussle with the censors, but proved its name true at last and is already on the road to popularity in that section. Gerda Holmes and Wilmuth Merkyl are the stars in the production.

This week the Mutual Masterpictures de Luxe after enjoying some exclusive representations are coming into the regular service of the Philadelphia office.

These five reelers can be had by exhibitors at a small increase over regular service prices and must be included by those holding regular Mutual contracts.

"A Thoroughbred" and "The Bait" are the first two which Philadelphia is handling and are taking well. No exhibitor has balked—rather all are eager to get the increased attractions.

J. Safron of New York, for three years road man for the Universal, has become a Mutual salesman and will handle the Pennsylvania territory for the latter.

IDEA FOR PATRONAGE HIT AS ENLARGED FROM "NEWS" SUGGESTION IS USED BY GOLDSTONE

Enlarging upon an idea he found in "Motion Picture News" Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World Film Company exchange in Omaha has established a mutual exchange of ideas for advertising as well as a mutual exchange for films.

For instance, R. A. Garman, manager of the Keith theatre, North Platte, Neb., showed "Evidence," and as an advertising feature he had cards, the size of regular calling cards, printed. They said, in artistically arranged lettering, "What would you do IF you found your bride of a few hours had gone with another man, etc.," until the very idea compelled attention. Garman made it pay. Responding to a request, such as Goldstone had sent out to all exhibitors, he sent one of the cards to the exchange.

The Orpheum at Centerville, Ia., was due to receive the film in a few days. Goldstone sent the manager one of the cards.

He used it as copy and made many others. Jake Schlank, manager of the Hipp, Omaha, was the first to try the cards in a big city. He did, and his house was packed.

Goldstone has received other ideas from exhibitors who have exhibited certain of the most striking pictures.

He sends them to those in other cities who are to receive the film, and frequently the same idea is employed. This applies to newspaper advertising, cards, and other stunts.

EMMICK ARRANGES FOR McINTYRE TO HANDLE FEATURES IN LOS ANGELES

E. H. Emmick, formerly manager of the Los Angeles Golden Gate Film Exchange, and now western manager for the Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., with headquarters at 101 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, spent a portion of the past week in Los Angeles and made arrangements with the Liberty Feature Film Company of which Harry McIntyre is manager to handle the features in that territory.

The offerings include a number of Tom Terris, Great Northern and other two-, three- and five-reel subjects.

The rights for the "Mutt and Jeff" comedies for California will be handled in the same manner. Other important subjects booked in California by the Liberty are "The Escape," "The Avenging Conscience," "The Littlest Rebel," and "Sealed Orders."

INDIANAPOLIS FILM MEN BUY KRITERION EXCHANGE

The old Kriterion Exchange, in West Washington street, Indianapolis, of which A. Dresner was the manager, has been bought by men in that city.

The exchange, which has been getting the Kriterion and Associated service, is supplying about sixty theatres in Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and Kentucky. It hopes to sign up a fifteen-reel service early in March.

Brandt C. Downey, president of the Commercial National Bank, of Indianapolis, is president of the new company. L. J. Meyburg is manager and secretary of the company. James H. Gavin also is interested in the company.

New Laws And Court Decisions

This department is designed to keep the industry informed of all news concerning new or projected laws, Federal, State, County or Municipal, that may affect the business, and all events involving any branch of the trade with the authorities in all sections of the country

MUTUAL SEIZES 125,000 FEET OF ITS FILMS FOUND IN A VIRGINIAN "EXCHANGE"

THE Mutual Film Corporation has seized 125,000 feet of its films found in an "exchange" operated at Edinburg, Va., a small center in Shenandoah county.

This is the second big seizure to be made by the Mutual Film Corporation in the pursuit of films which have curiously strayed from the storage vaults of its sixty-eight exchanges.

The Virginia seizure, a step in a civil action instituted in the courts of Shenandoah county, is a further step in pursuit of the announced policy of the Mutual to take out of circulation all of its films which had strayed into the hands of irregular exchanges, peddlers and "film pirates."

The films discovered in Virginia were uncovered as a result of the efforts of a group of men to sell a stock of films made up largely of Mutual releases.

B. C. Cunningham, manager of the Washington, D. C., Mutual branch, operating under an assumed name, arranged to be approached by these men. Mr. Cunningham went over into Virginia to look the films over before agreeing to a "purchase."

He was shown the stock and assured himself that it contained the property of the Mutual. Thousands upon thousands of feet were submitted for his inspection.

The next step was a conference by wire with the legal department of the Mutual's home office in New York, which resulted in instructions to the Mutual's attorneys in Woodstock, Va., to take charge of the case and to institute such action as the circumstances seemed to warrant.

Through these attorneys the Mutual Film Corporation has brought a suit "in detinue" in the Circuit Court of Shenandoah county, Va., alleging damages and demanding delivery of its films.

A. L. Hitner, the defendant named in the suit "in detinue," was formerly an exhibitor of motion pictures in Hackettstown, N. J., where he was a customer of the Mutual Film Corporation.

He received reels of film on rental terms and with the understanding that they should be redelivered to the Mutual. According to the charges in the action in the Virginia courts these reels were found still in his possession.

The fact that the stock of film held by Hitner in Edinburg, Va., attached as security by a local bank with which he had a check controversy, enabled the sheriff readily to gain possession of the entire stock.

In a report of the inventory just received by the Mutual's legal department in New York, one hundred and twenty-five releases of various dates were found in the Edinburg stock.

About half that number of the releases of the General and Universal concerns were found, but not listed in the inventory, as the action in the Shenandoah county court extends only to the Mutual films involved.

The Mutual has recovered many hundreds of thousands of feet of "pirated" films in the last few months.

Through the activities of Arthur F. Beck, manager of the Twenty-third street branch exchange, in New York, missing films were traced to various "fences" and hiding places in New Jersey cities.

In raids there, more than two hundred thousand feet were seized, and prosecutions were instituted against several persons.

Since that time a corps of detectives has been at work in co-operation with Mutual branch managers in all parts of the country.

Evidence has been found of a most elaborate system of "film pirate" operations, which includes not only exchange facilities for the rental of stolen film in the United States, but export in large quantities to South America, the West Indies and other regions abroad.

ARREST FOR OUTRAGE IN CLEVELAND LEADS TO VIGOROUS ACTION

Attorney Ernest Schwartz reported to fellow members of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors League that as the result of Exhibitor Sam Bullock's prosecution of a youth caught discharging a stink ball in his theatre, the police prosecutors had confiscated the stock of one dealer and had received information which they hoped would enable them to stop the sale of these offensive articles in Cleveland.

A letter was received from a Duluth, Minn., exhibitor stating that similar trouble was being experienced in Duluth and asking for information regarding the Cleveland campaign against the nuisance.

LOUISVILLE NEGROES OBJECT TO "NATION" SHOWING

At a mass meeting of Louisville negroes, held at the Colored Y. M. C. A., ways and means were discussed to prevent "The Birth of a Nation" from appearing in Louisville. The objection to its presentation is based on the grounds that the story is unfair to the race and that it may arouse race enmity.

It was decided to bring the protest to the attention of Mayor Buschemeyer and to request him to take steps to prohibit the exhibition of the film.

OHIO JUDGE DECLARES "COUNTRY STORE" LEGAL IN TEST CASE BROUGHT BY JUVENILE PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION

EXHIBITORS of Cincinnati and Ohio generally feel that they have won a great victory in the opinion of Judge C. W. Hoffman, of the Juvenile Court of Hamilton County, in dismissing George F. Hornung, manager of the Americus theatre, 4026 Hamilton, Northside. Hornung was charged with encouraging and contributing to the delinquency of a thirteen-year-old boy.

The decision of Judge Hoffman sets at rest a contention made by reformers throughout the state during the last few years, that the operation of a "country store" scheme by a motion picture theatre is, in effect, the operation of a gambling scheme. The decision establishes the legality of the "country store" in Ohio.

Hornung was arrested several months ago, after Arthur Huber, thirteen, had been sent to his theatre by the Juvenile Protective Association of Hamilton County, who sought to test the new juvenile law as it applied to this question. Young Huber was the chief witness at the trial.

Attorneys Miller and Foster, representing Hornung, immediately filed a demurrer to the affidavit on which Hornung was arrested. They set forth that the charge did not state a punishable offense.

In his opinion Judge Hoffman sustains the demurrer, holding that the "country store" is not a game of chance, because nothing is risked by either party in its operation. In part the opinion said:

"The authority in this country appears overwhelming to the effect that a transaction of the kind mentioned in the affidavit is not a gambling transaction. There is very little authority the other way. . . . Counsel for the state advises the court that he has been unable to find any authority that holds in any case analagous to the case at bar."

DRAFTS ORDINANCE TO DO AWAY WITH CENSOR BOARD IN FRISCO

An ordinance to take the place of the one regulating moving pictures and that governing theatrical performances has been drafted by Attorney Walter Rothchild, representing the Theatrical Managers' Association and the Newspaper Publishers' Association, and submitted to the Police Committee of the Board of Supervisors, San Francisco, which will consider it on March 9.

This new ordinance is designed to do away with the moving picture board of censorship and prohibits the showing in moving pictures of anything offensive to decency.

The clause concerning theatrical exhibitions prohibits any that are indecent or suggestive. No restrictions are to be placed upon the showing of moving pictures that are not imposed upon so-called legitimate attractions.

At a recent meeting of the municipal affairs committee of the San Francisco Center of the California Civic League this proposed measure was discussed and several who spoke on the question expressed themselves as being opposed to censorship in any form.

SUNDAY OPENING A LIVE ISSUE IN BOISE, IDAHO

Whether or not the motion picture houses of Boise, Idaho, can be operated on Sunday is now a live issue. The proposition is soon to be submitted to the city council for its consideration.

The managers and the liberal element of the city are out with numerous petitions, which are being readily signed, asking that the shows be permitted to operate Sundays.

At the last session of the state legislature a law was passed providing that when a majority of the people of a city petitioned the council for Sunday opening of the shows, that such petition could be granted despite the Sunday rest law, under which they were closed some years ago.

More than 2,000 signers have already been obtained, and the petitions have been out but a few days, and there is every indication that the required number will be secured.

The church element is up in arms over the movement, and declares that if Sunday opening of the theatres goes into effect that a municipal motion picture theatre will be opened, which will be free to the public.

FOX PLANS COURT FIGHT IN PHILADELPHIA OVER 3 PICTURES

The Fox officials have definitely decided on taking three rejected films into the Philadelphia courts. "The Kreutzer Sonata," "The Serpent" and "The Fool's Revenge" are the censored releases.

"The Serpent" has been approved by the National Board of Censors, Ohio's strict guardians, the Kansas board, the Chicago board and the Boston board, the latter ordering a few eliminations. Pennsylvania thus stands alone in condemnation.

John R. K. Scott is the Philadelphia lawyer selected in the case. He will be assisted by the New York lawyers of the Fox Corporation.

BILL IMPOSING HEAVY TAX ON EXCHANGES IN MANITOBA GETS SECOND READING

"FILM exchanges, permanent, $250; film exchanges, if considered temporary, $250 per annum, and an additional $50 for each film censored."

The Hon. Edward Brown has moved the second reading of the above bill in the Manitoba legislature, which is part of that providing for the taxation of public amusements.

It provides for the annual taxation and lays down rules for returns to be made to the treasury department by the proprietors of the various picture houses, as well as theatres, both legitimate and vaudeville.

Such returns must give all information as to locations of theatres, and officials of interested companies.

There are two taxes imposed upon traveling motion picture shows and temporary film exchanges, and new fees to be charged for the censorship of films.

The taxation of motion picture theatres is more than doubled from what it formerly was.

The act provides that no traveling motion picture show may include in its itinerary any incorporated city.

New provisions for the censorship of films are also made, these including powers conferred upon the lieutenant-governor-in-council, to appoint a board of three or more provincial censors to have power to permit or prohibit films or slides which are proposed to be shown in Manitoba.

If desirable, according to the act, an inter-provincial board of censors may be appointed by the lieutenant-governor-in-council.

This board may consist of three or more persons, nominated by the several provincial governments.

There will be an appeal board of censors, the provision in this respect being as follows: "There shall be an appeal from the board of censors, and when occasion requires the provincial treasurer may appoint an appeal board consisting of three reputable citizens of the province of Manitoba, who shall act temporarily, and only on such films or slides for which an appeal has been made; or the provincial treasurer may appoint a joint appeal board consisting of three or more reputable citizens to be nominated by the governments of the provinces represented by the members of the joint censor board; provided that the expenses of the members nominated shall be paid by the several provincial governments appointing them."

A fee of two dollars is to be levied for the inspection and censorship of each film or part thereof.

Any person found guilty of giving an incorrect return to the treasury department may be fined $1,000 and costs, with twelve months' imprisonment in default.

COURT UPHOLDS TRIANGLE'S RIGHT TO SHOW FILMS IN KNICKERBOCKER THEATRE

THE Triangle Film Corporation will retain control of the Knickerbocker theatre in New York, its first model motion picture playhouse, unless the owner is able to advance some argument for cancellation of the lease other than his contention that under the Rothapfel regime the Triangle is not giving a "first class" performance at the Knickerbocker.

The Supreme Court of the state of New York, by decision of Justice Cohalan, has refused the application for an injunction sought by Robert Walton Goelet, who inherited the property from his father. The Triangle lease runs until next September.

"Through the introduction of moving pictures and photoplays into the theatrical field there has occurred therein an evolution in the production and presentation of plays," writes Justice Cohalan in his opinion; "in fact, the entire trend of the business may have so evolved as to permit the defendants to carry on their business as now being conducted without violating the restrictive covenants of the lease.

"Even though irreparable injury be shown, in view of the short time which the lease has to run, unless the right of those seeking the injunction is clear and unmistakable, this court may not intervene to prevent the use of the theatre in the manner that it is now conducted."

Mr. Goelet sought to oust the Triangle because of the introduction of musical numbers, pictorial films and other entertainment which S. L. Rothapfel made part of the performance in which Triangle plays were the features; maintaining that the "continuous" policy at revised prices lowered the classification of his theatre.

Multitudes of affidavits on this "class" contention were submitted, but the court held that it was a matter of serious question whether the case could be decided on affidavits.

Justice Cohalan finally held that the defendant had not violated the covenants of the lease, adding that the case was novel and far-reaching in its importance.

CLEVELAND POLICE WAGE WAR ON PICTURE THEATRE POSTERS

Cleveland police have been waging a vigorous war on motion picture theatre posters, but the policy has not been general or uniform.

Attorney Ben J. Sawyer and exhibitors of the city have arranged to meet Mayor Harry Davis and Public Safety Director Sprosty to go over the whole matter and try to arrange a uniform policy.

Exhibitors maintain that the approval of the state censors covers the posters as well as the pictures.

LEXINGTON, KY., AUTHORITIES WANT CONFERENCE ON "NATION"

The Board of City Commissioners of Lexington, Ky., where the "The Birth of a Nation" is scheduled to be shown, March 20, has issued a formal request to Manager C. H. Berryman of the Lexington Opera House to appear before it for a conference as to whether or not the film will be permitted to be shown in that city.

Sol Lesser Announces Policy for "Ne'er-Do-Well"

In Marketing of the Big Selig Feature, Pacific Coast Film Magnate, Now Located Permanently in the East, Will Handle All Bookings Direct from His New York Office, and Plans Complete Advertising Campaign, Including Liberal Use of Newspapers

FOLLOWING the receipt of scores of letters and telegrams, telling of unusual business being done by "The Ne'er-Do-Well," and requesting information regarding bookings, Sol E. Lesser this week made his first announcement of the policy to be pursued in distributing the big Rex Beach feature.

Mr. Lesser, who controls the exclusive rights, will handle all bookings from his New York office, 218 West Forty-second street, New York. He will have no branches, and will do business through no agents. Everything will go through the New York headquarters.

Mr. Lesser expresses himself as thoroughly convinced of the immense earning power of "The Ne'er-Do-Well" and will handle the feature so as to insure the greatest return to exhibitors.

To this end he will place the picture for long runs in the principal cities first, in the firm belief that enterprising exhibitors cannot fail to make big money by the proper presentation of it in exclusive territory, with the liberal use of advertising. He believes in long runs, as the whole population should have an opportunity to see it.

The first booking will be given to cities of 100,000 population or over, in exclusive territory. This means, Mr. Lesser explains, that the exhibitor in the cities will be protected from competition in their own territory for at least sixty days, and will have their fields to themselves.

The rental will be based upon such conditions as population, location and outside competition.

In order to induce the liberal use of newspaper and other advertising, a reduction in rentals will be made where an exhibitor can guarantee a proper presentation, and the proper advertising.

Extensive Advertising Campaign

A complete advertising campaign, which provides for the liberal use of newspaper space has been arranged by Mr. Lesser, and will be furnished, together with other helps to presentation, free to all exhibitors who book the feature.

"A big picture like this is an event," said Mr. Lesser. "There is great public interest, which can be stimulated by enterprising advertising, and everybody who handles 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' is certain to make big money.

"I am going to see that they do. All rentals have been fixed on this basis, and we are prepared to help the exhibitor in every way to make his run of the picture pay, and pay big.

"Already the picture has been rebooked in San Francisco and Los Angeles, after runs of two and three weeks respectively; what these places have done others will do.

"After the larger cities have shown the picture for reasonable lengths of time, we will take up the booking of smaller cities in the same territories.

"So far from the exhibitor in these smaller towns losing by the big city run, they cannot help but benefit from the immense advertising and prestige which it will receive through thousands having seen it and talked about it—for they are bound to talk about it.

"I have already booked the feature, on the exclusive territory basis in Philadelphia, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Atlantic City, and exhibitors in several smaller places, such as Canton, O., and Mason City, Ia., have convinced me of their ability to present it properly, and I have accepted their bookings.

Playing to Capacity

"I am receiving in every mail enthusiastic letters from exhibitors who are doing great business with 'The Ne'er-Do-Well.' It is playing to capacity houses wherever shown.

"One letter I have here from the Coast, encloses a telegram from a California exhibitor, in which he says 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' has broken the record of 'The Spoilers' which has made the greatest run in that locality up to this time. This record is being repeated everywhere.

"In pursuing a policy of service to the exhibitor we are only giving the exhibitor as well as the picture its due. Everybody in America, old enough to appreciate a picture, should and will see 'The Ne'er-Do-Well.'

"This is the chief object in booking it for long runs, and this end can only be attained by intelligent and persistent advertising.

"My own experience has made me a firm believer in newspapers as an advertising medium for the motion picture exhibitor, and the campaign which we have mapped out for this feature lays particular stress on this propaganda.

"We go farther, however, and urge upon the exhibitor poster stands, lobby display, program and herald announcements, as well as every form of advertising which will bring the picture to the attention of his public. It has paid in the past, and will pay especially big returns in this case."

In addition to the cities mentioned, Mr. Lesser has already received applications for booking from exhibitors in the largest cities of the country.

These are being carefully considered. It is Mr. Lesser's aim to place the feature in the very best houses in each city, whenever possible, and all applications are being subjected to careful investigation.

Chicago Reel Fellows' Meet a Beefsteak Dinner

Event Held in the Movie Inn—Members Wear White Hats and Aprons and Show Appreciation of Kitchen Triumphs Prepared by the Chef

THE February meeting of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago, which had been heralded for some time by a series of unique posters and publicity matter, was held in the rooms belonging to the club, Wednesday evening, February 16.

The party took the form of a beefsteak dinner, and was easily the most convivial and successful event ever staged by this organization.

Each member and guest wore a white hat and apron, and sat down at one long table in the Movie Inn. The illumination was furnished by candles stuck in Budweiser bottles, and many kegs of Milwaukee's famous product decorated the room.

The piece de resistance was a steak of notable quality, flanked by several kitchen triumphs prepared by the inn's chef.

Following the dinner a lively program of vaudeville entertainment was provided, supplemented by stunts and speeches by the members; this carried the meeting well into the morning.

Those present signed their names on an apron which was then mailed to Hobart Henley of the Eastern Universal studio.

Mr. Henley was a guest at the previous meeting and had regretted his inability to be present at the beefsteak dinner. Among the names that appeared on the apron were:

Alec J. Balaban, F. H. McMillan, W. E. Heaney, Freeman Owens, W. G. Watkins, R. R. Nehls, W. R. Rothacker, E. C. Jensen, M. L. Sparr and Richard C. Travers.

Freiman Owen, Ed. Mock, J. W. Brickhouse, E. G. Spencer, C. L. Worthington, F. J. Flaherty, C. E. Douglass, Alfred Hamburger, Louis M. Selig, L. A. Gitzler, F. W. Wild Jr., W. H. Lawrence, J. M. Price, B. N. Judell, Emil F. Steethammer.

Neil G. Caward, Ralph C. White, Bert W. Albert, W. W. Ricker, Paul Hinz, E. S. Howell, Don J. Bell, F. H. Richardson, L. Wm. O'Connell, I. S. Mead, S. M. Noto.

Emil O. Engstrom, Barney Balaban, F. A. Hamburg, J. H. Quinn, Hugh Foote, C. J. Verhalen, W. E. Weinshenker, and Adolph M. Eisner.

ROBBINS COMPANY TAKES OVER ESSANAY STUDIO IN NILES

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, Feb. 24.

Jesse Robbins, heading a new company of film artists, arrived a short time ago at Niles, Cal., from Los Angeles, to take over the old Essanay studio at that place.

Among those in the party were Buddy Jamison, leading man; Wesley Ruggles, assistant director; John Penn, Maggie Reiger, Harry Ensign cameraman; Al Griffin, head carpenter; Dan Keller property, man; William Gorham bookkeeper; George Crethorpe, costumer; Al Coudere, scenic artist, and Jesse Robbins.

A number of members of the disbanded Essanay Company joined them on their arrival.

GAUMONT HOLDS SCENARIO CONTEST AMONG ITS PLAYERS

The literary atmosphere just now noticeable at the winter studios of the Gaumont company, Jacksonville, Fla., is due to a prize offered by Supervising Director Richard Garrick for the best scenario submitted by a member of the Gaumont stock companies.

A month has been allotted for the preparation of the five-reel features which will be judged competitively. A prize of one hundred and fifty dollars will be awarded the best synopsis submitted, and two hundred and fifty dollars will go to the Gaumont player offering the best five-reel working scenario.

As photodramas have been written by many Gaumont players, there is certain to be an interesting competition between the following successful photodramatists: Howard Hall, Henry J. Vernot, Edwin Middleton, Iva Shepard, Gertrude Robinson, Mathilde Baring, and Alexander Gaden.

MARIE DORO WILL SOON BEGIN ENGAGEMENT WITH LASKY

With the completion of her last production for Famous Players—a picturization of "Diplomacy"—Marie Doro will leave New York soon to begin her long engagement as a star of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

Miss Doro, a well-known legitimate star before her advent into pictures, acted in two other Famous Players productions, "The Morals of Marcus" and "The White Pearl." For the Fine Arts studios she appeared in "The Wood Nymph."

With her husband, Elliott Dexter, Miss Doro will live permanently in Hollywood, Cal., near the Lasky studios. Mr. Dexter has also been engaged to appear in Lasky photoplays, and it is likely he will play the leading masculine role opposite Miss Doro in their first production for the Lasky company.

"DEFENSE OR TRIBUTE?" FROM PUBLIC SERVICE FILM COMPANY

The Public Service Film Company, a new motion picture organization, has seized the opportunity presented by the present movement in favor of national preparedness to release a production entitled "Defense or Tribute?"

There are many battle scenes, and some of the most dramatic happenings of history are illustrated.

PITTSBURGH PLANS FIGHT ON POLITICIANS UNFAVORABLE TO ANTI-CENSORSHIP

Special to Motion Picture News

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 25.

The Pittsburgh Screen Club has determined to fight the election of all candidates in its section who are not favorably disposed toward the motion picture industry. For this purpose a committee on political activity has been appointed.

Pittsburgh exhibitors will co-operate by running slides favoring the candidates endorsed by the club.

"Pursuit of Patricia" a 10 Part Serial from "U"

The Picture Will Feature Edith Roberts and Is Scheduled for Appearance Simultaneously with Novelized Version in Snappy Stories in Connection with Guessing Contest

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company announces a new serial, "The Pursuit of Patricia," in which Edith Roberts will have the leading role. Robert F. Hill will direct the series, the first ever made by the Universal in the East. It will appear in ten episodes.

The story will run in Snappy Stories each month for ten months ,and the magazine will offer $1,000 in cash prizes, to be divided at the rate of $100 every month, for the best answers from readers of the publication as to what they would do if they were in Patricia's shoes and in the same circumstances.

"The Pursuit of Patricia" was written by Reginald Wright Kauffman and Hugh Weir. Mr. Kauffman is known as a writer of best sellers. Mr. Weir is the author of the story "Graft," as well as of several books.

The theme of the serial deals with the adventures of a young heiress who must evade her guardian for a period of one year, or else marry the man whom her guardian dictates.

She runs away, determined to make her own way in the world rather than be forced into such a marriage.

The stories portray the adventures which befall her. What is said to be an appealing love story runs through the entire number of episodes.

Work on the serial will begin at once. There will be one release every two weeks, the initial date to be announced later.

Pallas Pictures' "Ben Blair" Ready on March 9

Subject Will Feature Dustin Farnum in a Western Drama and Give Winifred Kingston a Part with Big Possibilities—Others in the Cast Are Peters and Bonn

PALLAS PICTURES announces as its next release on the Paramount program "Ben Blair," a Western drama, with Dustin Farnum in the title role. As Ben Blair, Farnum appears in a role that affords him a particularly suitable vehicle. The screen adaptation is from the well-known book of the same name written by the late Will Lillibridge.

The scenes of the broncho busting, trick riding, branding, and, in fact, almost all the out-of-door scenes were taken on a ranch owned by one of the last of the cattle barons.

The thousands of acres of rolling lands sustain 50,000 head of cattle. Panoramic views of which are included in the picture. A charge of the cattle straight at the camera affords one of the thrills.

In strong contrast is the scene that represents the exterior of the Winthrop City house. Here the meeting of Ben and the girl who wishes to forget was played before a mansion in the most exclusive residential district of Los Angeles.

The structure is acknowledged to be one of the most beautiful among beautiful homes, and costs over $125,000.

Winifred Kingston, who appears opposite Dustin Farnum in all his film plays, is given a big part in this subject. Herbert Standing, Lamar Johnstone, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Page Peters, Virginia Foltz, F. A. Bonn and little Gordon Griffith, who presents a thrill by leaping from the roof of a barn, are among the important players. "Ben Blair" will be released on the Paramount program March 9.

Brenon Does Not Work from Scenario, Only Synopsis

This Is Absorbed by Fox Producer, Who Attributes Success to Experience as Stock Company Director, and He Begins with "Big Scene," Radiating to Tributary Episodes

HERBERT BRENON, who is directing William Fox's million-dollar Annette Kellermann picture, now being produced in Jamaica, West Indies, has had an interesting career.

A native of Dublin, Ireland, educated at King's College, London, Mr. Brenon came to America at the age of sixteen. His first employment in this country was to do the announcing in a production called "Sporting Life," then running at the Academy of Music.

This is a New York theatre now operated by Mr. Fox.

Soon he got a place as an extra in the production, and then followed varied experiences as a call boy, stenographer, stock actor and director, vaudeville player and motion picture exhibitor.

Mr. Brenon finds that his work as a director of stock companies gave him his best training for the production of pictures.

Before entering the service of Mr. Fox he produced or wrote a number of photoplays for the Universal, culminating in his two well-known productions, "Absinthe" and "Neptune's Daughter."

Since his association with the Fox organizaiton Mr. Brenon has directed "The Clemenceau Case," "Kreutzer Sonata," "The Two Orphans," "Sin" and "The Soul of Broadway."

Last August he began the creation of a great film plant in Jamaica for the Fox Film Corporation, and likewise began captaining a large number of people who are called upon, at various stages, to appear in the Kellermann spectacle.

Mr. Brenon gives this description of his method of working:

"Never in my career as a producer have I used the so-called scenario. I write a synopsis of my story, thoroughly absorb it, and then usually begin with the great moment.

"From that big scene I radiate towards the tributary scenes. I let my imagination absolutely run wild with every particular sequence."

Charlie Chaplin Signs Contract with Mutual Film

Famous Screen Comedian Will Appear Exclusively in Its Subjects at a Salary of $670,000 for His First Year's Work —Total Operation in Formation of the Chaplin Producing Company Involved $1,550,000—He Will Begin Work on March 20 in Two-Part Comedies Released Once a Month

CHARLIE CHAPLIN has signed a contract to appear exclusively in the releases of the Mutual Film Corporation.

This announcement was issued from the offices of the corporation Monday after the close of negotiations with the comedian pending over a long period.

Chaplin will receive a salary of $670,000 for his first year's work under the contract, the Mutual announces. The total operation in forming the Chaplin producing company involved the sum of $1,550,000. This stands as the biggest operation centered about a single star in the history of the motion picture industry, it is said.

Following close on this announcement from President John R. Freuler, of the Mutual, comes his declaration that the signing of Chaplin is but the beginning of a dominating policy on the part of the corporation, and the suggestion that the expiration of certain contracts held by other famous stars now working for other concerns will result in further announcements rivaling that of the Mutual's achievement this week.

The closing of the contract ends a war of negotiations involving unending conferences and diplomatic exchanges for weeks. In this time five or six motion picture concerns and promoters have claimed Chaplin and audibly whispered figures—with every guess too low.

A week ago, President Freuler put Chaplin under an option, pending the completion of arrangements for the organization of a special producing company. At that time the negotiations were entirely personal between President Freuler and Chaplin.

Saturday night the final conference was held and the ceremony of signing up with the Mutual proceeded, with all due array of attorneys, notaries, etc., including, of course, a battery of arc lamps and a motion picture camera.

Charles Chaplin was accompanied by his brother, Sidney Chaplin, who conducts the younger comedian's business affairs and salary negotiations.

Bonus Check for $150,000

President Freuler handed Chaplin a bonus check for $150,000.

In addition to the bonus paid Mr. Chaplin, he will receive a salary of $10,000 a week.

The new Mutual Chaplins will be produced in studios now being equipped in Los Angeles, Cal., where the comedian will begin work on March 20 or at an earlier date if conditions permit. One two-part comedy will be produced each month.

The Chaplin contract contains more than 20,000 words and provides conditions and clauses to cover numerous contingencies. An element of "war risk" enters into the contract.

Mr. Chaplin is a British subject. It is stipulated that he shall not leave the United States within the life of the contract without the permission of the corporation. Incidentally, Mr. Freuler has insured the comedian's life for $250,000.

"This contract," observes Mr. Freuler, "is only a new token of the bigness of the motion picture and the motion picture industry, a combination of art, amusement and business. The figures are all business," he added with a dry smile.

"We can afford to pay Mr. Chaplin this large sum annually because the public wants Chaplin and will pay to see him. I consider this contract a very pleasing bargain for everybody concerned—including this corporation, Mr. Chaplin, and the fun-loving American public.

Other Stars in Negotiations

"I consider this the most important transaction in the recent history of the motion picture industry. It carries a wide significance in relation to the policy of the Mutual Film Corporation. It is a step—a very long one—but there will be more. Negotiations for other great stars have been in progress for weeks and months.

"When certain present contracts expire, you will see these famous stars appearing in Mutual pictures. There is a great deal more to come."

Mr. Chaplin is not much inclined to talk about business.

"A great many people are inclined to make wide eyes at what is called my salary," he remarked. "Honestly it is a matter I do not spend much time thinking about.

"Money and business are very serious matters and I have to keep my mind off of them. In fact, I do not worry about money at all," he admitted convincingly.

"It would get in the way of my work. I do not want people to think that life is all a joke to me," he added with an air of seriousness, "but I do enjoy working on the sunny side of it.

"What this contract means is simply that I am in business with the worry left out and with the dividends guaranteed.

"It means that I am left free to be just as funny as I dare, to do the best work that is in me and to spend my energies on the thing that the people want. I have felt for a long time that this would be my big year, and this contract gives me my opportunity. There is inspiration in it. I am like an author with a big publisher to give him circulation."

Metro Will Not Be Represented at Future Balls

The Company, According to Joseph W. Engel, Treasurer, Is Going to Rest on Its Laurels After Its Success at the Affairs in Pittsburgh, Boston and New York

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION announces its retirement from participation in future motion picture balls and sets forth its reasons in a statement made by Joseph W. Engel, Metro's treasurer. Mr. Engel's statement is as follows:

"Metro is somewhat in the position of the makers of the Stutz automobile who, after winning three great races with their racing cars, retired with the announcement that they would give their competitors a chance. They retired from racing and lived happily ever after and then their competitors lived happy also.

"Metro entered the lists at the great ball given by the Motion Picture Exhibitors in Boston and it was conceded generally that Metro owned the Boston Arena and all that it contained.

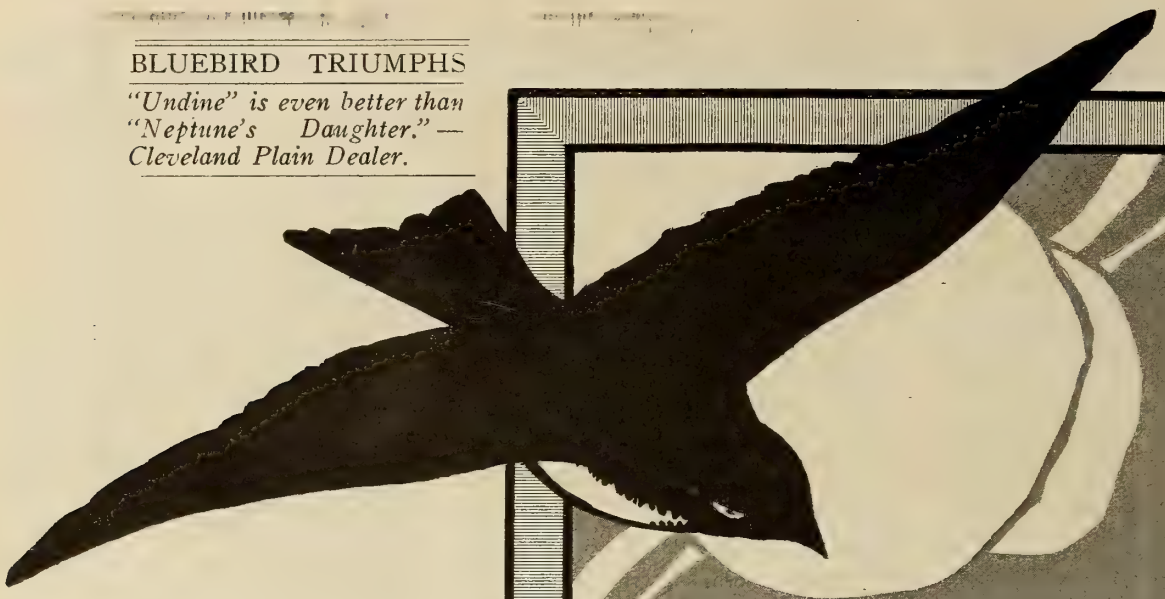
"It was Metro's idea that its own artists would be made comfortable and that they should be entertained as well as the public and to this end Metro secured St. James' hall, near the Arena, and gave its stars and guests a chance to enjoy a dance of their own.

"Again in Pittsburgh, Metro carried all before it at the big Screen Club ball given in the Motor Square Garden, and the local press and all the other contenders at the ball gave Metro the laurel wreath.

"Finally at Madison Square Garden in New York on February 19, at the ball of the exhibitors and the New York Screen Club, Metro bent its energies to add as much as possible to the entertainment of the public and additionally to the good time of its own stars and guests by giving a dance and a special program in the concert hall of the garden.

"Metro learned at a late hour before the ball that several other companies had refused to participate in the big garden affair because Metro was competing for publicity honors and it was a matter of the greatest regret to all of us that we stood in the way.

"In justice to the exhibitors' organization and to the Screen Club under whose auspices the ball was given it was impossible for Metro to withdraw and the program arranged by us was carried out in its entirety.



"The results are too well known to the motion picture public, especially those who attended the ball, and Metro now announces that it will not participate in future affairs of this character.

"In making this announcement, Metro feels that it is doing the fair thing by its competitors and giving others a chance to win the delightful glories of these enthusing affairs.

"Metro likes to play big league baseball and has never played any other kind. With three pennants now, it feels that it has had its full share of glory and can now retire gracefully and with no regrets."

HELEN GIBSON, KALEM'S RAILROAD GIRL, AS SHE LOOKS IN HER LATEST EFFORT, "THE GIRL WHO DARED"

Helen Gibson Faces Death in "The Girl Who Dared." Released March 18

THE accompanying illustrations show the accident to Helen Gibson that provides an unexpected thrill for "The Girl Who Dared," a "Hazard of Helen," which Kalem will issue on March 18.

In dropping from a swaying rope to a stolen engine Helen's clothes caught in the rope in some manner and the cab of the speeding engine struck her a glancing blow which is shown clearly on the screen.

It is a tense moment for the spectator, who is able to see the girl's danger vividly, and it provides a thrilling punch.

Aside from this feature "The Girl Who Dared" abounds in other exciting exploits that stamp it as one of the best railroad pictures ever issued by Kalem. Special six-sheet posters have been prepared for it, a departure in connection with single-reel issues. The six sheet is an addition to the usual one and three-sheet lithographs, which will also be issued on this release.

As if to show that other members of the "Hazard of Helen" company may perform daring feats besides Helen Gibson, Franklin Hall starts the action off with a rush in the opening scenes of the film by leaping from the deck of a Pacific Mail steamer.

Hall is a diamond smuggler who eludes the customs officials with the aid of confederates who take him ashore in a motorboat.

In the later scenes Helen Gibson combines courageous riding feats with the railroad exploit. Helen receives word that Hall and his confederates are heading towards her station on a stolen engine.

For a moment she is apparently baffled, but a railroad workman hoisting a keg of nails to his perch on the trestle suggests a daring means of capturing the gang.

She quickly unhitches a team of horses from a wagon unloading at the station and climbing to their backs races down the street.

As she nears the railroad bridge and the swaying rope she struggles to her knees and then to a standing position on the speeding horses, and by a breath-catching leap reaches the rope.

A second later the stolen engine is heard roaring towards the bridge. The scene had been carefully planned for Helen to drop to the tender of the engine and cover the men with her revolver, but the moment lost when her clothes became entangled in the rope resulted in the hood of the engine cab striking her and throwing her to the floor of the cab

SIX SOCIETY GIRLS CAST FOR "SECRET KINGDOM," VITAGRAPH

Six society girls in San Antonio, Texas, will have an opportunity to appear in the Vitagraph serial, "The Secret Kingdom," which Director Theodore Marston is filming in that city. The director needs six young women to ride horseback in a certain court scene.

Exhibitors Make Applications for Young Features

President Selznick Receives from Renters Throughout Country Advance Orders of the Series Starring Well Known Actress for October Release

ACCORDING to Lewis J. Selznick, president and general manager of the new Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, he has met with great encouragement in the projection of his campaign for the future handling of Miss Young's pictures.

Exhibitors throughout the country, he says, have swamped him with applications for the series of films which he will release, beginning in October.

MR. AND MRS. ED. KIMBALL, CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG, AND MRS. LEWIS J. SELZNICK IN CUBA

Miss Young, herself, is displaying much happiness over the prospects. Her signed statement in this paper last week has been answered by telegrams and letters from the individual exhibitors throughout the country.

She had no sooner recovered from the pleasurable, but arduous, duty of flying home from Cuba to lead the grand march at the "Movie Ball" and receive the splendid diamond bracelet which was awarded her for winning the New York American popularity contest, than she was forced into a mass of personal correspondence.

In speaking of the work of the new corporation, Mr. Selznick said: "The enthusiasm with which our poposition has been received by the individual exhibitor shows at least that each and every man who has a theatre is willing to encourage a new idea.

"I believe that the future of the moving picture business depends mostly on the way the exhibitor handles his own affairs.

"The good-will of his audiences is worth much to him, and the best way for him to hold that good-will is to deliver the goods.

"And the best way for him to deliver the goods is to use the films made by artists of proved value in the work.

"The lesson has been learned that the moving picture actress is born, and not made, and she is the type that the public wants.

"We are going to take plenty of time with the Clara Kimball Young pictures and deliver only one a month."

BERMAN, BLUEBIRD MANAGER, ON ROAD TO RECOVERY

Sol. J. Berman, manager of the Bluebird New York Exchange, is recovering in Roosevelt Hospital, from a serious illness which seemed at the outset might keep him from business for several weeks.

The report comes now that he will be on hand within a fortnight to greet his legion of friends.

There is no more popular man among the younger set of film magnates than Sol J. Berman, and his associates in the Mecca Building anticipate with delight his early return to business.

Novel Role for Barrymore in a Famous Players Film

In "His Lost Self" Chief Character Starts Out to Steal His Own Wedding Present for a Band of Thieves Without Consciousness of His Intention

PHOTOPLAY fans are going to meet a new Jack Barrymore on the screen when the Famous Players Film Company presents the comedian on the screen in "His Lost Self" on the Paramount Program, March 19.

Barrymore has played South American dictators, Balkan near-princes, and other purely comic characters on the screen, but in this forthcoming picture he adds to his humorous depiction of a New York society chap the dramatic and thrilling adventures of a crook.

Of course he is not a real crook. Young Joyce, while on the way home from his bachelor dinner, is hit on the head by two hold-up men and so badly injured that he completely forgets the past and his own identity.

He wanders along to the river-front to a wharf, where he lies down for a quiet nap; but he falls off into the icy waters and only succeeds in rescuing himself after a desperate struggle.

Safely arrived on the dock, he removes his dress shirt, wrings it out and places it over his arm. Then, picking up his top hat, which has remained on the dock, he strolls off in quest of refreshment.

Unfortunately, the first haven of refuge which encounters his eye happens to be a saloon which is the rendezvous of a notorious gang of thieves.

When Joyce wanders into the place with his high hat over one ear and his dress shirt over the opposite arm, he causes quite a stir.

The thugs are largely in favor of throwing him out, but the daughter of the saloon proprietor decides that Joyce is worth special attentions.

Joyce is allowed to remain, but the gang decides that he has to "work" for a living, and he is schooled in the rudiments of the art of burgling.

The first "job" that they decide to send Joyce out on is the stealing of his own wedding presents! Of course, they do not suspect that he has any connection with the wealthy Miss Hardin, who is his fiancee, but they have read about the wedding which was never solemnized, and decide that the wedding presents ought to make a good haul.

Still ignorant of his identity, Joyce enters the house with two of the gang. Dorothy Hardin, alarmed by noises, interrupts the work, and Joyce instinctively shields her when one of the thugs attempts to strike her.

In the fight which follows, Joyce and one of the gang roll all the way downstairs, struggling desperately. The fall injures Joyce's head and he is rendered unconscious. A physician is summoned, who says that a slight operation will restore the patient's memory, and it is decided that he is to be led to believe that he is simply recovering from the effects of the bachelor dinner.

Accordingly, Joyce is married on the following morning with never a suspicion of his temporary relapse into the life of the underworld.

LASKY ARRIVES IN HOLLYWOOD AND TELLS OF STUDIO PLANS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Feb. 25.

Jesse L. Lasky has arrived in Hollywood after spending several weeks in New York, and told of plans made which will immediately affect production of the studio.

Mr. Lasky did not care to make any statement regarding his stand in the National censorship matter, advising that he first wished to talk to the members of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

He gave out the information that Marie Doro will arrive at the Hollywood studios within the next ten days to begin work in her first Lasky subject, and that Elliot Dexter has been engaged as her leading man.

Mr. Lasky also stated that Jules Eckert Goodman and Williard Mack have been engaged to write for the company.

W. F. Reynolds has been appointed executive secretary of the Motion Picture Producers Association, and will work in co-operation with Secretary George Stout. Mr. Reynolds is financially interested here and his appointment was made on the recommendation of O. H. Davis, vice-president and general manager of the Universal Company's studios. Prior to coming to Los Angeles in May of 1915, Mr. Reynolds was treasurer of the Racine Boat Manufacturing Company.

VITAGRAPH ADDS BETTY HOWE TO ROSTER OF STOCK PLAYERS

The Vitagraph Company announces that it has added Betty Howe to its roster of stock players.

Her newest work will be in the cast supporting Robert Edeson in a new James Oliver Curwood play. She has already appeared with Frank Daniels in some of the one-reel comedies detailing "The Escapades of Mr. Jack," released by Vitagraph.

LEON GAUMONT EXPECTED IN NEW YORK ON MARCH 8

Leon Gaumont, head of the Cinema Gaumont Company, of France, has sailed from his native country and will in all probability arrive in New York about the eighth of March.

His trip is being made on matters pertaining to the picture business, and his chief duty in New York will be the supervision of the erection of a new studio at Flushing, N. Y., for the Gaumont company.

It is expected that Mr. Gaumont will institute a number of innovations in studio structure that have heretofore been confined to the foreign producing firms.

APPEAL MADE BY MOTION PICTURE PATENTS COMPANY

Special to Motion Picture News

Philadelphia, Feb. 26.

The decision of Judge Oliver B. Dickinson, of the United District Court, which was to have become operative on February 24, was stayed when the Motion Picture Patents Company took an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

The attorneys for the Patents Company and the other companies of the so-called "trust" filed their motion for an appeal on the morning of the twenty-fourth.

Judge Dickinson granted the appeal which will now take the usual course of Supreme Court cases. It will be months, maybe years, before the appeal is finally heard.

Arm for Peace, if You Want Your Country at Peace!

Paramount Pictographs Perform Loyal and Patriotic Service by Flashing on Screen to 10,000,000 People Warnings from Statesmenu for Nation to Prepare for Defense

THE subject preparedness is being thoroughly discussed in motion pictures at the present time by the greatest authorities in this country.

The medium of motion pictures has been brought into play and over 10,000,000 people are having the ideas of the great thinkers of the United States visualized for them each week.

This unique method of bringing the people to a better understanding of the vital issues of the day and to a fuller appreciation of the necessities of the country is exemplified in the "nth" degree in the third release of the Paramount Pictographs issued by the Paramount Pictures Corporation, in which the subject of preparedness is treated by former Secretary-of-War Garrison, Major-General Leonard Wood, and Major-General Scott, the latter of the General Staff of the United States Army.

The messages visualized are as follows:

Former Secretary-of-War Garrison delivers a message on preparedness to the American people.

"We should take steps to prepare ourselves because war is no respector of persons."

"It is essential that we should take steps to prepare ourselves against such a situation, which may encompass us almost before we are aware of the cause therefor."

"It is advisable to do whatever should be done in advance, and not leave such steps to be taken after the calamity has overtaken us. It will be much easier and less costly to do it the former way."

Major-General Wood urges preparedness because—"Preparedness for war is the best insurance against it."

"The conditions of modern war give no time or opportunity to attain preparedness after war has commenced."

"These instruments of modern war cannot be made in a day."

"To defend against all enemies with the minimum cost in blood and treasure the institutions under which we live."

Major-General Scott, chief of the General Staff of the United States Army, says in the pictures:

"Is the United States worth fighting for?"

"The rights of a citizen to the freedom of a republic involve a corresponding duty to defend those rights."

"You cannot hire a force of national defenders—you must do it yourself or it will not be done."

This release is filled with many interesting novelties, including a visualized story of the growth of the locomotive from 1832 to the present day, showing the first upright piston-driven locomotive, and also the Matt Shaw, the largest in the world, together with a number of engines that came in between.

The picturing of the hands of remarkable people also furnishes an interesting feature, showing Harold Bauer, pianist, playing a selection; William F. Chase, portrait painter at work painting a picture; and J. Verstratram, the world's greatest diamond cutter, at work. Fashions by S. Zulad, a bit of trick photography and a cartoon by J. R. Bray.

HELEN GREENE FEATURED IN SERIAL BY PROMINENT NEWSPAPER

Among the young actresses who have come to the front rapidly in pictures, Helen Greene has won her reward, as she is to be featured by one of the prominent newspapers in a new series which is to be released soon.

In Helen Greene the moving picture industry has a star acknowledged to be one of the most versatile women players on the screen.

Her father, Clay M. Greene, was one of the old troopers and production manager, a newspaper man and a recognized playwright.

At the time when public recognition was hers, on the speaking stage, she joined the Lubin forces, and made her debut on the screen in Lubin films. Admirers of versatility have always found Helen Greene to be "just herself," whether playing the vampire, the heroine, a society matron, the fond mother or any of her ingenue parts.

The pictures in which Miss Greene has showed herself to advantage are "Heartaches," "Beyond All Is Love," "Her Wayward Sister," "The Uplift," "Revenge," and another four-reel feature which is now in the course of completion.

DANIELS CAST FOR AMUSING "HALL ROOM" CHARACTER

Frank Daniels, comic opera king, now appearing in one-reel comedies for the Vitagraph Company, is portraying the role of a poor hall-roomer who still retains remnants of his once-prosperous condition.

Screen Examinations

"TO HAVE AND TO HOLD"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WHEN it comes to the point where the story, the acting, the direction and the production are inseparable; when it is impossible to tell where the merits of one begins and the other ends; when one can hardly start to diagnose any of these essentials without dragging in the other three—then the logical and correct way out of such a predicament is to place the picture on one of those selected lists we hear so much about, and the "selected" in the case can be defined as just about the height of perfection. All this is directly applicable to "To Have and to Hold."

It is a lavish and spectacular picture, but there is an immense personal and romantic interest; there are elaborate costumes, but the story is clear and thrilling; there is a star and a real one—Mae Murray—and the supporting cast is of uniform favor and ability.

The scenario by Margaret Turnbull was based on Mary Johnson's widely-read, romantic novel of the same title. It is laid in the early Colonial days in Virginia and is full of the dash and daring, the sword play and the romance of those delightful times.

The story is full of adventure and overruns with attractive romance. The plot moves swiftly; there is suspense and interest aplenty.

THE MARRIAGE CEREMONY

Mae Murray, who plays Lady Jocelyn Leigh, ward of King James I of England, is one of the most appealing and attractive actresses that the screen has recruited from the stage.

In the role of the high-spirited young lady who flees her native country to escape marrying a man not to her liking, she is shown to splendid advantage.

In Virginia Lady Jocelyn is awarded to Captain Ralph Percy as his wife. She marries him because she believes him just a little better than the worst, but the gallant Captain immediately falls wildly in love with his wife.

The disgruntled suitor in England, however, is not to be so easily disposed of, and his arrival in Virginia starts the plot moving with exciting rapidity.

Their hazardous adventures with the pirates and with the suitor for Lady Jocelyn's hand furnish action for the rest of the picture, and in the end the Captain's wife discovers that she is just as much in love with him as she possibly could be, and nothing remains to be desired.

Wallace Reid makes a captivating figure of Captain Percy; Tom Forman is a very fine heavy, while Ronald Bradbury, Raymond Hatton, James Neil, Lucien Littlefield and Robert Fleming complete the cast.

"A LAW UNTO HIMSELF"

(Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THROUGH the agency of the new Horsley camera, which is said to be capable of making double exposures simultaneously, without rewinding and re-exposing the film, Crane Wilbur appears as a double hero in this subject.

He plays a dual role, and in both he is quite heroic. The thousands who acclaim Crane Wilbur as an actor will thank Mr. Horsley for the invention of a camera which can give them their idol twice at the same time.

"THE DEVIL" GIVES HIMSELF UP

In fact, the double exposure work is the best we have ever seen. Double exposures, showing Crane talking to himself, are made both in interiors and exteriors.

In some of them he hands himself a note, and while the two figures are not on the screen at the same time, they are shown alternately by a "panoram" of the camera, but without any apparent cutting of the film.

The picture will delight the hearts of the Crane Wilbur enthusiasts; it will also quicken their pulses, although it is almost too tense, too melodramatic, with too much blood and fighting to suit some other audiences. The titles, many of them, are of the luridly heroic order, such as "He killed my pal! leave him to me!"

Crane is the gentleman sheriff of Circle City. He is also Jean Belleau, a young surveyor, whose half-witted brother is lynched by a mob in his absence.

On his return he vows vengeance on those who led the mob, takes to the woods, organizes a band, and under the name of "The Devil" terrorizes Circle City with robberies and holdups. Crane, the sheriff, incurs the displeasure of his sweetheart by defending the outlaw on the ground that he is better than the political ring which is robbing the treasury.

The sheriff succeeds in reforming the outlaw, who goes away. His followers, however, continue their depredations, in his name. They waylay the sheriff, and struck with his resemblance to the "Devil," commit a daring robbery, and then make it appear that not only was it the work of the sheriff, but that the latter was the "Devil" all along.

The real outlaw, on a train, reads that his friend, the sheriff, has been "unmasked," and leaps off the train, hurries back and gives himself up. The sheriff and his sweetheart are happily reunited.

Louis ("Bull") Durham, E. W. Harris, Carl Von Schiller, Francis Raymond, Steve Murphy, George Clare, Jr., and Virginia Kirtley complete the cast. The story is the work of Lillian V. Brockwell, and the direction by Robert Broadwell.

"DRUGGED WATERS"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"DRUGGED WATERS" has a lot of comedy in it, just enough villainous contrivings to season the comedy, and a very attractive setting in which about thirty-three and a third per cent. of the action is staged. As for length, five reels is about two too many and there is constant repetition of the same action.

Leonora Ainsworth hit upon a very good idea for the basis of her scenario. She unearthed a score of foolish people suffering from fatty degeneration of the pocketbook and placed them in a sanitarium.

The waters of this place are drugged by the manager to furnish the required taste. The pretty little owneress of the establishment enlists the aid of a young doctor and together they banish the drugs and institute diet and exercise.

Then the story goes on to tell of the efforts of the ex-manager, a villainous fellow, to put to naught the charitable plans of his boss and her partner, but, of course, this pair of turtle doves wins out.

The comedy, as we have said, is quite plentiful, but everyone knows that if a particular bit of business is done over and over again its humorous qualities become thread bare.

AS WE THINK SO ARE WE

Take, for instance, the scenes in the steaming rooms where the inmates are being reduced in weight. The spectacle of the inmates lying about in sheets and being steamed to exasperation is funny the first few times it occurs, but afterwards it is not.

The good points of Director William Dowlan's work are overshadowed by an oversupply of closeups. They are introduced when unnecessary, not once or twice, but a great many times. His settings on the other hand are as appropriate and pretty as the best. The photography, too, is very good.

Dowlan also plays the role of the doctor, and opposite him appears pretty Gloria Fonda, who looks unusually pretty throughout these five reels.

Her beauty has been tested by the closeups a great number of times and it withstands the test.

William Quinn as the tramp gets humor from his part and takes unto himself some of the biggest laughs in the picture. Others are E. P. Evers, George Berrell, Lule Warrenton, Doc Crane and Mary Ruby.

"POLITENESS PAYS"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THE title of this film is a bald and laconic statement, and this absence of subtlety characterizes the production itself. The hero is uncompromisingly good, the heroine unswervingly sweet, and the heavy unmitigatedly depraved. While consistency is admirable, delicate shades and nuances of character delineation are made impossible.

If anyone finds fault with the conventionality of the characters

NAT AND AMY DECIDE TO GET MARRIED portrayed, the blame should go to the scenario writer, and not to the players, for the latter are as human as the script allows them to be.

John Junior has a very ingratiating manner, and trounces the wicked characters in the play quite briskly. Betty Brown, who has been groomed for some time in minor parts, goes to the barrier in this production a well-developed ingenue.

Although the mixed metaphors may grate, Miss Brown's acting does not. Marion Skinner deserves special mention for her appealing work in a character role.

Amy Broadstreet, the daughter of a millionaire, takes up settlement work, and one of her beneficiaries is Mrs. Holsom, a worthy widow. Mrs. Holsom's son, Nat, is much impressed by Amy's generosity and general attractiveness.

He acts as her escourt as she visits among the slums and rescues her many times from dangerous situations. By his uniform courtesy and politeness, Nat has made himself popular throughout the district.

Amy decides to build a model tenement house, and wishes to put it up on a parcel of land owned by a miser. The miser refuses to sell it to Amy's agent, so he blows up the old man with a bomb. It is then discovered that the miser has willed a cool million dollars to Nat in reward for his politeness, so he is free to put up the model tenement and to marry Amy.

MEMBERS OF FOX COMPANIES, WITH HEADQUARTERS IN EDENDALE, CAL., FORM SOCIAL CLUB

MEMBERS of the William Fox companies making headquarters at the studios in Edendale, Cal., have formed a social club that bids fair to become one of the leading institutions of that place.

Within the last fortnight the following Fox stars and members of the studio force have taken up residence in Edendale:

Mr. and Mrs. William Farnum, Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Heber, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Louis, James Marcus, George G. Grenier, and Auditor M. Morris.

There are a score of others working at the studios who also live in Edendale, so that it is unnecessary for members of the Fox companies to go outside of their own circle to find social enjoyment.

"A CORNER IN COTTON"

(Quality-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THRILLS, heart interest, a story with an idea in it, and the acting of Marguerite Snow are the main ingredients in this picture. Each contributes materially to its power to hold an audience. Add skillful direction by F. J. Balshofer, and you have a compound which bears this label: "A good photoplay."

The story revolves about Peggy, daughter of a wealthy family, who, instead of wasting her time in frivolity, goes about helping the poor.

Her motto is: "The greatest thing in life is helping others," and Peggy, as interpreted by Miss Snow, is a convincing and charming character.

She carries out her belief to the point of defeating her father in his attempt to corner the cotton market, after she has gone South and foreseen the ruin that her father's scheme would bring to the planters.

NEWS OF THE ATTEMPT TO CORNER THE MARKET

It is in the South that Peggy shows her greatest resourcefulness. Here the thrills are introduced. Peggy, determined to reach New York as quickly as possible, commandeers an automobile, and engages in a wild race to overtake a train.

When she has driven the machine up to the last car, she leaps to the train. This scene is most realistic, as is the one just preceding, when Peggy is thrown from a wagon to the ground after a wheel flies off.

There is also a stirring fight between a cotton mill foreman and the hero, when the former has enticed Peggy into his private office. Another excellent piece of staging and direction is seen in views of the Cotton Exchange, with its crowd of frenzied brokers.

A love story shares the spectator's interest also, and furnishes the necessary sentiment. Miss Snow's work is equally good here. Others in a well balanced cast are Frank Bacon, Lester Cuneo, Helen Dunbar, William Clifford, J. W. Goldsworthy and Zella Call.

Typical Southern scenes and a number of good types are shown. The sets, lighting and photography are up to the best Metro standard.

"BETTER LATE THAN NEVER"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

A DRENCHING rainstorm supplies the chief medium for fun making in this latest Keystone, which offers William Collier as the star. Collier, as an art student, is occupied in defeating his rival, and winning the girl. He finally wins her, of course, but he has a lot of trouble in doing so.

No record breaking stunts are attempted, the spirit of the piece being nearer to farce than anything else. It does not call forth hearty laughs, but rather keeps an audience in a state of mild amusement.

We have seen elopement by means of a ladder several times before; and we are fully acquainted with chases, so that while these things amuse us, they do not inspire shouts of laughter. Collier comes nearest to providing a thrill when he rolls down a long stairway.

The picture is equipped with a fair amount of slapstick, but in no instance does it even border on coarseness, and for this reason it can be shown with ease to any audience.

Mae Busch, always a capable comedy actress, is seen as the art student's sweetheart; Frank Opperman as her father, and Joseph Belmont, as the rival.

An art student, determined to win the girl over parental objection and the efforts of his rival, makes his rival look foolish on several occasions, notably when he steals the rival's automobile with the girl in it, while the rival is underneath the machine.

This takes place in the rainstorm. Later, all three meet at the art school and compete for a prize. The art student substitutes a caricature of the girl's father for the sketch his rival is working on. When it is shown to the father, the usual explosion follows.

Finally, art student and girl elope, after the former works a trick by which he nearly succeeds in getting his rival married to the colored maid.

Frank Griffin directed the picture, assisted by Jean Havez.

"SHE CAME, SHE SAW, SHE CONQUERED"

(Kalem—Second Episode of "Sis Hopkins" Series—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS adventure of the famous Sis Hopkins can hardly be considered a connected story. It is rather a collection of incidents, which in themselves are excellent portrayals of comedy rural life.

Rose Melville is herself in her famous role, although she must impress the average spectator as being a well-fed and a trifle mature Sis. Still her popularity is unquestioned, and she carried her own advertising with her.

The reel commences with Sis in her home; then visitors come—and go, as soon as Sis accidentally fills the slide trombone full of water, which is distributed among the company a few minutes later.

There is a glimpse of the Apple Pie festival, which breaks up when Sis observes her sweetheart Rube exhibiting lively interest in another girl. After this we get into the real story.

Sis reads of a model wanted by a city artist. She goes to the city and applies for the job. When she arrives the artist is out, but she mistakes the assistant for the artist, and is posing, when the late model, a fiery Spanish thing, jealous of the artist, returns and threatens to stab everybody.

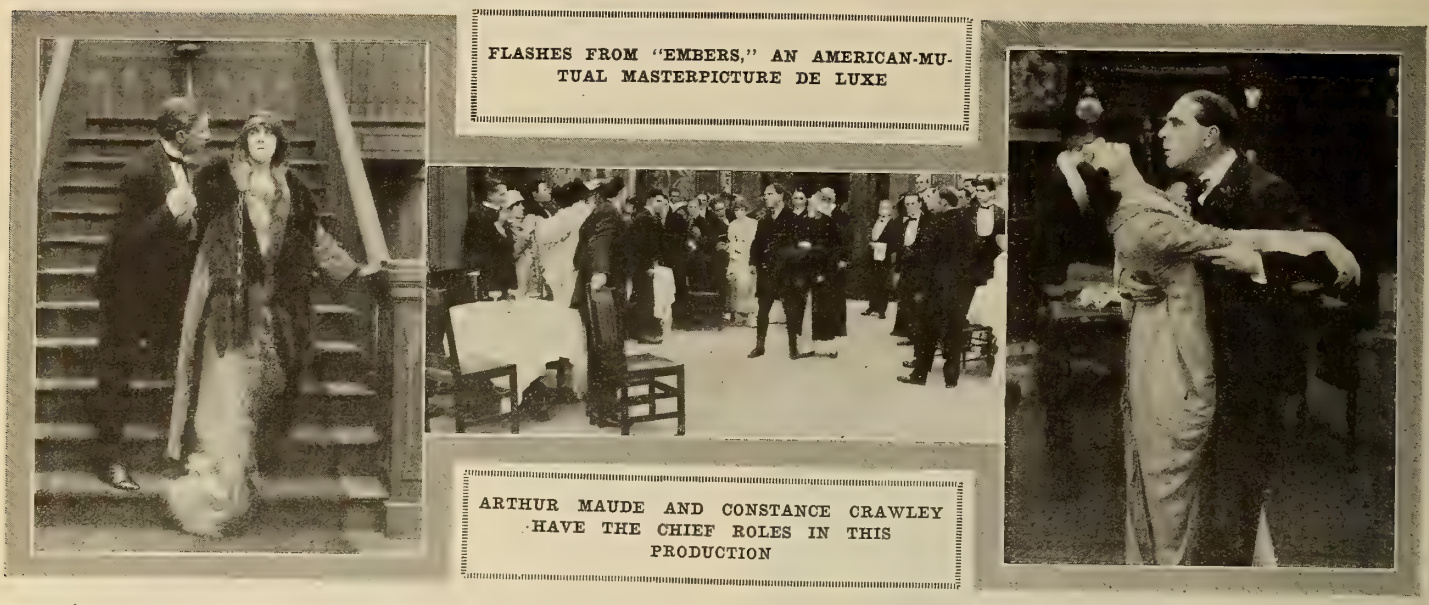
The artist returns and throws Sis out; she starts for home, but recalls that she has forgotten Pa's carpet-bag, which she brought with her, and goes back to the studio after it.

She arrives after dark, just in time to prevent the Spanish model from stabbing the artist as he sleeps in his chair. The artist and the Spanish girl are reunited, and Sis goes back to the village, happy in having accomplished something. The first person she sees is Rube, and in his delight at seeing her, they are quickly reconciled.

Capable direction and an altogether able company help to make the film interesting. In the cast are Ed. Lawrence, Minerva Florence, Frank Minzey, Arthur Albertson, Marjorie Cohan, Henry Murdock, Mary Kennedy, Richard Purdon, and Olive West. Robert Ellis is the director.

"EMBERS"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)



REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THERE is a great deal of that much advertised quality, "human interest," in this release. The picture deals with the eternal conflict of a man's spiritual love and physical passion, the objects in this case being an invalid wife and a philandering girl. This delicate subject is treated in a most careful way, and cannot offend the acutest of sensibilities.

Arthur Maude, the star, has a role for which he is far better fitted than he has been for some of the juvenile characters he has assumed in the past.

He has not forgotten some of his stage mannerisms, but for the most part his acting is realistic and forceful.

Constance Crawley's part, too, is a more suitable one for her age and appearance. She is always well-poised, and has much of her native English reserve. The balance of the cast, including Nell Franzen and William Carroll, is suitable.

FLASHES FROM "EMBERS," AN AMERICAN-MUTUAL MASTERPICTURE DE LUXE

Barring a few exaggerations, Mr. Maude's directing is well executed. The story, as has been said, is one that will appeal in spite of its occasional theatricalism.

When Rhea Woodley's new-born baby dies, the doctor tells Martin, her husband, that she must never be subjected to a similar experience. Rhea becomes an invalid, and so cannot afford the active physical companionship that Martin's virile manhood craves.

He turns for this to Maysie, a young cousin of Rhea's. Seeing how things are going, Rhea decides to make a supreme sacrifice. She allows Martin to see her in a compromising position, so that he will have grounds for a separation. She then goes to a sanitarium, while Martin is fairly happy with Maysie. But he discovers a diary that makes Rhea's sacrifice clear, and with renewed love he goes back to her.

"THE STRANGE CASE OF MARY PAGE—EPISODE 6"

(Essanay-General—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

EXCELLENT construction and competent direction prevent this absorbing story from becoming hopelessly involved as to plot. As it is, the thread is kept clear and untangled, and the interest is held at a tense point.

In the sixth episode, the events on the night of the murder are related, and the actual firing of the shot which killed Pollock, and for which Mary Page is on trial is told of. As before, the whole story is brought out in the court room, through the questioning of witnesses, and in "fading back" to the events the skill of the construction evidences itself.

The business of the court room is excellent. Henry Walthall as the defending lawyer, is easily the central figure. The judge, jury and prosecution are also faithful and convincing. Edna Mayo, as Mary Page, appears in nearly every scene, but her chief duties appear to be the wearing of stunning gowns.

The story brought out by the witnesses is of Mary's release from the hospital, and her return to work in the store; of her leaving the store because customers objected to the "crazy girl," and of her going on the stage.

The theatrical manager is then put on the stand to tell of Pollock being ordered to keep away from the theatre where Mary was playing. He tells of the dinner given in Mary's honor, and of her being called outside by a messenger, of his following her to Room 7, and of his hearing a shot just as he reached the door. He fled, and reached the stage entrance of the theatre.

Later Mary Page appeared, and in her handbag was a pistol. She admitted carrying it, adding, "and if Pollock repeats his insult I'll kill him."

The episode ends at this point, with the theatrical manager still on the stand. In the cast are Frances Benedict, Edmund F. Cobb, Sydney Ainsworth, Harry Dunkinson, John Cossar, Frank Dayton, Frankie Raymond, Frank Hamilton and Arthur Bates.

"THE QUESTION"

(Equitable-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THE question which Roy L. McCardell, author of this piece, set out to answer by means of a screen drama was this: Should a woman prefer poodles to children? Mr. McCardell has answered the question as it should be answered, of course.

The story may be summarized as follows: Tudor, after marrying a spoiled society girl, finds out that she is deliberately avoiding motherhood. While his wife is giving a dog party, he takes to drink, and very soon goes away on an unlawful honeymoon with his stenographer, a pretty girl whose father, an ex-convict, is constantly blackmailing her.

While Tudor is in Brazil, the stenographer dies in giving birth to his child, and Mrs. Tudor, repenting, adopts the baby. At first she pretends that the child is her own, but her subsequent confession of the deception paves the way for a happy ending.

THE WIFE AT HER FOLLY

Without pausing to ask whether it is probable that a wife would adopt her husband's illegitimate child in such a manner, we may remark that the treatment of the story is quite frank, but not over-sensational.

Marguerite Leslie, as the wife, heads the cast. Others are George Anderson, Bernard Randall, Marie Benton, Lorell Gibson, Louise Evans and others. Clara Whipple, who has the role of the stenographer, gives a finished impersonation.

Interiors of homes of the wealthy, a few snow scenes, a cafe or two, and other settings provide ample backgrounds.

THREE SCENES FROM "BEN BLAIR," THE COMING PALLAS PRODUCTION, WITH DUSTIN FARNUM AND WINIFRED KINGSTON

"THE IMMORTAL FLAME"

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS society drama has for its moral: "Love cannot be bought or sold; the only price of love is love." Mr. Abramson, author and director of the picture, sets out to show that the violation of this precept leads to tragedy, and he shows it relentlessly.

The heroine, forced to marry a man she does not love, leaves her home, goes to the man she does love, and then when their relation is discovered, sacrifices her own love for the sake of his wife.

The strain of this, added to other griefs, is too much for her; her faculties are deranged by brain fever, and she drowns herself.

Summarized so briefly, the story appears somewhat old, and the material of it is old. But Mr. Abramson has built an effective plot out of it. Only one serious criticism may be made against it, but we doubt very much whether picture-goers will take the defect to heart.

ON THE ROAD TO SUICIDE

The flaw in question is a familiar use of coincidence; the wife, accompanying her sister on a search for an apartment, goes to the very apartment provided by her husband for the heroine. This incident stands in sharp contrast to the general careful handling of the plot.

Maude Fealy is seen as the heroine, and she gives an appealing impersonation which arouses sympathy at the outset and keeps it to the end.

She is called upon to do a lot of strenuous emotional acting, particularly in the latter scenes, and she does it very well.

We should say that Mr. Abramson's work and Miss Fealy's acting contribute about equally to the value of the picture.

The locale is Washington and New York. The interiors are elaborate, and the exteriors well chosen. Except for one or two scenes the lighting has been well managed, and the photography is good.

The supporting cast contains some capable players: James Cooley, Paula Shay, and a clever child actress, Kittens Reichart, being the most conspicuous. Others are: Charles Edwards, Joseph Burke, Louise Guischard, Edna Luby and Willard Case.

We think Mr. Abramson deserves a good deal of credit for working his story out to its logical conclusion, even though a happy ending is thus made impossible. This has not a little to do with the final "strong" effect of the picture.

"BULLETS AND BROWN EYES"

(Kay-Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS is a romantic drama of modern war, with finely conceived comedy relief, the whole being rendered pleasing and effective by good settings, stirring battle scenes and clever acting.

In the last named division, the chief honors go to Bessie Barriscale, who, as Countess Olga, proves conclusively that bullets are no match for brown eyes.

Armored automobiles, aeroplane scouts, dashing cavalry raiders, villages in flames, terror-stricken peasants, and one or two far-flung battle lines furnish a martial background, and also furnish evidence of capable direction and attention to detail.

It is the situation between Countess Olga and her official enemy, the Prince, which really arouses greatest interest, however. The Countess, impersonating a nun, delivers the Prince over to her compatriots, by means of a trick. This does not prevent her from falling in love with him, with the result that she intrigues successfully to save him from being executed.

Then she is condemned as a traitress to her country, and sentenced to a convent to atone for her sin. But the Prince gets a few of his men together; dressed as monks, they hold up the procession to the convent, and Olga and the Prince make their escape on a horse.

Though the plot is an old one in conception, a lot of exceedingly clever complications are worked into it, and these provide a degree of suspense.

Miss Barriscale's role calls for equally effective acting in grave moments and in lighter mood. She meets the test in excellent fashion. It is the best piece of acting we have ever seen her do.

William Desmond is seen as the Prince, Wyndham Standing as Olga's brother, J. J. Dowling as Count Ivan, J. Barney Sherry as the King, and Roy Laidlaw as the Grand Duke. J. G. Hawks wrote the story. There is nothing in the picture to offend anybody's neutrality, or lack of neutrality.

FIRST SIR BEERBOHM TREE SUBJECT NOT TO BE RELEASED ON TRIANGLE PROGRAM

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Feb. 25.

THE initial Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree subject, "Macbeth", is not to be released as a part of the Triangle program, but will be handled as a special feature and consist of eight or nine reels.

Such is the announcement made by the executives at the Fine Arts studio, and Harry E. Aitken, president of the Triangle, who is still in the city.

"DIPLOMACY"

(Famous Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

SARDOU'S "Diplomacy," a favorite with theatregoers a generation ago and revived last year at the Empire, New York, with Blanche Bates and William Gillette in the leads, gives Marie Doro an opportunity for a display of her finished acting to a wider circle of appreciative audiences.

Miss Doro's work in the role of Dora indicates a quick comprehension of screen requirements. Indeed, her matured histrionic talents saved a few scenes that otherwise might have failed in their expected dramatic intensity.

The scenes representing gay Monte Carlo are effective, particularly the exteriors in their riotous display of exotic vegetation along massive esplanades and broad marble promenades. Good judgment is evident in the management of gaming scenes. In the first place, they were not unduly prolonged, and the "extras" showed evidences of careful drilling to convey the feeling of suppressed excitement and apparant indifference of the titled gamblers to the vast sums constantly won and lost.

An allegorical representation of the almost universal willingness to sacrifice nearly everything for money, is shown in a figure of the God of Mammon, with a young woman standing before the altar of the brazen image, holding out her skirts to catch a golden shower from the roof of the idol's temple.

Skillful lighting has created around the Golden Calf an intensified atmosphere of worldly greed. The brilliantly white dress of the slim, graceful girl makes a vivid contrast to the bronze red background.

Julian Beauclerc, member of a titled family and just appointed to a diplomatic post, marries Dora without knowing much about her previous life. The only reason for reticence about her affairs is poverty.

Julian, on the eve of departure for Gibraltar to the governor of the fortress with new fortification plans, handed him by his brother, connected with the English embassy at Paris, finds that the papers have been stolen from his room and suspects his bride.

The documents, however, were abstracted from his strong box by the Countess Zicka, a spy in the employ of Baron Stein. Henri, the brother of Julian, obtains possession of the papers and from recognition of the perfume used by the countess, detects the thief and traces the plot of the wily baron to its source, removing the cloud of suspicion from the innocent bride.

The following cast supported Miss Doro: Elliott Dexter as Julian; Edith Campbell Walker as the Countess Zicka; George Majeroni as Count Orloff; Frank Losee as Henri, and Russell Bassett as Baron Stein. Sidney Olcott directed "Diplomacy" and Hal Young was responsible for the photography.

"THE BRIGHT LIGHTS"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FATTY and Mabel again and in a picture that well justifies and is benefited largely by their presence. It also shows Roscoe Arbuckle in the light of a master-comedy director for "The Bright Lights," formerly known as "The Lure of Broadway," was produced in New Jersey miles away from the western Keystone studio.

Evidently tired of a climax where the players merely swoop around in drunken flying machines or enjoy an eighty-mile-an-hour ride in a skidding automobile, Arbuckle has staged the most rough and tumble and at the same time one of the most breath-taking and craziest climaxes that ever saw the celluliod.

He does nothing more than wreck an entire building. A boisterous fight is staged and the fighters raise such a terrible rumpus that the two upper floors of the building fall in. This series of scenes mixes thrills and laughter most cleverly.

But one does not need to await the climax in "The Bright Lights" to find his laughing apparatus. The story and incidentally the fun starts in a small town cabaret where Fatty is chief cook and bottle washer, where Al. St. John keeps the sober side of the bar and where entrancing Mabel dances to amuse those folk of Four Corners who can drink three egg flips and still go home without the assistance of the telephone poles.

The business done in this setting is uproarious. Some of it is original and some of it is well-known Keystone stuff that never fails to evoke laughter.

Pretty Mabel is lured away by a vulture from the city and Fatty goes after her to encounter the affair already weakly described. The fight takes place in a Bowery dance hall and a realistic place it is, peopled with real Bowery folk, the best, worst-looking types imaginable.

During the course of the fight, two startling bits of comedy are given. One is concerning the colored piano player who takes refuge behind the bar during the thick of the row. He pokes his head up for air and lo and behold, his coal black skin turns white with fear.

MABEL'S RESCUE BY FATTY IN A BOWERY DANCE HALL

The other is given when Fatty employed Joe Bordeau's head as a battering ram and knocks down the wall.

"The Bright Lights" amply demonstrates the ability of Fatty and Mabel to create a little pathos even in a slapstick comedy. It is their ability to do this that puts their pictures over in such excellent style.

In closing, "The Bright Lights" is not vulgar—it has nothing offensive—and after all is said in praise of Fatty and Mabel one must not forget that there is Al. St. John, who is one of the cleverest comedians that ever appeared in eccentric makeup.

"DEFENSE OR TRIBUTE?"

(Public Service Film Company—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

PREPAREDNESS as a subject for film treatment comes to the fore again in this picturization of what happens when a nation is unprepared for war.

The underlying theme is summed up in an early subtitle, quoting Pinckney's famous declaration to Talleyrand: "Millions for defense and not one cent for tribute."

The picture is in the form of an illustrated speech, made by a preparedness advocate to members of the Cosmo Peace Society, who are shown gathered at a board meeting.

Just before the members enter the room the spirits of famous Americans from Washington to McKinley are materialized. The speaker's remarks are picturized in a succession of scenes.

These begin with Biblical times, come up through Caesar's conquests, the age of chivalry, the French revolution, and the war of American independence to the modern age.

The action is a series of defeats for weaker peoples. It shows the result of blundering and unpreparedness. Throughout, the application to America is made, and the lesson pointed.

Declarations of eminent Americans, dead and living, in behalf of national defense are shown. At the end of the speech, the Peace Board unanimously votes to endorse preparedness. They stand and sing the National Anthem.

Despite the admirable purpose of the film, some of its scenes are crude and fail to thrill. The battles consist mostly of listless fighting, smoke, which sometimes blots out the entire scene, and scurrying to and fro to little purpose. The picturization of the Charge of the Light Brigade, the most pretentious thing in the film, is not handled in a thoroughly dramatic way.

Some of the actors who impersonate chieftains or statesmen are manifestly poor selections for the parts. The costuming is fairly accurate.

When the action is brought down to present day matters, it is on surer ground, though it does not present anything very striking. A number of views, apparently from news weeklies, are worked in.

There are a number of reasonably large sets in the early reels, but it must be confessed that they too show indifferent workmanship. The photography varies in excellence.

Nevertheless, the preachments in the subtitles are so apt, and so vividly written, and some of the scenes of actual warships, forts and troops so interesting, that the film will accomplish a great deal toward waking up audiences, despite the crudeness of its historical scenes.

WEALTH OF "BIG SCENES" IN "THE BONDMAN," BY HALL CAINE, FOR FOX

IN the William Fox picture of "The Bondman," by Hall Caine, there is said to be a wealth of "big scenes." There is an enormous dramatic scene in a sulphur mine, then the Bondman's own plea for his brother's life made in the presence of three thousand persons attending an Icelandic festival; a mighty contest of physical strength at the celebration of the Althing; a battle on shipboard; an uprising by the people and the overthrow of a governor; a shipwreck and thrilling rescues. This picture is soon to be released.

ONE OF THE BIG SCENES IN "THE BONDMAN"

Dorothy Bernard, the William Fox player who is leading woman in all of the recent William Farnum pictures, has the biggest role of her entire career in "The Bondman." This picture was not made with the rush so characteristic of the picture industry.

Months of time were devoted to staging it in Maine, on Long Island and in New Jersey. Miss Bernard plays the role of Greeba, daughter of the governor of the Isle of Man.

"HER WAYWARD SISTER"

(Lubin—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THERE is about this drama that which holds the spectator wierdly fascinated from beginning to end. It is not the whole story that has turned the trick, but it is chiefly the title character created by Clay M. Greene and interpreted so intelligently by Helen Greene.

Such a character was doubtless difficult to make convincing. It it not an ordinary character for we are not often confronted with a woman without a spark of love in her heart for a human being, only love for freedom, dissolute habits and gross unconventionality.

Such is the name part of this drama. Miss Greene assumes the role uncommonly well. Flippant, rude, unkind, possessing a great satisfaction in bringing men to her feet and then giving them a kick for their trouble—that's the Wayward Sister through and through.

Miss Greene's shades of expression are delicate, revealing at all times the innermost feelings of a restless and loveless heart.—she acts the part with such skill that to separate the role and the actress seems impossible.

Then to turn the mere surface of things, the star's clothes are enough to make every woman in the audience envious, but it's an envy that will please those women even though their better halves will be apt to grow uneasy as episode after episode of the drama discloses the attractive lead in an equally attractive gown.

Francis Joyner as the husband does his work with accustomed finish. June Daye as the sister is pleasing when she doesn't attempt any heavy emotion and Clarence J. Elmer as the hunchback organist has a sympathetic part which he handles averagely well.

The transformation of the Wayward Woman is brought about through her younger sister who to show her how she looks acts in much the same manner herself. The ending finds the girl reunited with her husband and father.

The settings, particularly those in the theatre and cabaret show, are most realistic while the photography is true to the good standard long since set by Lubin camera work.

"UNTO THOSE THAT SIN"

(Selig-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

PHILOSOPHERS assert that the whims and vagaries of women are inscrutable, but admitting this, the writer doubts if many counterparts of this film's heroine are to be found in real life.

Fritzie Brunette is a charming and accomplished actress, but even her art cannot make some of the episodes of the plot anything but artificial and theatrical. For little or no reason, the part she takes requires her to marry a man she doesn't love, only to poison him, and to reject the man whom she cares for to distraction.

"NEVER INTRUDE IN THIS ROOM AGAIN"

Comic relief is introduced, but not always opportunely.

While the story is impossible, no exception can be taken to the manner in which it has been produced. The sets are elaborate, the locations beautiful, the gowns charming, and the players well cast.

Fritzie Brunette first as a drab waif, and then as a beguiling sybarite, is uniformly excellent. Miss Brunette's support, which is for the most part worthy, is given by Earle Foxe, Edward J. Piel, Marion Warner, Lillian Hayward, Al. Filson, George Hernandez, and George Larkin.

Nadia, an underpaid stenographer, is disgusted by the sordidness of her home life, and chooses the primrose path. She marries a millionaire who dies shortly after, leaving his fortune of considerable size, to her.

She falls in love with a worthy young man, but a slight misunderstanding arises, and she does not try to explain it. The young man marries another girl, and Nadia marries an octogenarian.

She tries to poison her husband, and then throws him over a cliff, but she cannot kill him. She tries to draw her former lover away from his wife, but failing in this, she throws her husband and herself over a precipice.

"THE WITCH"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS latest of William Fox's adapted from Victorien Sardou's "The Sorceress," is in most respects and taken as a whole a strong feature. Its only noticeable weakness lies in its commencement.

A number of characters, easily mounting up to two numerals are introduced in rapid succession without the clarifying medium of closeups. And also the beginning of the picture launches out on a number of plots. Confusion is very apt to result from this overcrowding.

However, as feet go on, the story and the characters become firmly fixed in the spectator's mind and confusion is replaced by dramatic strength for Sardou's play is undoubtedly strong and with Nance O'Neil carrying the title role, the screen version will assuredly prove successful as a box office proposition, as well as an artistic success in the estimation of picture goers.

Miss O'Neil is seen to fine advantage when she steps within close range of the camera. Director Frank Powell has, however, chosen to award his star few closeups and sometimes one is apt to wish that there were more of them for the sake of bringing out the true force of the salient points of the story.

But thanks to the character of the play, it suffers only slightly from the lack of closeups. The plot is strong of itself and makes most satisfactory entertainment in its present state.

A large cast of adequate ability was assembled for Miss O'Neil's support and never is the picture allowed to suffer from an amateurish rendition of a comparatively unimportant part. The cast is well balanced throughout.

The photography furnished by Director Powell's cameraman is excellent and besides there are not a few equally fine light effects. The value of lights and shadows in increasing the strength of a scene is aptly demonstrated in "The Witch".

The settings are chiefly exteriors and in many of them well handled mobs appear. The first scenes show a terrific battle raging betwixt opposing Mexican forces and the realism portrayed here helps to discountenance the haze created by the many characters.

The military governor of a certain Mexican territory isolates the Witch because she is supposed to have dealings with Black Magic. The son of another official listed to marry a girl he does not love falls in love with the Witch, but he is discovered on the day of the wedding.

The thankless woman is brought to court and out of love for the official's son she swears that she employed magical motives in order to make him fall in love with her. The Witch is saved from being burned at the stake by effecting a cure on her lover's wife.

"DEFENSE OR TRIBUTE?" IS NOW OFFERED ON STATE RIGHTS PLAN

THE Public Service Film Company, 1482 Broadway, New York City, announce that its five part drama, 'Defense or Tribute?" which for two weeks played to capacity audiences at the Park theatre, Columbus Circule, New York, is now on offer to state right buyers. The picture is also open for booking by exhibitors in the city and state of New York and in New Jersey.

The theme of the picture is far removed from any of those at present beore the public. The purpose of the producer appears to have been to keep you guessing reel by reel.

In fact, it is a series of dramatic contrasts. The producer, again and again, takes a nation, the Jews, the Gauls, the North American Indians, and others, shows them in a condition of unpreparedness and then permits a better armed foe to fall upon and subjugate them.

Prosperous, modern America is revealed to the spectator, who is asked whether he would like his country's safety to be jeopardized by unpreparedness.

TOM CHATTERTON

TOM CHATTERTON and Anna Little are associated with the "Mustang" brand of pictures, made at the American studios at Santa Barbara. Mr. Chatterton is the producer and takes the male lead in all the pictures he, Anna Little and Jack Richardson appear in and occasionally he also writes the story. In the recently released photoplay "Double crossed," which excited such favorable comment, he not only wrote and produced the play, but also played the leading man's part.

Before starting on his picture career with Thomas Ince, with whom he remained for two and one-half years, both as actor and director, he was well known on the speaking stage, his best remembered engagement being the three-year special assignment in the role of the Mayor in "The Man and the Hour" on tour. He also played with Cyril Scott and in vaudeville with Josephine Cohan. He was in stock at the Alcazar theatre at the same time that Bessie Barriscale and Rhea Mitchell were and was a great favorite with coast audiences. He played in stock companies all over the country. During his engagement at Inceville, Chatterton appeared in some of the big successes which came from that studio and he has concentrated all his energies into making his pictures with the American company notable.

He is a good looking chap, nearly six feet tall and with curly brown hair and a handsome, manly face. He is just as popular with the actor folk as he is with his audiences and with his vigor and determination, his dramatic ability and natural powers as a director, the "Mustang" brand of the American company is destined to become more popular all the time.

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The House of Darkness." (Biograph. Mon., Mar. 6.)—This reissue serves to introduce a cast which includes Lillian Gish, Lionel Barrymore, Claire McDowell and Charles H. Mailes, in an unusual story. A maniac escapes from the asylum.

He is afflicted with homicidal mania, but is peculiarly influenced by music. He forces his way into the doctor's home, where the doctor's young wife sits at the piano. He points a pistol at her and gives her five minutes to live.

In her terror she falls forward and her fingers strike the keys, producing a crash of sound which instantly has its effect on the lunatic. She continues playing until the madness dies out of his eyes and he hands her the pistol. She leads him back to the asylum, and thereafter plays for him every day until he is discharged as cured.

"The Mystery of Orcival." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Mar. 8.)—This is a highly involved, but absorbing detective story, in which the great Lecoq is the central figure.

The body of the young countess De Tremorel is found under a bridge, and the report goes out that both the Count and Countess have been murdered.

Soon afterward, Laurence, the mayor's daughter disappears, leaving a note that she has committed suicide. Lecoq is convinced that the Count has not been murdered, and by clever work discovers him alive, in company with Laurence.

Through papers discovered in a secret compartment in the Count's home, Lecoq discovers that the Count and Countess killed the Countess' first husband by slow poison, and were married immediately after his death. Then the Count developed a passion for Laurence, killed his wife and disappeared with the girl.

Discovered, Laurence hands her lover a pistol and tells him to cheat the guillotine, but he turns coward and refuses. She then kills him herself. Lecoq, who sees the act, justifies it, and the girl goes back to the man who has loved her through all.

Charles H. Mailes, G. Raymond Nye, Charles Perley, Jack Mulhall, Jack Drumeir, Gretchen Hartman, Vera Sisson and Eva Smith compose the cast.

"Politeness Pays." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 19.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Despoiler." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 26.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Intruder." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Mar. 7.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. This story is a sequel to "The Edge of Things." When Betty and Jarvis are married, Betty's former employer, Waldron, whom Jarvis had once thrashed in a quarrel, plans revenge.

One night the young married couple quarreled, and Jarvis goes to his club. Waldron visits Betty in her husband's absence and forces his caresses on her.

A burglar whom Waldron had once double-crossed, enters the house, and discovering the situation, takes the man outside and administers a beating, while Betty and her husband are making up.

In the cast are Richard Travers, Marguerite Clayton, and Ernest Maupain.

"Canimated Nooz No. 6." (Essanay. Split reel with scenic. Wed., Mar. 8.)—An animated cartoon burlesquing the news pictorials, together with scenes of the ice sports of Quebec.

"A Man's Work." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Mar. 11.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Thomas Wimberton, son of the wealthy James Wimberton, becomes secretly engaged to Ellen Barth.

Ellen's sister Mary becomes involved with a released convict and this crook, recognizing James Wimberton as a fugitive from justice, sends Mary to blackmail him.

Next day Mary is found murdered, and the convict is shot by a detective while trying to escape.

This same detective recognizes Wimberton as a man wanted for murder, but when the father confesses, it appears that he had already been found innocent.

In the cast are Richardson Cotton, John Junior, Elizabeth Burbridge, and John Cossar.

"Maybe Moonshine." (Kalem. Tues., Mar. 7.)—Ham and Bud in a burlesque on a combination of the Kentucky feudists plot and the detective who poses as an artist to apprehend the moonshiners.

Ham is less in evidence than usual and the comedy furnished by Bud and his supporters is not up to Ham and Bud standard.

The opening scenes showing Gordon Griffith and Wesley Barry as Ham and Bud while young are cleverly done and laughable.

"When Hubby Forgot." (Kalem. Wed., Mar. 8.)—Hubby is absent minded and forgets where he places his wife's birthday necklace. The entire picture hinges on this incident and one is apt to grow tired as foot after foot passes through the machine displaying little or no variety. Ethel Teare is featured.

"A Race for Life." (Kalem. Sat., Mar. 11.)—Helen Gibson once more in a thrilling "Hazards of Helen" railroad drama that ends with a climax in which one of the recent western floods has been brought into play.

When properly edited this picture ought to carry a strong portion of suspense for there is material to build up to a mighty fine finale.

"The Redemption of Helene." (Lubin. Three reels. Thurs., Feb. 24.)—A fairly interesting story of the folly of a young country girl, who deserts her artist lover in order to become an actress, after the artist has brought near blindness upon himself by overwork.

Eventually he does go blind, but she returns to him. Helen Wolcott does good work as Helene, and L. C. Shumway gives a satisfactory impersonation of the artist. The plot, written by Julian Lamothe, has a few unconvincing spots, but contains enough human interest to atone for most of them. Photography and settings are very good.

"Billie's Revenge." (Lubin. One reel. Sat., Feb. 26.)—Billie Reeves, directed by Earl Metcalfe, is a slapstick comedy that ranks as an average performance. Pails of water and a hose are called into play with the usual results. There is but little padding, and the action moves rapidly.

"At the Door of Doom." (Lubin. One reel. Mon., Feb. 29.)—A mild thriller in the shape of the hero's rescue from drowning in a huge siphon, which has been constructed to furnish a city's water supply. L. C. Shumway has the male lead, and is supported by a fair cast.

"Hamlet Made Over." (Lubin. Sat., Mar. 4.)—This presents Billie Reeves in a good vehicle by Mark Sawn. Reeves is an actor and plays Hamlet, modernized to such an extent that the audience employs fruit and eggs of the ancient variety to stop the show.

Carrie Reynolds is Ophelia. This ought to register because it has moments that are really funny, despite the hoary appearance of the theme.

"Ophelia." (Lubin. Mon., Mar. 6.)—A drama concerning the proverbially jealous husband and how all his fears proved unfounded. E. K. Lincoln makes this part convincing by a natural interpretation of the role and his support, consisting of Ethel Clayton, Crauford Kent and Helen Wier, is of an unusually good sort for a program picture.

"The Dream of Eugene Aram." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Mar. 6.)—This is a screen version of Thomas Hood's Poem. Tyrone Power does practically all the acting, and he does it with great intensity and effectiveness. The plot is most tragic, but the effect is not too depressing. The directing is exceptionally good. Roy Clark, a small boy, has a minor part, but he gives unusual promise of developing into a fine actor. This is the best three-reeler produced by this company for some time.

Eugene Aram, a school teacher of a hundred years ago, tells one of his pupils of a dream he had. He dreamed that he murdered an old miser for his money, and so vividly does he tell the story, that he must constantly remind the lad that it is only a dream. Next day, while the boy is still sleeping, two grim-faced men, having found the body of a dead old man, go to arrest Eugene Aram, having found incontrovertible evidence that he is the murderer.

"The Passing of Pete." (Selig. Sat., Mar. 11.)—A pointless Western of the old-school. A horse-back chase and a revolver fight are the two interesting features. Pete, a squaw-man, falls in love with a Spanish dancer, and for her sake, steals a bag of gold from a prospector. A posse gives chase, and kills the thief in a revolver duel. The robbed prospector then asks the dead man's wife to live in his cabin.

In the cast are Tom Mix, Victoria Forde, Sid Jordan, Betty Keller, and Ethylyn Chrisman.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Oscar, the Oyster Opener." (Falstaff. Tues., Mar. 7.)—This is a rather cleverly conceived comedy, well produced, with plenty of action.

Oscar, the oyster opener, and Pete, the restaurant proprietor are rivals for Mayme, the waitress.

They have many a squabble over her, which culminate when Mayme fixes her affections on a millionaire who comes into the restaurant and lets her wear the big pearl ring which he has just bought for his sweetheart.

Roused to jealousy, Oscar begins feverishly opening oysters in the hope of finding a similar pearl, when a richly dressed woman sweeps in and collars the "millionaire."

It then appears that he is her butler, who has been sent to have the ring repaired. Mayme faints, but just then Oscar finds in an oyster the pearl for which he has been searching twenty years. Mayme falls into his arms.

"The Silken Spider." (American. Three reels. Tues., Mar. 7.)—While this is a strong subject, well-acted, it is not suitable for children or squeamish audiences. Some of the situations and many of the subtitles are rather risque. George Periolat again demonstrates his versatility and power, and his efforts are given admirable support by Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh. Louise Lester certainly does not approach the popular conception of a vampire woman, yet her acting does much to overcome her physical unsuitedness. King Clark, Warren Ellsworth, and Lillian Knight complete the cast. Frank Borzage did some good directing.

Ursula, the mistress of a millionaire, Leonard, goes on a trip with him, and he must marry her to get around the Mann act. Knowing that his will bequeaths most of his property to his daughter, Ursula plans to ruin Bona in her father's eyes. She hires a young man to make love to Bona, and a few months later the girl discovers that she is about to become a mother. Her father disowns her, but a minister marries her. Later the conspiracy engineered by Ursula is discovered, and Leonard relents.

"The Gay Blade's Last Scrape." (Beauty. Wed., Mar. 8.)—This nonsensical pot-pourri of farcical happenings makes fairly diverting entertainment. While many of the situations are dubious in themselves, the comedy spirit of the players saves them from being suggestive. John Sheehan and Carol Halloway have played similar pieces scores of times, and the balance of the cast, made up of Mary Talbot, Rea Berger, George Clancy, Edna Frawley, and Dixie Stewart, are all experienced farceurs.

Carol doesn't want to marry Lord Phoppie, but her ambitious mother insists. But the advent of a lady barber just before the ceremony leads to a series of misunderstandings that enable the hero to wed Carol.

"The Cruise of Fate." (Thanhouser. Three reels. Wed., Mar. 8.)—This is a thrilling melodrama, well produced and acted, but based on an ancient theme, which has been especially overworked in pictures.

The wealthy, money-grubbing husband, neglects his beautiful wife and she turns to another man. The husband discovers this, and in order to win back his wife's love, he plans a long cruise with her.

She accepts, but just as they are about to sail, the other man appears, and announces that the wife has invited him to be their guest. The husband cannot refuse, and so the triangle goes to sea.

Table of Contents will hereafter be found opposite Accessory News Section Cover.

The yacht is wrecked, and the lifeboats depart with the crew, leaving husband, wife and other man alone on board.

There are only two life preservers, and the two men fight to see which shall have life—and the woman.

The husband is defeated, but the wife's eyes have been opened, and she declares she will die with him. The other man leaps overboard in the dark and swims for the lights of a tug.

He is picked up, and tells his rescuers that there is no one else on the wreck. But the husband has found a rocket which he sends up, and he and his wife are rescued.

The other man is properly punished. Mlle. Valkyrien is the wife, Thomas A. Curran the husband and Boyd Marshall the Other Man.

"Ambitious Awkward Andy." (Falstaff. Thurs., Mar. 9.)—Andy is a negro porter, anxious to rise in the world. He buys a book on "A Knowledge of All Trades," and not knowing it is a humorous work, takes all the suggestions seriously.

He resigns and first becomes a sleeping car porter, and by following the directions, does everything the wrong way, until he is chased off the train in front of a pistol.

Then he becomes chauffeur, dynamite blaster, and takes other odd jobs, but at last comes back to his old position, only to find it filled.

He shakes a brawny black fist under the nose of his successor, and the latter is "eager to resign."

So Andy gets his old job back. Walter Hiers and Riley Chamberlain head the cast.

"Love, Music, and Cannonballs." (Vogue. Thurs., Mar. 9.)—Not shown for review.

"Curlew Corliss." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., Mar. 10.)—Art Acord, of "Buck Parvin" fame, in this release has a vehicle suited to him, and he is very good, especially in the comedy passages. The story is of the oldtime Western type, and is good of its kind. Others in the cast are Molly Shafer, Dixie Stratton, Lawrence Peyton, Pete Morrison, and Nita Davis.

Curlew Corliss, a happy-go-lucky cowboy, is in love with the school teacher, but his bashfulness will not allow him to propose. He is suspected of being the bandit who held up a stage coach, so he is refused when he finally asks the teacher to marry him. He does some sleuthing, and fixes the guilt of the robbery of the brother of the girl he loves. After advising this brother to leave the neighborhood, he is in a position to marry the girl.

"Persistent Percival." (Beauty. Sun., Mar. 12.)—There is a fillip of originality and a dash of the droll that would make this comedy amusing even in the hands of actors less capable. The absence of vulgarity and brick-bats is refreshing. In the cast are Orral Humphrey, Billy Frawley, Mary Talbot, and Edna Frawley.

Acting on his father's advice, Billy hires a guardian for himself. This protector annoys Billy by limiting his drinking, poker playing, and flirting, but wins his undying gratitude when he prevents his proposing to a widow with seven children.

"More Truth Than Poetry." (Vogue, Sun., Mar. 12.)—Not shown for review.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Red Circle," No. 11. (Balboa. Two reels.)—"Seeds of Suspicion" is the title of this episode in the exciting adventures of June Travis, who is cursed with the red circle birthmark of the criminal Borden family, on her hand.

In her attempts to aid Gordon, the lawyer who has been falsely accused of embezzlement, the girl gets herself into a tight place. She goes with Lamar and Farwell, the merchant who has "framed" up the charge against Gordon, to Farwell's office.

There by a ruse, she sends both in chase of an imaginary thief, and in their absence, she and Gordon rifle the safe, taking securities which will incriminate Farwell.

These, with some of her own money she gives to the lawyer for the purpose of clearing himself of the charge. The theft is immediately discovered, and Lamar is compelled to suspect June.

He calls at her house but finds her out. In the meantime "Smiling Sam" arrives from Surfton, hidden in a trunk, and further compromises June. Ruth Roland, Frank Mayo and Corenne Grant head the cast.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Thirteenth Episode. Two reels. Week of Mar. 6.)—"The Powder Trust and the War" takes up Richard Stanton's battle with this particular trust and its smuggling arms to Mexico.

A thrill is supplied by a series of big explosions in the final scenes. Evidently Stanton is to remain as hero and in this role he is doing very well indeed. Tom and Bruce will be forgotten if he keeps up the pace.

"The Target." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., Mar. 6.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Feb. 26.

"Their Only Son." (Nestor. Mon., Mar. 6.)—Ray, newly married, has been fooling Uncle Harry for the last ten years, telling him he has a son. Uncle comes to visit and Ray presses his midget partner Gus into service as his son.

A good picturization of a white haired plot that is benefited hugely by the presence of Gus Alexander, the unwilling deceiver. Others are Ray Gallagher, Billie Rhodes, and Harry Rattenberry.

"Sunlight and Shadow." (Imp. Tues., Mar. 7.)—A tale of the Northwest produced by Brinsley Shaw. Betty Gray, Paul Panzer and Harry Spingler are featured.

Miss Gray can look pretty and can cry copiously, but she overacts here and doesn't fit very well into the atmosphere of the Northwest.

While appealing to a certain extent the picture hardly convinces because of Miss Gray. The photography is quite poor.

"The Winning of Miss Construe." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Mar. 7.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Feb. 19.

"False Friends and Fire Alarms." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Mar. 8.)—Devotees of Billie Ritchie will enjoy this two reel farce for he is very much in evidence from first to last.

A horse race is one of the prominent features of the picture, in which Bill's horse hears the old familiar sound of the fire gong and leaves the race flat.

Gene Rogers and Peggy Pierce are also in the cast. The photography is not what is to be expected from L-Ko pictures.

"The Windward Anchor." (Laemmle. Wed., Mar. 8.)—An intense subject depicting a dream indulged in by an extravagant wife in which she sees the ends to which she might drive her hard working husband.

Lynn Reynolds wrote and produced it with the leads handled in a most pleasing manner by Myrtle Gonzalez and Frank Newburg.

"Lavina Comes Home." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., Mar. 9.)—A story concerning the life of a circus girl, how she forsook the sawdust ring for the farm and finally married.

Director William Dowlan has overused closeups until they disrupt the continuity of the picture.

Furthermore the chief emotion of the entire cast seems to be weeping and this too is tiresome and has a deadening effect on the spectator. The circus scenes are good. Thomas Jefferson, Marcia Moore, Helen Wright and Richard Sterling are the leads.

"The Dumb Bandit." (Rex. Thurs., Mar. 9.)—A most novel number with rather an unconvincing story despite its unusualness.

There seems to be an unnecessary lot of walking across scenes and repetition of action, but on the whole it will please because of its originality. Grace Cunard wrote the scenario while Francis Ford and Edna Maison are the only members of the cast.

"The Doll Doctor." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Mar. 10.)—Husband and wife have a falling out due to the former's unfounded jealousy.

A reunion occurs when he discovers he was wrong. This picture will not impress because of its shallow motivation, its weakly constructed plot and its inconsistent and poor direction.

Can a "struggling musician" wear a fur overcoat and fine afternoon clothes? Can't a man see a married woman without the husband flying into a fit? Violet Mersereau is good as the wife, but Harry Benham fails to convince as the husband. Jack Harvey directed.

"When Lizzie Disappeared." (Nestor. Fri., Mar. 10.)—All that need be said concerning this comedy is that Lee Moran is a traveling magician, while Eddie Lyons and Betty Compson are country sweethearts.

The complications arising in this creation of Al Christie's are very funny and while the plot is old some new situations give added zest. Ed Burns makes a decided hit as the magician's sleepy assistant while Ethel Lynn is also seen.

"Their Act." (Victor. Fri., Mar. 10.)—A novelty-comedy in which father is made to realize the histrionic ability of his daughter's suitor when they stage in company with another a holdup which the old man thinks is real.

Quite clever and a welcome change for the usual order of comedies. Harry Ham, Jean Taylor, Clarence Hodge and Mark Fenton are the leads.

UNIT PROGRAM

Week of March 13, 1916.

None reported for this week.

Table of Contents will hereafter be found opposite Accessory News Section Cover.

"The Quarter Breed." (Bison. Three reels. Sat., Mar. 11.)—A good western showing how a quarter breed overcomes a hopeless love and an inherent craving for drink.

There are several thrillers such as a runaway stage coach and a daring rescue, while the entire subject is constructed along interesting and convincing lines.

Leon Kent wrote and directed as well as played the title part. Others are Jack Livingston, Mina Cunard and Malcom Blevins. The setting of the western town is very good.

"His Brother's Pal." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Mar. 12.)—Not shown for review. The story deals with Dan Halliday, a headquarters man and his brother Jack, a doctor.

Jack falls in love with the daughter of a notorious adventuress and through the ingenuity of Dan the woman's past is repressed and Jack never learns the truth.

Ben Wilson, Joseph Girard and Dorothy Phillips are the principals. The scenario was by Charlotte Walton Ayres.

"Love's Spasms." (Victor. Sun., Mar. 12.)—A comedy by Samuel Greiner that is too silly to furnish any great amount of laughter.

It shows the "mushy" time indulged in by the newly wedded couple, their falling out because of the appearance of a hair on the wife's chin and the subsequent reunion at the thought of the coming baby. Harry Myers and Rosemary Theby are the leads.

Until further notice it will be impossible for MOTION PICTURE NEWS to print reviews of the educational subjects released under the Powers brand. Universal no longer exhibits these pictures at the trade showings.

JACQUES KOPFSTEIN
Director of Publicity

24th February, 1916.

Mr. Wm. A Johnston,
President, Exhibitors' Times, Inc.,
729 Seventh Avenue, New York.

My dear Sir:

I want to take this opportunity to commend the Motion Picture News on its splendid foreign circulation.

Answers to our advertisements in the News have come to us from all parts of the globe, England, Italy, France and Switzerland. This is a field we did not expect to reach thru an American trade paper.

Were our products not already disposed of for the entire world for the coming year, I am certain from the character of the replies and the nature of the correspondence, we would be in a position to conclude the sales of important territory with some of the foreign subscribers of the Motion Picture News. As it is, we have turned the correspondence over to the firm who have purchased all our foreign rights.

It is a big thing for a manufacturer who produces pictures which are sold on the states-rights plan, to find that when using an American trade paper to reach domestic exchanges and exhibitors, he is given in addition an opportunity of speaking to the foreign market.

I can readily see from the results we have obtained, why it was deemed advisable to put out a special weekly British Edition of Motion Picture News, and I trust and hope this new venture will meet with the success it merits.

With best wishes ever, I am,

Cordially yours,

jk/5 JACQUES KOPFSTEIN.

PUTTING PUNCH IN A PICTURE

Fairbanks Wins a Belt on Boxing Bout Given for the Movies.

CROWD AT RING TAKES TO ACTING

Minor Pugilist Refuses To Be Content with a Bit Despite Pleas of the Director.

By HEYWOOD BROUN.

Deep down in his heart every man is an actor. Douglas Fairbanks put the punch in a picture play at the Sharkey A. C. last night, and 800 volunteers helped him just for the fun of it.

"A Submarine Pirate" Returns.

Submerging its captive spectators in a sea of mirth and taking them down into those depths of laughter where they can only gasp for breath, "A Submarine Pirate" returns to the Knickerbocker Triangle bill this week. As has been said, this is about the thrilliest comedy and the most convulsing melodrama on the screen and is its own excuse for a repeat engagement.

About Triangle Plays

Henry Woodruff, famous as a matinee idol, will be on the Triangle bill at the Knickerbocker this week in an Ince film called "The Beckoning Flame." "The Missing Links," featuring Norma Talmadge and Robert Harron, will be the Griffith contribution, and "A Submarine Pirate," with Syd Chaplin, will be given a return showing.

Mr. Hopper a Fine Don Quixote

With nothing of the Gilbert and Sullivan lilt to aid him, but stalking silently across the motion picture screen, De Wolf Hopper demonstrated to a large audience in the Knickerbocker Theatre last evening that as a faithful interpreter of his talent the legitimate has nothing on the "movie." In fact, many who saw the Fine Arts Film Company presentation of the scenario of Cervantes' "Don Quixote," with Mr. Hopper in the t[illegible] rôle, appeared to be of opinion that [illegible] saw the we[illegible] of a dist[illegible]pled by Chris-

Another attractive feature on the Triangle programme this week is "The Desjoiler," which is a dramatically vivid cross section of one of warfare's horrors. Judging from the uniforms and the general tenor of the story portrayed the scene is laid in a section of the Balkans, where a squadron of Turkey's irregular cavalry led by a German officer strikes terror into

AERIAL STUNTS IN TRIANGLE BILL

"Dizzy Heights and Daring Hearts" Proves Exciting.

"Don Quixote," with De Wolf Hopper, is held over in the motion picture programme at the Knickerbocker Theatre this week. The story of Cervantes is excellent film material, inasmuch as it affords opportunities for gorgeous setting and rapid action. Unfortunately, the story of the crack-brained knight lacks cumulative interest. At any rate, the picture version does, and one becomes rather tired of episodes before the end of the film.

"Dizzy Heights and Daring Hearts," the Keystone feature of the week, is a marvellous stunt picture. It combines exciting and amusing features in a highly diverting manner. Airships are made to loop the loop, turn turtle, walk on their hind legs and do all the thousand and one tricks incapable of accomplishment except by the aerial fleet [illegible] Mack Sennett.

From a scenic standpoint alone this Fine Arts production is one well worth seeing. A magnificent forest fire gives the picture a spectacular interest, while the many scenes of the lovely Marie Doro taken in beautiful forest backgrounds are a treat to the eyes.

AT THE KNICKERBOCKER.

Love and war divide interest in the story of "Bullets and Brown Eyes," the new Triangle feature at the Knickerbocker Theatre. It features Bessie Barriscale and William Desmond, and gives both exceptional parts.

War makes Countess Olga (Miss Barriscale) and Prince Carl (William Desmond) enemies, but mutual attraction triumphs in the end.

By his reckless daring Prince Carl, of Friesland, wins the name of "Will o' the Wisp." He is a thorn in the side of the Grand Duke of Marstow's army, and every effort is made by that commander and his men to capture the dashing leader of hussars. The two armies are facing each other, separated only by a valley. The general commanding the army of the North sends Carl to devastate the valley. He dashes away with his command to execute the order. An aero scout ...e enemy brings information to ...ing force, who set out in pursuit.

In one respect "The Sable Lorcha" is the most interesting of the Triangle plays that has yet been seen, in that it is a marvel of the art of skilful story telling. Chester B. Clapp prepared the scenario from a novel by Horace Hazeltine. Strictly speaking, it is not a picture play at all, but an extraordinarily engrossing mystery story done on the screen. As a melodrama it would have been mediocre, but as a narrative it has all the fascination of a Conan Doyle detective story. Moreover, it has a climax which, while not as stirring as the big scene in "The Lamb," is almost as thrilling and infinitely more terrible. And to get the big thrill the producer bor-daughter's happiness.

The two Keystone comedies are warranted as sixty-minute laugh provokers. Weber and Fields buffet each other about as of yore. Sennett has provided a plot that furnishes unaccustomed thrills for the comedians and a cast that includes such well-known film funmakers as Mac Busch, Mack Swain and Chester Conklin. Swain and Conklin also appear in "Saved by Wireless," which is described as a modern miracle of highspeed action, incredible feats and marvelous photography, some of it taken from an aeroplane in full flight. "Saved by Wireless" is a secret service thriller with many comedy touches.

The star number of the bill is "The Coward," staged by Thomas H. Ince. It tells the story of a young Southerner who is afraid to go to war when his country calls him. He is really not so much afraid of war as he is afraid of fear. His father, an old colonel, played by Frank Keenan, is admirably depicted in the style for which Mr. Keenan is famous.

The hit of the picture, however, is made by Charles Ray, who plays the coward. His struggle with his fear is admirably done. His efforts to overcome his fear are plainly shown and also his relief when a greater fear, the threat of his father to shoot him, seizes him and he enlists. Once in the ranks his fear comes on him again and he deserts, his old father taking his [illegible] on the fighting line. It matters not where you or your patrons look you will find TRIANGLE PLAYS constantly before you. In the news and advertising columns of the press throughout the country TRIANGLE PLAYS are securing volumes of Publicity.

The large amount of paid advertising and the great volume of free publicity which TRIANGLE PLAYS have received during the past six months have been a big asset in building the popularity of TRIANGLE PLAYS.

TRIANGLE reading notices, TRIANGLE STAR pictures, and TRIANGLE advertising has been prominent throughout the newspapers all over the country.

Day after day the popularity of TRIANGLE PLAYS is increasing, day after day the number of TRIANGLE boosters is growing larger, and day after day the number of TRIANGLE exhibitors is getting bigger.

Almost every exhibitor knows the value of all this publicity. He knows that it means money in his pocket, and he is accepting this opportunity to increase his box office returns. If the number of TRIANGLE contracts which are being received every day is a criterion, there are many who believe that it is to their own advantage to show TRIANGLE PLAYS.

If you have not already received particulars in regard to the presentation of TRIANGLE PLAYS in your town, why not drop a line to the main office or your nearest branch.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

61—Can the ordinary 110 volt rheostat, usually furnished with a moving picture machine or other projector lamp, be used with the same results on D. C. as with A. C.?

Ans.—No, there will be a considerable difference in the results of the ampere flow at the arc with the same rheostat.

Assume that you have a non-adjustable rheostat which will allow 40 amperes at the arc on a 110 volt D. C. circuit, with a drop of 50 volts across the arc and that you have to operate with this rheostat on 110 volt A. C. lighting system.

Considering what you have been told, of which I will remind you, that the D. C. arc has a 50 volts drop, the rheostat consumes on D. C. 60 volts, whereas with the A. C. arc you require only about 35 volts, the rheostat will have to consume from 10 to 15 volts more than it did for the 40 ampere current flow that you sent through it on D. C.

The result of this additional voltage forced on the rheostat to take care of means that the amperage at the arc with A. C. will be slightly greater.

The extent of the increase in amperes at the arc depends upon the nature of the resistance material from which the rheostat is made.

Taking for granted that the rheostat is one of the ordinary grid iron or nickel steel wire type, the forcing of 10 to 15 extra volts on the rheostat which normally had a rating of 60 volt drop, calls for an increase of approximately 15 to 20 per cent. greater current flow.

In other words, the 40 ampere D. C. rheostat if it is non-adjustable would allow a current flow of about 45 to 47 amperes, which would in time overheat, and destroy the rheostat.

Modern rheostats furnished with projectors, are, however, made adjustable so that when used on A. C. additional resistance can be cut in series with the arc, keeping the amperes at the proper value, without danger of overheating and blowing of the fuses.

62—It has been stated that when a rheostat is cold it passes a greater amount of amperes than when it is hot. Is this effect of greater importance when a D. C. rheostat is used with A. C. without having previously been readjusted for A. C.?

Ans.—Yes, A D. C. rheostat will pass from 20 to 25 per cent more current when it is cold than when hot, therefore, when it is used on A. C. with an arc voltage, from 15 per cent to 20 per cent lower than with D. C., the ampere rush on A. C. will be so great that there is danger of blowing the fuses unless the carbons are immediately moved very far apart and kept apart until the rheostat becomes heated.

The wise operator knows that unless his fuses are very large he must either cut in more resistance when first starting the arc, or double the carbon separation normally maintained, for the first few minutes until the rheostat becomes heated.

Proper Standard for Music Accompaniment to Films?

By E. F. Licome, W. W. Kimball Company, Organ Makers

A Knotty Question for Solution—"Much May Be Said on Both Sides," as the Ancient Sir Roger de Coverley Remarked Some Years Back—Mr. Licome Advances Views of Interest to Musicians and Mr. Luz Makes Statements in Answer Worth Consideration of the Unbiased

WHAT is the proper standard for music used in accompaniment for pictures? How ridiculous the music is in 90 per cent. of our neighborhood theatres. Even some of the theatres employing large orchestras lose sight of the great value of proper musical accompaniment.

A standard is that which is recognized and established by persons qualified to judge as being an example for comparison.

It is hardly necessary for me to explain how a pianist or organist for a picture theatre is selected. The exhibitor asks him to play; if he selects a good melodious tune with a good swing he is thought satisfactory. Then the next question, the price. "How cheap will you work?" Now, I claim this is decidedly the wrong way to engage a musician.

Sometimes a pianist or organist plays a few tunes splendidly; but when he sits down to play a picture, it is another story. A good pianist has got to be a person of at least ordinary intelligence or you will never make a picture player out of him, and the only way you or your patrons can judge is by a two or three days' trial. Many players require the picture before them to give their best efforts.

I predict before long every feature film will have its own special music and the exhibitor will be compelled by the producing company to use this music at the performances. Some of the large companies are supplying music for their productions, but I do not know whether they compel the exhibitor to use it. (See Mr. Luz's note.)

Exhibitor Often Careless About His Music

The exhibitor frequently is decidedly careless regarding his music. Many times I have seen a good dramatic climax spoiled by the pianist playing a waltz or one step. How this would pain the producers and officials of the producing or distributing company. They all have seen it time and time again. In fact it is the customary thing. It seems they are doing all they can to improve the musical accompaniment of their pictures.

Richard A. Rowland of the Metro Corporation had occasion to make some forceful remarks after hearing some poor musical accompaniments on an organ with "Pennington's Choice." I spoke to the player a short time afterward, but I couldn't make him see his mistake.

I believe it is universally conceded that an organ is a necessary adjunct to a picture house. There are several thousand in this country and they are being added to every day.

Why is the organ becoming so popular? Because the music furnished is soothing, soft most of the time, except where it is necessary to work up climaxes when it can be made as loud as desired. When it is used with an orchestra of four men, it gives the effect of three times as many musicians in the pit.

In most of the houses of 600 or less seats, the piano is played too loudly. Get your pianist to wire down the soft pedal and you will have a better effect with your pictures.

Don't, for heaven's sake, engage a pianist or organist because he is cheap—a good player is the means of bringing many people to your box office. A bad one even more surely drives them away. Give him a two or three days' trial. After your pictures, he is the next important part of your establishment.

There are a number of talented pianists, organists and conductors who, I feel certain, would write a few articles occasionally. Why do not such men as E. F. Johnston and J. Van Cleft Cooper at the Broadway Theatre, New York City; Herbert Henderson at the Knickerbocker Theatre; Seth Bridham, G. Arthur Depew, C. A. Young, Globe Theatre, Boston; Henry G. Spiller of the Leader Theatre, Philadelphia; and Dr. Percy J. Starins, tell us how they play pictures?

EDITOR'S NOTE.—Mr. Licome's article gives us food for thought and his every point is well taken. His prediction regarding the compulsory playing of special music for special pictures has set me thinking. I should feel myself flattered if he would interest himself in a good method of getting a picture with proper musical illustration to the exhibitor.

IT is to be assumed that every exhibitor would be highly pleased with such a condition were it possible for him to use it with what musical equipment he has or can obtain.

My musical ambitions always lead me to strive for the very highest attainment in picture theatre entertainment, but knowledge of the business end as a financial institution has proven that there is a great gap between the best results possible for some and those for others.

Consequently, to fill this great gap so as to benefit the smaller exhibitor as well as the larger, has proven a great problem. That picture theatre music is making great strides of advance is a foregone conclusion.

Competitive efforts in combining musical entertainment with pictures, will naturally be solved by the employing of only capable musicians, for every exhibitor that has advanced, has done so by the survival of the fittest. In many of my past articles I have urged the musician interested in picture playing to "make hay while the sun shines," and prepare himself not for what it is today, but what it will be in the years to come.

I myself have for a long time used a method of compulsory playing of certain music to pictures, and while I have had excellent results from some, I am still not absolutely satisfied. Until musical compositions suggested to the composer by general screen action and picture theatre conditions are more extensively published, the work will remain difficult, and have a tendency for discouraging the good musician.

Different Conditions Require Different Musical Needs

One musical program may be well suited to a certain organist, one man instrument player, one man orchestra or ten to eighteen man orchestra, yet, when sent to the second theatre, it may be too easy for one, and for the other too difficult, so we come to that one great question in picture music, namely, is it good policy to destroy any musician's originality?

If certain music were made compulsory by the producing company, it would mean that they were destroying any opportunity for musical competition among the exhibitors and that could certainly not benefit the musician.

We should never lose sight of the fact that the best musical organizations of any country play a repetoire selected with a special purpose in mind.

This does not mean that they cannot play anything placed before them, but they feel they can better show their musical capabilities with this pre-prepared repetoire.

Every enthusiastic musician in the world has made through the course of his musical career a thorough study of the correct interpretation of thousands of musical compositions for concert playing.

The picture theatre has opened a new and very large field for his services. Is it then too much work for him to study the musical interpretation of thousands of musical compositions for picture playing? The most important thing at the present time to overcome in picture playing is found in the present arrangements of musical publications.

The publishers' desire that their numbers have a grandioso climax and effects which very often are detrimental to the picture screen action, while the numbers played would otherwise be very well suited.

I feel positive that any capable musician with a well selected repetoire of music, can set a better musical program for himself and the organization with which he is acquainted, than a stranger, if he is told in a proper manner what certain temperamental appeals the action suggests. Such a method certainly assures the exhibitor that his musicians will not try to play that which they are not capable of. I have personally known many good musical organizations that made very sour attempts at playing certain

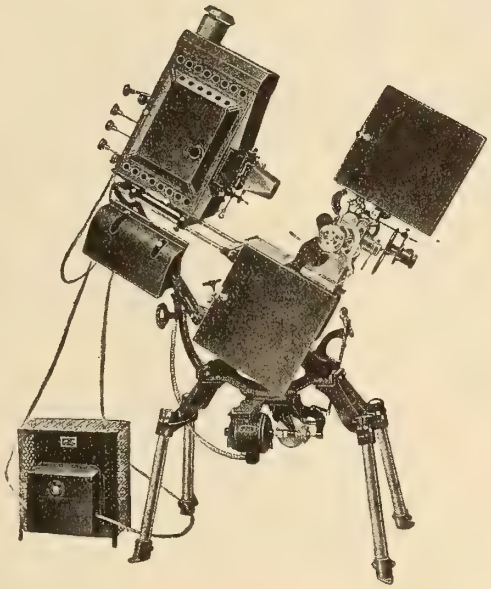
POWER'S CAMERAGRAPH



Has maintained its supremacy since the inception of the motion picture business, through sheer force of merit. In it are to be found more good points than can be discovered elsewhere, and it approaches closer to absolutely perfect projection than any other machine.

PROJECTION

Power's has developed this to the highest point of efficiency, pictures without flicker, clear and steady.

PARTS

Interchangeable, easy of access and constructed of the best material that money can buy, and all made by us, bearing our name and guarantee.

INTERMITTENT MOVEMENT

Exclusive with Power's, is many times stronger than any other make, longer period of picture on screen is obtained, films are better protected, and quicker of motion, and greater definition and clearer pictures are accomplished.

NO MORE DARK SCREENS

Power's Cameragraph is equipped with our patented loop setter device which will reset the lower loop automatically without stopping the machine.

CORRECT SETTING OF CARBONS FOR DIRECT CURRENT

C. & R., Hunter, N. D.—As we do not appear to get the necessary light from our carbons, please advise, in an illustration, the correct setting for our carbons for a D. C.

We also have trouble in getting clear pictures, as they appear to be streaky and flickery. Please advise us the way to adjust our Power's 6-A machine to overcome this.

ANSWER.—With D. C. in capacities from 35 amperes up available at the arc there should be absolutely no difficulty in securing a perfectly flat and uniformly illuminated field of light on the screen.

The setting which I recommend for D. C. is herewith illustrated in Fig. 1, and for best results I recommend cored carbon top and bottom.

If the current is not over 35 amperes a 5/8-inch carbon in top and 1/2-inch in the bottom, both cored, will give good results. For amperages ranging from 35 to 50, I recommend 7/8-inch top and from 9/16-inch to 5/8-inch cored bottom. Above 55 amperes a 7/8-inch cored top, with either 9/16-inch or 5/8-inch cored bottom, will give best results.

If the arc should show a tendency to flare forward, the remedy is to quickly move the upper carbon ahead of the lower so that the centre of the upper carbon will be about 1/8-inch ahead of the centre of the lower carbon and leave it this way until you observe that the back of the crater on the upper carbon is thoroughly heated, which is effected by the flame of the arc dividing itself so that part of it will go on the back of the upper carbon.

Then when the arc is steady, draw the upper carbon slowly away from its forward position until it is in perfect alignment with the lower carbon, and keep the carbon separation between 1/4-inch and 3/8-inch for normal currents between 35 and 50 amperes.

The correct centering of the carbons and locating of the arc relative to the condensers is thoroughly illustrated and described in July 10, 1915, issue of the Accessory News Section, under question 9, Motion Picture Projection Simplified.

Shutters like those used on Powers 6-A are illustrated and described in the Accessory News, issues July 17, 24, 31, August 7 and August 14. The streaks from them appearing on the screen following below or above the title on an otherwise properly projected picture are caused by the shutter blade covering or uncovering too late, allowing the intermittent to start the picture and to maintain it in motion while the shutter is not covering the ray of light.

This happens if the gears between the intermittent movement and the shutter shaft are worn or loose, which allows slamb or lost motion to the shutter. The remedy is readjustment of the shutter, or making the shutter blade slightly wider, or replacing the train of gears to take up for the lost motion.

IF ARC IS MAINTAINED TOO LONG POWER AND AMPERES ARE LOST

B. C., Fulton, N. Y. —I have a 35-ampere Fort Wayne A. C. to D. C. set, running with only field resistance. At present it falls below average—30 amperes at best, being all we can get, and at the arc the heated core spot on the negative carbon will jump out to the edge, and sometimes the arc will flutter rapidly as though it were low frequency A. C.

The ammeter at the same time fluctuates between 25 and 30. The commutator of the dynamo having been just recently turned down, and for a time it was better. The motor also heats extremely. It is a 3-horsepower 2-phase induction motor running at 1,800 r. p. m.

Now, what I would like to know is, what makes the motor heat and cause the generator to act at the arc in that manner? I understand we should have a continuous, steady light and be possible to overload it 4 or 5 amperes and get good results.

ANSWER.—Your Fort Wayne Motor Generator should give a perfectly steady light and current at the arc, and the upper or positive crater should maintain a steady brilliant glow, giving you a uniformly illuminated field of light on the screen.

First of all, I recommend you to use a 5/8-inch cored carbon in the upper or positive holder, and a 1/2-inch cored carbon in the lower or negative holder, because you can secure a steadier illumination with cored carbons than with one cored in top and solid in bottom.

The next suggestion will be to have you test the polarity to make sure that the upper carbon is positive. To do this, start the generator—light the arc for about 20 seconds—pull the switch.

If then the upper carbon is the hotter, your connections at the

Mr. Murphy of St. Louis is one of our converts—we let him tell his experience to you!

St. Louis, Mo., February 3rd, 1916.

Dear Sirs:

I have been running a motion picture machine for the past seven or eight years and have been using all makes of carbons, but never used any Speer carbons until a week ago. I have given them a good trial and will say that I think they are the best carbons on the market today. They give a much steadier light and are much better than any I have used.

In closing, I remain,

Yours for success and good business, carbon clamps are O. K. If, on the other hand, the lower carbon is the hotter, reverse the wires, either at the carbon clamps or at the machine switch, so that the (positive) upper carbon is sure to be the hotter.

Having made sure that your connections are right, keep the arc between ¼ inch and ⅜ inch long at the most. This will prevent your maintaining too long an arc, which would in consequence thereof make the light unsteady, and at the same time reduce the amperes.

I take for granted, of course, that your commutator has been properly turned down and that the carbon brushes make perfect contact and slide freely in the holders and that there is no sparking at the generator, because you do not complain of sparking.

By using improper carbons, other than those specified, the arc will be unstable. This will throw an intermittent varying load on the generator, and the motor will on that account work under greater strain, and this may account for the motor getting warm.

Also remember, if your arc is maintained too long—that is, over 50 volts—you are losing power and amperes, but the motor at the same time has to generate a higher voltage so that it may be overloaded.

Kindly follow the suggestions given herewith, and if you should not overcome your trouble, then write in again for further advice.

STRELINGER'S BRUSH ELECTRIC SETS GIVE COMPLETE SATISFACTION

S. & I., Millersburg, Ky.—We are thinking of installing our own electric plant in our picture house, and are writing you for your opinion of the Charles Strelinger Company's brush electric set, of Detroit, Mich., for moving picture current; while we have not decided on any particular kind, have been reading of this particular set, and it seems to be all O.K. from reading about it. Have never seen one of them in operation.

ANSWER.—Your inquiry has been carefully considered, and it affords me great pleasure in recommending in the highest terms the electric plant manufactured and sold by Chas. Strelinger Company, of Detroit, Mich., under the name of the Brush Electric Lighting Set.

I have personally handled many of these plants, and several have been exported to foreign countries, where they are working thousands of miles away from the factory, and giving the very best of satisfaction without any trouble whatsoever, and, although some of them were put out through me over four years ago, no orders for repair parts have come in, which indicates that they are giving splendid satisfaction and last a long time and give no trouble.

You can have absolute confidence in the concern you mention.

PHILADELPHIA OPERATORS, LOCAL 307, ELECT BACHE PRESIDENT AND STEVENS SECRETARY AND TREASURER

AFTER a hotly contested fight the annual election of Local 307, Motion Picture Operators Union of Philadelphia, resulted in the choice of the following officers:

President, B. F. Bache; vice-president, J. J. Stevens, Jr.; financial secretary and treasurer, John A. Harris; recording and corresponding secretary, Walter G. Murray; sergeant at arms, Abbott Oliver; delegate to Central Labor Union and Labor Trades Department, Harry Rose; business agent, Louis Krause.

Local 307 is in a flourishing condition with two hundred and twelve members to its credit.

On May 12, the association will be five years old, and is going to celebrate this happy occasion by a banquet.

Having survived several threatened disruptions, and holding, it is claimed, the present unique distinction of the only Local in the United States that is run without friction, "307" feels justified in planning the biggest kind of a time on its fifth birthday.

M. C. Higgins, of Youngstown, Ohio, assistant international president of the International Association of Theatre Stage Employees, will be the guest of honor.

The committee in charge of the banquet, William Hamilton, Edward Hilmling, Charles Smith, A. O. Kurtz, with Walter G. Murray as chairman, have several plans in view, amongst which is a biographical sketch of Philadelphia's film leaders, to be given as a souvenir at the affair.

The members, however, are working to make the ball of Local 8, I. A. T. S. E., a financial and social success. This dance will be given at Eagle's Temple on April 24. Ormi Hawley, the popular screen star, has promised to lead the march.

Local 8 is really the parent body from which the operators' association was evolved. Both locals dwell together in harmony, having their headquarters on the same floor at 1233 Vine street. The Moving Picture Operators Association of Philadelphia, an independent organization, with headquarters at 231 North Eigthth street, chose at its recent annual election these officers: President, Philip Quigley; vice-president, William Jackson; John Hughes, treasurer; Robert Froelich, financial secretary; William C. Drost, recording secretary; sergeant at arms, James Garvey; trustees, William Wells, L. Klenk, Robert Myers; house committee, Edward Abrams, Lawrence H. Barrett, James Garvey.

This association, which has been successfully organized for the past three years, gave its annual entertainment on Sunday evening, February 13, at a special hall 133 North Eighth street.

The sweethearts, wives and friends of the operators gathered in force and enjoyed to the full the excellent vaudeville, fine motion pictures and delicious refreshments provided by the management for their entertainment.

THREE THOUSAND AT BALL HELD UNDER THE AUSPICES OF NICHOLAS POWER COMPANY IN BROOKLYN

MONDAY evening, February 21, the Cameragraph Club, composed of heads of departments in the large factory of the Nicholas Power Company, manufacturers of motion picture projecting machines, made merry at their annual ball, held in Arcadia Hall, Brooklyn.

The ball was attended by over three thousand friends of the club and will long be remembered as one of the most successful affairs of the season.

Dancing commenced at an early hour, and during the intermissions a series of Vitagraph motion pictures and several acts of excellent vaudeville were shown and received with great enthusiasm.

One of the pleasing features of the evening was the singing of Marie Hauth Cordorva, Brooklyn's wonderful soprano. John E. Rogers, Al Edwards, Mildred Demonti and George Holden completed the program and were equally well received. The pictures shown were projected by a latest model Power's 6B machine, and an atmospheric screen was used through the courtesy of Mr. Schotts of that company.

The grand march, directed by Messrs. McKinnon and Milligan, was led by Nicholas Power, president of the company which bears his name, accompanied by Hannah Bird and followed by the president of the Cameragraph Club, Theodore Uhlemann and Mrs. Uhlemann.

Each lady in the march received a large bouquet of carnations, and with many spot lights focused on the marchers, a very pleasing effect was produced.

Among those present were Charles Kessel, of the New York Motion Picture Corporation; F. E. Bourne, of the Park Potter Company; F. J. Beecroft, Dramatic Mirror; George Blaisdell, Moving Picture World; Charles Condon, Motography; John Cavanaugh, Export American Industries; Frank Ortaga, Cine Mindual; Mr. Hornstein, Picture Theatre Equipment Company; John Lahoud, of Venezuela; Messrs. Edw. Earl Treasure; John Francis Skerrett, general manager; Will C. Smith, assistant general manager; William Barry, Arthur Lang, Fred. J. Bird, E. E. DeHart, Jacob Ornstein, P. J. Leoni, Joseph Cuccia, from the office of the Nicholas Power Company, and many others.

S. S. Cassard and Hector J. McKinnon are to be congratulated on the very efficient manner in which they handled the ball.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ISSUES LIST OF CONCERNS WITH PLANTS IN FRISCO

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Francisco, Feb. 24.

THE Chamber of Commerce has issued a long list of new concerns that have established plants in San Francisco during the past year, many as a direct result of the Exposition, and included are a number of film concerns.

Among the latter are the following: Atlas Educational Film Company, Commercial Educational Film Company, Commercial Film Company, K. and D. Film Company, the Movca Film Service, Inc., and the Sierra Motion Picture Mfg. Co.

The film that first made motion pictures practical remains, to-day, through its consistent excellence, a big factor in their success.

E. E. FULTON COMPANY OF CHICAGO INAUGURATES NOVEL CITY SERVICE

THE E. E. Fulton Company, of Chicago, the dealers in moving-picture supplies, has inaugurated a novel city service system that is already proving successful.

The hundreds of exhibitors in and around Chicago can now get the fastest possible delivery on rush orders, beside intelligent, personal attention from supply experts. C. H. Fulton and A. T. Crawmer are in charge of the new department.

As soon as an order is telephoned in, the "Fulco-car," shown in the accompanying illustration, is at once dispatched to the theatre, carrying the goods ordered, together with trained men to make an immediate installation. The aim has been to handle orders with the efficiency and speed of a city fire department.

THE AUTO USED BY E. E. FULTON FOR CITY DELIVERY AROUND CHICAGO

The exhibitors of the Chicago territory are much pleased with the innovation, and have complimented the enterprise of the Fulton concern.

The Columbus theatre, shown in the background, is one of the latest additions to the Ascher Brothers' string of houses.

The entire equipment of this theatre was installed by the E. E. Fulton Company. The man standing in front of the machine is C. H. Fulton, who superintended the installation, and who is the head of the city delivery department.

KLIEST BUYS THE HOWLAND, PONTIAC, MICH., AFTER LEASING THE HOUSE FOR A YEAR

E. HOWLAND has made the announcement that he had sold the Howland theatre, Pontiac, Mich., to A. Julius Kliest, who has been the lessee of the house for a year. The Howland was built in 1905 and cost approximately $60,000.

Christian W. Brandt, Detroit theatrical architect, will superintend the erection of an addition to the theatre which will cost $20,000, and work will begin on the erection of the addition at once.

The theatre proper is 70 x 140, running from west Pike street to the alley and the addition will be put on the rear of the present structure.

When completed the Howland will have a seating capacity of 1,650 and have 800 seats on the main floor.

It will be redecorated, reseated, and thoroughly renovated from foyer to stage door. The playhouse will run as usual while the addition is being built and in August the partition will be taken down and the whole house thrown into one.

It is then the seating and decorating will be done, the theatre being closed for three weeks.

Speaking of the venture A. Julius Kliest said:

"When we took over the Howland we had two projects before us. We could either take the Howland lease or build a theatre of our own on a main street site.

Realizing that with one theatre in a city of this size costing $60,-

000, another high-priced house would not pay, we determined to take a chance on the Howland."

When the Kliest interests secured the Howland it had been through the hands of a string of managers, none of whom had been able to make a success of the house.

From the moment Kliest opened the doors after thoroughly redecorating the theatre it was an unqualified success, much of which is due to the personality of the young manager.

August Julius Kliest is not yet twenty-two years old and was not of age when he assumed the managership of the Howland over a year ago. He at once recognized what Pontiac people wanted in the way of amusement and set obout to give it to them.

How well he has succeeded is marked by the purchase of the theatre and the plans already out for its enlargement making it one of the largest theatres in the state devoted to vaudeville and pictures.

The Howland is a handsome building and until the Kliests took control it was a dramatic house. It will now be equipped to play either the largest road shows or the most pretentious acts in vaudeville.

Members of the profession who have seen the plans and cuts of the new house state it will be as well equipped and as handsome a theatre as there is in the state, Detroit or Grand Rapids not excepted.

The house remains under the personal management of A. Julius Kliest, who is backed in the deal by his father, Aug. Kliest, owner of a theatre at Mt. Clemens and formerly owner of the Eagle theatre here, which is now controlled by Julius Kliest.

Other Detroit capitalists are interested in the deal, but their names are not given out in this connection.

KNICKERBOCKER, NASHVILLE, IS EQUIPPED WITH TWO EDISON-SUPER KINETOSCOPES

WASSMAN'S new theatre, the Knickerbocker, Nashville, Tenn., is equipped with two Edison-Super Kinetoscopes, the very latest motion picture projectors, costing $625 apiece, will be used in the Knickerbocker.

The machines are a radical departure from all Edison models. New principles are involved and new methods of doing all things have been brought into play.

A Kimball organ, one of the largest of its kind ever seen in Nashville, being built at a cost of twenty-five thousand dollars, will also be installed in the new theatre.

When completed the Knickerbocker will be one of the handsomest and most costly moving picture theatres in the city of Nashville.

The actual cost of this new house when completed will be eighty-five thousand dollars. The seating capacity will be 1,400. The Triangle Film Corporation productions will be shown at this house.

Facts About the Balcony in Theatre Construction

This Part of the Motion Picture House Must Be Designed to Gain Maximum Number of Seats Consistent with the Laws of Optics and Have No Undue Pitch—It Is Better to Build a Theatre with Smaller Seating Capacity and Have Every Seat Desirable

A CORRESPONDENT, an architect of lesser experience in theatre building, has written asking a word about the balcony. That part of the house seems to cause him more fear than any part of the house.

He speaks of "the position of the balcony"—whatever that might be—"how it shall be supported, the arrangement of the seating and the aisles, the front row boxes, etc."

As there can be no relation in placing of the balcony of any house other than its usual place to the rear of the house, our inquirer must refer to the position of the balcony as to section or elevation.

The balcony or balconies must be designed to gain maximum number of seats consistent with the law of optics and not undue pitch.

To exemplify. The first balcony shall project as far toward the stage and as low at the front as will be permitted for a clear line of sight of those standing in back of the last row of seats. Said line of sight might be on a plane about the line of the asbestos curtain and not less than fifteen feet high.

The second determining factor is the rear seats of the first balcony. They must be kept as low as possible, only enough to enable a clear line of sight of all balcony patrons to the foot lights of the stage. The same ideas apply to the upper balcony or gallery.

Small House with Good Seating Arrangement

The writer wishes to point out this one very important point—that it is far better to build a smaller seating capacity house and have every seat desirable than to build a larger and more costly proposition where many of the seats are as good as dead, only to pull down the entire investment, by a dead overhead charge.

The writer has in mind a theatre that has been completed but less than five years that is almost a total loss largely by poor design. The top balcony is but a step ladder. Its slope is so steep that no patron will seek it a second time.

In this instance its omission would have resulted in a great deal lower cost. The first balcony seats would have been far more desirable and the house would have been a success, for its location is good.

How has the extra balcony killed this theatre's possible use for pictures? By making the throw of the light rays too acute. The pictures resulting from its booth are distorted beyond remedy. The throw is unnecessarily long.

How shall balconies be supported? Where cost will allow steel construction, the first balcony must be designed with cantilever steel girders or trusses avoiding if possible all columns in front of the last row of seats.

Good engineering makes this feasible where there is reasonable space between the rear wall and the rear seats.

Boxes in Front Row of Balcony

The upper balcony can be likewise constructed. The less expensive way of supporting the top balcony with tie rods to the roof trusses must be avoided in good construction. These tie rods, though very thin, are obstructions to sight and their placement is poor economy.

We covered in a recent article in MOTION PICTURE NEWS about all that can be said on the question of seating, and we would refer our correspondent to that article. We would but emphasize the substantiality of the chairs.

Many authorities differ on the advisability of placing boxes to the front row of the balcony. It is found not to work to the best advantage in all houses, especially where motion pictures are shown.

The writer has, however, one good word to say for such arrangement. It keeps the cheaper crowd from the front rail where they are tempted to throw things upon the heads of those below, emulating our dear Charlie in "The Night in the Show."

Balcony boxes may be arranged in many ways. On the general slope of the balcony is the more usual and least expensive. They may be placed on a slightly lower plane with an aisle to the rear.

Such section makes the seats more reserved, which is very desirable. For picture houses, the writer cannot enthuse over balcony boxes.

PEARCE BUYS WURLITZER FOR NEW THEATRE IN CANAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS

J. EUGENE PEARCE, head of the Pearce enterprises in New Orleans, has purchased a Wurlitzer organ costing $3,500 for his new theatre in the 1000 block in Canal street.

The American Seating Company has been awarded a contract for about 400 seats. Mr. Pearce says his new house will adopt an all-feature policy.

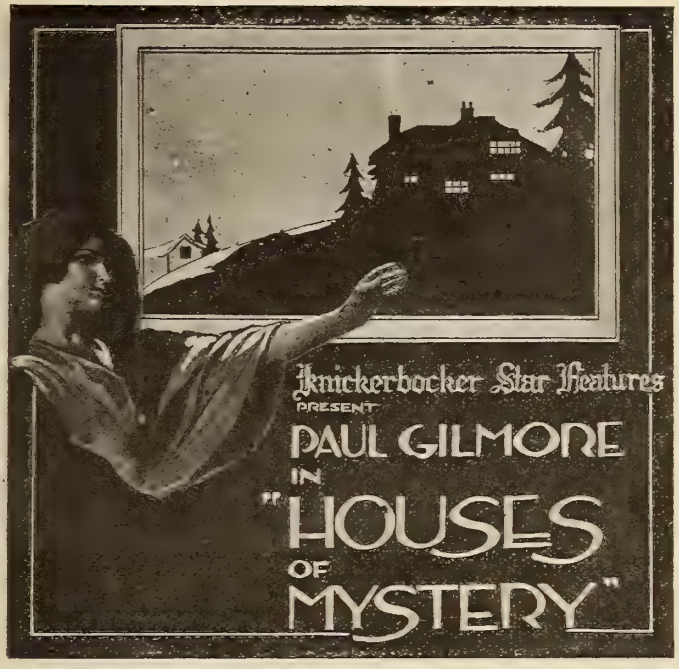
The admission will be ten cents except in a case of a special feature. The house is yet unnamed, but a naming contest will be inaugurated within a few weeks.

THIRTY-FIRST ANNUAL BENEFIT OF TORONTO THEATRICAL MECHANICAL ASSOCIATION

THE Thirty-first annual benefit of the Theatrical Mechanical Association will be held in the Royal Alexandria theatre, one of the largest and finest theatres in Toronto, on Friday afternoon, March 3.

A special orchestra, augmented by musicians from the various theatres, which in all will number fifty pieces, will provide the musical program under the leadership of James E. Blea, while special acts and films will be provided by the various companies and exchanges in town.

LEARS SUPPLY COMPANY BUYS FIXTURES FROM ST. LOUIS AMPHITHEATRE FOR OPEN MARKET



THE Jai-Ali building in St. Louis, one of the largest amphitheatres in the Middle West, is to be dismantled.

It seated over five thousand people and was built about ten years ago at a cost of $200,000. The Lears Theatre Supply Company, St. Louis, has bought the entire fixtures and will place them on the open market.

POSTER FOR "HOUSES OF MYSTERY" MADE AROUND THE THEME OF THE PLAY

IDEALISM in picture posters is still new enough and young enough to be interesting. Instead of the conventional still, as the six-sheet for the three-real feature, "Houses of Mystery," released through the General Film Company, a poster was built around the theme of the play that is both interesting and artistic.

The poster handled in deep purples and blues, with brilliantly

COLUMBIA FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY MOVES IN ADVANCE BUILDING, CLEVELAND

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, O., Feb. 26.

THE Columbia Film Manufacturing Company has just moved into the Advance building, where it will occupy half of one entire floor. This company was started by two enterprising film men, named Loew and Morgan, in a small way in the Columbia building less than two years ago.

Today it has a complete plant for taking, developing and printing motion pictures and has contracts with several small producing companies.

The Columbia company has been engaged to assemble, develop and print the Johnny and Emma Ray comedies made by the Reserve Photo Plays Company, Cleveland's first producing organization.

By the way, the first two Cleveland made comedies have been screened for the benefit of the local critics and are being sent to New York for marketing.

The equipment of the Columbia Film Manufacturing Company includes a modern projection room to which any company or exhibitor may take pictures. A small charge is made for the operator's time.

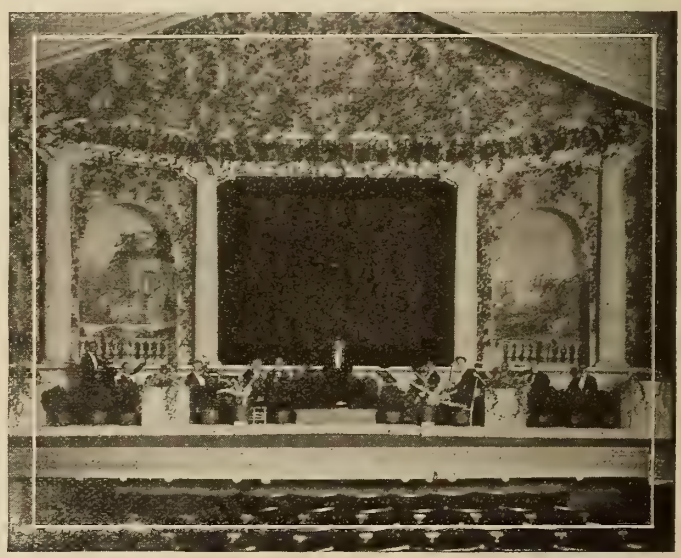
CRESCENT THEATRE, NEW ORLEANS, SETS HIGH THEATRE STANDARDS



THE Crescent theatre in New Orleans, for many years a legitimate house, was converted to screen drama and the Paramount program on January 6, after approximately $20,000 had been spent by the Paramount promoters on stage settings and other improvements to visibly mark the change and passing of the old order of things.

EXTERIOR OF THE CRESCENT THEATRE, NEW ORLEANS

On January 9, the Sunday after the opening, nearly as many people were turned away as came in, and excellent Sunday audiences have been the rule since.

Virtually the only fault the management has to find is that Orleanians are not yet accustomed to motion picture matinees. On the whole, however, Manager W. F. Bossner, exhibition specialist who went from New York and Boston to wake things up in New Orleans, is well pleased with the undertaking, and states that the Crescent and the Paramount program will be a permanent feature for the Crescent City.

STAGE SETTING OF THE CRESCENT THEATRE, NEW ORLEANS

The lighting effects and the stage settings are patterned after and are said to be a replica of the Strand theatre in New York.

Under the capable direction of Sydney J. Dinkel and an orchestra of a dozen pieces, soft music is rendered at the beginning of the performance, gradually reaching the crescendo as hundreds of twinkling incandescents bring to view an enchanted, rose and vine-covered garden.

Then there is heard distinctly the soft plash of two waterfalls, plush curtains part, and the picture is on.

Delighted audiences rarely fail to interrupt the program at this point with repeated applause.

If for but one reason alone, the excellent balance of the bill, the Crescent will be a success in New Orleans. Manager Bossner gives his audiences a comic picture, an educational or travel subject, a song, and the feature picture, usually of four or five reels. With excellent music, the average theatregoer could hardly want more.

By close observation it has been shown that audiences at the Crescent are composed of the best people in the city—those who in the old days attended regularly the high class legitimate attractions.

The announced mission of the Crescent in New Orleans, while primarily it will undoubtedly be a financial success, is to create new motion picture standards in a territory admittedly in need of such elevation, is the announcement.

And that the Crescent has succeeded in its purpose after two months of operation is shown by the fact that there has been an increased demand for pictures of the better sort all over the territory. The Crescent has not taken away any business from other houses—rather it has increased patronage.

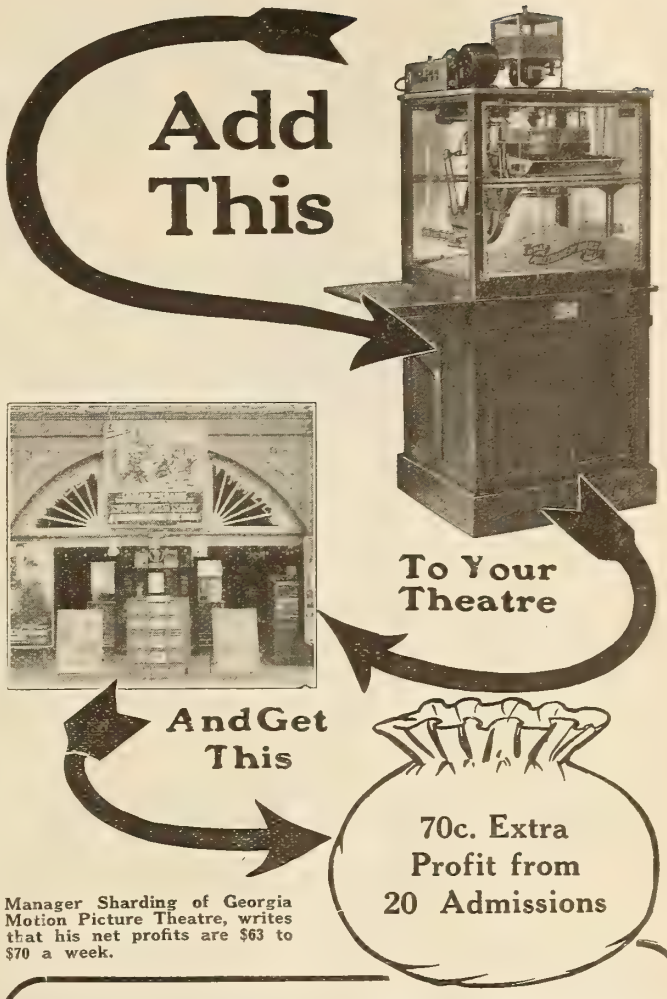
MARCH 18 IS DATE FOR UNIVERSAL BALL

TWO important changes have been announced by the committee of arrangements for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company's fourth annual ball.

The date, which was first set for March 11, has been changed to Saturday evening, March 18, and by the request of many of the Universalites, the committee has decided to have this a masked ball, which bids fair to eclipse anything of the kind held this season, each member of the Universal staff having the privilege of inviting two guests, while the company itself will have 1,500 specially invited guests.

It is expected that over three thousand persons will attend.

There is every indication that the Grand Central Palace, which has been procured for this occasion, will be packed full, and with an orchestra of 40 pieces to furnish the music, all the employees of the Universal should have one of the greatest times in their life.



Prizes will be offered for the best costumes worn by the Universalites at this ball and there promises to be great rivalry for these.

Although nearly all concerned are busily engaged in preparing their costumes, they are keeping their identity a close secret and planning for one grand surprise on the night of the big event.

There are over 400 employees of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company in the East, and as each is entitled to two guests, this will swell the attendance up to 1,200, and with the special guests of the Universal, coming from all parts of the country, the big hall will be jammed to its capacity.

THOROUGH STUDY REQUIRED FOR MUSIC PROGRAMS

By Ernst Luz

I RECEIVE many inquiries regarding the setting of music to pictures which are very difficult to answer. I can give but a few outlines which can help the beginner, and the rest must come from the best of all teachers, "Experience."

The repertoire of music you are familiar with is a very important factor in cuing pictures. The larger your repertoire, the more musical suggestive inspiration will appeal to you when you see the picture.

When you are compelled to limit your program to a small collection of music, regardless of the picture requirements, you are in reality not cuing a picture. The picture theatre of today is no longer a nickelodeon, but a theatre where audiences demand the same thrills and pathos that have been given them in two-dollar productions.

To cue pictures it is consequently necessary that you be familiar with an extensive library of music and that you continue to add to that knowledge. There are many who think it impossible to follow the picture and play good music, but in most instances you will find that these persons are those who are endeavoring to adapt the picture to their musical ability, instead of improving themselves so as to be able to adapt themselves to the picture requirements. There is a vast difference between playing music and making a noise that sounds like music.

The picture's greatest value to music lies in the fact that it requires musical research and a musical study other than the setting together of different notes or tones for the purpose of creating consecutive harmonious sounds, pleasing to the ear. It means a study of music to learn its temperamental effect upon humanity. If a dog bark or cat cry is annoying and a church bell or chime is soothing, there must be a reason, for they are both sounds equivalent to some tone, and music is in a sense nothing more than that.

Music of merit, which was never appreciated in places of public entertainment has found a home in the photoplay theatre. All music means something and carries a certain inspiration; if you desire to cue pictures properly, you must know what it means. In my early experiences in playing pictures with an orchestra, it was not uncommon for me to be told that my music was very sad or "jolly good." Those were the days when the picture theatre audience did not want deep pathos. Today if they don't get two cries, the performance is not good.

Keep looking for good music always, then study its paramount appeal, after which you will be in a position to study the cuing of pictures.

The next step is the division of the picture into incidents, not scenes. To those having some literary ability this will not be difficult.

After dividing your picture into incidents, music must be selected to give proper temperamental weight to the series of scenes as well as synchronizing with the screen action. Many of these incidents do not suggest any particular kind of music. At such times you should endeavor to improve your musical program and keep it from becoming tiresome or monotonous. If you have playing a slow, heavy number and the succeeding number is again to be slow and pathetic, use a light number between (the incident permitting of such number) and you will be making the two slow numbers doubly effective.

Heavy dramatic effects can only be obtained with music of great depth and seriousness. Such numbers as a rule are difficult to play.

To locate the heavy (Hy) or sad appeal as well as the dramatic, romantic or pathetic, you must allow yourself to be enthused, for nothing but a thorough temperamental study of music will help you to accomplish this. I have heard many obtain beautiful pathetitc effects with slow waltz movements, while others failed to do so when playing Schumann's Träumerei.

When hurried or exciting action is lengthy, I quite often suggest galops. This is done for program reasons. Galops are more musical and not as monotonous to the ear as are hurries or agitatos and are equally as exciting.

I know galops are laborious to play, but every occupation requires its labor, and in the picture theatre the audience's entertainment should be paramount.

By following the music plots in Motion Picture News and reading the music notes you will create a foundation for a future originality of your own, which every picture musician should cultivate. Save these plots and when you get the picture let me hear what success you have had with it. Criticisms are always welcome.

It is difficult to explain picture cuing in a general way, and success will only come to those who overcome one obstacle at a time. The music plots are worth saving, for unless the picture is good as also musical possibilities I do not submit the plot.

L. AND R. FEATURE OPENED IN WASHINGTON, D. C., BY ROSENBERG

THE L. and R. Feature Film Company has opened an exchange in Washington, D. C., in the Bank of Commerce Building, with M. Rosenberg as manager.

The territory covered by the office will include the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, handling state rights features.

Just at present the "Spoilers" is doing big business from that office in Washington as well as the territory generally. Though scarcely well acquainted as yet, Mr. Rosenberg finds exhibitors responsive and feels he has made a logical and favorable location.

SAN MATEO, CAL., GIVES FIGURES SHOWING MORE CLEAR DAYS FOR PICTURE WORK THAN LOS ANGELES

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Francisco, Feb. 24.

A WELL planned campaign has been inaugurated to attract moving picture producers to San Mateo, Cal., a suburb of San Francisco, and some very interesting data has been secured to illustrate some of the advantages of that city, especially from the climatic standpoint.

During 1915 San Mateo had 187 absolutely clear days, as compared with 118 in Los Angeles, while there were 58 cloudy days, as compared with 83 in the Southern city.

The average temperature for the year at San Mateo was 65.2, and that of Los Angeles 64.1 degs.

$502.26 TO THE GOOD IN 30 DAYS!

We get so many letters written in an enthusiastic vein that they are common, but a few days ago we got the biggest "gloom killer" we ever received. It was from a dealer and covered three and a half pages single spaced.

This is an actual experience but, or course, the exhibitors had many things in their favor, such as location, house capacity and an exceptionally good building—but their old screen almost put them on the "rocks."

The following will give you the drift of it:

About the first of the year a salesman for one of our eastern dealers stopped off at a busy little city and called on what he thought was the livest exhibitor in town (judging from outward appearances). This house was directed by two seemingly alert business men, but the salesman did not talk long before these men poured out their tale of woe. Both claimed that they had planned and schemed day and night trying to get the people coming, but all they ever got out of it was a mere living—THAT'S ALL.

Mr. Salesman went over every detail with them looking for flaws when he discovered the "joker"—it was one of these light eating, eyesight destroying screens. He at once suggested a Minusa Gold fibre screen, "Built by Brains," explaining that it saved 50 per cent. of the light because of its greater reflective power, and that it would NOT cause EYE STRAIN. He told them about the greater patronage they would enjoy because of the NATURAL BRILLIANT picture a "Minusa" shows, but these men were hard to convince. Finally they said, "We'll take one last chance, but we had about decided to sell out."

The famous "Minusa" was installed on the 16th day of Jan. A month later Mr. Salesman dropped in to see how things were—these near-quitters were so happy they almost kissed him. Then they displayed their bank book which showed they were $502.26 TO THE GOOD after using the "Minusa" for 30 days.

These men were like many others, exerting every effort in perfecting their "House," forgetting the most vital part of the theatre—the SCREEN.

Moral: If you would have a healthy bank balance, get a "Minusa."

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

CALIFORNIA

THE Star theatre at Taft has changed hands and is now being conducted by Claude Kennell and two associates as the Optic theatre. C. E. Ellis, one of the new owners, is the operator.

A moving picture theatre is to be opened at Wheatland in a short time under the direction of C. R. Beilby.

The Valencia theatre at San Francisco is being renovated and a pipe organ to cost in the neighborhood of $10,000 is to be installed.

Parra's theatre, Bakersfield, has been sold to Charles Freear, of that city, by M. R. Parra, who has conducted the house for the past eight years.

The York theatre at San Francisco has been reopened under the management of Hannell & Matthews as a ten-cent house.

Neptune's Gardens at Alameda are being renovated and will be opened shortly as Surf Beach, with a large list of attractions, including a moving picture theatre. C. L. Williams, a film exchange man of San Francisco, is interested in the project.

CANADA

The Theatorium theatre, Toronto, is about to change hands for the third time this season. The new manager or managers are men well known in local film circles.

Mr. Murch, of Toronto, a well-known exhibitor, has purchased the Orpheum theatre, on Queen street, from George Doods, who has owned the house for many years. Mr. Murch formerly owned the Chateau theatre of that city.

Mr. Coffey, assistant manager of the big Strand Theatre, Toronto, has enlisted for active service in one of the Canadian battalions, leaving his position vacant for the time being.

The Regal theatre, Beamsville, Ontario, has had a change of policy, which includes a switch to Universal service.

Mr. Wyatt has taken over the Monarch theatre in Toronto from Messrs. Herman, the former managers, and is continuing Universal service, with the addition of the Red Feather features.

The Grand theatre, the leading vaudeville house in Calgary, Alberta, will hereafter show moving pictures during the last half of each week, and elaborate preparations were made for the new policy.

Charles L. Cadwalader, one of the leading artists of the Lee Lash Studios in New York, was commissioned to paint a special stage setting for the house, and produced a very charming "Japanese Garden."

The orchestra, under Will H. Davis, has been enlarged by the addition of several musicians for the picture half of each week, while Orpheum vaudeville continues for the first three days, as before.

Manager R. J. Lydiatt opened with prices ranging from 10 to 25 cents. The first performance was held under the auspices of the Calgary Canadian Club, which conducted a benefit for the local Returned Soldiers' Club, an institution designed for the many veterans who are now returning home after having been wounded in the European war.

A feature is to be made of the Saturday morning "Children's Hour" at the Grand, with special pictures for the children, and a matron and young lady ushers in attendance.

As a result of the recent visit of Alexander Pantages to Vancouver, the local Pantages theatre has just been thoroughly renovated and redecorated, over a thousand dollars being spent on this work. The new mural decorations are in pale blue, cream and gold. New carpets have been put in, as well as several new stage settings and drops.

Admission to the Opera House in Courtenay, B. C., have been reduced to 15 cents, and the house is now open three nights a week.

A suburban theatre, to be erected at Main street and Broadway, is about to be commenced in Vancouver, and it is expected that the house will be ready for occupancy in about four months.

The site for the building measures 100 by 100 feet, and on this plot will be put up a building of two stories, with offices on the second floor, with stores and the theatre itself on the ground floor. The building will cost in the neighborhood of $75,000, and the theatre will have a seating capacity of about one thousand.

It will be controlled by the National Amusement Company, Ltd., and F. H. Gow is slated to be manager, with an interest in the house. Mr. Gow is at present manager of the Broadway theatre, near the location of the new building.

ILLINOIS

The Gem motion picture theatre at Centralia, owned by H. M. Ferguson, was recently damaged by fire. The blaze started in the projection room. The damage is estimated at $1,000.

Plans have been completed for a new theatre at Champaign. It is to be built by a number of business men headed by T. D. Wilson.

A. L. Thielbar, of Peoria, has assumed the management of the Dreamland motion picture theatre at Canton. He plans a number of improvements and will increase the program from three to four reels daily.

J. D. Williams, proprietor of the New Grand motion picture theatre at Panama, has just about completed his new building.

Guy Durbin, of Chambersburg, is contemplating opening a motion picture show.

Frank Jogodginski, owner of the Colonial motion picture theatre at LaSalle, contemplates improvements in the projection department of his photoplay house.

Fred. Walkau, Jr., of Bloomington, is erecting a motion picture theatre there.

INDIANA

The Princess theatre, at Mishawaka, is closed while repairs are being made.

KENTUCKY

The Novelty theatre, Fourth avenue and Green streets, Louisville, closed for a few days recently so that the interior might be renovated. It opened again Sunday, February 27, under the name of the Rex theatre. C. N. Koch remains in charge. The interior has been redecorated and the seats rearranged to allow more space in aisles and between rows to insure the comfort of patrons.

The Amazu theatre, Middlesboro, opened March 6 and the management announces that Triangle plays will be shown at matinees every Monday and Thursday at prices of five and ten cents. On the same nights, the Triangle films will be shown at the Manring theatre, under the same management as the Amazu, at ten and twenty cents. An orchestra has been engaged to accompany these films.

J. S. Purnett, proprietor of the Majestic theatre, Shelbyville, has canceled his lease of the Hartford building in which the picture show was operated, and has sold the equipment to George Mann, of Bardstown, who will open a picture show in that town.

MASSACHUSETTS

Max I. Mydans has purchased the property at 573 Massachusetts avenue, running through to Austin street, Cambridge. The present block and livery stable will be demolished to make way for a fireproof theatre which will seat 2,540, with entrances on Massachusetts avenue, Austin and Norfolk streets.

The Olympia Theatre Company, of Boston, has taken a twenty-year lease on the building and will show motion pictures in it as well as vaudeville and perhaps stock. The structure will cost $300,000.

John J. Dineen, William Donohue and Raymond Hill have opened their newly constructed picture house in South Lawrence. This is the first theatre of its kind in that place.

NEVADA

The new Hippodrome theatre at Goldfield, built by W. C. Clark, who will manage the house, was opened Saturday, February 19. The theatre has a seating capacity of approximately one thousand, and the admission fees are ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

L. A. Rhodenzier is now in active charge of both the Star theatre and White's Opera House, picture shows in Concord.

Two stores on the Monitor block, Hinsdale, have been converted into a 200-seat picture theatre, which is now in operation.

NEW YORK

The Bofan Amusement Corporation has leased a tract of ground at the northwest corner of Eighth avenue and Fortieth street, New York City, and as soon as the present lease has expired will erect a two-story theatre and store building. The lease was made for Louis W. Weill for a term of twenty-one years at an aggregate rental of $300,000.

The Martin, the fourth picture theatre to be built in Oneonta, has opened with a feature program at ten cents admission.

John J. Wittman and James J. Haggerty have sold their theatre at 945 Freeman avenue, New York City. The new owners, whose names are not known, will continue to operate the house.

OHIO

The Grand Amusement Company will shortly erect a 1,000-seat picture house in Mansfield. The property, lying on the northwest corner of Dickson avenue and Walnut street, cost the present owners close to $80,000.

Work is under way on the picture house being constructed by William Wolf on West Liberty street, Hubbard.

Elmer Bauer and Jean Lingen have reopened the Royal theatre on Water street, Sandusky. The house has been dark for some time, but two weeks' work on remodeling it has put it in fine shape.

OREGON

Plans have been prepared by W. W. Lucius for the construction of a motion picture theatre in the Alisky building, Portland. The theatre is to have a seating capacity of 350 persons. A. H. Fleischman will operate it. The work is to cost between $10,000 and $12,000.

PENNSYLVANIA

Stephen S. Kackula, 315 West Tenth street, Erie, is building a picture theatre in that city.

Julius G. Hansen is enlarging and renovating his Gem theatre at Tenth and Spring streets, Reading.

VERMONT

F. H. Dernell, formerly manager in Rutland for the Postal Telegraph-Cable Company, and for the past five years manager of the office of that company in Burlington, has purchased a moving picture theatre in Vergennes. Mr. Dernell will retain his position in Burlington.

Plans for putting the Colonial theatre building on West street, Rutland, in better condition, including a complete renovation of the place, a change in management and the reopening of the theatre as a motion picture house of the first type, have been perfected by Mrs. Caroline Fuller Nutting, part owner of the building.

THEATRES SPRING UP IN NEW ORLEANS OVER NIGHT

Special to Motion Picture News

New Orleans, Feb. 25.

EVENTS of the past week in motion picture circles in New Orleans have crowded one upon another in such rapid fashion that no one knows just when or at what hour some new program or picture house will be opened.

The latest thing in picture circles there that has set the row agog is Jack Miller's stunt of stealing thunder by building an honest-to-goodness Strand theatre in New Orleans in what will apparently be six months earlier than the Strand theatre planned for Baronne street by the Newmans and other Orleans capitalists.

Mr. Miller, manager of the Hippodrome theatre, Baronne street, has announced that he has signed a long term lease on the three-story building at 1008 Canal street, which will be the future home of his Strand theatre. It will open in two weeks' time.

The Newmans, Harold and Leonard, along with other capitalists, who include some of New Orleans' near-millionaires, thought they were going to give New Orleans its first Strand, but Mr. Miller's early bird stunt apparently has nipped their plans in the bud.

The buck has been passed to the Newmans, and it's their move next, so an interesting announcement from them is naturally coming.

The Triangle and Paramount programs still hold the centre of the screen stage in New Orleans, partly due to their newness and to the fact that both are being projected in what were two of the best-equipped legitimate houses one month ago.

Other exhibitors in the Crescent City are virtually being driven to the wall, so to speak, but are offering their patrons the very strongest features of the remaining programs.

An announcement fraught with interest to everyone in the industry in New Orleans has been made by the Triangle theatre during the past week. The admission to this house has been reduced for fourteen days from twenty-five cents to 10 cents. The regulation eight or nine-reel program is being projected at the lowered price.

Picture-wise, the town is further progressing. Besides Jack Miller's new feature house for Canal street, L. Billiet opened on February 1 a new 350-seat house at 327 St. Charles street, The College theatre. These two are the newest, but the wagering is safe that the month of February will bring out one or two more new houses, and that these will offer excellent bills in up-to-date and pleasing surroundings.

The town is picture-mad. People ponder, talk and read about motion pictures to such an extent in the Crescent City that other amusements have been laid away for the nonce, and a long nonce, it would seem from present indications.

In its motion picture department, the New Orleans Times-Picayune broke all records for length and breadth of film matter in its Sunday issue, January 30. This newspaper printed no less than two pages, sixteen columns, or in other words, 24,000 words of matter mighty interesting to its fans. The Times-Picayune Photoplay Department is now firmly established.

"The Juggernaut," a V-L-S-E release, played to capacity houses at a Canal street picture show this week on its tenth consecutive run in the Crescent City.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

musical numbers which I know were good and which no orchestra good or bad ever played poorly under proper conductorship.

Any musical score that will not allow for necessary substitution, will make picture music a hardship, unless thoroughly rehearsed or set up with such such simple music that neither musician noo audience could possibly enthuse over it.

Music Different, Temperamental Appeal the Same

I have personally played three entirely different musical programs to the same picture in the course of a fortnight, and every one was not only good music, but appropriate for the picture. Note the fact that the music was different, but the plot of cues were alike. While the music was different, its sentimental and temperamental meaning was the same.

As a matter of fact, the notes we played were different, but from a picture point of view, the music was alike.

This should prove that to destroy the original possibilities of many minds in picture music cannot materially assist. A different yet appropriate musical program might be an inducement for picture theatre patrons to see a picture a second time which I am sure would not be so were every detail of the production the same at both presentations.

We must never forget that the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, has more than one conductor for the reason that one is great in conducting Wagner, while the other is better adapted to Italian operas.

That does not mean that they are not all good musicians as well as great conductors. The same holds good among picture theatre musicians, and I am positive that good results cannot be obtained by compelling any one to do that which they are not capable of doing, or that which will destroy their musical musical enthsiasm.

The last word is picture music has not by any means been spoken as yet and while musical agitation is at the present time at its very height, I should like to hear from all our readers as to what they would consider a great help in their personal endeavors in picture music.

I am sure the producers of feature photoplays will listen to a method that could be selected after such campaigns, and do all in their power to assist the individual exhibitor in getting the best possible musical results.

NEW ALADDIN IN BALTIMORE IS SOLD FOR $10,000 BY MRS. BAMBERGER

A DEAL was closed for the purchase of the New Aladdin theatre, 930 and 932 West Baltimore street, Baltimore, on Thursday, Fabruary 24, which is rather of more than passing interest due to the high price paid for the good will of a motion picture theatre of the smaller class.

The business was purchased by the Investment Company of Maryland from Mrs. William B. Bamberger. While the consideration is withheld it is understood to have been in the neighborhood of $10,000.

The New Aladdin has 499 seats and was recently increased to its present size and entirely renovated. The place was purchased less than a year ago by Mrs. Bamberger, and through her able management of it the business has been built up from a losing proposition to a very profitable investment.

THE BROADWAY, PHILADELPHIA, GOES TO INCORPORATED COMPANY

THE Broadway, a large picture and vaudeville house at Broad street and Snyder avenue, Philadelphia, situated on a lot 157 feet wide by an irregular depth, has been conveyed by Samuel Hopkins to the Broadway Amusement Company.

The assessed value of the theatre is $160,000, and the conveyance was made subject to a mortgage of $165,000.

Every theatre owner and manager, as well as every musician, has his own idea as to just how pictures should be played and what is necessary in order to make his house popular from a musical standpoint.

Some realize that their knowledge and experience properly treated and set forth will be of value to others who may not enjoy their success, but they do not know how to make their suggestions of benefit to others.

There are also those who want help and these are perhaps the majority. Yet they do not know where or how to get this assistance.

The Music Department of the "News" is for just this purpose.

We will publish the opinions of any of our readers, or we will answer any of their questions; in fact, we are here for the express purpose of promoting better picture music.

Mr. Luz is an expert. It is because of his knowledge that several houses, which in the past have failed, are now making wonderful successes.

Why not take advantage of his knowledge?

Manufacturers of musical instruments and music accessories are also invited and requested to send in to this department news items, descriptions, etc., of anything new which is being placed upon the market and which will be of interest to motion picture theatre owners.

Music Plot for California Feature "The Unwritten Law"

By J. F. Hammond, Jr. Projection Time One Hour and Forty Minutes

THE California Motion Picture Company's feature, "The Unwritten Law," has been plotted by the producers of the film for readers of the "News." This film has not been seen and has therefore not been compared with the film by the editor. The music suggested is of the very highest class and should consequently add class to the production.

You will note that the plot has been set up in the same form as the plots appearing weekly in Motion Picture News. This picture had its first public trade showing in New York on February 24.

It's Mighty Important To You

¶ if you are a New York State exhibitor, to be in Albany on March 1st and 2nd at the state-wide Exhibitors' Rally to be held at the Hotel Ten Eyck. A censorship bill has been introduced in the N. Y. State legislature which, if it becomes a law, will certainly injure your business and probably close your house. The situation is serious. It couldn't be more so. It is up to you to act; act, if you've never done so before!

¶ As soon as you read this make arrangements to take the next train to Albany. On arriving go at once to the Hotel Ten Eyck and introduce yourself to Lee A. Ochs, President of the N. Y. State League of Exhibitors. The rally opens at 10.30 Wednesday morning, March 1st, and will be in session Wednesday and Thursday, ending with a banquet at 8 o'clock Thursday evening. It is expected that Governor Whitman will open the session. Stirring questions will be taken up in addition to censorship, such as Sunday shows, exhibitors' contracts and methods of payment, etc.

¶ It will be decidedly to your business interests to attend. Don't say you can't afford to go. Can you afford to lose your business? If you can't go on Wednesday, go on Thursday. But go!

AN ADVERTISEMENT ON V-L-S-E BY A DISINTERESTED BUSINESS INVESTIGATOR

BY HENRY HALE, JR.
THE ETHRIDGE CO., NEW YORK

I LIKE the way V-L-S-E is working with the exhibitor.

In my experience, I cannot recall any manufacturer in any line, who has had the interest of their retailers as much at heart, as has V-L-S-E.

The "Open-Booking" Plan and "Minimum and Maximum" Price Policies; the sales promotion system; the advertising and publicity departments; the methods prescribed for salesmen—all favor the exhibitor.

This company insists that an exhibitor shall make money, not simply on some of their productions, but on every one of them.

To insure this, they leave the door wide open for an exhibitor to select the pictures which are best suited to his needs.

Then they go a step further and grade the price on each picture according to its box office value to the individual exhibitor showing it.

In other words, V-L-S-E is operated from the exhibitor's viewpoint, rather than from the manufacturer's, to the end that every release of this organization shall be an absolute guarantee of profit to every exhibitor.

V. L. S. E., Inc.,

Gentlemen:

Among the many excellent features of the "Big Four" service, there is one in particular that stands out prominently, from the exhibitors' point of view;

> That is the privilege accorded the exhibitor of making his own selections as to what he wishes to run, and not tying him up to a hard and fast contract to accept so many pictures a week, regardless of the quality of the productions or their suitability to any particular exhibitor's needs.

"The Big Four," in inaugurating this "open market" policy, has done the exhibitor an inestimable service, and on account of the uniformly high quality of their productions, is setting a pace that must eventually be met by all producers.

I believe the writing on the wall points to the day of a general open market in the near future, and when that day comes, every exhibitor in the country should rise up and call the "Big Four" "blessed", as it was they who blazed the trail.

Very truly yours,

Everyone in the Film Industry is requested to help make the Motion Picture Campaign a success

APPEAL

To All Actresses and Actors in the Motion Picture Industry

The Executive Committee requests every actress and actor to contribute some money to the Motion Picture Campaign for the Actors' Fund of America—an optional sum—whatever you can afford.

Before the war the calls for help from artists in distress in different parts of the United States amounted to $14,000 a year and now about $70,000 a year is disbursed among the needy in the artistic field.

"To give first and ask explanations afterwards," is the slogan of the distinguished President, Mr. Daniel Frohman."

Charity begins at home. Let us all be as charitable as our purse will allow. The Motion Picture Campaign expects to contribute $500,000 in Fifteen Weeks and—

WE NEED YOUR HELP TO RAISE THIS AMOUNT

After having pleased the difficult public in the springtime of their lives, those who are going down the other side of the hill—broken, helpless and alone—need your help!! Look into your own kind hearts and you cannot resist the call for help. What greater obligation and what greater pleasure can there be than to sustain those whose misfortunes tug at our heartstrings?

With the million dollars necessary to endow this fund and the Actors' Home on Staten Island annual collections are ended. The Motion Picture Industry will give $500,000, with your kindly assistance.

GIVE! GIVE NOW ! !

Please hand your donation to the cashier at your studio.
All contributions will be sent to

The English Situation

ARE there any American manufacturers or exporters who believe that the threatened movement in Great Britain to exclude from the market all American films will actually go into effect?

We doubt it very much. If there be any "nerves" over the situation we strongly recommend the possessor of them to read carefully the calm, intelligent editorials of the British Trade press.

Then to read and analyze—as practical film men—the outrageous buncombe of the sole agitator of the embargo, the Northcliffe daily press.

AND in addition, if further insight into the Northcliffe policy of journalism is necessary, we recommend a play now running in New York called "The Earth" which gives a very clear and honest exposition of the editorial methods of newspapers which through steam roller methods seek to mould public opinion—as they would like to have it—but never to reflect it—as it really is.

As The Cinema aptly says: "The people who read the Northcliffe papers read nothing else, otherwise they could not continue to read the Northcliffe papers."

Just how did the anti-American film movement originate? The Kinematograph gives this simple explanation:

"A STATEMENT was made at Leeds from which it has been suggested that the Government has under consideration the question of stopping the importation of films into this country until the cessation of the war.

"Lord Devonport, in a recent speech, spoke of imported films as "non-essentials," the value of which he declared amounted in twelve months to 2,152,000 pounds.

"On the strength of these two statements the spark was fanned with assiduity by the ha' penny press until it burst into flame."

That is all, and presto! Parliament and public are—according to the ha'penny press—solemnly agreed against the importation of American films.

KNOWING something of this sort of journalism, and we have had it plentifully in the United States, we can almost picture the editorial seance which started the whole serious agitation.

"We are," announces the publishing mogul, after a moment's thought, "we are against the importation of American film. . . . Start a big campaign. . . . Announce that we will not accept American film advertising. . . . Assign James Jones and Harold Smith to an investigation. . . . Work in the German names of American manufacturers to prove that the money goes to Germany. . . . Have letters written from the outraged public, etc., etc."

AND so the campaign, reflecting public opinion, and actually digging into the vitals of a great industry and an almost universal public entertainment, is full on.

The publishing mogul, of course, is thinking only of circulation. He knows all about circulation. Of the rudiments of the film industry he knows nothing, nor do his editors, nor any of his reporters. James Jones and Harold Smith learn all about it in twenty-four hours or less, and tell the public what they know.

So a state of public opinion is created over night based upon nothing at all.

EDITOR ATKINSON, who has given a very able presentment of the situation in the last several issues of The Cinema, sums up in these words: "Our own opinion is . . . that any such measure as the prohibition of imported films is, as yet, a remote contingency."

The Exhibitors' Association of Great Britain, if we may assume permission to quote from its announcement published exclusively in The Cinema, says that "the business of the exhibitor would be seriously jeopardized were it made entirely dependent upon British films," the actual supply of which "is ludicrously inadequate," and "therefore regards the suggested stoppage of film imports as a very serious menace to an amusement which, week by week, is witnessed by from fifteen to eighteen million people, for the most part of the industrial classes."

TAKING a distant view of the situation, a view uninfluenced by war conditions, which have our deepest sympathy and but our slight conception, a view, however, perhaps all the clearer for its detachment, we doubt exceedingly if "from fifteen to eighteen million people, for the most part of the industrial classes," will be robbed of their daily entertainment at the wish of the Northcliffe press.

It seems strange that a medium of expression with all the circulation of the press should be so hampered by the press. But this paradox will endure, in Great Britain and in the United States; the motion picture will continue to be the football of the politician and a hostile press until one thing is accomplished—until all branches of the industry are unified in one organization, and this one organization utilizes the screen to the full limit of its tremendous power—namely, to tell the public about every wrong done to the motion picture and to the public through the picture.

Vol. XIII. March 18, 1916. No. 11

In the United States we have the great menace of censorship, which will also mean a stoppage of films, and we need unified organization quite as much as it is needed in Great Britain. This and this alone will kill censorship.

William A. Johnston.

Individual Communities vs. Individual Human Beings

ONCE again we have it demonstrated to us that the objections the press of the country is raising to censorship is no mere spasmodic outburst from an unusually alert newspaper here and there, but a general awakening of every member of the Fourth Estate to the significance and the ultimate consequence of censorship.

This time it is the Newark (N. J.) Star which voices its opposition in the following straight-from-the-shoulder terms:

"A censorship is ridiculous and nowhere more so than in motion pictures. It means that a half dozen people appointed by an executive that may or may not know the difference between a sonata and scenario, shall dictate what is art, literature, drama, news, morality, to perhaps a hundred million of people.

"It means that the master minds who are writing the scenarios and the equally brilliant men who are directing and producing the plays must dwarf the products of their genius to the mental stature of a handful of political appointees who earn their salaries by meddling with that which, in all probability, they do not understand.

It means that genius, if it expresses itself at all, must do so in conformity with the orders of paid servants of the administration in power."

* * *

"THE photo-play is literature. It speaks to the eye in symbols, as does the book and newspaper, and so clearly that the most illiterate may catch its meaning. It tells the current events of the day. It depicts the fundamental facts in history, in science, in religion.

"It has its place in the church, the schoolroom, the home. It is a factor in our educational scheme.

"Is there a censorship for books, for periodicals, for newspapers? Is such a contrivance ever dreamed of? Would not an attempt to create it rouse horrified protest from ocean to ocean? Why then impose it on the motion picture which sins no more against the proprieties than other forms of literature?

"Censorship is repugnant to American ideals. It is contrary at least to the spirit of the Constitution.

"The entire matter may be safely left to the conscience and good taste of the individual community, which very justly resents meddling with its prerogatives."

"LEFT to the taste of the individual community, which justly resents meddling with its prerogatives."

There is revealed the whole basic absurdity, on the practical side, of censorship.

Federal censorship will be only a spur to the formation of State censorship boards, because "the individual community" resents "meddling with its prerogatives."

When State censorship is broached, such "individual communities" as Newark, N. J., "resent meddling with their prerogatives."

And if you put local censorship into force into every city and town in the United States, you will presently see the different localities of the larger cities, at least,—Brooklyn and the Bronx, in Greater New York, for instance,—resenting as "individual communities," meddling with their "just prerogatives."

* * *

"JUST prerogatives"—to do what?

Why, to decide, for themselves, what they shall see and what they shall not see.

And why do they insist upon deciding for themselves this matter? Because, in the absence of any fixed or fixable standards, they consider their opinion as good as that of the next community.

Which brings us to the right of every individual human being, as well as every individual community, to decide the same thing for himself—to "resent meddling with his just prerogatives."

And away, in a puff or smoke, go all your fine censorship theories.

ASK yourself—and answer for yourself the question—why will the people of the United States let any body of men set up standards for them regarding food, sanitation, drugs, the use of firearms, and a score of other things, but reserve for themselves the right to fix their own standards of conduct, of thought, of recreation and entertainment?

In the answer lies the most effective answer to censorship.

"One Touch of Nature"

THE introduction of little touches of nature as relief in a picture whose tone is wholly serious seems an achievement beyond the ability of most directors. Yet these same touches—the face of a child, for instance—increase tremendously the sympathy of the spectator for the characters and the plot.

In the motion picture there is no excuse for drabness. The camera is capable of too great possibilities to waste it on scenes which move on a dead level. We have seen a lot of pictures which could have been redeemed if, at the right moment, a breath of fresh air had been brought in by flashing a touch of Nature.

Seat Tax in Cleveland Defeated by League Efforts

Proposal from City Councilman Meyers for an Annual License of Three Dollars on Every Three Hundred Seats Will Not Be Another Nightmare Oppression for Exhibitors—Pay-in-Advance Plan for Theatre Managers, Formulated by Exchanges, Continues to Stir Film Circles

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, O., March 5.

THE proposal to tax Cleveland motion picture theatres on a seating capacity scale has been defeated. It is the first important victory against adverse legislation gained by the comparatively new Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

Attorney Ben J. Sawyer, president of the Cleveland branch of the state organization, congratulated members at last Tuesday's meeting on the complete success that had attended their opposition.

"This one victory has more than paid the dues of every member of the league," he said. "The fact that non-members benefit equally with the members does not trouble us. It ought to do us good.

"It ought to convince every exhibitor not only in Cleveland, but also throughout the state of the value of organization. It will show non-members that we are alive to the interests of the industry and that when exhibitors stick together they can accomplish something.

"For their own protection, if not from a feeling of gratitude, those exhibitors who have held aloof, should now see the advisability of becoming affiliated with the league."

Three Dollars for 100 Seats

The tax or license proposal was submitted to the city council by Councilman Meyers. He proposed that all motion picture theatre lessees should pay an annual license on the basis of three dollars for every one hundred seats, the revenue from such license to be devoted to the payment of the salary of an inspector of motion picture theatres. He gave "special service" as an excuse for his proposal.

The Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League took action immediately the new license was suggested. The executive committee attended before the special committee appointed by the city council to consider the matter and demanded proof of the "special service" and of the necessity for the inspector.

Attorney Ben J. Sawyer and C. A. McGown were the spokesmen for the exhibitors, and they made out so good a case against the proposal that the committee reported to the city council against it.

The matter came before the city council on Monday night. After receiving the adverse report of the committee, the council tabled the proposal of Councilman Meyers.

At Tuesday's meeting of the Northeastern Ohio Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, Manager C. M. Christenson of the Mutual Film Corporation complained that two other exchanges, parties to the recently approved "payment in advance" agreement, under which credit is extended to members of the league, were not living up fully to the agreement.

Mr. Christenson charged that two exchanges were extending credit to non-members of the league in violation of the contract.

Secretary W. H. Horsey maintained that, so long as the exchanges gave credit to members of the league, the league could not control their actions in regard to non-members.

Privilege Only for "O.K.'d" Members

Attorney Ben J. Sawyer and other members declared that the understanding that the privilege was to apply only to members of the league in good standing was the only reason for the adoption of the contract by the league.

"If it applies to all, irrespective of whether they are members of the league or not, we have gained nothing at all," Attorney Ernest Schwartz said.

C. A. McGowan said it was clear in the mind of every member of the league that the contract was drawn up with the object of the league and the exchanges being mutually helpful to each other.

He maintained that if the two exchanges did not intend to be bound by the terms and spirit of the contract they should not have permitted their names to be used in it.

It was unanimously decided to refer the matter to the exchange committee.

Attorney Sawyer foreshadowed that the time is not far distant when the league will have to consider and take action upon what he believed to be the three principal causes of wastage in the business of the exchanges—non-payment of accounts, exchange paper and burned or destroyed film.

"If we can get an agreement or understanding with the exchangemen, which will enable them to reduce these three chief causes of waste, it will help materially in time to stabilize the industry and will be for the good of both exchanges and the exhibitors.

"To a large extent, we have dealt with the first element of waste, the non-payment of accounts, but the other matters will have to receive our earnest attention at some future time," he said.

It was decided to invite the Rev. Hugh R. Birney, a Cleveland minister who devotes a good deal of attention to public matters, to address an open meeting of the exhibitors at headquarters, Republic building, Cleveland, at 2 p. m. Tuesday, March 7.

President Sawyer said they were on the right lines when they invited public men to meet and confer with them on the business of the exhibitor. Rev. Birney, he said, although an outspoken man, was also broadminded.

He thought it the duty of exhibitors to have such a man with them so that he might see the type of men engaged in the motion picture industry and in order that he might better understand their purposes and the difficulties of their business.

It was also decided to invite Attorney A. E. Bernstein, candidate for public prosecutor, to address the same meeting.

Attorney Sawyer said motion picture men had a lot of friends among the judges of Cleveland, and it was very much to their advantage to have friends among the public prosecutors. "The best way to make friends is to have officials among us and let them learn something of our business," Mr. Sawyer said.

Maryland Censor Measure Is Still in Committee

Bill Is Held Up Until Members of Legislature Appointed at Request of Delegate Wilkinson to Investigate Rumor of Money Collected to Influence Votes, Make Report

Special to Motion Picture News

Baltimore, Md., March 5.

CONTRARY to expectation, the Maryland censorship bill, now pending in Maryland Legislature at Annapolis, Md., has not yet been reported by the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Delegates to which committee the bill was referred when introduced several weeks ago.

It had been expected that after Delegate Lloyd Wilkinson announced before the House several weeks ago that he had heard of a rumor that a sum of money had been collected to be spent in having the bill killed, that the bill would be reported out of the committee.

Mr. Wilkinson said that his name had been mentioned in connection with this rumor and asked the speaker to appoint a committee to investigate the report.

This move was made to clear beyond any doubt Mr. Wilkinson's name as well as to uphold the official dignity of the House.

It is now understood that the bill is being withheld until after the investigation committee has made its report, after which the Ways and Means Committee will take action on the matter.

The Baltimore motion picture exhibitors are watching the progress of the discussion on the bill very carefully and are daily feeling more optimistic of the ultimate defeat of the measure.

Guy L. Wonders, president of the Maryland branch, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, was in Annapolis on Thursday, March 2, together with Thomas D. Goldberg, chairman of the executive committee of the exhibitors' organization.

It is understood that the visit was for the purpose of ascertaining whether any new phases have developed in the feeling of the members of the House toward the bill.

Selig Polyscope Studios in Chicago Opened on 6th

Plant After a Shut-Down of Several Months Becomes a Scene of Activity with Production of "The Crisis," Under Colin Campbell

DIRECTOR COLIN CAMPBELL, THE SELIG CHICAGO STUDIO, AND THOMAS SANTSCHI

AFTER being closed for several months because of Winter weather, the Selig Polyscope studios in Chicago were opened on Monday, March 6 and there are scenes of great activity at the big Chicago plant.

Colin Campbell, dean of the Selig corps of directors, has been transferred from the Selig Los Angeles studios to the Chicago studios and has commenced active production of the Selig spectacular drama, "The Crisis."

"The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-Do-Well," and other Selig plays will be outdone, according to the plans formulated by Mr. Selig, who is devoting much of his personal attention to the details of production of "The Crisis."

Bessie Eyton, Thomas Santschi, Eugenie Besserer and other Selig stars arrived from Los Angeles the week of February 28 and were joined by several distinguished New York artists. A large stock company was previously held in readiness and active work has started.

Colin Campbell is the director who produced "The Spoilers," "The Ne-er-Do-Well," and "Thou Shalt Not Covet," and it can be said that the best talent available has been secured to make "The Crisis" the very last word in massive productions.

Three cars loaded with special properties, costumes, armament peculiar to the days of '61, arrived at the Chicago studios last week and a large force of scenic artists have been working for weeks on interior sets.

Thousands of supernumeraries have been engaged to work in spectacular scenes called for in Winston Churchill's novel.

The Chicago newspapers have made much of the fact that this is the first visit ever paid by Miss Eyton, a motion picture star of international renown, to Chicago.

Miss Eyton, previous to this visit to Chicago, never placed her dainty foot outside the confines of California. She was given a cordial reception by her Chicago friends and admirers.

It was seven long years ago that Thomas Santschi left Chicago with a pioneer company of Selig players for the Pacific Coast.

Since that time he has never returned to Chicago, the scene of his initial motion picture triumphs, until he arrived to enact the leading role of Stephen Brice in "The Crisis."

Eugenie Besserer owns a pretty home in Los Angeles and was loath to leave that home, but she cheerfully answered to the call of duty and will enact an important role in the forthcoming Selig drama.

Miss Eyton, while in the spoken drama, supported Wilton Lackeye, McKee Rankin, Margaret Anglin, Frank Keenan and others, and once held the title of the champion lady fencer of the world.

These and other stars have been overwhelmed with invitations to receptions and card parties, for their Chicago friends seem determined to make their sojourn in Chicago a most happy one.

Mr. Selig expects to escort his players to St. Louis, Vicksburg, Miss., and other localities to film scenes called for in "The Crisis."

In St. Louis the court house, the arsenal and the old slave pen will be filmed and the old battle grounds at Vicksburg will also be utilized.

The Vicksburg Chamber of Commerce has extended a sincere invitation to Mr. Selig to take advantage of all localities wished for. The entire summer months will probably be utilized in the work of producing the Winston Churchill novel.

NORTHRUP, FORMER LEAD FOR SOTHERN, TO APPEAR WITH STAR, FOR "V"

When E. H. Sothern, the foremost dramatic star of the American stage, begins work at the Vitagraph company in a series of feature films, he will be re-associated with one of his former leading men, Harry Stobo Northrup.

Northrup was Sothern's leading heavy man in "The King's Musketeers," "Song of the Sword" and "The Sunken Bell." In case the Vitagraph decides to include these plays in the pictures in which Sothern will appear, Northrup will appear in his original roles.

Northrup's latest work has been in "Husks," "My Lady's Slipper," "The Secret Seven," and he is now working at Port Henry, New York, in a feature directed by William Humphrey. He is known for his effective portrayals in "The Christian" and "413."

MORE THAN 10,000 PEOPLE IN "MARY PAGE" SCENES

Before the completion of the fifteenth episode of "The Strange Case of Mary Page," the Essanay series in which Henry Walthall and Edna Mayo are costarred, more than 10,000 persons will have appeared in the series.

In several big mob scenes, theatre and cabaret scenes the total number of extra people employed has been very large.

Gasnier Launches Astra, Releasing Through Pathé

Donald Mackenzie Will Direct Grace Darmond, Ralph Kellard, Leon Bary, Leslie King and Hallan Mostyn in Serial for the Company, Capitalized at $50,000

LOUIS J. GASNIER, formerly vice-president and general manager of Pathé, has launched a new producing corporation which will release through that company.

The company has been incorporated under the laws of the state of New York with the title of the Astra Film Corporation. It is a close corporation with a capital of $50,000. Mr. Gasnier is president and general manager; George Baker, well known in Jersey City, is vice-president, and George B. Seitz secretary.

The board of directors is comprised of the above with the addition of Donald Mackenzie and George Fitzmaurice. Messrs. Mackenzie and Fitzmaurice are the well known producers. Ralph Navarro is assistant manager.

The new company has entered into a contract to release through the Pathé Exchange exclusively, and has leased a large part of the Pathé studios in Jersey City. Work will be started at once on a serial with Grace Darmond, Ralph Kellard, Leon Bary, Leslie King and Hallan Mostyn in the cast.

Donald Mackenzie, who with Mr. Gasnier will direct the serial, has left with a company of thirty-five players, including Mr. Kellard and Mr. Bary, for Cuba, where many scenes will be taken.

In addition to the players three cameramen were taken along and a force of mechanics. A stopover will be made in Key West and some scenes taken there.

While on the boat Donald Mackenzie will put on a comedy in which he will play the leading part. This comedy will be the first instance in which Mr. Mackenzie has appeared in a picture in two years, his last role having been that of the famous pirate in "The Perils of Pauline."

The company will also utilize the natural scenery of the South to make some interesting scenic and educational pictures.

COURTLEIGH, STAR IN BROADWAY HIT, HAS STELLAR ROLE IN A CLARIDGE

William Courtleigh, who is starring in the current Lyceum theatre, New York, success, "The Heart of Wetona," is the star in "The Birth of Character," the Claridge Films, Inc., production.

This picture is now being released on the open market as a state rights feature.

Porter Back from Investigation in South America

Special Representative of Famous Players and Lasky Companies Spent Four Months Looking Over Field—Majority of Pictures Shown in Cities Below Equator Imported from Europe—His Missionary Work May Lead to Larger Export of Better Grade Film Made in the United States

WHEN E. M. Porter, of the Famous Players Film Company, arrived in New York on the steamer Byron on Sunday last, he had completed a four months' journey through South America as the special representative of the Famous Players and of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

The popularity abroad of Famous Players and Lasky stars and productions, and the fact that they are well known in Europe, South Africa and Australia, led the producers to combine in seeking the only rich field which has remained, to a great extent, untouched by American film men.

The films produced by both of these organizations are released in England—which, under normal conditions, includes all Europe—by the Famous Players Film Company, Ltd., and in Canada by the Famous Players Film Service, Ltd., the Paramount Pictures Corporation being the distributors for the United States.

Investigation of film conditions in South America showed that the large majority of motion picture subjects now being exhibited in the principal cities were imported from Europe and that only a few inferior films were being exported by American picture men.

Accordingly it was decided by Famous Players and Lasky to send a special representative direct to South America.

Mr. Porter states that the American producer has a great many ill-founded illusions concerning the film conditions in South America which must be eliminated before he can adequately cope with the situation there.

Theatres Compare Favorably with Ours

"During the course of my stay in South America I visited most of the principal cities on the Atlantic Coast," said Mr. Porter in discussing his trip, "including Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Aires, Santos, Sao Paulo, Montevideo, Bahia and Rosario.

"I can safely say that the average motion picture theatre in these cities compares very favorably with the houses in the United States.

"One of the peculiar things about Argentina is the fact that there are more 'cinema bars' than theatres. These 'bars' are cafes in which films are exhibited, and these replace the usual theatre in many towns, outside of Buenos Aires especially.

"Another peculiar Argentina custom consists in dividing the performances into four sections, each running an hour. When you purchase your ticket you state whether it is for the four sections, or if you desire simply to drop into the theatre for an hour, you buy a ticket for one section.

"Each of these sections consumes about one hour's time. But the performance seems longer than that because the managers there divide a reel which we ordinarily term a 'single reel' into three parts.

"The lights are flashed up for an instant, and the spectator has the unconscious impression that the performance is longer than is really the case.

"This attempt to create the impression of greater length films proves conclusively that the time is ripe for the exploitation of four- and five-reel features.

During the course of his study of motion picture conditions in South America, Mr. Porter took the occasion to introduce several Famous Players and Lasky productions to the theatre managers.

Paramount Pictures Well Received

"I took Mary Pickford in 'Tess of the Storm Country,' Geraldine Farrar in 'Carmen,' Pauline Frederick in 'Zaza,' Blanche Sweet in 'Secret Orchard,' William Farnum in 'The Sign of the Cross,' and Marie Doro in 'The White Pearl.'

"These pictures were all wonderfully well received, and in many instances I was told by various individuals that they had no idea that the American producers were turning out pictures of this high grade.

"It later developed that the exporters of the foreign-made films which now practically monopolize the South American market have taken great pains to give this impression concerning American films.

"One of the most interesting exhibitions which I held was that in the New theatre in Buenos Aires.

"Arrangements were made to hold the entertainment in the afternoon, and invitations were especially issued to the officials of the city, the most important exhibitors, and members of the press. An orchestra of eighteen pieces was engaged to play for the performance.

"As everyone knows who is at all familiar with life in Buenos Aires, society there must have its tea at exactly five o'clock. Nothing is permitted to interfere.

"I believe that if the city were burning down, society would repair to the big hotels which were not actually burning in order to have its tea exactly at five o'clock.

"I therefore planned to have the performance over by five, but various things interfered, and there was still another entire picture to be run at five.

Enthusiasm Displayed by Guests

"The greatest enthusiasm had been manifested by my guests, among whom were the mayor of the city and at least fifty persons who were prominent in society, but I was thoroughly prepared to have them depart at the customary hour. But not one of them stirred! Every person in the theatre remained until six-thirty—a fact which the manager declared to be even greater proof of their enjoyment than the applause with which they received the films.

"Of course, Buenos Aires is celebrated as one of the greatest operatic centers of the world, where all the internationally famous opera singers appear.

"It is here that Geraldine Farrar has scored one of the most distinguished successes of her phenomenal stage career. Particularly did she triumph in the operas 'Carmen' and 'Madame Butterfly.'

"It was natural then that Buenos Aires should have been delighted with the Lasky adaptation of 'Carmen' in which the star repeated the triumph which she had previously scored in the opera itself .

"When it was learned that the Famous Players had made a photoplay adaptation of 'Butterfly,' with Mary Pickford in the title role, there were many protests because the film had not been included in my list."

Though he was not yet ready to discuss the business details of his trip and the resulting arrangements, Mr. Porter declared that he considered the journey an unconditional success and that the information which he was able to gain at first hand was far more valuable than that which he had received from any sources before his departure.

Hutchinson Buys Rights to "Happy Family" Series

Stories Are Said to Be Exceptionally Adaptable to Film Presentation—"Curlew Corliss," First Subject, Will Be Released Through Mutual on March 14

PRESIDENT SAMUEL S. HUTCHINSON, of the American Film Company, Inc., has obtained the film rights to the famous "Happy Family" stories.

The tales are from the pen of B. M. Bower and are declared to be exceptionally adaptable to film presentation.

"Curlew Corliss," the first of the "Happy Family" series, will be released in the Mutual service on March 14, as a three-reel American Mustang star feature.

Art Acord, the famous Buck Parvin of the films; Nita Davis, a new American star; Lawrence Ross Peyton, Dixie Stratton and a host of other American favorites will appear in "Curlew Corliss" and in the other "Happy Family" productions which the American will film during the months to come.

Joe Massey, who established a reputation as a comedian in his role of the property man in the "Buck Parvin" series, is cast in an amusing character part in "Curlew Corliss."

William Bertram will direct the production of this new series.

JERSEY TOWN CANNOT INTERFERE WITH "NATION" SHOWING

Following his ruling in other cases, Vice-Chancellor Howell, of Newark, N. J., has restrained the town of Morristown, through any of its officials, from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation," which has been advertised to be shown at the Park theatre of that place next week.

BURTON KING JOINS METRO AND BEGINS ON "HEARTS AFLAME"

Burton King, one of the best-known directors of motion pictures in the country, has joined the Metro staff. He has begun work on his first production, "Hearts Aflame," in which Clifford Bruce is starred and Dorothy Green is featured. This production is being made for Metro by the Popular Plays and Players.

Mr. King has been in the theatrical business practically all his life. When he was fifteen years old he joined a repertoire company, playing small parts.

He enjoyed a successful career upon the speaking stage, and because of his type and dramatic gifts he was offered an attractive engagement in motion pictures.

He acted before the camera for nearly a year under the direction of Thomas H. Ince, under whose schooling he became a director.

For nine months following his debut as a director he was associated with Mr. Ince, making a great number of two- and three-reel features.

Afterward, Mr. King went to the Western Vitagraph company, then the Selig Polyscope, Universal, Equitable and Famous Players. He has had a wide experience with many kinds of productions and with many of the most famous players of the screen.

Among some of Mr. King's recent features were "Man and His Angel," with Jane Grey; "The Reapers," with John Mason; and "Glory," for Kolb and Dill.

Mr. King will follow "Hearts Aflame" with another five-part Metro play in which Mr. Bruce will be starred.

MERSEREAU AND GARWOOD CO-STARS FOR UNIVERSAL

Manager Julius Stern has arranged for a joint starring engagement of Violet Mersereau and William Garwood at Universal Heights.

It will only be operative for one or two pictures, when the individual featuring of the stars will be resumed. The make-up of Mr. Garwood's individual company has not been completed, and Manager Stern declared for the joint engagement until it was.

So Miss Mersereau and Mr. Garwood have started "Some Leap," under the latter's direction, at the big Eastern studio. It is a story of ticklish situations, one of which brings Mr. Garwood into his room at night to find Miss Mersereau occupying his bed.

Denver Screen Club Elects Nolan President

Rand Is Made Vice-President and on the Board of Directors Are Hagen, Huffman, Killman and Quine—Organization Saves Exhibitors from Unjust Taxation

Special to Motion Picture News

Denver, March 3.

THE Screen Club, of Denver, recently organized, has elected Harry T. Nolan, of the Swanson-Nolan Supply Company, president; and Walter S. Rand, manager of the Triangle exchange, of Denver, vice-president.

The board of directors are:

Al Hagen, Iris theatre; H. E. Huffman, Bide-a-Wee theatre; Geo. Killam, manager, York theatre; and H. P. Quine, Bronx theatre; all Denver exhibitors.

Other officers are:

Frank Tammen, Empress theatre, Colorado Springs; Edward Anderson, Grand Opera House, Pueblo; F. H Fairchild, Pueblo; G. L. Walker, Grand Junction; Ward E. Scott, manager of the Mutual exchange, of Denver; W. H. Cree, manager General Film exchange, Denver; H. H. Buckwalter, of the Kleine-Edison; W. S. Rand, manager Triangle; and H. T. Nolan, manager Swanson-Nolan Supply Co., Denver.

The members appointed to draw up the constitution and bylaws are:

William E. Foley, H. H. Buckwalter, and H. E. Huffman.

Mr. Foley is a Denver attorney and has given his service to the club.

The organization comes in the nick of time to save the exhibitors and exchanges in this territory unjust taxation. For instance, an attempt was made to increase the licenses of theatres, and the association formed by the exhibitors in a small way successfully won out.

All due credit must be given to H. T. Nolan, as the leader of this organization.

The charter members are:

H. T. Nolan, Denver; W. H. Swanson, New York; Carl Stearn, manager, Bluebird exchange, Denver; Louis Goldstein, manager, Universal, Denver; William T. Binford, Metro; W. S. Rand, Triangle; F. Carmichael, Fox; A. S. Bailey, Metro; M. H. Cohn, Paramount; J. W. Scott, Paramount; W. E. Scott, Mutual exchange; W. H. Cree, manager, General exchange; H. H. Buckwalter, Kleine-Edison; Charles R. Gilmore, World; H. L. Knappen, Pathé; John Thompson, Thompson theatre; E. C. Day, Lux theatre; H. E. Huffman, Bide-a-Wee; G. L. Moore, Ivy; E. M. Erwin, Colfax theatre; H. P. Quine, Bronx theatre; J. C. Freeman, South Broadway theatre; J. L. Claypole, Ozz theatre; A. J. Meyerpeter, Mystic; Jack Lehrberger, Mascot theatre; George C. Killam, York theatre; Julius Nathanson, Lyric theatre; George Greaves, Princess theatre; Dan McCoy, Empress; Al Hagen, Iris theatre; I. A. Goodrich, Thompson theatre; and J. S. Applegate, Pathé.

POLLARD COMPANY, FORMED BY LEDERER, TO STAR MARGARITA FISCHER

George W. Lederer has formed a company for the manufacture of motion pictures—the Pollard Picture Plays Corporation, which will make photoplays, starring Margarita Fischer, under the direction of Harry Pollard.

The company left Monday for Los Angeles, where a studio has been acquired. Work will start immediately on the first picture, "The Pearl of Paradise."

Subsequently, the company will go to Honolulu and from there to the South Sea Islands. The second picture will be made in and around New York, it is announced, the reason being that Miss Fischer is expected to appear in a Shubert legitimate production on Broadway in the late Spring.

Mr. Lederer is also sending a company to Jacksonville, Fla., where a feature film, entitled "The Girl from Macy's" will be made.

This production will be directed by Harry Revier, and will be released under the name of the George W. Lederer Stage Filmotions, which is a separate organization from the Pollard company.

"HUNTED WOMAN" HEADS "V" LIST FOR WEEK OF MARCH 6

"The Hunted Woman," a feature drama from the pen of James Oliver Curwood, produced by S. Rankin Drew, heads a list of releases announced by the Vitagraph company for the week beginning Monday, March 6.

This list includes "Mrs. Dane's Danger," in four parts; "Bittersweet," in one reel; "Pansy's Papas," and "Beaned by a Beanshooter," of one reel each; and a new Frank Daniels vehicle of fun, "Mr. Jack Ducks the Alimony.

Drew, Virginia Pearson, George Cooper, Ned Finley, Billie Billings, and others play the principal roles.

Paragon Studio Is Wonder-Place of Convenience

Two Revolving Stages, Each with Capacity of Two Large and Two Small Sets, Constitute One of the Features—Injury to Negative from Floor Vibration Is Eliminated—Steel Bridge, Capable of Traveling Entire Width of Structure, Enables Cameraman to "Shoot" Settings from Various Angles

VIEWS OF THE NEW PARAGON STUDIO AT FT. LEE, N. J., SHOWING THE CABINET ROOM, THE STUDIO EXTERIOR, AND THE MAIN FLOOR

NO motion picture studio in the United States offers a more interesting study than the fine, new plant of the Paragon Films, Inc., a producing company of the World, at Fort Lee, N. J.

In capaciousness and innovations, this studio and its adjoining printing plant, make it one of the most complete of its kind in the East.

The Paragon Studio is a square building with an exterior measurement of 200 x 200 feet.

The studio floor has an area of approximately 20,000 square feet, with a wide strip partitioned off for offices and work rooms.

From the ridge of the great glass roof to the studio flooring is a drop of seventy-five feet. These figures fail to convey the immensity of the plant, which must be entered to be appreciated.

Stop Floor Vibration

One of the most important features connected with the studio itself is the innovation in the matter of the flooring.

Heretofore work in motion picture studios has often been marred by the effect of the vibration of the floor.

Much time is often lost through the fact that when a director is "shooting" an important scene, the work of carpenters and property men erecting other sets must be called off on account of the floor shaking under their footsteps and the shifting of large weights.

In the new Paragon studio the possibility of a vibrating floor spoiling a negative in the making is eliminated.

The flooring is nailed into a base of concrete composition to withstand shock.

In testing it, Studio Manager Henry Bayard had a cameraman take a strip of film, while from the girders above workmen dropped to the floor heavy bags of sand all around the studio.

The test film showed not the slightest "tremble." Had it been taken under similar conditions in another studio, the picture on the film would have been hopelessly jumbled together by the floor vibration.

In addition to this feature, the Paragon studio floor is unique in possessing two large revolving stages, each of which is capable of holding two large and two small sets.

With this revolving stage a director can work upon scene after scene without moving his lights or camera and thus save many hours, and as every producing company knows, studio time is the most expensive in the world.

Traveling Bridge to "Shoot" Anywhere

Another distinctive feature is the steel bridge that travels the entire width of the studio and from which a director and his camera man may "shoot" down upon a series of settings from various angles.

It was this bridge that enabled Director Maurice Tourneur to make use of a most remarkable setting in the picture he has just completed with House Peters as the star, entitled "The Hand of Peril."

At one end of the studio Director Tourneur built the interior of a three-story house, showing nine rooms, with stairways connecting them.

By "shooting" from the bridge at various heights and horizontal positions, the director was able to take scenes showing action in all the rooms of the house simultaneously, as well as close-up of each individual room.

Such sets have been used occasionally on the stage but never in motion pictures.

Still another remarkable feature of the Paragon plant is the terrace, twenty feet wide, and extending entirely around the building.

The side walls have several sliding panels that can be opened, and use made of the extended floor space offered by the terrace.

Both ends of the studio can be thrown completely open with no upright supports to obstruct the vision.

Exterior and Interior Sets at Same Time

As an example of what this novel constructive idea will permit, the director can erect on the studio floor a setting showing the exterior of a house, carrying out the effect with balconies and balustrades upon the terrace.

Then he can arrange a formal garden on the studio property beyond the terrace and, by placing his camera at the extreme end of the garden, can "shoot" the entire vista up to and into the studio itself.

This combination of exterior and interior operation has never before been possible in motion picture studio work.

Other distinctive features of the Paragon studio are the property rooms, which are devised in two levels; one to take in material and the other to take it out; and the dressing room arrangement, which is so thoroughly planned that there is even a private corridor and stairway for the stars and leading players, separating them from the "extra" people engaged for ensemble scenes.

The printing plant adjoining the studio is claimed to be the largest in the country, having a capacity of 2,000,000 feet a week.

Among its distinctive innovations is the spraying chamber, 150 feet long, where many reels of film can be washed at the same time through a device that travels up and down the room spraying the film with a fine water-mist.

The printing plant also includes half a dozen projecting rooms, one 75 feet long.

Cost Is $750,000

A conservative estimate of the entire outlay for studio and printing plant, including the equipment, is $750,000.

Maurice Tourneur, undoubtedly one of the foremost film creators and responsible for "Trilby," "The Pawn of Fate" and other World and Equitable classics, is in complete charge at the Paragon studio.

Mons. Tourneur will supervise, not alone his own Paragon-World productions, but will keep a watchful eye on such other productions as are in the making there.

Within the next few weeks, "The Closed Road" with House Peters, "The Call of Love" with Molly King and four other productions will be in the making at the Paragon studio.

The studio is now near enough completion to allow for two directors working at the same time, but within the next month four directors will be able to work at one time, and a number of the sets contemplated in the new World-Equitable policy of commercialization of film productions calls for gigantic efforts, immense floor space and unlimited room, all of which is afforded by the new Paragon studio.

RAY COMEDIES FROM CLEVELAND STUDIOS IN APRIL

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, O., March 4.

The Reserve Photoplays Company, an Ohio corporation, with a capital stock of $250,000, has recently completed its modernly-equipped studio, and is now producing a series of one-reel comedies with Johnny and Emma Ray as principals.

These comedies will be released about April 1, through one of the big distributing agencies, it is announced.

The comedies are being directed by Ralph E. Cummings, formerly with Kalem, and the scenarios are being written by Junie McCree. Early releases will include "Casey the Fireman," "Casey's Servants," "Casey the Bandmaster," "Casey the Plumber," and "Casey the Floorwalker."

A number of prominent Cleveland business men are identified with the concern. Robert McLaughlin is president. Later, the company plans to present a series of dramatic pictures written by Mr. McLaughlin.

"SECRET SUBMARINE" PURCHASE NEGOTIATED BY HUTCHINSON

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 4.

President S. S. Hutchinson, of the American Film Company, has completed negotiations for the purchase of a serial motion picture entitled "The Secret Submarine," filming of which will shortly be taken up at the Santa Barbara studios.

George Sergeant, an experienced producer, has been selected to direct the production of this, and Thos. Chatterton has been chosen to play the lead part.

Prior to this time Chatterton has been directing and playing with Anna Little and Jack Richardson in three part Mustang brand pictures, which in the future will be produced by Frank Borzage, actor-director, who has been making three reel dramas featuring Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and George Periolat.

SANTA CRUZ, CALIFORNIA RESORT, MAKES START AS PRODUCING CENTER

Special to Motion Picture News

San Francisco, March 4.

The city commissioners of Santa Cruz, Cal., have leased a portion of Laveaga Park to Edward Ferguson for a period of ten years, for the purpose of erecting a motion picture studio.

Work on the buildings will begin at once, one of the conditions of the lease being that there be no delay in commencing the production of pictures.

GRACE CUNARD'S SISTER IS NOW LEADING WOMAN IN 101 BISON

Margaret Mayburn has become the leading woman of Henry McRae's 101 Bison Company, which at present is engaged in the making of railroad pictures at the Pacific Coast Studios of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Miss Mayburn has been associated with the Universal company for the past year and is better known as Mina Cunard, sister of the actress and director, Grace Cunard.

Capital City League and Exchangemen Hold Stag

Censorship Is Main Topic of Discussion at "Get-together" Banquet Held at the New Ebbit Hotel on February 24—Many Out-of-Town Men Present

EXHIBITORS AND EXCHANGEMEN OF WASHINGTON AND BALTIMORE AT THEIR GET-TOGETHER BANQUET

Special to Motion Picture News

Washington, D. C., March 5.

UNDER the combined auspices of the local Motion Picture Exhibitors League and the National Exchangemen's Association a stag "get-together" meeting was held after the shows on February 24, the main idea being that of good fellowship and the free discussion of matters of mutual interest.

The gathering took place at the New Ebbit Hotel where an excellent spread was served to about forty exhibitors and exchangemen of Washington and Baltimore.

Various topics were touched upon, but the one that was of vital interest and caused the real discussion of the gathering was censorship.

No new phases were added to this all-important subject, but a spirit of co-operation and a fight against the injustice of such a measure was strengthened. Most every one present put in a word or two.

The banquet was thoroughly enjoyed until early morning. Those chiefly responsible for this gathering were Frank Spurrier, chairman of the banquet committee; Clarence Linz, secretary, and Harry Crandall, chairman of the exhibitors' committee.

The reorganization of the Screen Club was brought before the meeting by Sydney B. Lust, who is a firm believer in social and business co-operation of exchangemen, exhibitors and the press to create the best results for the industry.

The outlook is that such a club will soon be in existence to offer as much reel pleasure as the former organization under A. Dresner.

The contingent from Baltimore included Guy L. Wonders, president of the Maryland State Exhibitors League; T. Goldberg, of the Goldberg theatre; J. Howard Bennett, of the Pickwick theatre; Frank Dorkee, of the Palace; Harry Reddish, Baltimore representative of Pathé; James T. Hamilton, and others. From Alexandria, Va., came James Young.

Among the local exchangemen present were Frank Spurrier, of V-L-S-E; C. W. Bunn, of World Film; R. M. Osborn, of Pathé; Lawrence M. Day, of Metro; J. L. Yates, of Universal; B. C. Cunningham, of Mutual; Sydney B. Lust, of United and Criterion Features; C. F. Senning, of Fox; S. M. Flax, of Pathé; S. J. Mayer, of V-L-S-E; Harry E. Friedman of World Film; Frank P. Brown and Earl Reese, of Metro.

Among the exhibitors present were Harry Crandall, president of the local exhibitors league; Tom Moore, Arthur Robb, W. P. Herbst, George C. Schulz, C. W. Plunkett, John Morgan, Lawrence Beatus, Gilbert McDonald, E. R. Haas, Ernest Stern, A. H. Brown, R. A. Babbett, Norman Luchs, J. Keenan, L. F. Painter, E. L. Phillips and others.

Jack Connolly, president of the Boston Press Club was also in attendance.

ALMOST ENTIRE THEATRE SET FOR "MARY PAGE"

The new Essanay studio in Chicago was completed just in time to be used in filming two big scenes in "The Strange Case of Mary Page" in which Henry Walthall and Edna Mayo are starred.

A huge restaurant was erected at one end and the other was filled with a big theatre set.

In a later episode Mary Page is shown appearing in a small town theatre with a stock company and it was necessary to erect almost an entire theatre.

"Ne'er-Do-Well" Will be Released Through V-L-S-E

The Selig Ten-Reel Picturization of the Rex Beach Novel, Recently Purchased by Sol. L. Lesser for $150,000, Will Be Put on the Market Through the Organization of Which the Selig Company Is An Important Part, Is Statement from General Manager Irwin of the Releasing Corporation

THE Selig's ten-reel picturization of Rex Beach's novel, "The Ne'er-Do-Well," regarded by many as one of the three most notable productions of the screen, which was purchased recently by Sol L. Lesser for $150,000, is to be marketed through the organization of which the Selig Company is one of the component parts—the V-L-S-E.

Announcement of the transaction was made by Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the V-L-S-E, following a series of negotiations held between himself and Mr. Lesser, last week.

"Two far-reaching purposes—one representing the interests of the exhibitors, and the other Mr. Lesser's—were responsible for this company's acquirement of the distributing rights of 'The Ne'er-Do-Well,'" said Mr. Irwin, in discussing the deal.

"The first purpose was based on the desire of the Selig Company and the V-L-S-E to follow out its primary policy of giving its exhibitors every opportunity to share in the profits accruing from such an extraordinary feature as 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' unquestionably is.

"The second purpose was founded in Mr. Lesser's desire to give the production the widest possible distribution, and to market it through an organization which was not only constituted to take care to the best advantage of the avalanche of inquiries amounting in some cases to demands, which have poured in for the picture, but to render the exhibitors the most efficient service in its exploitation.

Needed Larger Organization

"Mr. Lesser found soon after his arrival in New York that it would take a year to perfect an organization equipped to handle the inquiries in such numbers that has flooded the wires and the mails since his acquisition of the picture.

"He was approached by many of the largest and most representative distributing companies, to either buy or handle the picture, with offers which were most tempting to him.

"Without solicitation on our part, and after full consideration of the entire field, Mr. Lesser decided that this organization by reason of its policies and practices—operating as it does, upon the 'open-booking' plan and according to the drawing strength of each individual picture—embodies the ideals and the efficiency which would make for the most successful handling of 'The Ne'er-Do-Well.'

"Both the Selig Company and the V-L-S-E are delighted that Mr. Lesser felt as he did and that therefore, we now have this truly great production as an addition to our rapidly increasing number of notable offerings, and also, as I have pointed out, that our exhibitors are to have the benefit of the returns to be gained for the stupendous pictures made by the manufacturers of this organization, as well as of our general run of pictures.

"Unquestionably this picture will aid a far from inconsequential quota in furthering the rapidly growing impression of the profit-making qualities represented by the V-L-S-E program generally, and by the pictures released by the Selig Company, specifically.

"It is a second 'Battle Cry of Peace' money-maker. Although it has only been exhibited in a few houses, the expressions of enthusiasm which it has provoked among exhibitors have been most unusual.

"As an illustration, J. M. Root, of the Strand theatre, Pasadena, Cal., wired the other day:

"'Packed to the doors with extra performances given, and I actually believe we filled at least two other theatres from our overflow, both afternoons and evenings—at least that is what brother local managers themselves say.'

"L. E. Lund, of the Pickwick theatre, San Diego, Cal., wrote as follows recently:

"'It will interest you to know that "The Ne'er-Do-Well" broke all box office records last week. I have been associated with all branches of the motion picture industry since its infancy, but cannot recall a picture which gave more genuine and universal satisfaction. I want a return date at the earliest possible moment. It is to be deplored that there are not more such trade stimulators as "The Ne'er-Do-Well."'

Three Weeks' Run in Los Angeles

"The picture ran three weeks at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, and has had equally long bookings in other Coast cities. The appreciations received from the managers of these houses might be quoted at tiresome length. They are all unanimous in declaring the production to be unsurpassed in its drawing qualities.

"Spurred by their successes and enthusiastic over the merits of the productions to come, the men of the V-L-S-E firing line are geared to the point, where they can render the utmost service to exhibitors booking 'The Ne'er-Do-Well.' With enthusiasm of such quality, combined with the super-strength of 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' as a box office attraction, the trade may look for exceptional profits from this production."

Mr. Lesser, in talking about his decision to release the picture through the V-L-S-E, said:

"I had fully intended to distribute this picture myself, but 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' had been in my possession less than a week, when although I had handled many big subjects and possess a substantial organization, I realized that in this instance I was contracting for an appalling undertaking.

"Letters and telegrams flooded my office to such an extent that only a national organization of the greatest possible efficiency would hope to cope with the volume of possible business that they represented.

"It was instantly apparent, therefore, that the best interests of exhibitors and of the picture could only be served through such an organization. My problem was to select the right one from the prominent distributing companies submitting tempting offers.

"From my knowledge of the industry and after a thorough investigation, I felt that none were so proficient or efficient as the Big Four, not only because of the successes which it has already scored, but because of its peculiar high standing among exhibitors generally throughout the country.

Confidence of Exhibitors Everywhere

"I know the company thoroughly, and it has seemed to me that the V-L-S-E possesses the confidence of exhibitors everywhere.

"Consequently, I turned down all the other offers, and approached the Big Four, which I knew to be thoroughly equipped to market 'The Ne'er-Do-Well' on the plane of the highest efficiency.

"The picture will be released, in all probability by this organization, on Monday, March 20, and I am sure the successes which exhibitors everywhere will realize from the co-operation which they obtain from the V-L-S-E in the handling of the production, will more than bear out the wisdom of my course."

UNIVERSAL ADDS THREE SCENARIO WRITERS TO STAFF IN EAST

Three new scenario writers have been added to the staff of the Universal's Eastern studio at Universal Heights. They are: Catherine Carr, who has created vehicles for Walker Whiteside, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, Clara Kimball Young, and a number of other prominent stars; J. Grubb Alexander, an experienced scenario writer; and Ella Caldwell, long a member of the Vitagraph scenario staff.

The scenario department at Universal Heights now numbers eight, and the reading staff at the Mecca building, New York, numbers ten.

SHAPIRO LEAVES DETROIT TO BECOME SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE IN QUAKER CITY FOR FOX

A. I. Shapiro, the young sales manager for the Fox Films, has just returned from Detroit, where he had complete charge of that firm's office, and has been transferred to Philadelphia as a special representative.

Mr. Shapiro has established a reputation as a sales manager in New England, New York and Michigan.

GARWOOD IS NOW A DIRECTOR AT UNIVERSITY HEIGHTS

Billy Garwood, who recently returned from Universal City, where he took the leading part in "Lord John's Journal," has been made a director at Universal Heights.

His first picture caused him to get in trouble with nearly all the actresses at the studio.

His picture was "Charlie's War Brides," in which he made love to 'war brides' of all nationalities, with the result that he got into some terrible international tangles. His next picture is entitled "Some Leap."

FOX DONATES EVERYTHING FOR PICTURE EXHIBIT AT CHARITY FUNCTION

William Fox has donated all the paraphernalia necessary for the moving picture programs of the bazaar and fair of the people's relief committee for the Jewish war sufferers, to be held at the Grand Central Palace from March 25 to April 3.

Mr. Fox's donation is complete to the most minute detail, including as it does the machines, operators, films, and even the personal service of one of his most famous stars, Theda Bara.

"MISHAPS OF MUSTY SUFFER" IN BIG DEMAND

George Kleine reports large bookings for his most recent comedy, "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," in which Bickel and Watson are featured.

The popularity met by the comedy is attributed to the novel features of the picture, its competent cast and the care expended on its production.

Dramatizer of "Treasure Island" Joins Lasky

Goodman, Prolific and Successful Writer for Speaking Stage, Who, Contrary to Belief of Critics, Made Stevenson's Story a Broadway Hit, Is Signed for Exclusive Production.

THE man who put Robert Louis Stevenson's "Treasure Island," contrary to all beliefs of experienced managers, on the stage in New York as one of the biggest plays of the season, has been engaged by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company to write photoplays exclusively for it. He is Jules Eckert Goodman, dramatist.

As a writer for the legitimate stage, Mr. Goodman's name has been before the public for years. "Treasure Island," now playing to capacity audiences, is his second play of the present season in New York.

At the Gaiety Theatre last autumn one of his dramas, entitled "Outside the Door," produced by Henry Miller, had a substantial engagement. He also wrote "Elevating a Husband" and other plays.

"For years," said Mr. Goodman, "I have watched the motion picture as a form of expressing big vital subjects, grow in popularity with the thinking public in America.

"It opens to those whose work lies naturally in a reflection of American thought, a field more vast than the stage because it appeals to a bigger audience; more potent than the novel because the picture always has been more effective than the printed word."

One of the interesting features in connection with Mr. Goodman's engagement to write photoplays for the Lasky Company, is the fact that in the dramatization for the stage of "Treasure Island" he entirely upset all authorities' opinions as to the possibilities of this famous story for the stage.

According to one well-known critic in an article supposed to be an analysis of the motion picture, "Treasure Island" was mentioned as a story which naturally could be told in motion pictures but which would be impossible to tell on the stage.

This challenge, of course, had nothing to do with the fact that Mr. Goodman shows "Treasure Island" for dramatic purposes, but nevertheless since its extraordinary success as a Broadway attraction, the critic's statement has often been recalled.

Seven Well Known Authors for "U" Contributions

MacGrath, Barry, Vera Tyler, Elizabeth Carpenter, Kauffman, West and Bacon Will Furnish Material in Original Form and Adaptations for Mary Fuller, Baggot and Others

HAROLD MacGRATH, Richard Barry, Vera Tyler, Elizabeth Carpenter, Reginald Wright Kauffman, Paul West and Irving R. Bacon are a few of the authors who are to provide material, either in original form or adaptation, for photoplays in which leading Universal stars will be seen within the next few months.

This material is for production at the Universal Eastern studio at Universal Heights, all material for production in the West being attended to by the scenario editors at Universal City.

Mary Fuller, who has completed "Thrown to the Lions," from the novel of the same name, by Wallace Irwin, has begun work on "The Huntress," written by Vera Tyler, granddaughter of President John Tyler.

Miss Fuller's next vehicle will be Richard Barry's novel, "Horns of the Devil." Irving R. Bacon's human interest story, "Alice," has been picturized, and will also be played by Miss Fuller.

King Baggot, under the direction of Henry Otto, will be seen in Harold MacGrath's "Half a Rogue." Ethel Grandin is to appear in a picturization of "The Thousand Dollar Pendant," by Elizabeth Carpenter.

Paul West, formerly editor of the New York Sunday World, has joined the Universal's list of contributors, and several of his comedies will be produced by Director Matt Moore with Jane Gail and himself in the leading roles. The first of these was "Object—Matrimony," and the second will be "The Society Sherlock."

Reginald Wright Kauffman, the novelist, has been engaged to write a sociological drama in which a prominent Universal actress will be featured.

Works by other well-known authors will be produced by Universal during the summer months.

COHEN OUT OF DETROIT FOR BLUEBIRD

The Detroit office of Bluebird Photoplays has lately added to its travelling force Ira H. Cohen, who will look after the Ohio territory. Mr. Cohen was previously sales manager for the Phoenix Film Corporation, of Boston.

The Press, Press Representative and the Picture—XXII

In the Last Year a Spirit of Hearty Co-operation Has Sprung Up Between Exhibitors and the Newspapers in Newark, N. J.—The Dailies, Realizing the Importance of Pictures to the Public, Send Best Men to See Films for Criticism

THE present hearty co-operation of motion picture exhibitors and the press of New Jersey had its origin less than a year ago. It came with the realization on the part of newspapermen of the important place motion pictures had won in the interests of a public both are seeking to entertain and enlighten.

With this realization came increased respect, better understanding and a sympathetic co-operation that has already proved mutually beneficial.

In Newark, New Jersey's largest city, the daily attendance at motion picture playhouses is estimated at something more than 30,000. Although motion picture exhibitors in Northern New Jersey have done little in specializing on the nature of films shown by them, a personal canvas of patrons of the principal houses during the past week indicates a development to a certain degree of a fixed purpose on the part of a large percentage.

Covering a special assignment for one of New York's biggest dailies, I found that of more than 3,000 persons questioned during one afternoon, considerably more than one half had planned their visit to the theatre for some definite reason.

Of that number, 1,211 gave as their reason either "amusement or entertainment"; 304 were prompted by a desire to see a certin educational film and 180 desired to see only the "news reviews."

Only a Few Wanted to Kill Time

Of course, there were the few who wanted "to kill time." Two hundred and eighty-six said all they wanted to see was certain instalments of serials in which they were especially interested.

What interest has all this to newspapermen? Was the information sought for the purpose of finding a basis upon which to frame a story? In this particular case I know these were not the motives for the assignment. Editors and publishers of newspapers have awakened to the fact that the field of motion picture work is very closely related to their own activities.

Both realize they are seeking by channels not widely separated to entertain and instruct. Both are beginning to realize as never before that each can be of invaluable assistance to the other.

The 30,000 who attend motion pictures shown every day in the city of Newark alone outnumber the local circulation of any Newark daily newspaper. The daily receipts from the combined circulation of Newark daily papers is about one-fifth of the total receipts of the picture playhouses during the same time.

Exhibitors have been quick to see and take advantage of the benefits that come from newspaper publicity. There are forty-five motion picture houses in Newark and more than fifty per cent. of them are daily advertisers in the newspaper columns.

All the others frequently use the newspapers as advertising mediums. It would be quite difficult to find in the entire city an exhibitor who did not express himself as a firm believer in newspaper advertising.

He has proved it and still proves it by paying for his space in the daily newspaper about twice as much as is asked of the merchant and other business men.

His space is classified as "entertainment advertising" and in the majority of cases the exhibitor willingly parts with payments for it that the average business man would repudiate.

Reduction in Cost of Advertising Rates

During the past year there has been a marked tendency to reduce the cost of motion picture advertising rates and as a result of the closer relations of exhibitors and newspapermen it is safe to predict that in a comparatively short time this apparent injustice will be wiped out.

For many years the average newspaper throughout the country believed itself invaluable to the success of the motion picture theatre. In other words, the editors and publishers believed the picture playhouse could not get along without the newspapers.

One seldom hears such expressions from any thinking newspaperman of the present day. That idea has been supplanted by the thought that activities within the field of motion pictures may be of great service to newspapers and newspapermen.

Publishers and editors are alive to the fact that every feature that makes their production popular and a paying investment is also a component part of what every motion picture exhibitor is striving to give his patrons.

Newspapermen also realize today that if 30,000 citizens of a single city are interested enough to give up several hours each day to attend motion picture playhouses they can be depended upon to be sufficiently interested in the motion picture news to read the daily newspaper that prints attractive articles and stories from this field of industry.

It was only a short time ago that the majority of newspapers assigned its veriest cub to motion picture reviews. The "copy desk" paid little attention to what he wrote and most of his stories were "railroaded" to be "buried" somewhere in the paper's makeup or honored as "fillers."

The change has been as radical as it has been abrupt. A year ago the newspapers of Newark reluctantly gave up a column each week to motion picture theatres and the reviews of their pictures.

Today each paper makes a feature page twice every week given up wholly to items of interest to motion picture fans. In the place of the cub reporter newspapers are demanding real newspapermen with special qualifications for feature work.

And with this cooperation born of better understanding of the aims and ends of both industries there is promised increased efficiency and a more lasting popularity for each.

Promiscuous Liquor Scenes Forbidden in "U" Films

"Business" of This Kind Will Be Avoided When Action Does Not Seem to Require It, Is Order to Directors from Laemmle Through Brandt

THE latest order sent out to the directors of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company by General Manager Joe Brandt, at the suggestion of Mr. Laemmle, is to the effect that it is desirable to the officials of the Universal that directors try to eliminate, as fas as is possible in the proper production of their pictures, the promiscuous smoking of cigarettes and cigars and discontinue the use of intoxicating liquors where the action does not absolutely call for it, or the surroundings are such that it can be eliminated without impairing the force of the story or weakening the plot or climax.

The notice sent to all the Universal directors by General Manager Brandt, reads, in part, as follows:

"There are a great many instances where men in their homes are seen smoking cigarettes or cigars, where the action of the play would be just as interesting, just as forceful and just as impressive, and would get over just as well, if the participants did not resort to the use of tobacco in any of its forms.

"Very often we find a situation where a person takes a drink before starting in to do some work which has no vital bearing either in that scene or in the plot.

"If we can keep down this promiscuous use of both liquor and tobacco, we will be doing away with an obnoxious, undesirable and otherwise unnecessary trend of affairs."

PHOTOPLAY EDITOR, THE TIMES, FINDS STUDIO NUMBER OF INESTIMABLE VALUE

Los Angeles, Cal., January 28.
Motion Picture News,
New York City.
Gentlemen:—

I am in receipt of your Studio Directory number, and have placed it on file in The Times library. I find it of inestimable value in my work.

It contains definite facts, tersely stated, concerning the people of the motion picture studios, both actors and directors.

Sincerely,
(Signed) GRACE KINGSLEY,
Motion Picture Editor Times.

HORSLEY'S "HEART OF TARA" STARS MARGARET GIBSON AND CLIFFORD

The release on March 4 as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, of the David Horsley five-reel production of Theodosia Harris' story "The Heart of Tara," marks the first appearance as co-stars of two players—Margaret Gibson and William Clifford—who heretofore enjoyed stellar honors on the screen individually.

Prior to beginning work on this feature Miss Gibson was featured by Mr. Horsley in a number of pictures, among them "The Arab's Vengeance," "The Winning of Jess," "The Homesteader," "Marta of the Jungle" and "The Soul's Cycle."

Mr. Clifford has also had the feature in earlier David Horsley productions, including "The Terror of the Fold" and "The Bait."

Besides Miss Gibson and Mr. Clifford there are in the cast such players as Marvel Spencer, for the past three months a member of Mr. Horsley's regular stock company; Sherman Bainbridge, a recent acquisition from the ranks of the Universal; Marie James, Walter Spencer, Edward Alexander and other players.

ROGERS CONTRACTS FOR MOSS PRODUCTIONS

Charles R. Rogers, president of the Essemar Film Company, Buffalo, N. Y., was in New York last week and closed a contract with the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation for the New York State rights, exclusive of Greater New York, for their two productions, "The Salamander" and "One Day."

He made further arrangements to handle in the future all Moss subjects for the same territory.

"Britain Demands Better Stories"—Hughes Massie

Representative in England for American Producers Sounds Warning—Films for Acceptance Abroad Must Be Approved by Men Here Who Know European Requirements

THE crying need of the film trade in Great Britain is better stories, and stories better adapted to the taste of the British public, according to Hughes Massie, of Hughes Massie and Company, 40 Fleet street, London.

Mr. Massie, who is the representative in England of several of the largest American producers, is in New York this week, looking over the field here, and arranging for new releases for his own market.

"The greatest need of the British market is better editing on this side," said Mr. Massie to Motion Picture News. "I mean that someone thoroughly familiar with British conditions and British tastes, should make careful selections of the films which are to be sent across, and thereby save an enormous waste.

"The British taste is not so much different from that of other peoples; but the British public does want a real story in its films. That is what it must come to: a better story.

"We can no longer tempt the public by cheap rentals and cheap pictures. The cheap rentals may appeal to the renter, but when the picture goes before the public it is bound to be a 'frost.'

"United States manufacturers are in the habit of sending over miscellaneous assortments of pictures, and demanding that they be sold. They make no selections, and little attempt to adapt the product to our needs; they merely send us their output.

"They are most of them excellent examples of production, splendid photography, and all that, but in many cases the story leaves much to be desired.

"There is a theory that good photography and a big star will carry a film with a mediocre story. They won't. One trouble with American films is that the manufacturer lays great stress on his star—usually a star totally unknown on the other side.

"If we are to have stars they must be stars who are known in Great Britain. In the past the public has been attracted largely by novelty and the unusual in films; in the future it will be the interest of the picture alone which will draw them. That is coming everywhere, but it has already arrived in the British market.

"Imagine, for example, the late Mr. Frohman taking this attitude. Suppose he should say to an associate: 'We've got a big new production for the Empire theatre; the production can be made for so much, we can get So-and-So as a star for so much, and there is a young man down in the office who'll write the play for one hundred dollars.'

"It would be difficult to imagine Mr. Frohman having taken such an attitude, yet that is just what American producers are doing, and expecting to make a great success. It is coming to be purely a matter of interest in the film, and this means, better stories; it means that the story must come first.

"Closer co-operation in this matter between the producer and the British distributor will result in both making money. No other kind of picture will be taken seriously by us any longer. When a man approaches me with a proposition to distribute his film, the first thing I say is: 'Let me see the film.'

"England is being used as the dumping ground of the world in the matter of films. Because of that the public is rapidly becoming prejudiced against foreign productions, and British film is now bringing in more than American.

"How can manufacturers afford to take the risk of an expensive star without an adequate story? I predict that the whole idea and attitude will change, and the value of the story will be fully recognized."

Kellermann Film for Fox Three-Fourths Finished; 15,000 People Seen in the Photodrama

MOORISH CITY BUILT IN JAMAICA BY WILLIAM FOX FOR KELLERMANN SPECTACLE

FOR a mile and a half along the Jamaican shore stretches an ancient Moorish city reproduced, with all its minarets, towers, domes, its slave quarters, palaces and bazaars, by William Fox for the production of his million-dollar spectacle which Director-General Herbert Brenon is making, with Annette Kellermann as the star.

Upwards of 15,000 persons, representing all degrees of Oriental life, are being employed in the making of scenes.

To date the Fox Film Corporation has expended $745,000 on the production, according to the Fox publicity department.

The picture is three-fourths finished, and will be finally completed the end of April or early in May. A month later it will be ready for presentation to the public.

STUDIO NUMBER IS A HANDY ENCYCLOPEDIA OF INDUSTRY

Los Angeles, Cal., January 25.
Mr. J. C. Jessen,
Motion Picture News,
Los Angeles, Cal.
Dear Mr. Jessen:—

Permit me to express my compliments upon your Studio Directory number.

It contains a world of information on motion picture people, is brief and to the point, with a minimum of superlatives, and is a handy encyclopedia on the cinema industry through the medium of which important data may be gleaned at a glance.

Sincerely,
(Signed) GUY PRICE,
Dramatic Editor, Evening Herald.

BINFORD SUCCEEDS BAILEY AT METRO IN DENVER

J. Unger, Western representative of all Metro exchanges west of Denver, stopped off in Denver and appointed William T. Binford manager of the Denver exchange to succeed A. S. Bailey, who has been transferred to the Salt Lake branch, opened last week.

As manager of the Denver exchange, Mr. Bailey was very successful, and his many friends among the exchangemen and exhibitors in that territory wish him success in his new field.

Mr. Binford, the new manager of the Metro Denver exchange, was formerly roadman for the company, and as he has had years of experience in the film business, he is looked upon as the right man to carry out the high standard Mr. Bailey maintained for the Denver exchange.

Mr. Binford's first move upon assuming charge was to appoint F. Y. Langtree as roadman to work out of the Denver office. Mr. Langtree was formerly connected with the film business in 'Frisco.

W. B. Glaser, booker of the Denver Metro office, has been made head of the feature and serial department of the Mutual Film exchange, of Kansas City, Mo.

G. M. Anderson Plans Production in New Orleans

"Broncho Billy" Creator Declares That He Will Make the Southern City His Film Headquarters—Guest of Eugene Pearce While Visiting Crescent City

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

New Orleans, La., March 5.

ORGANIZATION of his own company, with permanent studios and headquarters in New Orleans, is said to be the plan of G. M. Anderson, creator of the film character "Broncho Billy," who has been in New Orleans for six days, following his retirement from Essanay.

Mr. Anderson is now on the California coast. He declared to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS that he could not as yet outline his full plans, but it is definitely understood that New Orleans is to be the base of operations of his new company or that at least a studio will be located here.

Mr. Anderson let it be known that he was in search of a leading lady to play in some of the productions he has under consideration, and as a result the carpet in his apartments at the Hotel Grunewald became worn from the tramping of feminine applicants.

Screen-struck maids also kept his telephone and a private operator busy every day he spent here.

During his stay in New Orleans Mr. Anderson was the guest of J. Eugene Pearce of the Pearce Enterprises. In connection with the visit of Mr. Anderson, Mr. Pearce arranged for the first public presentation of "Humanity," in which Broncho Billy has the leading role, and projected it at the Tudor theatre Wednesday night at 8:30 o'clock. Mr. Anderson makes it a practice to witness the first run before the production leaves the studio.

In this instance, however, he left the Pacific Coast rather hurriedly, took "Humanity" with him, and decided on the "try out" immediately on his arrival in this city.

Most important of all Broncho Billy's activities—to him—was his mother's visit to New Orleans at the end of the week. Mrs. Anderson was visiting in Summit, Miss., a short distance from the Crescent City. Mrs. Anderson and "her boy Billy" were inseparable pals during their stay.

Publicity Service Department for Young Company

Selznick Will Take Direct Personal Charge, as He Realizes Value of Advertising in Connection with Marketing of Pictures—Well Known Theatrical Manager Will Act as Adviser

LEWIS J. SELZNICK, president of the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation, announces the organization of a publicity service department in connection with the activities of his new company.

He has taken direct personal charge of the department, to indicate his keen appreciation of the value of advertising in connection with the marketing of films.

In his public announcements Mr. Selznick lays particular stress on his knowledge of the needs of the individual exhibitor, and it is known that one of the principal advisers of the department has been and will be a theatre manager of long and wide experience. Emphasis also is laid on the promise that this department will be for the joint benefit of the exhibitor and the Clara Kimball Young Film Corporation and that it will not be a profit making scheme.

With the adoption of these policies Mr. Selznick considers, according to his statement, that he is showing a willingness to meet the exhibitor half way in the matter of constructing general business-getting publicity.

The exhibitor has thrown off his swaddling clothes Mr. Selznick says and he intends to show an appreciation of this fact on the advent of a company over which he has executive control. He considers it a good follow up for his statement in this paper last week that the future of the motion picture business depends on the individual exhibitor and the way he handles his theatre, more than anything else.

NAT GOODWIN BEGINS SECOND PICTURE FOR MIRROR

Nat Goodwin winged his way southward last Sunday at the head of a company of players engaged by Mirror Films, Inc., for the second of a series of photoplays being made by the Mirror with Goodwin in the star roles. The picture will be made in and around Jacksonville, Fla., and will be a farce comedy, directed by Walter McNamara.

The company is composed of Flora Finch, Billy Quirk, Augustus Phillips, Estelle Mardo, Mildred Manning, Lina D'Avril, William Mandeville, Eddie O'Connor, and Charles Brandte and several other players.

The first picture in which Goodwin appeared for Mirror was finished about two weeks ago.

CHILD ACTRESS FOR "U" KEEPS RIGHT ON POSING WHEN LION GOES ON RAMPAGE

Pretty little Clara Horton of the juvenile contingent at Universal City, has established a reputation for fearlessness that would put to shame many an actor or actress of mature years.

Little Clara has appeared in several animal photoplays that have been produced recently by Director Jay Hunt, and she has worked close to lions, leopards and jaguars.

CLARA HORTON

In "Under the Lion's Paw," which Director Hunt has just completed, this unusually fearless child calmly enacted the role assigned to her while Sam, one of the lions at the Universal zoo, went on a rampage in the jungle arena where the scenes were being filmed.

CHAPLIN SOON OFF FOR WEST

Charles Chaplin, the Mutual comedian, expects to leave for the West early this week. He will go to Chicago for a short sojourn before proceeding to the coast.

Preparations for his coming are in progress at the new studios being put in shape for his company in Los Angeles. Henry P. Caulfield, who will be in charge of the studios, will leave for Los Angeles in the course of a few days.

In Chicago Chaplin will attend to the cutting of his last release with the company with which he has been employed the last year. Only two Chaplin releases are yet to come from this company, despite the report circulated to the effect that a large stock of Chaplins was to be released.

"The first Mutual Chaplin" is now being released. It is the one hundred foot picture showing Chaplin and President John R. Freuler of the Mutual signing the contract.

This picture, taken primarily for the purpose of the Mutual Weekly, has been much in demand among New York exhibitors and no less than twelve prints of this expensive and tiny release are working among the theatres of New York.

It is Mr. Chaplin's first appearance in motion pictures without a make up—and it is probably his last.

Holmes on "Easy Chair Journeys" Next Few Months

Famous Lecturer Closes Platform Season and Goes to Chicago for Production of Weekly Screen Jaunts to Other Lands for Paramount—He Plans Absolutely New Material

BURTON HOLMES, one of the world's greatest travel lecturers, the first to realize the educational advantages of having his motion pictures of travel shown in motion picture houses, has closed his lecture season for 1915-1916 and will devote the next few months to the work of conducting his weekly "easy-chair journeys" for the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Holmes has left New York for Chicago, where the producing work of his travel pictures for Paramount is conducted.

For many years Mr. Holmes has been obliged to confine his lecture season to twenty weeks, in order to devote the eight months of spring and summer to the acquiring of new material for the following fall and winter months, during which seasons he delivers the Travelogues in a very limited number of our larger cities—New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago. From ten to twenty-five Travelogues are delivered in each city.

Now that he has finished his lecturing for the season, he will devote his entire attention this spring to the preparation and editing of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures.

Having prepared eight releases on American topics, he will follow them with a number of "easy-chair journeys," visiting our "Little Brown Brothers" in the Philippines, there to see Manila as it is today and to see what Uncle Sam has done and is still doing among the one-time "Dogeaters and Head-Hunters of Luzon"; to see them at their native industries and in their sports and dances; to see what our khaki-clad boys are doing toward teaching the lesson of peace among the often rebellious Moros, to see the original of George Ade's "Sultan of the Sulu" at his own court and to cruise from island to island of the Philippine archipelago.

One release will show the daily life in the celebrated Bilibid prison, the model prison of the world, where Uncle Sam makes useful citizens out of the scum of the earth,—an Oriental Sing Sing, where every prisoner learns a useful trade and finds a job awaiting him on his release from prison.

The hemp industries and rice growing are among the many interesting incidents of the Philippine series.

After the Philippines, Mr. Holmes has many more travels in preparation, to Japan, China, India, Java and so on indefinitely.

He will probably start on his own travels in search of absolutely new material for the Travelogues and for the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures by April.

Emmert Appoints Delegates for Women's Club Meet

Hettesheimer, Frankel, Weigel, Dickman and Ackerman Will Attend Joint Session of Two Women's Organizations to Help Form Plans for Children's Programs in Cincinnati

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cincinnati, March 5.

CO-OPERATION with two large women's organizations of Cincinnati, in an effort to solve the problem of children's pictures will probably be given by members of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce as the result of agitation over the question here.

At the monthly meeting of the league, March 1, Francis Huffaker, probation officer of the Juvenile Court, and chairman of the joint committee of the Woman's City Club and the Woman's Civic League, appeared and asked the exhibitors to assist in working out a plan by which one or more theatres in various sections of the city might given one morning a week to the exhibition of special pictures for children.

Her talk was supplemented by remarks by Roe S. Eastman, photoplay editor of the Times-Star in which he pointed out that co-operation in this plan by the exhibitors would tend to create confidence in the mind of the public.

By endorsing a movement calculated to protect morals of minors, he declared, the exhibitors would avail themselves of a very powerful weapon in the censorship fight.

President F. L. Emmert appointed a committee consisting of A. G. Hettesheimer, Orpheum; I. Frankel, Hippodrome; Charles Weigel, Alhambra; Dr. Otto Dickman, Nordland Plaza and J. A. Ackerman.

This committee and any other members who may be interested in the movement will attend a joint session of the two women's organizations next Thursday at which time practical plans for the establishment of a children's program and other arrangements to exclude children from pictures which might be harmful to their moral development, will be projected.

The exhibitors agreed also to support the publicity campaign of the general committee of the Chamber of Commerce to get the support of the voters for a $6,000,000 bond issue to build an interurban and rapid transit system. Two thousand slides carrying arguments in favor of this bond issue will be thrown upon the screens of the one hundred Cincinnati theatres during the coming months as part of this campaign.

AMERICAN ESTABLISHES STUDIO AT TRUCKEE, CALIFORNIA

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Francisco, March 3.

The American Film Manufacturing Company is establishing a studio at Truckee, headquarters for winter sports in California, and a prominent woods resort in the summer season.

The Chamber of Commerce arranged for the land that was needed. This place is near Lake Tahoe and is well adapted to the filming of mountain and lake scenes.

GLIMPSES OF TWO KNICKERBOCKER STAR FEATURES: "THE HOME BREAKERS," MARGUERITE NICHOLS AS STAR, AND "THE WITCH OF THE MOUNTAINS"

RAVER MAKES RAPID DISTRIBUTION OF OCEAN FILMS ON CASH BASIS

The combined product of the Raver Film Corporation and the Ocean Film Corporation is being rapidly distributed from Harry R. Raver's executive offices in the World's Tower building.

Daily showings of five productions are being given for visiting State rights buyers. A wide variety of subjects are represented in these films.

"Driftwood," Owen Davis' famous play, starring Vera Michelena, is a tense dramatic story; "The Other Girl," by Augustus Thomas, starring James J. Corbett, is a novelty comedy drama; "The Fortunate Youth," by William J. Locke, is a romantic tale featuring Wilmuth Merkyl; "Life Without Soul," from the classic "Frankenstein" by Mary Shelley, is a powerful sermon against over-ambition; "Austria at War" tells the Austro-Hungarian side of the present European conflict in vivid scenes photographed at the front by enlisted cameramen and approved by his imperial majesty, Franz Joseph.

Among the forthcoming Raver productions now in preparation, will be "Alabama," "The Witching Hour," and other Thomas plays.

Territory is being sold on a cash basis. No films are being placed with exchanges on a percentage arrangement.

HORSLEY PLANT USED FOR FUND

Occidental Day was celebrated with great acclaim at the David Horsley studios, Los Angeles, on February 26, Mr. Horsley having generously donated the use of his entire plant to the Million Dollar Campaign Fund committee.

A special program of six animal acts was staged in the afternoon at three o'clock, but the gates were opened at 10 a. m. to give the visitors an oportunity to watch the making of motion pictures, both at the stages and in the arena.

The proceeds from the sale of tickets were turned over to the committee, which is working hard to raise one million dollars as an endowment fund for the Occidental College. A goodly sum was realized through Mr. Horsley's help.

Thanhouser Makes Censor Statement for Exhibitors

Members of New York League Ask for Views on the Question—Proposed Law, If Consistently Applied, Would Bring Chaos to Work in the Studios

THAT censorship of motion pictures would produce chaos in the studios, because its enforcement, if consistently applied, would necessitate the presence of federal or state inspectors during the production of photoplays, is pointed out by Edwin Thanhouser in a statement made at the request of New York exhibitors who are active in the fight against censorship at Albany.

"I think that any judge sitting on the question," says Mr. Thanhouser, "will agree with me that to photograph an illegal deed and reproduce it for exhibition, is no greater a crime than the committing of the actual deed. That's simple.

"If the censors take exception, under federal law, to a scene in the picture, the enactment of that scene is just as much a crime as its portrayal on the film. That being the case, the men who are charged to enforce the law must in all consistency see that nothing objectionable is enacted.

"This means a pretty state of affairs in the studios. Imagine a minion of the law stationed in the studio to see that nothing is done at which the law makers might raise their eyebrows.

"Every company going out on exteriors will have to carry an added passenger in the form of a federal or state representative. He will have to stand next to the director and in order for the director to avoid arrest the officer will have to be given an account of the scene about to be enacted.

"Said officer will then weigh it carefully in his mind, look up his precedents and rulings, and decide whether the scene shall go on. If for any reason it should be impossible for him to decide on the spot, the director will have to postpone his work until the guardian of the people's morals can go to Albany or Washington for a ruling on the scene.

"This might seem far-fetched, but it seems to me to be exactly what we are bound for in all this censorship agitation.

"It is unfair that a film maker be not given definite technical information as to what will be allowed and what not, under censorship laws. For instance, the Interstate Commerce Law designates specifically every act or deed which may be considered a violation of the law.

"I believe that there is no intention on the part of those favoring censorship to draw up such a schedule. I grant that it is a very difficult task for them to do so; at the same time without it the law remains absolutely incomplete and unfair, judging by all the various plans I have read.

"The element of discretion in rulings exists in most laws that are made, but I don't believe that the statute books of the country contain a law in which the element of discretion works greater hardships on a class of citizens than the proposed censorship laws.

"Consistency is a beautiful thing. The aim of law and regulation is to make things consistent, but if our pro-censorship friends should by any chance succeed, the necessity of consistency will constitute a bite much larger than they can chew.

"The presence of a censor in a studio will be the next step to a nice little Siberia of our own for all offending scenario writers, actors, directors and film producers."

"UNDERTOW" FROM MOSS APRIL 1, FOR STATE RIGHTS, LIKE HIS OTHER FILMS

Disposing of feature films through the medium of state rights sales is the present and future process through which B. S. Moss will place the features manufactured by his concern on the market.

The current Moss release is "One Day," the sequel to Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks," also screened as a feature by Mr. Moss last year, and sold on the state rights plan.

About April 1 Mr. Moss will turn out another, "The Undertow," and during this year expects to produce on the average one feature monthly, selling all through state rights, reserving Greater New York and northern New Jersey for his own territory.

MEIGHAN, REVENUE OFFICER IN "PINE," WILL BE FEATURED IN SEVERAL LASKYS

Thomas Meighan, who has come rapidly into popularity as one of the leading members of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play studio organization, according to announcement made last week, is to be featured soon in several productions.

Following his most recent big role as the revenue officer in the Lasky production,

THOMAS MEIGHAN

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," Mr. Meighan has begun work in leading support of Blanche Sweet in the picturization of "The Sowers." In this production he will appear as Paul Alexis.

Just previous to joining the Lasky company, last summer, Mr. Meighan had one of the principal roles in the original production of the melodrama, "On Trial."

His first appearance in a photoplay production with the Lasky company, was as Burton Temple in "The Fighting Hope," a Lasky-Belasco production.

Subsequently, he appeared in "Blackbirds," "Out of Darkness," "The Secret Sin," "Puddn'head Wilson" and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

SAN MATEO, CAL., IS AFTER PRODUCERS TO LOCATE THERE

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Francisco, March 3.

The San Mateo Chamber of Commerce is going after moving picture studios in a systematic manner and recently held a special meeting to consider several propositions that have developed along this line.

Frank E. Baskette was sent to Los Angeles some time ago to see producers who are desirous of securing a change of location and a report has been filed by him outlining his plan of action.

"Woman's Law" Marks Arrow as Producer for Pathé

Vehicle for Florence Reed, Founded on American Magazine Serial by Mrs. Maravene Thompson, and Scenarioized by Harvey F. Thew and Albert S. Le Vino, Ready on 21st

THE release on March 21, through the Pathé Exchange, of "The Woman's Law," in which Florence Reed is starred, marks the debut of the Arrow Film Corporation as a producer for the Pathé program.

"The Woman's Law" appeared first as a serial story in the American Magazine.

Subsequently, in book form it brought its author, Mrs. Maravene Thompson, additional celebrity. More than 300,000 copies have been sold.

The scenario was made by Harvey F. Thew and Albert S. Le Vino, and the story transferred to the screen by Director Lawrence B. McGill.

It is said to be a point with Miss Reed never to contract to play in a drama, the scenario of which she has not read in advance.

When W. E. Shallenberger, the Arrow president, approached Miss Reed for the purpose of getting her to appear in "The Woman's Law," he found that she had almost definitely pledged herself to play twelve weeks on the road in a special production of "The Yellow Ticket."

Finally she agreed that if the scenario of "The Woman's Law" impressed her favorably, she would postpone her road tour long enough to play the stellar role in the picture.

After she read the scenario Miss Reed said to Mr. Shallenberger:

"This is the very best scenario that has ever been submitted to me," To Messrs. Thew and Le Vino she sent equally warm praise.

The story in "The Woman's Law," which is said to be one of unusual suspense, revolves about this opinion of Judge Allison: "Except for finger prints, I can find in New York the living double of any man in the world."

Florence Reed has the role of Gail Orcutt, the home-loving wife of a dissolute New York millionaire.

After her husband has become a murderer, Gail, invoking "The Woman's Law" —the law that makes a mother do anything to protect her young—hands over to the district attorney the living double of her husband, in order to save her boy from being branded as the son of a convicted felon.

The double, committed to a sanitarium as an incompetent, regains his normal health, but his memory of things prior to his commitment does not return.

Gail is compelled to receive him into her home as her husband, whom even the stranger believes himself to be.

The real husband reappears, and in his second secret entrance into the house to rob Gail of her jewels and remaining cash he is shot by the butler at just the moment that the district attorney and a reporter, who has uncovered the deception, reach the house.

Gail then confesses, and the true identity of the stranger is learned. The reporter suppresses his story and the district attorney sees that substantial justice is done.

Historic and Artistic Fame of Indiana in Films

Hoosier State Is First to Perpetuate Its Traditions in Motion Picture Medium—Selig Is Commissioned by Authorities to Prepare Production for the Screen

INDIANA is to be the first state to perpetuate her historic and artistic fame through the lasting medium of motion pictures.

Robert M. Cass, of Indianapolis, representing a group of Indiana patriots, and acting with the complete approval and support of the Indiana State Historic Commission, has signed a contract with the Selig Polyscope Company, of Chicago, for the filming of a spectacular production, in seven reels, which will picturize and preserve the history of the Hoosier State from LaSalle's time to the present day.

Production of "Historic Indiana" will start immediately at the Selig Chicago studios. Gilson Willets, the noted writer, who scenarioized "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and "The House of a Thousand Candles," has been engaged to prepare the special scenario.

According to Mr. Cass, the Governor of Indiana, will request James Whitcomb Riley, the beloved poet, to write the subtitles in verse.

Meredith Nicholson, Booth Tarkington, George Ade and others of the Indiana literary circle, are expected to support "Historic Indiana," by contributing special articles and making suggestions. When completed the photoplay is to be presented in every city and town, in every school house in the State of Indiana, to further foster State pride and patriotism and to educate Indiana citizens to the wonderful details of Indiana historic lore.

It will also probably be presented wherever the sons and daughters of Indiana congregate.

Not a locality named in Indiana history, nor an incident that aided in emblazing Indiana's fair name on history's pages will be overlooked. A share of the profits of the film is to go to the Indiana Historic Commission.

Marguerite Beriza, the world-famous grand opera star, late of the Chicago and Metropolitan Grand Opera companies, will probably be selected to play the leading feminine role.

She will be supported by a carefully selected cast of Selig players and by men and women prominent in Hoosier State history.

The production is to be finished by late spring. Players will visit localities in Indiana famous in history, in order to obtain correct atmosphere.

These localities will include probably the home of General Lew Wallace, the home of President Harrison and all other localities and scenes which in any way have contributed to Indiana's fame throughout the nation and throughout the world.

MORAL FEATURE FILM IS FORMED BY BRUCE MITCHELL FOR JUNE RELEASES

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 3.

The Moral Feature Films Corporation has been organized in Los Angeles by Bruce Mitchell, former director general of the National Film Corporation, and William A. Hoefgen, who is president and general manager.

This corporation is capitalized at one hundred thousand dollars. They plan to make multiple reel subjects to be released direct to theatres.

The active production of the first subject entitled "The Beast," will be taken up not later than March 15.

Bruce Mitchell is the author of this, and will personally direct the production, which will have Louis J. Cody and Dorothy Dalton for its leads.

This deals with the liquor traffic of today, and is endorsed by many of the leaders of the prohibition and anti-saloon league movement, ministers and others.

It is expected the first subject will run in the neighborhood of twelve thousand feet.

It is planned that this will be ready for release some time in June. Settings and all properties are now being prepared, and negotiations will be closed within a few days for a studio.

DINNER FOR DANIEL FROHMAN AT ASTOR ON MARCH 26

In recognition of his years of service for the betterment of the stage and the motion picture, in which field of late he has been very active, Daniel Frohman will be the principal guest at a dinner in his honor in the Astor Hotel ball-room on Sunday evening, March 26.

Both men and women of prominence on the stage and screen will attend.

The committee in charge consists of Messrs. A. L. Erlanger, Otto H. Kahn, Alexander Lambert, Brander Matthews, Dudley Field Malone, J. Stuart Blackton, Marc Klaw, John Drew, Alf Hayman, Walter Damrosch, Augustus Thomas, Charles B. Dillingham, Adolph Zukor, William Harris, Sr., George M. Cohan, William Courtleigh, Sam H. Harris, John W. Rumsey, David Belasco, William A. Johnston, Joseph Brooks and Samuel Goldfish.

"Hidden Law" Stars Margaret Gibson and Clifford

Second Picture Featuring the Two Players in a Horsley Production Is from Pen of Theodosia Harris and Will Be Released as a Mutual Masterpicture on the 25th

DAVID HORSLEY announces as the vehicle for the second co-starring appearance of Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, a five-part dramatic feature entitled "The Hidden Law."

It is from the scenario by Theodosia Harris, who has been responsible for many of the stories used in past David Horsley productions, and is scheduled for release on March 25 as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition.

The theme is based on the hidden law of justice. The author has treated it in a most interesting fashion by placing the characters in familiar spheres and laying the action in colorful environment.

The earlier part of the action takes place in theatrical surroundings while the latter half is unfolded in the remote wilds of the Western mountains.

Mr. Clifford is cast for the role of Carlton, while Miss Gibson appears in the part of the "princess of the mountains." Their supporting cast includes Frederick Montague, Robert Kenyon, Mae Adams, Doris Baker, Marie Gavette, John Oaker and Pauline Williams.

"The Love Liar," a five-part production scheduled for release on March 27, as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, featuring Crane Wilbur, is the biggest production coming to date from the David Horsley studios.

The story, written by Mr. Wilbur, gives the star what is probably the best part he has ever enacted before the motion picture camera for the Horsley studios.

The title of "The Love Liar" is obtained from the principal character, David McCare, a famous violinist, played by Mr. Wilbur.

McCare, as explained by a subtitle, is that type of man who leaves a wake of ruined lives and broken hearts behind him; a man who tells so many love lies that he finally believes them himself, eventually to his own undoing.

Acting strength has been provided by Mr. Wilbur by the engagement expressly for this picture of Lucy Payton, Mae Gaston, Nan Christy, Ella Golden, Fred Goodwins and Brooklyn Keller, for the principal supporting roles.

In the big ballroom and cafe scenes hundreds of supernumeraries take part.

Spears to Lecture Before Rothacker Employees

Chief of Research Laboratory Is Slated for Talks on Technical Subjects of Interest to Cameramen, Beginning April 17—Schoenbaum to Lecture on Factory Efficiency

A SERIES of special lectures and educational talks for the benefit of employees has been inaugurated by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago.

These lectures, which are illustrated by motion pictures and by charts drawn on a blackboard, are being given by E. H. Spears, chief of the Rothacker Research Laboratory.

The schedule for talks to April 17, inclusive, is as follows: March 6, to cameramen on "Lighting of Subject and Exposure"; March 13, "Practical Outline of the Fundamental Points of Photography"; March 20, "Development and Time of Development for Cine Positive Film When Prints Are Made from Negative of Inferior Quality"; March 27, "Proper Exposure to Be Given on Cine Positive Film from Negatives Which Are Contrasty, Flat and Good"; April 3, "Compounding of a Developing Formula"; April 10, "Toning of Cine Positive Film and the Chemical Actions of the Same"; April 17, "The Dyeing of Cine Positive Film."

Technical Secretary Schoenbaum, of the Rothacker plant, formerly technical secretary for Charles Pathè, Paris, gives, each week to the employees, a lecture on the subject of factory efficiency.

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, March 4.

S. L. ROTHAPFEL, premier exhibitor, introduced his ideas to the Middle West at a complimentary performance held in the Colonial theatre here on Saturday evening, February 26.

The Colonial, which housed "The Birth of a Nation" during its phenomenal run, has been completely renovated under Mr. Rothapfel's supervision. Triangle features exclusively will be shown.

On entering the theatre the patron is saluted by one of the three negroes in Hindu garb, is offered a program and thanked. The head usher, dressed in a military uniform decorated with gold triangles, salutes, indicates the aisle and thanks the patron.

The aisle usher salutes, conducts his charge to a seat, salutes again, and thanks the patron once more. This courteous treatment puts the patron in a pleasant frame of mind to enjoy the performance.

A fine example of the training of these ushers was given at the opening performance. A burning building, two blocks away, sent smoke into the theatre, and some persons in the audience became visibly disturbed.

Instantly the ushers, without any instruction, walked down the aisles, saying in an assuring tone, "There is no danger. The odor is caused by the new projection machines." This quieted the panicky ones at once.

The symphony orchestra of twenty-five pieces played the overture from "William Tell," while the various storm and lightning effects were thrown on the stage setting.

This setting, a most artistic one, has for a background a land-locked lake, with towering mountains on all sides. The foreground is a Roman villa. This unusually beautiful effect was created and installed by Sosman and Landis, Chicago stage designers.

Next followed about 1,200 feet of animated news, selected from Pathé and Universal weeklies. A duet was interpolated between this and a reel showing broncho busting and other Western pastimes.

Another duet preceded the next film, 800 feet of a Kleine travel picture. Harriet Jane MacConnell then rendered an aria from "Samson and Delilah."

The star event of the evening was the Triangle-Fine Arts feature "Daphne and the Pirate," with Lillian Gish. This was followed by two selections sung by the Colonial quartette.

The performance was here interrupted by an usher who walked across the stage with a telegram and package. The usher presented these to Mr. Rothapfel, who had himself been leading the orchestra.

The telegram was read to the audience by one of the musicians. It was sent by D. W. Griffith, Mack Sennett, and Thomas H. Ince, and was a congratulatory message expressing admiration for Mr. Rothapfel.

The package, when opened, was found to contain a beautifully turned baton. In a neat speech, Mr. Rothapfel thanked the audience for its good will, and with the new baton waved the orchestra into life.

The final offering of the evening was a Keystone comedy, "He Did and He Didn't," with Roscoe Arbuckle and Mabel Normand.

Many persons socially prominent were in the audience.

The theatre is equipped with a Minusa Cine screen and two new Simplex projection machines. A large electric sign on the theatre front was installed by the Thomas Cusack Company.

BUNDY RETURNS TO PACIFIC COAST FROM NEW YORK VISIT

Harlow E. Bundy, whose son, Bruce F. Bundy, has established the El Dorado Feature Film Company in Pasadena, Cal., with Harris L. Forbes as managing director, has been a recent visitor to New York City.

He has just returned to the Pacific Coast after remaining ten days in the East. During his stay Mr. Bundy held several conferences with Arthur S. Kane, 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, regarding plans for marketing the El Dorado output.

A definite announcement is expected shortly. The first release, "The Impersonation," in five parts, featuring Neva Gerber, supported by Lamar Johnstone, Rex Downs, May Cruze, and others, has been completed. Work is about to begin upon the second production.

"Business Suffers from Overproduction"—Langan

"No Need for One New Picture a Day Demanded by Some Exhibitors," He Declares—"Right Kind of a Subject Will Crowd a House Three Days"

ARTHUR C. LANGAN, of the Popular Pictures Corporation, contends that the chief handicap to the motion picture industry today is the utterly superfluous activity of film manufacturers in turning out countless reels of unnecessary screen material.

In other words, he claims that, in this country at least, the business suffers from overproduction.

"There can be no doubt in the mind of any unbiased person who has studied the subject that the manufacturers produce a great many more films than are needed and the industry suffers in consequence," said Mr. Langan to a News representative.

"The bitter rivalry between certain of the big producers is responsible for a great deal of this overproduction and consequent loss to themselves in the long run.

"Not until the exhibitor is obliged to pay just exactly what a picture is worth, being neither over nor undercharged, can the manufacturers all expect to make money.

"There is absolutely no necessity for the 'one new picture a day' schedule favored and demanded by many exhibitors. The right kind of a picture will crowd any house for three days, and with the larger theatres of the big cities for a week.

"I look to see the day when the two-pictures-a-week system will be in general vogue in this country. It is the proper policy for theatres in small towns and for small houses in the big cities which cater to their own sections exclusively.

"The one-picture-a-week is all right for the big theatres of the large cities, such as the Strand and Broadway houses here.

"The small town theatre, or small theatre of the big city could not afford the one-picture-per-week schedule, for their patrons would be speedily used up, consisting as they do of a regular crowd in each instance. But the two-per-week would outlast the audience, and not only that, but make matters far easier for the exhibitor in arranging his program, giving him more time to choose his attractions by viewing them in advance.

"Best of all, the manufacturers could cut down their output and stop playing a losing game. There are few critics who will deny that the majority of features being turned out nowadays lack coherency of plot, are padded painfully to attain the five-reel length, and contain some marvelously bad photography.

"All these imperfections are foisted upon the public because of the overproduction mania and speeding-up craze so fatally popular with some manufacturers."

EWAN JUSTICE LEAVES NEW YORK WORLD FOR FOX PUBLICITY DIRECTORSHIP

Ewan Justice on March 1 left the New York World and became publicity director of the Fox Film Corporation, succeeding John W. Rankin, whose retirement was made necessary by a critical illness and surgical operation.

Mr. Justice is one of the best-known newspapermen in New York and Washington, having done duty there for the World.

In addition to his extensive World experience he is known all over this country and Europe through his long connection as publicity representative with the North German Lloyd Steamship Company.

Not long after the war began, when the activities of the big steamship company were brought to a virtual standstill, Mr. Justice returned to the World, where he remained until joining Mr. Fox.

HILLIARD, JUVENILE AND LEAD, UNDER FOX CONTRACT

Harry Hilliard, juvenile actor and leading man, has signed a long term contract to appear exclusively in William Fox pictures.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

SPECIAL CHILDREN'S SHOWS: THEIR IMPORTANCE TO THE EXHIBITOR—A CONCRETE EXAMPLE

SPECIAL showings for children: the next important step in the exhibiting end of the business.

The full significance of this movement was set forth in last week's issue of Motion Picture News by William A. Johnston. Exhibitors everywhere ought to accord it their special attention; and in order that showmen, who are not yet giving children's days or matinees, may know what their more progressive fellows are doing, this department will run a series of articles on the subject.

These articles will take up, among other things, the proper way to advertise children's performances, for they must be properly advertised if they are to achieve maximum results.

In the beginning, we urge exhibitors to connect up their children's showings with the activities of local charitable organizations, women's clubs, etc. This should be done, first, because it will go a long way toward disarming censorship advocates, who say that no pictures fit for children are shown; second, because it will align the exhibitor with centres of influence in his city; and third, because it will advertise his theatre in an effective fashion.

How is the exhibitor to enlist the aid of these organizations? Let us take a concrete example—the case of the Majestic theatre, Columbus, Ohio. The Majestic is giving "a series of children's performances on ten successive Saturday mornings, both to provide programs of a high order of merit, especially for children, and to provide a means of contribution to worthy charities in which children are among the beneficiaries."

This means, of course, that the exhibitor virtually turns over his theatre, once a week, to charity. What does he get in return? The Majestic got the endorsement of the Columbus Board of Education, St. Ann's Guild, the Pleasure Guild of the Children's Hospital, and the Columbus Chapter of the Anti-Tuberculosis Society, to each of which organizations went net proceeds of Saturday morning shows. Endorsement of this kind is not only highly desirable, but it is a positive advertising asset to the theatre, because it creates good will in influential circles.

The Majestic loses nothing; it gains much. What it is doing, picture theatres, large and small, can do. The management of the Majestic would not be devoting so much attention to performances of this kind, if they were financial drawbacks. And the importance attached to the movement by the Majestic is demonstrated by the fact that a whole page is devoted in the Majestic house organ to it.

Even if the exhibitor cannot see the wisdom of linking up children's shows with organizations in his town, he can at least give a morning a week to the presentation of pictures which are suitable for the young.

CHILDREN'S MATINEES MAKE HIT IN ST. JOSEPH, MO.

Abe Riegelman's children's matinees on Saturday mornings at the Colonial theatre in St. Joseph, Mo., have received the endorsement of all the prominent men and women of his city in addition to that of the Federation of Women's Clubs.

Two performances are given for the benefit of the children each Saturday morning, one at ten and one at eleven fifteen. Mr. Riegelman is thoroughly satisfied with the success of his undertaking.

The CHILDREN'S HOUR

BELOW you see one of the two large houses which attended the children's program offered at the Majestic on the morning of January 29, when the performances were given for the benefit of the shoe fund of the public schools. In the foreground will be seen the gifted blind pianist, violinist and singer, Arthur Kellogg, who has been furnishing music for these occasions. Of the proceeds a letter to the Majestic management from Edward B. MacFadden, clerk and treasurer of the board of education, is sufficient explanation: "Report was made to the board of education . . . that the sum of $112.81 had been turned over to the treasurer of the board, who is custodian of the shoe fund of the . . . St. Ann's guild was another one of the charities benefited and a letter from Katherine Townsend, its secretary, expressed appreciation. "We were greatly in need of money just at this time," she wrote, "as a new addition to the Infant asylum is being erected, and so we were highly gratified by the amount —$142.50—which we received." The Pleasure guild of the Children's hospital was similarly appreciative.

A feature which was introduced into the performances given on the morning of February 19 was quite apart from the pictures or the songs and yet was highly educational. The theater was decorated in the flags of the Anti-

CENSORS OUTWITTED BY LIVE WIRE PUBLICITY MANAGER

Claiming that close up views of the German Emperor and Field Marshal Von Hindenburg in "On the Firing Line with the Germans" might lead to riots or other trouble, the Pennsylvania censors forthwith ordered out about 100 feet of film showing these gentlemen as "large as life and twice as natural," leaving them in other scenes. Nor would the astute board allow the posters of the Emperor and his General to be displayed anywhere in town. But the censors counted without their host.

Steve Talbott, publicity manager of the Chestnut Street Opera House, Philadelphia, was too clever for the board.

There being no law against giving the condemned film away, Talbott had the eliminated 100 odd feet cut into separate pieces each containing the condemned photographs, making about 2,000 in all. These were mounted on cards with the German colors, with a brief explanation of the censor's actions and used as souvenirs until all were given out.

The war pictures ran four weeks at the Opera House and although the top price at evening performances was 50 cents, the attendance reached the 100,000 mark.

Cameraman Durborough exhibited the motor car that was used in his eight months' work with the Germans, and the lectures he gave at each performance vied with each other in the amount of interest attracted all through the month's run of the eight-reel feature.

NEWSPAPERS AID IN EXHIBITION OF "THE FOURTH ESTATE"

Many daily newspapers have taken occasion to hold exhibitions in connection with the showings of the recent Fox feature film, "The Fourth Estate." An exhibition held in Tulsa, Okla., by the Majestic theatre and the Tulsa Daily World was fairly typical of the newspaper interest in this particular Fox picture.

In the lobby of the Majestic theatre were printers' type cases, proof presses, headline type, stereotype metal plates, dried matrices from which the plates are cast, and a miniature press from which were produced before and after each performance thousands of papers printed while patrons looked on. The coming of the filmed "The Fourth Estate" was an event in larger cities as it was in Tulsa. Newspapers, because the feature has a newspaper theme, announced it liberally on their front pages, on the editorial pages, and all of the newspapermen of many cities were present at invitation performances.

BOX PARTIES PROVE POPULAR IN SEATTLE THEATRES

Why not encourage box parties at your theatre? Here is what Jensen & Von Herberg, owners of several Seattle theatres, have done in this connection, we learn from V-L-S-E Pals:

They have sent attractive announcements to several thousand patrons of their various houses telling them that the loge seats on the mezzanine floor are available for large or small parties at any performance. The scheme is proving very popular.

"LIVELY PARALLEL" IN EXHIBITOR ADVERTISING

YOU have heard of the "deadly parallel." Well, here is the "lively parallel"—a newspaper ad, whose first name is animation. It appeared in the Los Angeles Examiner, and is one of the most effective exhibitor ads we have seen in a long time.

The Majestic and Burbank theatres, Los Angeles, are under the same management, of course, but we wonder how many exhibitors who control two theatres in the same town would have thought of a scheme like this? Note how the idea of friendly rivalry between the Gish sisters has been used to arouse interest in the reader's mind. Note how the ad suggests, without actually saying it, that the reader will want to see both films, not only because the stars are sisters, but also because of the similarity of subjects.

This is real advertising. It calls forth curiosity. It offers contrast. It sets people talking. It has great personal appeal, because the idea is built around a flesh and blood relationship.

Even if an exhibitor does not control two houses in the same town, there is no reason why, in booking pictures whose subjects are similar, or whose stars are related, say, he cannot employ the contrast idea in some form. If a striking love theme, for instance, is portrayed in some picture already shown, and a similar theme, or a contrasting one, for that matter, is handled in a subsequent picture, the exhibitor should recall the first picture to the minds of his patrons. The place to do this is in the newspaper ad or the house organ. And the exhibitor should never let such a golden opportunity as that presented in the case of the two Gish pictures get by him.

DANGER OF ADVERTISING STARS EXCLUSIVELY

The motion picture is no longer a novelty. People do not go to see pictures, just because they are pictures. This fact is becoming more and more evident every day, and it points a warning to exhibitors.

It means that exhibitors, when they aim at the greatest possible patronage for a given picture, must shoot straight in their advertising of it. Merely announcing that you have a picture to show will not excite anybody. Merely announcing that the picture offers a certain star will not excite everybody, even if that star is very well known. Picture fans are getting very discriminating. They are ceasing to ask, "What theatre is showing such and such a star tonight?" Instead, the question is getting to be, "What picture is Such and Such in this time? How does it differ from a lot of other pictures Such and Such has been in before"?

There is not the slightest doubt that the use of a star's name in exhibitor advertising has its value, a considerable value. But it is not the whole story by any means. And its power to draw maximum attendance is waning day by day, because people are getting surfeited on the question of stars.

The plain fact is that the screen is much more than a mere background for a star. The screen is a magnificent story-telling medium. The players have their place, but the screen does not belong to them exclusively. And in advertising pictures, exhibitors are falling short of the mark when they advertise stars and nothing else.

What we are arguing for is a little variety in exhibitor advertising. We should like to see exhibitors dwell on beautiful settings in a picture; or its most dramatic moments; or, most of all, its story.

Remember this: stars come and stars go, but the story goes on forever, because it is a mirror in which humanity sees its own emotions.

AVOID SENSATIONAL METHODS OF ADVERTISING

Motion Picture News has consistently argued against sensational exhibitor advertising. We have said that, in the long run, it is a losing proposition for exhibitors. On the other hand, the right kind of advertising wins every time. Here is a proof of the correctness of our contention:

The Washington, D. C., Mutual Exchange is in receipt of a communication from the Victoria theatre, Martinsburg, W. Va., stating that the theatre played to $265.00 in one day from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. on "Damaged Goods." The house has a capacity of only 350.

The exchange has insisted that all sensational advertising be avoided in connection with this feature. The result has been big box office receipts for exhibitors in its territory, a thing that would not have been possible if sensational publicity methods had been resorted to.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

HOLBROOK BLINN AND COMPANY UNDER DIRECTION OF BARRY O'NEIL ARE WORKING ON "GREATER LOVE"

THE now active World-Equitable film corporations, with their great diversity of players, subjects and studio equipments, within the forthcoming few weeks, will send broadcast over their respective programs, a series of the newly conceived production novelties, bearing out their intentions of commercializing their features.

Holbrook Blinn and his supporting players, under the guidance of Barry O'Neil, are at Fort Montgomery, N. Y., where the immense exteriors called for by Frances Marion's "The Greater Love" is being staged.

"The Greater Love" is based on a scenario formed on one of Tolstoi's powerful fictional works. It will require at least ten days' preparatory work at Fort Montgomery to arrange the sets essential to the proper effect.

Maurice Tourneur is busily engaged on two productions in which House Peters is starring. "The Hand of Peril" is in the final stages.

"The Closed Road" is half completed, and both creations call for all the ingenuity of Tourneur.

In "The Hand of Peril," the first scene of its kind ever resorted to in film history was that shown in a nine-room house, each and every room being shown at the same time and the action of the picture being watched without flashbacks, jumping from scene to scene, or without once losing sight of the numerous characters in the action.

In "The Social Highwayman," under the direction of Edwin August, a four-story freight elevator has been installed in the Peerless-World studio by arrangement with the Otis Elevator Company.

John Ince, directing Frank Sheridan, Arthur Ashley and Ethel Grey Terry in "The Struggle," transported in portable shape a number of highly decorated rooms, representing the interior of steamer salons, companionways and smoking rooms, from New York to Miami, Fla., where, after being built into a dry dock by means of a superstructure, were elaborately finished, then with slowly lowering machinery sunk with the action of the play going on while the blue waters of the Florida Gulf Stream arose.

Frank Powell is to emphasize his big scenes in the forthcoming Gail Kane production. Carlyle Blackwell, under the direction of Wray Physioc, is stopping short of nothing to make "The Shadow of a Doubt" a more stirring story than his latest, "The Clarion."

John Mason is working with his customary virility at the Triumph studio in "The Reapers," which promises to outdo any of Mr. Mason's previous efforts, while Jane Grey in "The Surrender" gives every promise of being a startlingly supreme concoction, according to reports which reach the New York offices.

Robert Warwick and Frances Nelson are on their seventh week in Florida, working on "Human Driftwood." Mollie King and a supporting cast of thirty-five principals are in the South staging the finishing touches of "The Call of Love."

Alice Brady is busily engaged on "Her Great Sacrifice," while Edna Wallace Hopper, Charles J. Ross and Muriel Ostriche are in the concluding stages of Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf's startling film tale "Who Killed Simon Baird."

"The Chain Invisible," with Bruce McRae and Gerda Holmes under the supervision of Frank Powell, is now complete after ten weeks in Cuba and four busy weeks at the Equitable Fifty-second street studio.

"HAVE A HEART," E. & R. JUNGLE, A LAUGHMAKER

"Have a Heart," is the current E. & R. Jungle Film Company's comedy, wherein Lillian Leighton as the leading woman of a "fillum" company, secures a position for her sweetheart, Ralph McComas, and he becomes the cameraman.

The big punch of the story is that of the cameraman becoming infatuated with the ingenue, and during a spooning marathon at lunch time, Sallie, the chimpanzee, turns the crank.

What is shown in the projecting rooms of the studio that evening gives all a laugh. Napoleon and Sallie, the chimpanzees stage a boxing bout in this film which for speed is said to be a world beater.

This is the last picture to be made for the company by Louis Chaudet who has served as director.

Charles Franz, who has produced comedies for the past six years, three years with Edison, two with Selig, and later with the Keystone, has been engaged, and will take up the work during the coming week.

MARCH AND APRIL WILL BRING LIST OF NOTABLE PLAYS FROM ESSANAY

GEORGE K. SPOOR, president of Essanay, announces a strong list of releases for the months of March and April. Among these, released on the V-L-S-E program, are "Sherlock Holmes" and "Secret Service," the two plays written and enacted on the stage with such great success by William Gillette.

Mr. Gillette's services were secured by Mr. Spoor, and this famous actor will portray in film the characters which every stage-lover knows.

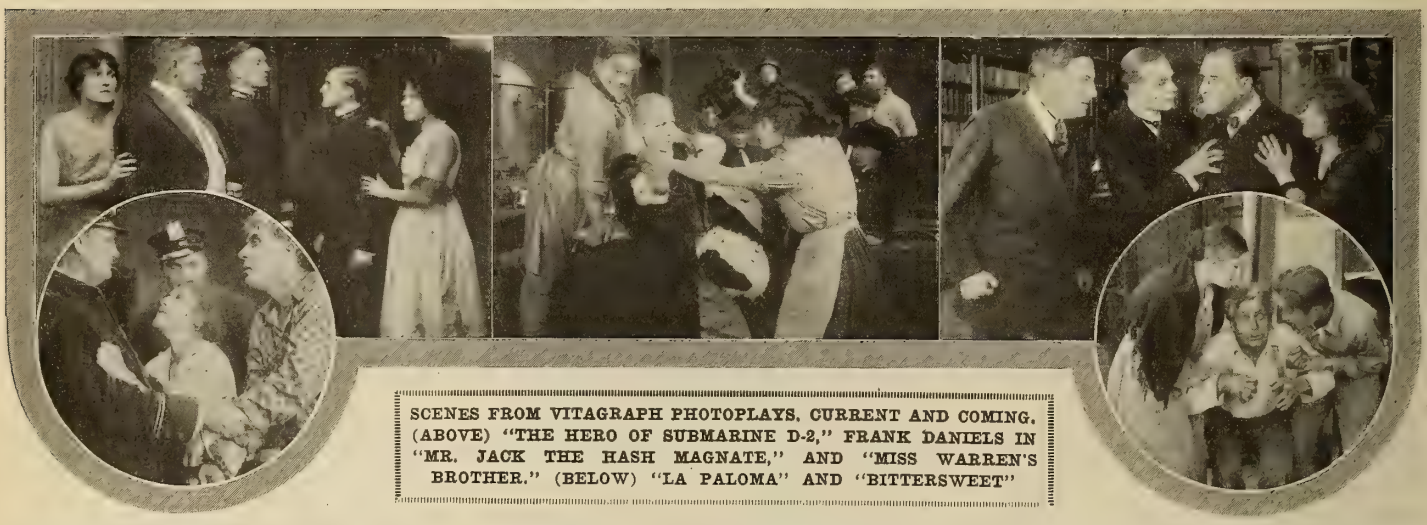
Another multiple release is "The Havoc," written by H. S. Sheldon, which also had an exceptional run on Broadway.

Gladys Hanson, the Broadway star, was secured to enact the leading role, that taken in the stage success by Laura Hope Crews. Lewis H. Stone, who played the leading role in the speaking production of "The Misleading Lady" and in many other plays famous on the stage, takes the leading masculine part in which Henry Miller appeared in the stage version. Bryant Washburn is the heavy.

Among Essanay's shorter productions, released through the General Film Company, are several notable plays. "Beyond the Law" is one of the strongest of these. This is a three-reel subject taken from "The Snow-burner Pays," written by Henry Oyen, the well-known novelist, and published in the Adventure Magazine not very long ago.

This is a sequel to the three-reel production released some time ago by Essanay, "The Snow-burner."

This story is of the North woods, and a troupe of players went to Virginia and Minnesota for locations.



The picture was filmed under the direction of E. H. Calvert, who also plays the role of the Snow-burner. All the characteristic scenery of the country of deep snows is shown. Marguerite Clayton takes the leading feminine role in this photoplay.

Another notable subject is "Joyce's Strategy," a two-reel play, written by Harry Beaumont especially for Joyce Fair, the eleven-year-old star who made such a hit on Broadway in "The Dummy," playing opposite Ernest Truex. Darwin Kerr takes the leading masculine role and Lillian Drew the heavy lead.

Other three-reel releases are "A Man's Work," featuring John Junior and Elizabeth Burbridge; "Unknown," featuring Richard C. Travers, Marguerite Clayton, and Ernest Maupain, and "I Will Repay," featuring Marguerite Clayton, John Junior and Edward Arnold.

"The House of Surprise," in which John Junior and Elizabeth Burbridge are featured, and "The Intruder," featuring Marguerite Clayton and Richard C. Travers, are other two-reel releases.

Added to these are several of Vernon Howe Bailey's sketch books of various cities in America and abroad, the Canimated Noon Pictorials, by Wallace A. Carlson, and "The Mary Page" series, with Henry B. Walthall and Edna Mayo now well under way.

GAUMONT CHANGES VEHICLES FOR GERTRUDE McCOY

When Gertrude McCoy was signed two weeks ago by the Gaumont company to star in its five-reel features, released as Mutual Masterpictures, de luxe edition, it was announced that her first photoplay would be "The Quality of Faith."

No sooner had this announcement been made, however, than F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont company, received from Paul M. Bryan an original manuscript which he recognized at once would make a vehicle for Gaumont's new star.

Mr. Bradford immediately wired the Gaumont winter studios at Jacksonville, Fla., to hold Miss McCoy for the new photoplay.

This five-reel feature, called "The Isle of Love," is a dramatic story of a stage favorite, played by Miss McCoy, who is courted by all New York.

Yet by a strange accident the light opera queen finds herself at last on an island in the South Seas, married by force to a sea captain whom she had once spurned.

Paul M. Bryan, author of "The Isle of Love," has written a great many Gaumont successes, among them "The Idol of the Stage," "Lessons in Love," and in conjunction with Joseph H. Trant, Gaumont's latest five-reel offering, "According to Law."

"The Isle of Love" is being directed by Edwin Middleton. Prominent in Miss McCoy's support are Earl O. Schenck, as leading man, and Iva Shepard.

BESSIE CLARK FOR LEADS IN CUB COMEDIES

Bessie Clark, formerly identified with the Jesse L. Lasky forces, where she played ingenue parts, and also a member at one time of the L-Ko comedy company, has been engaged by David Horsley to play the leading feminine roles in Cub comedies, in which George Ovey is featured.

Miss Clark has had extensive stage and screen experience. She began her professional career at the age of eight, when her parents placed her on the legitimate stage.

Since then she played in stock and with road shows and then entered motion pictures.

She will make her first appearance in Cub comedies with the release of "Jerry's Big Game," on March 10.

RICHMAN AND ELEANOR WOODRUFF WILL BE SEEN IN "V" NAVY SUBJECT, MARCH 13

A NAVAL thriller, an authentic view of the U. S. Navy in all its departments, from life at Annapolis and Newport to submarines and dreadnaughts in action, heads the list of Vitagraph films released during the week of March 13.

It is called "The Hero of Submarine D-2," written by Cyrus Townsend Brady and picturized by Col. Jasper Ewing Brady, produced by Paul Scardon with the entire co-operation of the government.

Through Col. Brady, authority was obtained "to do everything with the navy except wage war."

"The Hero of Submarine D-2" features Charles Richman and James Morrison, supported by Eleanor Woodruff and Zena Keefe; but others besides Vitagraph players are numbered in the cast.

Prominent naval officials, among them being Commander R. K. Crank, of the General Recruiting Service; Capt. Louis M. Milton, Commandant of Midshipmen; Lieut. Roger K. Welles, head of the Naval Training Station at Newport; Lieut. Commander Franck Taylor Evans, son of "Fighting Bob," are all seen in the picture.

Ten thousand dollars worth of specially designed gowns from Maison Maurice are worn by Miss Woodruff in the production, in order to uphold her position as one of Newport's leaders of society. The gowns include every type of negligee, afternoon frock and evening gowns, including valuable furs.

One of the thrills of the production is the shooting of Charles Richman through the torpedo tube on the D-2.

The story tells of the efforts of the Roumanian government to destroy the U. S. fleet. Among the Vitagraph players who handle the important roles are Anders Randolf, L. Rogers Lytton, Charles Wellesley, Thomas Mills and others. The film is a Blue Ribbon Feature, released on March 13.

Frank Daniels will make another bow to the film public on March 13 in his series "The Escapades of Mr. Jack," in a one-reel comedy, "Jack the Hash Magnate," produced by C. Jay Williams.

It shows the comedian as the proprietor of a "hash house," who suddenly develops social aspirations and poses as a nobleman.

After a duel and other exciting incidents, he is persuaded by Lizzie, his waitress, that the Four Hundred is no place for him. Belle Bruce and Edwina Robbins are in the cast.

"Miss Warren's Brother," a Broadway Star Feature in three reels, featuring Joseph Kilgour, Arline Pretty and Charles Kent under the direction of Theodore Marston, is released on March 18.

Wally Van's latest contribution to the world of fun is a one-reeler, "Putting Pep in Slowtown," which he wrote and produced himself, playing the lead. It is released on March 13.

"Freddy Aids Matrimony," a one-reeler released on March 17, is another of the series featuring William Dangman under the direction of Frank Currier.

VIRGINIA PEARSON AND COMPANY OFF FOR SARANAC LAKE

Virginia Pearson, the beautiful William Fox star, and her entire company of players have packed up their camp equipment, left Fort Lee, N. J., flat and departed for Saranac Lake to appear in scenes amid an Adirondack setting, which will form a part of the first Pearson picture.

Some of these scenes will be taken at and around Robert Louis Stevenson's cottage at Saranac, this being one of the American literary shrines.

Director Buel and his people will be in the mountains for about one week.

"WITCH OF THE MOUNTAINS" FROM GENERAL ON MARCH 24

"The Witch of the Mountains" is the title of a three-act feature to be released March 24 in the General Film service by Knickerbocker Star Features. It is a drama of mystery and startling adventure.

In this photodrama Marguerite Nichols will be featured. In support of her will be a cast including Richard Johnson, Corenne Grant, Frank Erlanger, Bruce Randall, Bert Francis and Ruth Lackaye.

The Knickerbocker Star Feature release for March 31 is "The Home-Breakers," a three-act drama featuring Margaret Landis.

"WOMAN IN THE CASE," FROM A FITCH PLAY, A LUBIN ON V-L-S-E

General Manager Irwin of the V-L-S-E announces that in addition to "The Toilers," the five-part drama of capital and labor written by Daniel Carson Goodman, the Lubin Company will soon release, through the Big Four, a picturization of Clyde Fitch's "The Woman in the Case," with Ethel Clayton and E. K. Lincoln.

This will be given an elaborate production under the direction of Joseph Kaufman.

Through the V-L-S-E, Lubin will also release in the immediate future, a picturization of Albert Payson Terhune's novel, "Dollars and Cents." Ethel Clayton and Tom Moore appear in the leading parts.

Selig is preparing, in addition to "The Crisis" and "The Prince Chap," a feature play entitled "Into the Primitive" for release on the V-L-S-E program.

This is a dramatization of Robert Ames Bennett's novel of the same name. Kathlyn Williams, Guy Oliver, and Harry Lonsdale will have the principal parts.

"THE CODE OF MARCIA GRAY" IS LATEST MOROSCO MEDIUM FOR MISS COLLIER

In a role that is said to allow her talent greater opportunities than even her initial photoplay characterization in "The Tongues of Men," Constance Collier, the noted English actress, will shortly be seen in another Morosco-Paramount release, "The Code of Marcia Gray."

The second motion picture vehicle for Miss Collier presents a drama of modern fashionable life and finance in which this artist appears as the wife of a wealthy financier brought face to face with sudden disgrace.

A SCENE FROM "THE CODE OF MARCIA GRAY," COMING MOROSCO SUBJECT WITH CONSTANCE COLLIER AND FORREST STANLEY

A story of modern times, this subject presents a theme replete with fine dramatic incidents and situations.

As the ruined financier, Henry De Vere appears opposite Miss Collier. Forrest Stanley is seen as the lawyer of the financier, who has remained a bachelor as a result of his great love for Gray's wife. Other players, such as Herbert Standing, Howard Davies and Helen Jerome Eddy, appear in the supporting cast. Frank Lloyd directed. The picture is scheduled for release on March 16.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON OF CALIFORNIA WILL FIGURE IN A UNIVERSAL

Governor Hiram Johnson of California will figure in the photoplay, "The Girl from the Golden West," which will be produced by a Universal company at Sacramento, Cal.

The company arrived there recently from the southern part of the state and the consent of the governor was soon secured to appear in the opening scenes of the play with Ruth Hampton, the star of the production.

This is the second Universal company that has gone to Sacramento during the past few months to work, because camera conditions there are so favorable. Not only is there a great variety of splendid scenery, but there is an almost total absence of fog.

During the last year, according to the weather report, Sacramento had only seventy-three cloudy days and sixty-four days that were partly cloudy.

BUILDINGS SKETCHED BY ARTIST BAILEY FOR WEEKLY ESSANAY RELEASES

Essanay is now offering for release a series of artistic sketches of all the points of interest and large buildings in the principal cities of the world.

These sketches are drawn by Vernon Howe Bailey, the noted newspaper and magazine artist, who is recognized as the best in the world in this particular line of work.

One of these subjects is released every other week. To date, Mr. Bailey has made sketches in and about New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, London and Paris.

He is now at work on New Orleans and vicinity. The sketches run for five hundred feet, the remainder of the reel being devoted to actual scenes taken around Quebec, Santa Fe, N. M., and in the Canadian Rockies.

The drawings are exact reproductions of the famous buildings of the world. They flash in as the artist draws them, and the spectator practically sees the structures being built, though built by a pen.

JANE GAIL AND MATT MOORE IN TWO MORE COMEDIES FOR "U"

Matt Moore and Jane Gail have been seen the past few weeks in some important comedies, but their next two offerings to the Universal program will far exceed anything these players have yet produced.

"A Double Fire Deception" is a one-reeler in which both Mr. Moore and Miss Gail show to very good advantage. "The Society Sherlock," a two-reel comedy featuring the players, was written by Paul West, formerly editor of the New York Sunday World, who has joined the list of Universal contributors. Both of these comedies will be released some time in March.

"JERRY'S BIG GAME," A HORSLEY CUB COMEDY, FOR RELEASE ON TENTH

"Jerry's Big Game," the Horsley Cub release for March 10, is a combination of rapidly occurring funny situations and thrilling moments.

Ovey, in the title part of Jerry, essays to impersonate a monkey. He climbs up the side of a wall and into a window four stories from the ground, jumps out again, describing a zig-zag course from window ledge to window ledge on his downward path, eventually landing in a harem, where he saves an abducted girl and is himself nominated chief, supplanting the Rajah, who is sent to prison for kidnapping the girl Jerry saved.

Director Milton Fahrney put on the comedy.

PIKE'S PEAK COMPLETING THIRD 5 REELER FEATURING GERTRUDE BONDHILL

With Gertrude Bondhill, whose work in "The Awakening of Bess Morton" and "Sins That Ye Sin," created country-wide comment, again featured in the leading role, the Pike's Peak Photoplay Company is hard at work on the completion of the third five-reel production to be released by that company through the distributing offices of Joseph W. Farnham, at 220 West Forty-second street, New York City.

Owing to the success which Mr. Farnham has had in the marketing of the two aforementioned subjects, and the interest of exchangemen which has been demonstrated by their intent to enter into contracts for twelve pictures per year, in each of which Miss Bondhill is to appear as star, Otis B. Thayer, president and distributing agent of productions for the Pike's Peak company, has decided upon this plan of manufacture with regular releases of one picture a month.

After completion of the third picture, it is most probable that "Sweet Clover," the rural comedy in which Gertrude Bondhill successfully starred throughout the United States and Canada for many seasons, will be produced.

THREE OF 4 WEEKLY RELEASES ON GENERAL FOR MARCH ONE-REEL COMEDIES WITH STARS

KALEM has perfected plans to meet the heavy demand for good single-reel comedies, and the schedule of March releases shows that three of its four weekly releases on the regular General Film program will be one-reel comedies with widely known stars.

The fourth regular release will be the one-reel "Hazards of Helen," while the new weekly two-reel series, "The Social Pirates," will be a special release through General Film.

Rose Melville as Sis Hopkins, Ham and Bud, and Ethel Teare are the featured players in the trio of single reelers issued each week.

With the railroad pictures this trio makes the Kalem output strong in pictures with "talking points," none of the releases being of the neutral sort that may be designated merely as "one-reel dramas," or "one-reel comedies."

Among the most important of the coming comedy releases is Ham's burlesque on war, "Ham Agrees with Sherman," staged with hundreds of soldiers, aeroplanes, and artillery equipment, at a cost that should set a new mark for one-reel subjects.

Ham is the commanding officer of a motley army whose uniforms vary from Mexican guerrilla outfits to powder-wigged Colonials. Bud is his aide and Norma Nicholls an intriguing spy.

The picture winds up with a "smashing" climax when Ham and Bud come tumbling to the ground in their aeroplane.

From advance bookings, and enthusiastic reports from exhibitors on the first releases, the "Sis Hopkins" comedies seem certain to make that character even more popular on the screen than she was on the stage.

Two characteristic "Sis Hopkins" comedies are promised in "A Flock of Skeletons," released Friday, March 17, and "When Things Go Wrong," on March 24.

Trade papers reviewers who have been strong in their praise of the "Sis Hopkins" subjects, also declare that "When Things Go Wrong" reaches the high-water mark.

It shows Sis as the first and only servant of a family of newlyweds.

Having Sis in charge of the kitchen is bad enough, but when relatives of both sides arrive, the troubles that follow are "multitudinous and many."

Ethel Teare's popularity forced her to stardom, and now that she is there, Ethel is living up to her laurels.

In "At Bachelor's Roost," Miss Teare is seen in a story constructed especially for her and one that allows her opportunity to display her many-sided charm in practically every scene of the film.

This single reeler is released March 22, with "The Eveless Eden" preceding it on Wednesday, March 15. In "The Eveless Eden," Ethel causes a disruption in the ranks of a woman-hater's club.

Another "Ham" subject promised for early release is "For Sweet Charity," in which a charity bazaar and numerous pretty girls are the background for Ham and Bud's fun.

RHEA MITCHELL IN "OVERALLS," FROM AMERICAN THIS MONTH

Rhea Mitchell, who long has been a favorite with the ever-increasing photoplay-loving public, has joined the American Film Company, Inc., and is featured in a five-reel American Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, to be released the middle of this month.

The title of Miss Mitchell's first vehicle wil be "Overalls," a production directed by Jack Halloway.

Miss Mitchell has had a number of years of screen experience. Her previous engagement was with the Signal Film Corporation at the organization's Los Angeles studios.

"Overalls," in addition to being the premiere for Miss Mitchell, offers to the versatile William Stowell his first opportunity to appear as a hero in an American production.

"BUNGLE'S RAINY DAY," A VIM FROM GENERAL, MARCH 24

For coming Vim comedies on the General Film program, Bungles will be seen in the release of March 24, in "Bungle's Rainy Day."

"Pokes and Jabbs," with Burns and Stull, will be seen in the release of March 24 in "Behind the Footlights."

"Plump and Runt" will fill the bill of March 30, in "Their Vacation," while "Pokes and Jabbs" will round out the month on March 31 with "Something Doing."

One of the liveliest young women in comedy today is Ethel Burton. She is the support of Burns and Stull in the "Pokes and Jabbs" series. She will be seen in "A Pair of Skins" on March 17, and "Behind the Footlights" on March 24.

DOROTHY BERNARD SCORES IN DANGEROUS STUNT

Dorothy Bernard, who has a dual role in one of the latest William Fox productions, "A Man of Sorrow," accomplished one of the most difficult bits of acting in her history, critics say, when she leaped into the ocean the other day and pretended death when taken from the icy water.

Miss Bernard was shivering like a leaf when William Farnum, who jumped in after her, brought her ashore, but with a supreme effort she tensed every muscle and remained as still as death while the camera man completed the picture.

DOROTHY PHILLIPS WILL PLAY LEADS WITH BEN WILSON

After having worked in two pictures with Director Henry Otto, Dorothy Phillips of the Universal has returned to her old director, Ben Wilson, and from now on will play leading parts with him.

The first picture to be made with these two will be "Beyond the Trail," a two-reel drama.

"U" PICTURE TO RUN WITH STORY IN LADIES' HOME JOURNAL

Director Bob Hill of the Universal studios has completed "The Dr. of Afternoon Arm," with Edith Roberts in the leading role. This picture carries a story which will appear in the Ladies' Home Journal simultaneously with the release of the picture.

Both Director Hill and Miss Roberts are now at work on "The Pursuits of Patricia," a series of adventures of a young girl which will run one reel every two weeks for ten weeks.

This miniature serial is being run in conjunction with the Snappy Stories magazine, which will print the story of the "Pursuits of Patricia" in the magazine and offer a prize of $100 for the best answer sent in by its readers, as to what they would do in Patricia's place.

This is the first serial ever made in the East by the Universal.

GAUMONT DRAWS ON FULL STRENGTH OF STOCK COMPANIES FOR "QUALITY OF FAITH"

Gaumont has drawn upon the full strength of its stock companies in casting Charles T. Gardiner's "The Quality of Faith," a five-reel feature in production at Jacksonville, under the direction of Richard Garrick.

Alexander Gaden and Gertrude Robinson have the leading roles.

They are supported by Lucille Taft, Charles W. Travis, John Rheinhard, Henry W. Pemberton, Alan Robinson, and Mr. Garrick.

DONOVAN STARTS ONE REELERS WITH EDITH SARGENT IN CAST

Frank P. Donovan, producing director for the Harvard Photoplays, has started work on a new series of one-reel pictures for one of the programs.

Devore Parmer, former Triangle star; Sydney Dalbrook, of World Film; Edith Sargent, Florence Wright, former star with Essanay; Frank Hagney, Thelma Verner and others will enact the main roles.

BESSIE BARRISCALE AT WORK IN SUBJECT WITH ITALIAN LOCALE

Bessie Barriscale, the Ince-Triangle star, who was most recently seen in "Bullets and Brown Eyes," is now working under the direction of Charles Giblyn in the making of a subject from a scenario by J. G. Hawks.

This photoplay has an Italian locale, and the star will again be seen in the role of a nun.

"TWENTY MINUTES IN MAGIC" COMPLETED BY AMERICAN

"Twenty Minutes in Magic," a one-reel comedy by Al Santell, has just been completed at the American studios in Santa Barbara.

Orral Humphrey, famous as Marmaduke Smythe in "The Diamond from the Sky," directed the comedy, and took the leading role therein.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 3.

THE first official announcement concerning the big war picture which has been in the process of making since June, 1915, came from the publicity department of the NYMP studio last week, in the statement that all scenes for this subject had been "shot."

Thomas H. Ince has in the past enshrouded the making of this spectacular drama in a veil of secrecy, and no news concerning it has been permitted to percolate from the studio other than that carried exclusively in the columns of Motion Picture News.

The first scene for this subject was made on June 6, and the last one completed on January 5. In all there are more than six hundred scenes requiring approximately one hundred and twenty thousand feet of negative film which will be cut to between nine and twelve thousand feet.

The subject is now in the hands of the cutting department, and as soon as they complete their work incidental music will be arranged.

The story deals with the horrors and uselessness of war, with a monarch as the central figure.

The scenario was originated by C. Gardner Sullivan.

One setting for this cost in the neighborhood of thirty-five thousand dollars. It was built on the plateau about five hundred feet above Inceville and represents a palace, legislative building, prison, royal court and other appropriate buildings, drives and parks.

Work was commenced on this setting in May, and it was not completed until in November.

Thirty carload or six hundred thousand feet of lumber, four thousand dollars' worth of glass, and tons of cement and plaster were used in its construction. Ten tons of cement is said to have been used for the steps of the two buildings. There are walks with a lineal footage of twelve hundred feet. All material for this was carted up the steep sand road from the studio proper by ox teams, eight oxen being used on each cart.

Supervision of Ince

The subject was made under the direction of Raymond B. West and the supervision of Mr. Ince. Hershal Mayall has the leading part, while the second most important is that taken by Howard Hickman.

Other important players of the scores taking part are Frank Burke, Charles French, George Fisher, Lola May, Ethel Ullman, Jerry Storm, and J. Barney Sherry.

How this subject will be released is yet to be determined, and the matter will probably be decided within the next few days, as Adam Kessel, Jr., one of the executives of NYMP is now in Los Angeles spending a few weeks at the Inceville, Culver City, and Keystone studios.

Telegraphic demands for a one-reel animal comedy when every director at the studio was busy, caused General Manager Tom Persons to shed his office clothes and get behind the camera during the past week.

JANE NOVAK IN AN EXCITING MOMENT IN "GRAFT," EPISODE 14

Wallace Clifton prepared a scenario which is entitled "Love and the Leopards," and Mr. Persons had the subject completed and on the way to Chicago on schedule time.

The subject features Princess Olga Celeste with her five trained leopards, and other principals are Sid Smith and Tom Bates.

Many of the scenes for this are laid in a theatrical boarding house of a large city.

Wallace C. Clifton, who for the past three years has been scenario editor at the Selig Polyscope Company, has tendered his resignation to take effect at the close of the coming week, and accepted a contract with the Popular Plays and Players Company, releasing on the Metro program.

In the new field, as with the Selig Company, Emma Bell (in private life Mrs. Clifton), will collaborate with her husband.

For the Popular Players and Players Mr. Clifton will write stories for Madame Olga Petrova, Edmund Breese, and Dorothy Green.

Jack Pickford in "Strange Adventure"

Marshall Neilan has just completed a one-reel comedy featuring Jack Pickford and Bessie Eyton, which is entitled "A Strange Adventure."

To give the plot of this would reveal a very clever one and the punch of a story which deals with a young man and his various attempts to secure the acquaintance of a foreign princess.

The filming of "The Woman Who Did Not Care," by Wallace Clifton, was taken up last week by Director Frank Beal at the Selig studio.

This is a story of a woman who is wronged by society, and under the name of Madame Gossip, conducts a column in a metropolitan newspaper, and points out the foibles and weaknesses of society, not caring whom she hits or harms.

The climax is reached when she almost causes the death of her daughter. One of the thrills of this three-reeler was made near the beach when a Stearns automobile was dashed off a two-hundred-foot cliff.

Mr. Ford Owner came along a moment later, and after viewing the wreckage for several minutes stated to Director Beal, "They ain't no machine built that will stand a knock like that."

THE HOME OF DAVID HORSLEY IN LOS ANGELES

The name part is taken by Eugene Bresserer, and the other principal players are Harry Mestayer and Edith Johnston.

This company will next take up the filming of a James Oliver Curwood story entitled "The Gold Ship."

Five Selig Animal Acts "Let" for 18 Weeks

John G. Robinson, superintendent of the Selig Zoo, has just returned from San Diego, where he made a contract with President G. A. Davidson of the exposition for an eighteen-week engagement for five Selig animal acts.

The engagement begins March 18, and several carloads of animals and equipment will be shipped, including the four trained elephants, five royal Bengal tigers who are trained, the five leopards that have appeared in vaudeville with Princess Olga Celeste, the educated Shetland ponies, and the high school horses.

These five acts will make up a program of forty-five minutes which will be given on the zone every afternoon and evening.

Production of episodes of the "Social Pirates" has been resumed at the Kalem Glendale studio by Director James Horne.

The delay in production was caused by the illness of Marin Sais, who appears as one of the pirates.

THOMAS JEFFERSON IN A SCENE FROM "THE OLD VIOLINIST" (Universal)

While it was impossible to work on the serial Director Horne completed the filming of a two-reel subject, "Justice vs. Evidence," from a scenario by himself.

The story deals with an innocent man being sent to prison, where he later confronts the guilty one and is given his freedom.

During the innocent man's term in prison, the attorney who prosecuted the case falls in love with the man's daughter, and he arrives home in time for the wedding.

The cast for this includes Paul C. Hurst, Frank Jonnason, Thomas Lingham, Ed. Clisbee and Ollie Kirkby.

The delay in the production of "Social Pirates" has enabled the technical staff to prepare additional settings for future episodes, and the filming of this will now be speedily continued.

Moffit Story for Next Blue Ribbon

Managing Director Rollin Sturgeon of the Vitagraph Hollywood studio, has selected a story by Cleveland Moffit for his next Blue Ribbon feature, and as soon as the cutting of "God's Country—and The Woman" is completed, filming of this will be taken up.

The next subject will be one of mystery and scientific crime deduction.

The filming of the Vitagraph serial "Hearts of Three," from the story by Jack London, is continuing without delay, the company now being engaged on the second episode.

A peculiar feature of this serial is that there is but one female character in the first nine episodes. This is taken by Carmen Phillips, who appears as a Spanish heroine.

General Manager H. O. Davis of Universal City is convinced that talk is not cheap, for the other day he had a twenty-minute talk with President Carl Laemnle in New York, which establishes a new transcontinental record, and was perhaps the most expensive twenty minutes in the history of this or any other motion picture company.

Mae Gaston, who has played with a number of Coast companies, and was specially engaged at the Horsley studio to play the lead in "The Love Liar" opposite Crane Wilbur, has been permanently engaged as leading woman, and is now a member of the Horsley stock company.

Louis Fitzroy, assistant director to Milton Fahrney, producer of Cub comedies, is absent from the studio on account of the death of his father, which occurred at San Francisco a few days ago. The Cub comedy company is now filming the last scenes of "On the Rampage," and will next take up the making of "Jerry and the Smugglers."

Elaborate Set for "Love Liar"

A very elaborate set was used in "The Love Liar," which depicted a marble stairway and entrance to a metropolitan cafe.

There were twenty-four steps in all, and Crane Wilbur fell from the top of these to the bottom in the climax scene where he, as the "male vampire," commits suicide when he finds the woman he truly loves untrue.

Interiors for the cafe scenes were made at the largest resort on the Coast, Nat Goodwin's cafe at Ocean Park.

The Al. Christie Nestors are this week making a two-reel subject, "His Turkish Treasures," wherein Eddie Lyons as the poor American youth declines the hand of the broker's daughter because of his insufficient wealth.

He suddenly becomes the heir of a supposed wealthy uncle of Turkey, and is advised that his uncle's treasures are in transit to him.

Immediately the marriage contract is acceptable to the broker and his daughter, and then arrives Mogul Hasson (Lee Moran) with the treasures, five in number, and many others in a jewel box.

Eddie's trials with the five wives he inherits and his betrothed provoke many comedy situations. Betty Compson is the girl, Harry Rattenberry the broker, and Stella Adams his wife.

The hall bedroom of the poor American youth is converted into a Turkish harem, but he finally settles matters with the mogul by giving him the wife in exchange for the box of jewels.

BLANCHE PAYSON, THE NEW KEYSTONE ACTRESS

The story is written by Al. E. Christie, who is personally directing this subject.

Yes, Sir—"His Wooden Leg"

Another Nestor company is filming "His Wooden Leg," at least that's the title. The direction is by Horace Davey. Ray Gallagher and Billie Rhodes appear as newlyweds who try to make their home comfortable for his veteran uncle who has a wooden leg.

They try every way of making him happy, but finally give up in disgust and send him away.

Shortly he dies, and when his will is read it is found he has bequeathed all of his real property to other relatives, and the wooden leg to Ray.

The newlyweds' friends poke much fun at them, and they try in every way to rid themselves of the undesirable inheritance, throwing it away, giving it away, burying it. It falls to the pavement and breaks open, and they immediately find themselves in possession of much gold.

Two additions were made last week to the scenario department at Universal City in the persons of Ford I. Beebe, who has been with the organization as managing and assistant publicity man for the past year and a half, and has been transferred to the photoplay department, and Elliott Clawson, formerly publicity manager for the Universal and since scenario writer and director for the Masterpiece Film Company, and for the past eight months with the Morosco-Pallas organization, is the other.

This gives Dr. H. G. Stafford, editor of the department, a staff of nine writers, the others being F. McGrew Willis, Ben Cohn, Olga Printzlau, Calder Johnstone, Earl Hewitt, Frank Wiltermood, and Walter Woods.

Don Meaney has been appointed assistant to Charles Rankin, manager of the recently-added department at Universal City, known as the Production department.

The Craig Hutchinson Joker Company has just filmed "Twice At Once," wherein Ernest Shields, believing himself turned down in a proposal by a sweet young thing, hurries off and wins the heart of another, not so small or so young, and then finds himself in a very unpleasant predicament.

By the aid of the janitor, whom he induces to go to the young one and induce her to break her engagement because her fiance is not the proper man for her to marry, he gets into still deeper water.

The women in the case are Marcia Moore and Marguerite Joslin, and the janitor is played by Harry Todd.

Following the completion of this subject the company was reorganized, and is now filming "Between Ten and One," a farce with scenes laid in a hotel where complications force a couple to register as man and wife, she occupying the bed and he the bathtub.

The Moores Take Part

Those taking part in this are Ernie Shields, Marcia Moore, and Joe Moore, brother of Tom, Matt and Owen, the fourth of the brothers to enter the picture field.

"Hubby Puts One Over" is a Joker comedy filmed by the Allen Curtis Company, wherein Mr. Binks, who has fallen into a wad of wealth, seeks pleasure on the great white way on an evening when Mrs. Binks wishes to attend a social function.

He induces an impersonator of a vaudeville show to take his place with his wife, and the trouble he has in getting back to his own fireside brings out numerous comedy situations.

Completes Jefferson Subject

Director George Cochran of the Universal producing staff has completed the filming of "The Old Violinist," which features Thomas Jefferson in the name part.

It is a story of a grand opera violinist who cares for two children until he loses his position because of age, and is then forced to give up his little pals, and they are adopted by wealthy people.

His trunk is held by the landlord for rent due. Months later the original score of an opera is found in this and sold.

The boy and girl are educated by their foster parents, and years later the girl becomes a grand opera prima donna.

When given an opera to sing she recognizes the work of her old friend, and he is brought into his own.

Little Zoe Beck and Buddy McQuoid appear in the first period as the children, and in the latter period these roles are taken by Marjorie Blinn and Frank Newberg. The story and scenario are by Calder Johnstone and D. N. Robinson.

The Lynn-Reynolds-Universal company has just completed "The Brink," featuring Myrtle Gonzales as the wife of a small town man who, when he becomes successful in the city, gives all his attention to business and neglects his wife.

A series of incidents bring her in touch with a former fiance, and she is just in the act of accompanying this man to a function when an accident occurs and the husband is brought to realize the neglect of his home.

Val Paul appears in this as the husband, and Fred Church as the former lover.

"Blue Grass and Blue Ridge" in Work

Director Reynolds and company are now engaged in filming "Blue Grass and Blue Ridge," a story of the South ,a melodrama.

A Southern colonel and his daughter learn of a struggling son of a mountaineer and aid him to secure an education. The heavy tries to force the daughter to marry him or he'll foreclose the mortgage on the farm.

The letters of the youth at school fall into the hands of the villain, and the correspondence is thus broken off.

Three years later the boy has become a successful business man, and goes on a visit to the parties who aided him in the days of need.

He learns true conditions and forces the heavy to sell the farm back to its rightful owner at a very satisfactory figure.

The cast in this is composed of Alfred Allen as the colonel, Myrtle Gonzalez as the daughter, Fred Church as the heavy and Val Paul as the mountaineer's son.

A company of Fine Arts players including Norma Talmadge, William Hinkley, W. E. Lawrence, Alice Ray, Walter Long, and the five juvenile players together with Directors C. M. and S. A. Franklin, and chaperoned by Mrs. Love, mother of Bessie Love, this week went to Santa Barbara for scenes for a subject now in production.

The title of this has not been made known, but it is announced the scenario was prepared by Roy Summerville.

Bessie Love, who was featured in "The Flying Torpedo" and "Acquitted," both Fine Arts subjects, has been cast to play opposite Douglas Fairbanks in a western play.

In this she takes the part of a simple western girl. Sam DeGrasse appears in the part of the heavy, and Mary Alden, who has been ill for several months, makes her first appearance since playing opposite Wilfred Lucas in "Acquitted."

Cowboys in Thrilling Scenes at Mojave

During the past few days the company spent some time at Mojave, where a large number of cowboys took part in scenes of a thrilling western nature.

In these Fairbanks and the two Burns brothers were the leaders. One of the big scenes is that of a western dance of the time when the gold stampede in California was at its height.

Here the cowboys put on a dance in their western costumes, and Sam DeGrasse appears as the early-day violinist. This production is being made by Director Alan Dwan.

Director Lloyd Ingram this week used several hundred extra people in scenes for "The Little Apache," a Fine Arts subject which features Mae Marsh and

CONSTANCE COLLIER AS LADY MACBETH IN THE FINE ARTS-TRIANGLE PRODUCTION

Robert Harron, who are supported by such players as Tully Marshall, Bert Hadley, Loyola O'Connor and others.

Settings representing various parts of Europe are to be seen at the Fine Arts studio, including a Russian village for "Marja of the Steppe"; Scottish castles in the eleventh century for "Macbeth"; Paris, and a western American village for "The Little Apache," and numerous others.

In the big sets erected for the D. W. Griffith production, "The Mother and the Law," hundreds of people and a great many horses, camels, and elephants were used three or four days consecutively for the making of oriental scenes said to represent conditions two thousand years B. C.

The title for the second Willie Collier-Keystone-Triangle has been changed from "His Stenographer" to "Wife and Auto Trouble."

This is now completed, and has been given screen examination at the studio, where it is pronounced even better than his first release, "Better Late Than Never."

Molasses and Flour Decorate Collier Auto

In the making of the last scenes for this, Collier drove his wheezy auto through the front of an Edendale grocery (built especially for the scene), and then forgot to turn off the power, with the result that he had molasses, breakfast foods, flour, matches and canned goods all mixed into one grand mess.

Mae Bush occupied the auto with Mr. Collier during its rampage.

The Dick Jones-Keystone, featuring Louise Fazenda and Charlie Murray, has been titled "The Judge," the name part being taken by Harry Booker, the oldest man on the lot.

Miss Fazenda appears in this as a manicurist whose wiles cause Motorcycle Cop Charlie Murray to forget the dignity of his position, and later breaks up the police court.

Another Mack Sennett-Keystone completed is entitled "A Village Vampire."

The principals in this subject are Anna Luther, who is the city maid of the country town, and Fred Mace, who again wears the makeup of the country station agent, and during the entire subject does his scenes cross-eyed.

This picture will introduce another attempt of Mack Sennett to add realism, in that in several scenes where a quantity of money is used, the director general insisted that the real goods should be there.

To make this possible, Business Manager George W. Stout of the Keystone company, drew the payroll totaling some twenty thousand dollars, and Fred Mace literally rolled in wealth the entire day, all of the money being in bills of small denominations, i.e., a hundred dollars and less.

WILLIAM COLLIER AND MAE BUSCH IN A SCENE FROM "WIFE AND AUTO TROUBLE," TRIANGLE-KEYSTONE

The money finally fell to the actors who perpetrated a robbery, and Mace had the disappointment of his life.

Mace Flabbergasted by Sight of Money

Mace was to speak during one scene, and he was so excited that he could not recall afterwards what he said, but lip language can be read by the film and it showed him saying, "Is it possible that there is this much money in the world."

Keystone Director General Mack Sennett is entertaining his mother, who is now at the West Coast for the first time.

Although advanced in years, Mrs. Sennett is a very ardent motion picture fan, and makes the claim that her life has been lengthened and the years made happier as the result of watching motion pictures.

She has kept in touch with the releases of her son's plant, and never fails to see a Keystone when it is shown near her home.

While at the studio she has shown a keen interest in the making of pictures, and has even suggested plots for comedies.

The Keystone stages are now practically completed. The most recent to be finished is that under the diffusing cloth which is by far the largest of any single stage on the West Coast, or for that matter, East Coast studios.

This is of steel construction, and so built that it may later be enclosed in glass, if Director General Mack Sennett finds such will be convenient.

This stage is approximately 200x400 feet in size, and is connected with the enclosed studio and the former open air stage.

Administration Building for Keystone

With the completion of this, the work of building a new one hundred thousand-dollar administration building will be taken up.

It is expected that Adam Kessel jr., one of the executives of the Keystone company, will remain on the West Coast until the work of the new building is well advanced.

The first two-reel picture produced at the Santa Barbara studios of the American in some time has been started under the direction of Carl Le Viness and has Vivian Rich, Alfred Vosburgh and George Periolat in the leading roles.

The story is "The Lesson," by Karl Coolidge, and shows how love is awakened and how it ripens between a young girl and the man she married in order to come into an inheritance.

The plot contains a number of complications which keep the action moving rapidly.

The artistic atmosphere in "A Broken Genius," a three-part drama by Nathan P. Oakes, which Thomas Ricketts is directing at the "Flying A" studios, is heightened by several art models who pose before Edward Coxen in a garb very close to nature.

Coxen has the title role. The story deals with the domestic affairs of an artist and his wife, who fails to understand the need of her husband using the models in order to create a masterpiece.

Lizette Thorne and George Field are other members of the cast.

Poor Orral Loses Weight in the Picture

Long, slim Orral Humphrey gains and loses a hundred pounds in a few hours in "Thinnin' Stout," a "Beauty" comedy which was written by Al Santell especially for the popular American character comedian.

It is really Mrs. Stout (Lucille Ward) who goes to Professor Thinem (John Gough) to learn his famous reducing methods, but her husband is the victim of the professor's demonstration, thereby putting a lot of laughs in this comedy.

Using the better part of a long night in order to "shoot" several exterior scenes of "Skelly's Skeleton," was the procedure of Director Archer McMackin, the "Beauty" director at Santa Barbara, when he was finishing the picture last week.

The scenes were taken in the woods around the big campfire and the effect was heightened by specially prepared candles which were carried by the players.

The most startling element of the whole play was when one player, made up as a most realistic skeleton, appeared from the shadow of the trees and danced a weird skeleton dance.

The principal roles are taken by Carol Halloway, John Sheehan, and John Steppling.

Director William Bertram, who produced the "Buck Parvin" pictures, has completed "Snow Stuff," the last of the Van Loan stories to be adapted to the screen, and has started to work upon "Under Azure Skies," which was put into scenario form by Karl Coolidge from a story by Art Acord.

Acord takes the leading role and is supported by Nita Davis, Lawrence Peyton, and Dick Le Reno, of the American.

The main interest in the story is developed when a cowpuncher, fresh from the range, is involved in the plots of two city crooks. A love theme adds heart interest.

Director Edward Sloman, who has recently become connected with the American, has started the production of "None So Blind," a five-part feature by Julian Lamothe, which has Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie in the leading roles.

The picture shows the struggle which a wife has between her theatrical ambitions and the love of her husband, who opposes her footlight career.

V-L-S-E Producers Intensifying Their Service

Program Is Rounded Out to Meet Demands of All Theatres, by Adding Many Stage Stars Heretofore Thought Inaccessible for Work in Motion Pictures

THE producers releasing through the V-L-S-E are intensifying their service and rounding it out so as to meet the demands of every class of exhibitors by the addition of many stage artists, whose talents have heretofore been thought inaccessible for film work.

The announcement that E. H. Sothern is to be seen in several Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features, distributed by the Big Four, has been followed by the news that William Gillette is to be featured by Essanay in his famous production, "Sherlock Holmes," which he himself adapted for the stage.

Lubin, in the meantime, has in the course of preparation several additional motional vehicles for Nance O'Neil, some of which, it is understood, E. K. Lincoln will be featured in as the co-star.

In addition to "The Fires of St. John," which Miss O'Neil, under Edgar Lewis' direction, has just finished in the South, Daniel Carson Goodman has just completed a five-part drama of capital and labor, with a tremendous love interest, called "The Toilers."

Dr. Goodman, it will be recalled, is the author of a recent production starring Miss O'Neil, "Souls in Bondage." He also wrote for Lubin, "Bleeding Hearts," which is to be released within the next few days, and "The Gods of Fate."

"The Toilers" has its locale in the oil fields of southern Pennsylvania. One scene will be the drilling of an oil well.

The story deals with the destruction of the heroine's father by ruthless capitalists, and of her love with the enemy of her father whom she had vowed to ruin.

In the meantime, the Selig company, which has scored added laurels through the production of "Thou Shalt Not Covet," is working on a six-reel picture version of "The Prince Chap," in which Harry Mestayer will star, and also upon the picturization of Winston Churchill's widely known novel, "The Crisis."

The first appearance of Edna May, of "Belle of New York" fame, before the screen, and a serial of very novel treatment, are added attractions which are promised on the V-L-S-E program.

MOSS SELLS RIGHTS FOR "ONE DAY" IN 15 STATES

The B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation announces that it has disposed of the rights in fifteen states to "One Day," the company's latest production in which Jeanne Iver is starred. The following territories have been sold:

Greater New York and northern New Jersey, to the Amalgamated Photo Feature Booking Corporation of New York City; New York State, Essemar Film Company, Buffalo, N. Y.; New England States, Eastern Feature Film Company, Boston, Mass.; Illinois and Indiana, Jones, Linick and Schaeffer, Chicago, Ill.; Texas and Oklahoma, to L. Santikos, of Waco, Texas.

The Australia and New Zealand rights were secured by the Australasian Film, Ltd., through Millard Johnson.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

THE heavy snow of last week delayed the milk trains from up-state all the way from three to four hours. Consequently, Virginia Pearson did not get her customary cream bath until 11:19 in the morning for a day or two.

Frequently a press agent takes exception to our failure to treat his stuff seriously—a publicity man seldom does. But there's a reason. For instance, here's a sample screed received from the West Coast: "Winifred Greenwood has appeared in over 1,000 photoplays, etc., etc."

With an ordinary lead pencil, one of the office boys has figured that this means practically two pictures a week for ten years. The exact fraction is 1.9 plus plays a week for the whole period.

Now, what would you do with "news" like that?

Asks George Kleine: "Do you agree with us that the pretentious film comedy is as worthy for purposes of review and criticism as a photodrama? We believe that exhibitors and motion picture patrons are as desirous to learn about a comedy as a drama."

Mr. Kleine is opening up a fruitful line of discussion which would be worthy a symposium at the next convention. On the theory that the sole mission of the motion picture is to entertain, its character has little to do with its importance.

It depends on what is meant by "pretentiousness." For example: "The Marriage of Kitty" is a comedy, practically a farce-comedy; "Bella Donna" is a drama, with no comedy relief, and we would be inclined to place them side by side in importance to exhibitor or public.

Cleo Madison denies suggesting use of onions in case an actress is unable to "weep automatically."

She adds: "Is it not possible to 'weep automatically'?

"It requires hours for me to prepare and produce a great emotional scene and after it is over I am generally exhausted." If anyone asks us, we suspect that Cleo is preparing to ask for a raise.

Strapped as we are to a swivel chair, with our vision of the world bounded on the north by the Winter Garden stage entrance, we had always imagined Mack Sennett as a bent and nervous old man, working twenty-four hours a day hurling bottles through looking-glasses, tipping over tables, and cranking up submarines.

Instead of which, we now learn that his daily routine of beauty treatment is almost as arduous as the bathing, baking and polishing operations of Virginia Pearson. Here is the schedule, supplied by official sources of publicity:

Six a. m., rises; 6:02, greets the day; 6:05, starts off for four-mile run; 6:40, is met by "one of his favorite saddle horses," and gallops back to the studio; 7:10, boxes three rounds with his trainer, Louis Heppe; 7:25, throws the medicine ball; 7:40, punches the bag; 7:55, goes on the mat and wrestles for ten minutes; 8:05, takes his plunge; 8:15, breakfast*; 9, begins getting funny with twelve producing companies, 117 actors, 126 actresses, 242 dogs, and 1,376 cameramen.

We are also advised that Maclyn weighs in at 179 pounds, which is in "the pink of condition." In the copy furnished us, this "pink of condition" has been cancelled, and "hard as steel" substituted. We see no reason why readers should not take their choice.

*Fruit, toast, and coffee.

Special advices from a point near Santa Monica, Cal., are to the effect, to wit, as follows, c'est a dire: "George Holt, Vitagraph heavy, is ten dollars better off as the result of being snubbed by a temperamental actress at a social event.

"The day following, George sent the actress a book on etiquette, and later told a comedy director of the incident; he was not slow to use it in a 'script—hence the ten dollars for a scenario idea."

Which shows succinctly how what little money there is in the picture business is finding its way into the bank accounts of scenario writers. Oh, that some temperamental actress would snub us! But they won't do it.

Word comes to us that the hairless Mexican dog presented to Theda Bara by a press agent last fall, has suffered severely from the cold weather at Fort Lee, N. J., this winter.

If the camera is photographically accurate, which we understand it is, his mistress also has suffered.

In the name of Anita Stewart, we have received this: "Is it worth while for a photoplay star to pay serious attention to the hundreds of letters, mushy and flattering, that pour in daily?

"Is it worth while to go to the trouble and expense of answering the thousand and one questions that fans hurl at their favorites?

"Is it worth while to send photographs to all who request them?"

We'll be the goat, Anita. Is it? Let's see some of the letters.

The press representative of Clara Beyers advises us: "Clara likes the warm and comfy studio just as much as you do."

We don't know why he rings us in on it; we don't even know which studio he is talking about.

B. J. Abrams, personal representative of Paul Melies, leaves this week for New Orleans. He is to have charge of the Melies productions for the General program for the entire southern territory, and will make his headquarters in the Crescent City.

Virginia Pearson, the celebrated cream-bather of the Fox studios, used to tend bar at the Booklovers' Library in Louisville, Ky.

We say "tend bar" because we know what we are talking about; we did the same thing at the same time for the same firm, in Minneapolis.

Isn't it odd that both of us should have drifted into the same profession, or art, or business, or whatever it is.

Yes, and we had to make out reports to Seymour Eaton, and his brother, "R. T.," and little Freddie Aaron, the same as Miss Pearson did. She, no doubt, will know what we mean.

We guess the year at 1903; the Fox publicity man tells us that Miss Pearson was eighteen years old then.

If memory serves, J. W. Binder was also connected with the Booklovers' Library in those days.

Theodore Mitchell, who has been in England for some time in connection with the exploitation of "The Birth of a Nation" on the other side, is preparing to return to America within a week or ten days, according to the latest reports.

LOOKING AT THREE KALEM COMEDIES: "FOR SWEET CHARITY" (HAM AND BUD), "WHEN THINGS GO WRONG" (SIS HOPKINS), "AT BACHELORS' ROOST" (ETHEL TEARE)

A contemporary genius is the author of the following: "Pauline Frederick returned from Florida recently with somewhat less of her usual good temper.

"The cause was soon discovered when the Famous Players star began reciting the beauties of the South and then finished with a contemptuous sweep of the hand, which embraced the muddy, sloppy, snow-filled streets of New York.

"And I have come back to this!" she remarked. This is considerable—and may we add an unusual?—embrace. We trust Polly wasn't wearing any of the gowns she showed us in "Bella Donna" at the time.

"As the klaxon roared angrily at his back, the sandal-footed monk leaped to one side to allow the big motor to whiz past him. No, not an incident of the Alps, just one of the extras in Marguerite Clark's 'Out of the Drifts' crossing Fifty-sixth street in front of the Famous Players studio." Thus the carbon copy copy from the Famous Players publicity department. What we would like to know, and doubtless so would the director, is, why does the extra cross the street?

This same carbon copy, which is labelled "shorts," consists of five items. Two relate to Marguerite Clark, one to Pauline Frederick and one to Hazel Dawn, while one is denatured. Again we interrogate: Does this represent the relative standing?

Messrs. McMahon and Jackson, the Cincinnati state rights men, have been "gumshoeing" around the metropolitan film district recently looking for likely subjects for the Buckeye fans.

PLANET MAY ABSORB MANY EXISTING COMPANIES

Articles of incorporation were filed with the Delaware secretary of State on March 1, for the Planet Film Corporation, a company being organized by a group of capitalists headed by a prominent member of the New York Stock Exchange.

Details are not available but it is believed the Planet company will be made up of several existing producing organizations.

The officers of the company have not yet been designated but it is understood the head of the company will be a man of standing in the film industry.

Reviewers Learn How Their Efforts to Appraise Pictures with Due Fairness to Exhibitor and Manufacturer Is Appreciated by Hoffman of Bluebird Photoplays

GENERAL MANAGER M. H. HOFFMAN, of Bluebird Photoplays, departed last Friday for a tour of the South and Middle West to see for himself what has been accomplished in the distribution of Bluebirds during the two months the new feature program has been exploited.

This is Mr. Hoffman's first trip since launching the new series, the details of his work having kept him closely confined to headquarters since the new year opened.

Before leaving Mr. Hoffman gave out a statement which reflects his optimistic faith not alone in Bluebirds, but in many other incidentals of the moving picture industry.

"There is one adjunct of the picture business that has impressed me very much while we have been exploiting Bluebirds," said Mr. Hoffman, "and that is the remarkable judgment reviewers for trade newspapers have displayed in criticising our productions from showings in the projection room.

"The task these professional reviewers must perform is one of the most difficult and at the same time vitally important accessories to film distribution.

"One could not imagine a more negative atmosphere than that of the projection room; the audience comprises only those who are sent by their newspapers to report their honest convictions.

"There is no way to estimate just how a paid admission audience is going to look upon the picture, aside from the keen sense of judgment these men seem to possess—a judgment either acquired by the mistakes they have made or by observing the manner in which pictures they have criticised are ultimately received by the public.

"The verdict that these professional reviewers have rendered upon individual Bluebirds as they have been shown to them one by one, long before the public has had a chance to confirm or reject newspaper judgment has proven two things—that the critics know their business and that Bluebirds have been uniformly excellent in play, production and players; for the public has in every instance confirmed the verdict of the projection room jury.

"We have been exploiting Bluebirds just two months. Our first announcements were made in the first trade papers published in 1916.

"Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, in 'Jeanne Dore,' was our first release, on January 24. Including our release of 'Rupert of Hentzau' on March 6, we have since then distributed just seven features in a matter of as many weeks.

"And it is immensely gratifying to say that the public has accepted every release with just the degree of enthusiasm that the trade press reviewers predicted would be the case.

"In the campaign of distribution I have had the enthusiastic co-operation of lieutenants whose qualifications I was well aware of, and these men, knowing my methods, have carried on the work with speed and efficiency.

"We rather reversed the order of things in projecting our program—we made our plans and then made our announcements.

"The rule has been quite the reverse—announcements have been made and then plans were perfected.

"So well have our plans matured that the second month of activities finds Bluebirds in every community on the North American continent where there is a house qualified to pay for a feature service.

"Exhibitors have found the public prompt in response to the grade of features we are supplying, and in a remarkably short time the Bluebirds 'grade' mark has become identified in public esteem with the best in photoplays."

BERTHA KALICH EAGER TO APPEAR IN PICTURE BY MARY ANTIN

Bertha Kalich, William Fox star, is eager to appear in a picture written by Mary Antin. For the benefit of those who do not know about Miss Antin, it should be explained that she is the remarkable Jewish girl who began life, after emigrating to America, in a cellar in Milk street, Boston; obtained her education in the wonderful American public schools, captured the attention of the literary world by writing as her first book "The Promised Land," one of the greatest indorsements and appraisals of America ever written in English.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

GOLDSTEIN PROVES WORTH AT DENVER; HARRIS REPORTS BIG BOOKING OF "GODS OF FATE"

LOUIS GOLDSTEIN of the Universal Exchange of Denver is proving his worth as an exchange manager. The "U" Exchange reports that through the efforts of Manager Goldstein, last week's business soared high above any other week. Goldstein can be found every night in the week at his desk laboring hard on some new idea by which he can better the service of an exhibitor.

H. H. Buckwalter, manager of the Kleine-Edison Exchange of Denver, reports that the "Musty Suffer" comedies are becoming very popular in that territory.

W. H. Cree, manager of the General Film Exchange, reports that business is good. He is receiving many inquiries regarding release date of Chaplin's burlesque on "Carmen." "The Strange Case of Mary Page" is going big.

Charles R. Gilmore, manager of the World Film Exchange in Denver, reports "The Yellow Passport" a record breaker in that territory. This office had to offer three new prints to be able to supply the demand in the territory.

Many return dates have been asked for on this film and business has been exceedingly good with that exchange of late. A new projection room will be installed in the exchange at an early date for the benefit of the exhibitors.

The V-L-S-E Exchange, under the management of Frank Harris, is receiving a great number of bookings on the Lubin five-reel feature, "Gods of Fate." This picture is receiving many nice notices in the papers and has proven a great drawing card.

F. Carmichael, manager of the Fox Film Exchange in Denver, started on a trip through Nebraska, February 28. Carmichael has never been known to return to the Queen City without a number of contracts. He has Fox service represented in all but twenty-two towns in the inter-mountain territory.

Fox exhibitors in these parts will be given a surprise when the news reaches them that the six-reel Fox production, "The Bondsman," starring William Farnum, will be released on the regular program instead through the medium of the feature plan.

Manager William T. Binford, of the Denver Metro offices, is receiving many new contracts each day from Manager J. S. Bailey, of the Salt Lake Metro Branch. Bailey was former manager of the Denver office and has been picked to perform the difficult task of opening the branch office.

J. S. Applegate, manager of the Pathé Exchange in Denver, is hitting a high mark as an exchange manager. Upon his first week as manager of this exchange there was an increase of about three hundred dollars over the week previous, and from the indications so far, there will be several records broken by this new manager.

M. H. Cohn, manager of the Paramount Exchange in Denver, reports business good. Paramount productions are booked solid in that territory.

KNICKERBOCKER REPRESENTATIVES ACTIVE IN SOUTH, MIDDLE WEST AND EAST

Among the representatives of the Knickerbocker Star Features, now traveling throughout the United States are:

Jacques Earl Abrams, who is visiting the Middle West, including Chicago, Milwaukee, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cincinnati and other cities; Earl Shaw, whose district centers about Syracuse, Rochester and Buffalo; B. J. Abrams, who will visit the South, with extended calls at Atlanta, New Orleans and the studios at Jacksonville; F. G. Snodgrass, who will visit Boston and adjacent territory.

JOHNS, WELL KNOWN LOS ANGELES EXCHANGEMAN, OPENS OFFICE FOR PATHESCOPE

CHARLES CLOPOT, of the California Comedy Feature Film Company, has returned from Phoenix, Ariz., where he established a branch office at 121 Second street.

Within the next few days he will go to San Francisco, where the third office will be opened. Mr. Clopot has been engaged in the film renting business along the West Coast for several years and has a large acquaintance.

T. W. Johns, who for more than two years has been manager of the Los Angeles exchange of the Mutual Film Corporation, has tendered his resignation to become effective March 15, when he will open an office at San Francisco for the Pathescope.

He will have charge of all northern California territory, furnishing machines and films to churches, schools, theatres and homes.

Prior to his connection with the Mutual, Mr. Johns conducted an independent film exchange in Los Angeles, and previously had operated a string of suburban theatres there.

He is perhaps the best-known film exchangeman in that territory. During his connection with the business there he has been a leader in a number of movements that have resulted beneficially for the trade.

He took the initiative in the organization of the Los Angeles exchange board of trade and has served as treasurer of the same body since its formation.

In the recent censorship fight, Mr. Johns was the first to make a move to organize forces to combat the motion picture censors, as the result of their ruling regarding "Damaged Goods."

In this, he so well organized his forces and brought pressure to bear, that in less than two weeks the ruling against the film had been overcome.

Arrangements are now being made for a farewell dinner which will be given Mr. Johns by exchange and theatre men.

The G. A. Metcalfe and company supply establishment, Los Angeles, has installed a public projecting department where exchanges may have public showing of their subjects.

The equipment in this will also serve for demonstration purposes. Several different kinds of screens will be installed, together with different makes of machines.

NETTER LEAVES WEST FOR NEW YORK; STEBBINS JOINS MUTUAL

Leon Netter, for several years with the All Star Feature Distributors, San Francisco, has completed arrangements to leave at once for New York, where he plans to form new connections.

It is possible that he will join the working staff of Sol L. Lesser in handling the "Ne'er-Do-Well," but this will not be settled until after he reaches New York.

R. E. Stebbins, formerly with the Mutual Film Corporation of San Francisco, later on manager of the Film Exchange Board of Trade in that city, and for the past few months a department manager for the Progressive Motion Picture Company, has left for Santa Barbara to join the force of the American Film Company as assistant to Manager Lynch.

Fred Peachy, formerly manager of the United Film Service in San Francisco, but who went to Portland, Ore., recently to open a branch Bluebird office, has returned to the former city.

The snow that was experienced in Portland and the experience of being snowbound at The Dalles for several days was too much for this California film man and he decided to return to the land of sunshine.

CAPITAL CITY IS TEEMING WITH ACTIVITY; ALL PROGRAMS TAKE WELL WITH PUBLIC

RECENT activities at the Washington, D. C., Mutual exchange accentuate the fact that the program of Mutual is not in vain.

Victor Abbey has just returned from the road and has some interesting news to tell of his territory.

"'The Girl and the Game' is certainly our biggest series for the exhibitor," he commented enthusiastically. "One-fourth of the houses of Baltimore are using it.

"Allen Jenkins of the Bijou in Roanoke kept them standing outside his house for twelve hours recently.

"Even in Washington it is playing to more theatres than any series or serial in the past and in more theatres than any other city in our territory. It is wonderful what a hold it has had upon the public.

"Penn Gardens in this city, that fastidious resident theatre, tells us 'The Girl and the Game' is the only thing that drove away the 'blues' occasioned by the 'blue Monday' attendance.

"And you need not think that the intelligent exhibitors of the smaller towns are not up to the methods of their larger brothers, for they are. They do a great deal of advertising, and persistent advertising, and ten cents is the usual price of admission, too."

B. C. Cunningham, manager of the Mutual exchange, recently returned from Norfolk, Va., where he opened the Granby theatre with "Silas Marner."

This is the newest house of Norfolk built on the modern idea of the one-floor plan, with a capacity of 1,500.

It is under the management of George C. Nichols, who extended the invitation to Mr. Cunningham to be present on this occasion.

The Mutual had been giving serious attention to the practice of sub-renting films, which threatens to become a serious menace to the industry. The Washington exchange had been doing its share in investigating the practice in its territory and through Victor Abbey has succeeded in locating some such unscrupulous exhibitors. The matter has been placed in the hands of the New York officials for their action.

Sydney B. Lust, manager of the United and Criterion exchanges, has secured the rights of "Treasure Island" for the territory.

During the recent presentation of the stage performance of this play in Baltimore, the screen version had close bookings in that city to the mutual benefit of film exhibitors and the "legitimate." Mr. Lust reports this film to be in great demand with requests for return engagements.

"Treasure Island" has many bookings for Washington and promises to be a film production that the public will wish to see for a long time.

Mr. Lust has established a branch office at Kimball, W. Va., with Edward Leon in charge. This will take care of the territory in that vicinity more advantageously than would be possible from the main film exchange in Washington.

Owing to popular demand for theatre supplies and equipment, Mr. Lust is installing a department for this purpose in his exchange.

He will not only have machines and tickets, but he has on hand a large stock of chairs, several pianos and screens. He has taken the agency of Sanozone and Florazone and will be in a position to furnish the exhibitor with everything for his theatre.

Hopewell, Va., which has suddenly become important, has found the need of motion picture theatres to satisfy its population. Of the five houses there Mr. Lust is furnishing three with features and short reels.

W. M. Notes has become roadman for Sydney B. Lust in interest of the United and Criterion programs. Mr. Notes was formerly manager of the Empress theatre, Washington, D. C., and is well acquainted with the trade.

WEISFELDT TAKES UP DUTIES IN OMAHA FOR MUTUAL

Max J. Weisfeldt, former assistant manager in the Minneapolis exchange of the Mutual, is manager of the exchange at Omaha.

Mr. Weisfeldt is a young man, but has been in the business for years. For seven years he ran a house at Plymouth, Wis., as an exhibitor. Then he went to Chicago and went with Mort Singer into vaudeville. Next he was a roadman out of the Minneapolis exchange. Then he opened a film supply house at Mill City.

When "The Diamond from the Sky" came along he started out with it and when he finished 92 per cent. of the exhibitors in his territory were showing the picture.

As assistant manager at Minneapolis he got the inspiration of one of the best exchanges in the Middle West, and in Omaha, he firmly believes, he will get the inspiration of the best.

He succeeds J. H. Mergener, who went to Omaha from Milwaukee temporarily after Manager C. W. Taylor resigned.

GETS RIGHTS TO "RACE SUICIDE" FOR COLORADO, UTAH, WYOMING AND NEW MEXICO

Willis Kent, former manager of the Western offices for the General Film Company, and later directing the distributing in the Middle West for the Bluebird pictures, has contracted with Joseph W. Farnham for the territorial rights of the six-reel attraction, "Race Suicide," for the territory of Colorado, Utah, Wyoming and New Mexico.

He will begin his exploitation probably in Denver, Colo., with an indefinite engagement of the subject, and then will follow that over lengthy bookings of the attraction in other cities in his territory.

Mr. Kent has also contracted with Mr. Farnham for the exclusive rights to the same territory of the new nine-reel picture which the latter is now having made.

"GIRL AND THE GAME" "PLASTERS" NEW ENGLAND THEATRES

"The Girl and the Game" is making a big hit throughout New England. It is now booked as follows:

In Boston—Beacon, Cobb, Comique, Eagle, Hub, New Palace, Old South, Olympic, Scenic Temple, Shawmut and Washington theatres; in east Boston, Day Square, Gem and Scenic.

In south Boston—Olympia, Opera House in Athol, the Bates in Attleboro, the Lyric in Beverly, Brighton in Brighton, New Orpheum in Brockton, Inman Square and Olympia in Cambridge, Thompson Square in Charlestown.

Broadway in Chelsea, Dorchester and Magent in Dorchester, Globe and Palace in Fall River, Rambeau and Shea's in Fitchburg, Orpheum in Gardner, Orpheum in Haverhill, Hyde Park in Hyde Park, Victoria in Lawrence, Gem in Leominster, New Jewel in Lowell, Central Square in Lynn, Mystic in Malden.

Park in Middleboro, Ideal in Milford, Needham in Needham, National and Orpheum in New Bedford, Newton Opera House in Newton, Art in Orange, Strand in Peabody, Old Colony in Plymouth, Pilgrim's in Provincetown, Kincaide's in Quincy, Crescent in Revere, Happy Hour in Rockland, Davis Square and Union Square Olympia in Somerville.

Blanchard's in Southbridge, German's in South Framingham, Orpheum in Stoughton, Star in Taunton, Opera House in Turner's Falls.

Wakefield in Wakefield, Elite in Walpole, Scenic in Waltham, Steinburg in Webster, National in Winchendon, Woburn in Woburn, Family in Worcester.

In Maine—Nickel in Biddeford and Strand in Old Town, and Leavitt in Sanford.

In New Hampshire—Star in Dover, Ioka in Exeter, Scenic in Keene, Premier in Littleton, Globe in Manchester, Star in Milford, Nashua in Nashua, Olympia in Rochester and Henverson's in Woodsville.

In Vermont—Grand in Bellows Falls, Casino in Derbyline, Idle Hour in Hardwick, Globe in St. Johnsbury, and Crown in White River Junction.

In Rhode Island—Globe in Pawtucket, Royal in Olneyville, Palace in Providence, and Smith's in Woonsocket.

In Connecticut—Park in South Manchester.

KEEGAN SUPERVISES PATHE TRADE IN WESTERN CANADA

Andrew P. Keegan, who has lately been in charge of the Vancouver branch of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Canadian distributors of Pathé productions, has just been promoted to a position which gives him supervision of the Pathé service throughout western Canada, including the provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Offices are now maintained in Winnipeg, Man., and Vancouver, B. C., and the opening of a branch in Calgary, Alta, is also being talked of.

Charles Barnard, who has been working under Mr. Keegan at Vancouver, has been promoted to the position of manager, while W. E. Allan manages the Winnipeg office.

KLEINE'S WILL MOVE TO GODFREY BUILDING, 49th STREET AND 7th AVENUE, NEW YORK

It has been decided to remove the George Kleine New York branch office from the Candler building to the new Godfrey building, Forty-ninth street and Seventh avenue. The change will be made about March 15 to 20.

This will place the Kleine branch office right in the heart of filmdom, the Godfrey building having been constructed especially for this class of tenants.

The requirements of the film trade were carefully canvassed and considered before plans for the Godfrey building were made and no detail was considered too trivial to be incorporated in the building, with the result that today it is undoubtedly one of the best equipped office buildings for the film trade in the country.

It possesses every facility for caring for the trade—high speed elevators, passenger and freight; modern fireproof film vaults, central location, splendid light and unsurpassed ventilation.

It is only a half block to the subway, and Broadway, Amsterdam, Columbia, Sixth and Seventh avenue cars pass within a few feet of its doors. The "L" station is only a block away.

The suite selected for the George Kleine office was laid out with a view of catering to the especial needs and on a scale commensurate with the big volume of business.

All the departments, sales, film and posters, will be connected with each other on the same floor. The matter of a projecting room is still in abeyance.

Spacious fireproof vaults for films, naturally lighted rooms for posters, will enable exhibitors to make a comprehensive selection, and splendidly equipped reception quarters, accounting departments and roomy private offices will give Manager Raynor offices surpassed by none in the film world.

KRAMER GETS $100 GOLD WATCH FOR LEADING "U" SALES

Sam B. Kramer, manager of the Mecca branch of the New York Universal Film Manufacturing Company's exchange, has been awarded a $100 solid gold watch by Manager of Exchanges M. H. Hoffman for having shown a greater per cent. of profit increase over his business for the four-week period ending February 13 than any other Universal exchange manager throughout the United States.

This is the third four-week period winner since Manager Hoffman announced his prize contest to stimulate interest among the Universal exchange men. The Oklahoma City exchange manager won the first two prizes.

In the first instance, Mr. Kramer of the New York exchange came in second, and by making a big bid for the third period, ably assisted by his brother, Earl W. Kramer, he succeeded by showing the greatest increase of profits over the last four-week period, incidentally rolling up the highest percentage of profit so far recorded in the contest.

GOOD WEATHER BRINGS INCREASED ACTIVITY TO NEW ORLEANS EXCHANGES

NEW ORLEANS exchanges have entered into a period of activity. Numerous new houses are springing up all over the city, and in the suburban districts many other amusement projects are on foot.

An exchangeman, in commenting on the better business enjoyed by all of New Orleans' dozen exchanges, said that this is brought about by changing weather conditions.

December, January and February are poor months in that territory, due to many small houses being closed on account of inadequate heating facilities.

With the return of good weather many of these houses are opening their doors once more.

Ross Hardenbrook, manager of the World exchange there, returned on February 26 from a trip throughout his territory, very optimistic.

Pathé's "Iron Claw" was given a private showing to a number of exhibitors in New Orleans on February 25, with Raoul Junet, New Orleans manager, playing host. The picture will be released February 28 and booking is very strong.

Metro reports that last week was the best six days in the history of the New Orleans office. This sort of a report is becoming too common among the New Orleans exchanges to excite any lengthy comment.

Karl A. Bugbee, New Orleans manager of Metro, now is negotiating with his New York office for a second print of future releases, so strong has become the demand for Metro productions.

"We have had a phenomenal response to circulars sent out announcing the release of the Drew comedies, which will be placed on the Metro program March 1," Mr. Bugbee said.

"Most every Metro exhibitor in the territory will book Drew comedies along with his other Metro features each week."

Mr. Reed, of Reed and Russell, of the Metro office in Dallas, was in New Orleans last week. Mr. Reed was on his way to Dallas, after attending a meeting of the board of directors of Metro in New York.

Doc Graham, of the Queen Film service, has moved his office to 14 Potter building, Birmingham, Ala. M. W. Lawrence, well known to exchangemen in New Orleans, has been appointed Mr. Graham's Crescent City representative.

Mr. Lawrence is booking "The Salamander," "One Day," and other B. S. Moss productions.

An instance of the strong hold motion pictures have on the New Orleans situation is shown by the visit last week of two prominent officials of the Orpheum Circuit.

In an interview they said New Orleans was to have no Orpheum theatre, and, further, they declared "the theatrical business is not at its best just now, but is better than it was last year."

Although New Orleans is getting numerous and expensive new picture houses, theatrical magnates see no big legitimate demand.

R. O. Proctor, manager of the Kansas City branch of the General Film Company, accompanied by his wife, was a visitor in New Orleans last week.

Maurice F. Barr, manager of the New Orleans Bluebird office, is absent on a trip throughout Mississippi.

PHILADELPHIA EXCHANGES, EXCEPT TWO, AGREE ON CUTTING OF FILMS BY EXHIBITORS AS CENSOR AID

TO avoid the incessant fining and to make the situation between the Pennsylvania censors and the Philadelphia exchanges more bearable, if such were possible, Robert Lynch, manager of the Fairmount Film Exchange, conceived a plan whereby an exhibitor could be warned by inspectors that the film he was inadvertently showing contained scenes the censors had eliminated.

If this warning be heeded and the condemned scenes eliminated at once, the exhibitor escapes the fine that has heretofore been his portion.

In order to make this situation possible, Mr. Lynch got the signatures of all but two of the exchange managers to his letter giving the exhibitors authority to do this cutting, in case the exchanges could not be promptly reached to attend to the matter.

Each manager agreeing to the plan wrote a personal letter to Chief Censor Breitinger, telling of his willingness to co-operate, in order to save time, trouble and expense to all parties concerned.

The exchanges that refused to go into the agreement said they did not wish any exhibitor to have power to cut their films.

Mr. Breitinger on his part agreed to let his subordinates give the warning to exhibitors instead of haling them before a magistrate, as was previously done.

This compromise having been agreed upon less than a week ago, its effect cannot yet be estimated.

When exhibitors were fined the exchanges had to bear the cost. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, the exchange managers claim, the scenes left in against orders are so done because there has been some misunderstanding on the part of the manager as to the censors' orders.

Although this agreement has been reached on one point, nothing has been accomplished in the condemnation line. Here there is as wide a breach as ever over the matter.

Not a week passes but some trouble is experienced as to severe eliminations or complete turning down of several films.

A Marguerite Clark picture came near being buried under the drifts, but after long and heated arguments on the part of the Famous Players exchange managers, the censors saw the light. A few titles were changed, a scene or two cut and the fair Marguerite came up smiling "Out of the Drifts."

WORLD GRABS WINGS OF PROSPERITY EAGLE IN DENVER, WHILE FLIGHT OF BLUEBIRDS PLEASES UNIVERSAL

W. H. CREE, manager of the General Film Exchange, Denver, has installed a service department and placed W. C. Writer in charge. The duty of this department will be to supply the exhibitors with any article, from a clothes-pin to a Ford.

Cree also reports to have placed General service in the Wonderly theatre, La Junta, Colo.; the Iris theatre, Trinidad, Colo.; the Pike's Peak theatre, Pueblo, Colo.; the Empress theatre, Montrose, Colo.; and the Princess theatre, Ordway, Colo.

Manager J. S. Appelgate, of the Pathé exchange, Denver, is confident that the new Pathé serial, "The Iron Claw," will be the greatest serial ever put out by Pathé.

F. C. Duffy, traveling auditor of Pathé, arrived in Denver February 21. Duffy claims a great admiration for the Queen City and says he is always glad of the opportunity to go to Denver.

Al Wood's production, "New York," the five-reel feature to be released at an early date by Pathé, will have an indefinite run at the Paris theatre in Denver.

Manager Buckwalter, of the Kleine-Edison exchange, Denver, reports the Kleine-Edison productions going big. The first run of the Kleine-Edison features are released at the Tabor Grand Opera House in Denver.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Leonhardt stopped off in Denver on their way from Las Animas to Chicago. Mr. Leonhardt is Western representative in charge of the Fox exchange west of Denver.

During their stay in Denver, Mr. and Mrs. Leonhardt were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Baxter at an informal dinner party at the Brown Palace Hotel.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Leonhardt, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. F. Carmichael, of Denver, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Baxter, of Denver.

The World Film exchange, of Denver, has grabbed a wing of the Prosperity Eagle, and with Manager Charlie Gilmore directing the flight, this exchange will continue to increase its business in that territory.

Manager Gilmore has wired his roadmen, George W. Hinton and John W. Brown, to report to the Denver office in person, immediately, to receive instructions on a new plan that the World Film Company is about to announce.

Manager Gilmore states that this new proposition will not only take that territory by storm, but will sweep everything ahead of it.

"The Yellow Passport," a World Film release, featuring Clara Kimball Young, played four days at the Strand theatre in Denver, to capacity business.

Louis Goldstein, Universal exchange manager in Denver, reports the serial "Graft" going like wild fire. Edward Armstrong, manager of the Salt Lake City branch exchange of the Universal, also reports a big business on "Graft" serial.

Louis Goldstein was visited on Tuesday of last week by James W. Morton, a Wyoming cattle king. Morton told Manager Goldstein that he had seen the five-reel Red Feather production, "A Knight of the Range," featuring Harry D. Carey, and that he thought this feature was the greatest Western picture he had ever seen.

He also stated, if the Universal would book this Western feature in New Castle, Wyo., he would take all his employes, which he claims now run close to the one hundred mark.

Manager Goldstein promised to inform the cattle king when the Carey feature would be shown in New Castle.

The U. S. Naval Hospital of Las Animas has booked the Universal service.

The Bluebird exchange reports that Manager Carl Stearn is now invading the Montana territory with a flock of Bluebird releases. Stearn has booked the Asonia theatre in Butte, Mont., which is the largest theatre in Butte and is under the management of Mr. Levy.

The Asonia is one of the most up-to-date theatres in that part of the country. Bluebird productions will open in that theatre at an early date.

The exchange also reports an enormous business on "Secret Love," "Undine," and "Hop, the Devil's Brew." This office is in receipt of several letters asking for second runs.

TAUBE OF UNIVERSAL IN VANCOUVER VISITED BY DEWEES

W. P. Dewees, of the Rex theatre, Vancouver, B. C., arrived in Montreal on February 24 and favored the Universal office, there, with a visit. As Mr. Taube, manager of the exchange, was formerly in charge of the Vancouver Universal office, he was glad to see his friend again.

Mr. Dewees is one of the oldest exhibitors in British Columbia and has had a great deal to do with the betterment of conditions, as far as the moving picture world is concerned in the West.

It is said that Mr. Dewees is in the East to arrange for the Triangle program in the West. Mr. Dewees was the man who introduced the V-L-S-E pictures to western Canada.

MUTUAL FILM BUSINESS IN DENVER REACHES TOP NOTCH FOR THAT BRANCH

Manager Ward E. Scott, of the Mutual exchange in Denver, reports more new business last week than in any two weeks previous.

Harry Cassady, a former member of the (Grizzleys) Denver Baseball Club, is doing the road work for the Denver Mutual office.

It was due to Cassady's efforts that last week was one of the biggest weeks for Mutual in that territory.

BOSTON EXCHANGE MANAGERS CONFER WITH POLICE HEAD ON "CUTS" FOR SUNDAY FILMS

MANAGERS of most of the Boston exchanges, except one, conferred with the chief of the district police recently regarding certain regulations which seem to be necessary in connection with the censorship of films used for Sunday shows.

The chief's department passes on all such films weekly, and issues a list of approved pictures with a statement of the scenes eliminated from the films.

What the chief wants is some system by which his inspectors can know instantly, upon entering a film house on Sunday, whether the pictures being shown there have been passed.

He also wants some safeguard in those cases in which a manager has more than one print of an eliminated reel, so that there will be no possibility of a print from which the cuts have not been made getting out to the exhibitor.

The managers want some system to protect the exhibitor from mistakes.

For instance, if the correct name of a passed Sunday reel is "Molly's Malady," the exhibitor who writes it on his Sunday program, which program he must send to the chief weekly for verification with the official approved list, as "Mary's Malady," or "Molly's Marmalade," would lose that picture.

The custom has been to deprive the exhibitor of the film simply because he makes a mistake in the title.

The chief's assistants will use both title and serial number on each picture, with the rule so arranged that the exhibitor can now make one mistake and get by, but if he makes two his picture's gone.

That seemed to be the only tangible outcome of the afternoon's conference. The question of making Sunday cuts in all prints of a given reel still hangs in the balance.

Mr. Balsdon, of the Big Four, has a special dispensation on this score. He wishes to make his Sunday cuts in only those films used for Sunday; the other prints the chief allows him to leave uncut, since Mr. Balsdon insists that a Sunday cut film is worth nothing on week days: nobody will buy it.

Mr. Eslow, of the Universal, not having so many prints of the films he uses Sunday, favored returning to the chief the cut film from all prints of the eliminated reel.

But the question was left unsettled, and it is not unlikely that another conference will be held.

SULLIVAN AND ROSENTHAL IN CHARGE OF SUN EXCHANGE, FRISCO

Joseph T. Sullivan and I. A. Rosenthal have filed a statement at San Francisco to comply with the state law indicating that they are engaged in business there as the Sun Photoplay Company.

This concern recently took over large offices in the Hewes Building at Sixth and Market streets and is now engaged in marketing feature productions in that territory along the same lines that have been found successful at the New York office of the company. The Frisco branch is under the direct management of I. A. Rosenthal.

LEXINGTON, KY., EDUCATION BOARD MAKES MOVE AGAINST ALLEGED IMMORAL PICTURES

Members of the Lexington, Ky., board of education at a meeting February 28, condemned the display of what they termed immoral motion picture films in theatres in that city.

Attention had been drawn to the pictures, members said, because of revolting situations and seeming unnecessary baldness of scenes in some of them.

The board in resolutions declared that it could not understand how theatre proprietors could invite persons of tender years to see such films and that pictures such as some which were shown recently in a Lexington theatre could arouse nothing but "disgust and indignation in the minds of the mature."

Proprietors of theatres and the board of city commissioners were requested to prevent the showing of such films.

Superintendent of Schools M. A. Cassidy announced that he was going to present to the board of education a proposition to give each public school in Lexington a motion picture show once a week.

He said that if this suggestion was adopted films of travel, historical subjects and clean drama will be shown.

NO VIOLATION TO SHOW "NATION" IN LOUISVILLE

In the case of A. A. Bigelow, manager of Macauley's theatre, Louisville, who was arrested recently on a warrant sworn to by William A. Heck, a Louisville attorney, charging a violation of a State law in allowing "The Birth of a Nation" to be exhibited, Magistrate Dorsey has given a decision that he has no jurisdiction in the case.

The accusation was that the photoplay stirred up race hatred and prejudice. Counsel for Manager Bigelow filed a demurrer, contending that the jurisdiction of a magistrate's court in a penal action is limited to cases in which punishment is fixed at a fine not exceeding one hundred dollars. Magistrate Dorsey sustained the demurer.

When the case was thrown out of the magistrate's court, Attorney Heck sought to get an injunction in the Circuit Court prohibiting the showing of the film.

He filed a petition, as a citizen, in the name of the commonwealth of Kentucky, alleging that the exhibition of the film was in violation of the statutes. The injunction asked for was denied by Judge Field.

IDAHO DECISION ALLOWS PICTURE EXHIBITIONS ON SUNDAY FOR RELIGIOUS PURPOSES

THE use of a moving-picture machine and theatre on Sunday in Idaho for the purpose of illustrating a religious subject, is not in violation of the law prohibiting moving-picture shows on Sunday in that state. This is the decision of the Idaho Supreme Court, handed down, affirming the judgment of acquittal in the case on appeal before it entitled the State of Idaho versus H. D. Morris. The Supreme Court handed down its decision February 23.

The opinion was written by Justice William M. Morgan and concurred in by his associates on the bench. The appeal was made by the state from the judgment entered by Judge Charles P. McCarthy, of the Third Judicial District Court for Ada County.

Mr. Morris and others associated with him in a class of the International Bible Students' Association, a subsidiary organization of the Watch Tower Bible and Tract Society, a religious corporation, and to illustrate a religious subject in a series entitled "Photo Drama of Creation," made use of the Majestic theatre in Boise on a Sunday.

The regular religious service of the class members was held in the theatre prior to the moving-picture illustration and no admission was charged.

Morris was arrested for keeping open and operating a moving picture show on Sunday. The facts were stipulated, and he was found guilty of the charge in a justice court.

An appeal was taken to the district court, where the case was submitted to the judge without a jury, and Morris was found not guilty. The state appealed to the Supreme Court.

It was agreed that the sole issue to be determined was whether or not the acts done at the time and place mentioned in the complaint, in giving the lecture or sermon on a phonograph and illustrating the same by stereopticon slides and moving pictures, in the light of the religious claims set forth, constituted a violation of Section 6,825, Revised Codes, as amended by Chapter 99 of the eleventh session of the Idaho legislature, 1911, Session Laws, 1911, page 342.

This law provides it shall be unlawful for any person or persons in Idaho to keep open on Sunday any theatre, moving-picture show, playhouse, dancehouse, or race track.

Violation of the terms of the act constitutes a misdemeanor, upon conviction for which a fine of not less than $30 nor more than $250 can be imposed, or by imprisonment in the county jail not to exceed 90 days.

Upon conviction any license which may have been granted for opening and maintaining such place of business shall be rendered void and shall not be renewed within two years next thereafter.

EXHIBITORS IN FRISCO PROTEST AGAINST CIVIC AMUSEMENT COMPETITION

The recent protest of moving picture theatre owners at Oakland, Cal., against leasing the municipal auditorium for use as a skating rink has proved to be effective and the plan has been dropped by the city officials.

It was pointed out by moving picture exhibitors that this building was erected by the public for conventions and large public gatherings and not as a center of amusement to enter into competition with private business enterprises.

They intimated that they had been taxed sufficiently for the structure already, a second bond issue of a half a million dollars having been forced upon them to complete the structure, the original cost of which was estimated at a half a million dollars.

ALLEGED SUNDAY VIOLATION IN INDIANA CITY IS BEFORE JURY

A jury has been obtained in the Sunday theatre case in the circuit court at Lafayette, Ind., and the opening statements were made in the fight which is to determine whether Lafayette is to have Sunday performances.

Misha Rubinoff, who is the principal defendant, is charged in the affidavit with pursuing his usual avocation on the Sabbath. He has pleaded, however, that he is a Jew and observes his Sabbath on Saturday.

The jury was composed of farmers. The attorneys for the defense, in an argument on a point of law, contended that Sunday shows were a necessity as much as concerts, refreshment stands and newspapers.

One of the lawyers called attention to the fact that the city of Lafayette pays a band to play at Columbian park on Sunday.

APPEAL FOR QUICK TRIAL OF FRANKLIN FILM CASE IN PENNSYLVANIA

On account of its vital importance, the attorneys on both sides have petitioned for an advanced hearing by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania of the appeal taken by Assistant Attorney General Joseph L. Kun on the decision from Judge N. S. Barratt of the case of the Franklin Film Company against the censors.

Sidney L. Krauss, attorney for the company, said he expected the case would be argued in about two weeks.

Mr. Krauss says the censors are fighting for the very life of their board.

The real issue behind it all is whether the censors shall be the supreme power or the courts.

The immense property issues involved in the film business in Pennsylvania will also be taken into consideration by the court, is the opinion of the lawyer.

Attorney General Francis Shunk Brown is expected to take a hand when the case is brought into the higher court.

SEVEN CENSORS FOR TWO THEATRES IN A JERSEY TOWN

The appointment in Bloomfield, N. J., of a board of censors by Mayor Frederick Sadler, following the action of the city council forbidding the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" there, has succeeded in arousing public indignation as no other matter has done in years.

The action of Bloomfield's city council came after two Courts of Chancery had ruled specifically that the New Jersey authorities had no right to interfere with the showing of "The Birth of a Nation."

There are only two motion picture theatres in Bloomfield and the appointment of a board of censors of seven members is considered an absurd piece of executive authority and absolutely without any sort of justification.

SANDUSKY, O., FIXES LICENSE FEES

The Sandusky, O., city commission has outlined these yearly license fees to be paid by motion picture theatres:

Theatres outside of the fire limits, $30; those seating less than 300 persons, $35; those accommodating over 350, $100. The licenses would hit the theatres in this amount of cash: Lyceum theatre, $30; Theatorium and Gem theatres, $35, and the Alhambra and Star, $100.

The Sandusky theatre would escape with a $50 license fee, and the film men are protesting over the fact that two of them would have to pay more than the theatre which has much higher prices of admission than they have.

OHIO BOARD SUES EXCHANGE MAN IN COLUMBUS

For the first time in its history the Ohio Board of Censorship has entered suit against a film exchange man.

This action was taken under the new amendment to the censorship law, which permits the board to cause the arrest of manufacturers, exchange men and exhibitors. The suit was filed against M. N. Melchoir, Columbus representative of the Victor Film Service company, of Cleveland.

The charge is that he rented a film, "From Beanery to Billions," which had been rejected by the censors. The film was shown in the Bid-a-Wee theatre, Columbus, in violation of the law. Long before it was shown in Columbus, the film was exhibited in Cincinnati, Cleveland and other cities.

BIRMINGHAM, ALA., CONFRONTED BY ANTI-SUNDAY OPENING; EXHIBITORS THOUGHT QUESTION SETTLED IN THEIR FAVOR

COMMISSIONER WEATHERLY, well known but not beloved by exhibitors, has given new life to the once dead question of the elimination of Sunday motion pictures in Birmingham, Ala. The Pastors' Union met on February 8, and with three dissenting votes, indorsed Commissioner Weatherly's Sunday observance ordinance.

Now the ordinance goes to the city commissioners, and if passed will have the effect of having the motion picture shows run free and prohibiting any form of paid amusement on Sundays.

Several weeks ago all sides were heard on the question, and at the conclusion of a stormy three-days' hearing, the city commission legalized Sunday. Everybody thought the proposition was dead until this latest outburst. The motion picture paragraph of the blue law reads:

"That any person who conducts a theatre, moving picture or vaudeville show on Sunday, or any exhibition, show, entertainment or performance, for pecuniary profit or reward, or to which an admission fee is charged or collected, shall upon conviction, be punished within the limits and as provided by Section 806 of the code of the City of Birmingham; provided that high class concerts or moving picture shows, which are not conducted for pecuniary profit or reward, and for which no admission fee is charged or collected, may be permitted by the city commission of said city, but before the exhibition thereof, a written permit shall be granted by or under the authority of the city commission, certifying to the fact that upon investigation of the character of the exhibition or the entertainment proposed to be given, the same has been found not to be violative of any of the laws or ordinances of the city."

PENNSYLVANIA CENSORS' REPORT SHOWS RUTHLESS SLASHING OF FILMS

MORE than half of the 11,863 reels of motion picture films submitted in accordance with law for the scrutiny of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors, between May 17, last, when the present law became effective, and November 30, 1915, either have been suppressed entirely or have been deleted in part by the censors.

It has been made known by the board that the number of films condemned as a whole in the period referred to was 169, and the number from which eliminations were made was 6,540. The statement of the board adds:

"The returns to the state treasurer in that period in fees collected for the examination of these original and duplicate prints, and for the issue of substitute approval seals, reached a total amount of $27,035.50. The fines collected for infractions of the law during the half year amounted $3,965, a total which might be very much increased if the board had had in its employ a force of inspectors large enough to properly cover the various towns and cities of the state.

"In many cases the board has made over objectionable pictures, to save the film for the owners, when this course seemed feasible, or has made suggestions to the owners which, when adopted, have resulted in placing in circulation pictures that otherwise could not have been shown within the state of Pennsylvania.

PROVINCIAL TREASURER REFUSES TO DISCUSS CENSORSHIP

While Hon. T. W. McGarry, provincial treasurer, who has to do with the censorship of moving pictures as the minister in charge in Canada, would not say anything to confirm the report that legislation will be introduced this season to provide for a provincial censorship of plays and stage productions, the matter has come to a head by the conflicting rulings made by the various municipalities over "Damaged Goods."

At the present time initiative is left to the municipalities and action is taken by the police if a picture or play transgresses the criminal code.

NEW YORK WANTS CUTS IN "RACE SUICIDE" THOUGH PASSED ELSEWHERE

Commissioner of Licenses George S. Bell has advised Joseph W. Farnham, distributor of "Race Suicide," that several "cuts" will be necessary before the picture can be shown in and about New York City. Final decision will be rendered by the Bureau of Licenses within a few days, it is expected.

Mr. Farnham pointed out to Bell that the picture has been passed by the Ohio State Board of Censors, the Chicago Municipal Board, and the National Board of Censorship.

ORDER AGAINST "PARKING" BABY CARRIAGES MAY STIR UP WRATH

The "parking" of baby carriages in the lobbies of motion picture theatres at Newport, Ky., has been prohibited in an order issued by Christian Ebert, commissioner of Public Safety.

Newport police have received instructions to enforce rigidly the ordinance calling for free ingress and egress at theatres.

A large number of women attend the show houses daily with their babies and a protest against the order is predicted.

Film News From Foreign Parts

TWENTY-THREE OUT OF 25 PICTURES SHOWN IN PARIS IN A WEEK WERE MADE IN AMERICA

Special to Motion Picture News

Paris, Feb. 20.

I DON'T know of any better change at the present time to get away from the Parisian kinemas, where one is obliged to see Pathé's great serial, "Mysteries of New York," at eighty kinemas out of one hundred, than to get the necessary permission from the military authorities to visit some of the kinemas at the front.

I took a trip to the front last week, and must confess that it proved a recreation to me. The theatres and kinemas they have built are not very elaborate nor expensive. The photo taken at the front by the correspondent of Motion Picture News for its readers, shows one of such "theatres" and a performance just going on.

The programs are undoubtedly the most interesting and amusing items of these "theatres." They are made by the "Poilus," and may well be termed "Un chef d'Oeuvre." Here follows an exact reproduction of one of them.

The doubtful meaning of nearly every word, which is only possible in French, prevents a translation of it.

The amusement such theatres are giving to the Poilus at the front, is purely indescribable.

They are witnessed by many hundreds of soldiers, where there is just room for fifty. They laugh heartily at everything and forget everything else for the time being.

The soldiers are not like the poor mortals in Paris who wonder why we should have so many American films at the kinemas in Paris; why we should not show exclusively French films in France; why out of twenty-five films exhibited to the trade last week, twenty-three are American and Italian?

Nearly All American Pictures for a Year

This has been going on for over a year now, still it does not seem to alter the situation. French production is far behind the weekly demands of the market. Good American films are in big demand and are appreciated by the different audiences.

Many of our exhibitors who are reading Motion Picture News every week expressed their astonishment at not seeing in Paris any of the films so largely advertised in the paper. They are at a loss to understand why a greater portion of American firms are not represented in France.

No doubt some very good French films have lately been released by firms like Gaumont, Film d'Art, Eclair, and Eclipse, but certainly not enough to make up the programs of half a dozen establishments.

What, then, about the others? Have they no right to show good films? Will their audiences patronize them if they show them old or uninteresting films?

A film just released by the well-known Eclipse company, called "Sadounah," after a romance by William le Queux, the English author, with Melle Regina Badet from the Paris Opera Comic playing the principal part, has proved an enormous success.

The French rights have been secured (an exceptional case) by Gaumont, and proved such a big drawing card that it has been kept on the program (another exceptional case) for a second week.

It may be said that its success is well deserved. Melle Regina Badet has surpassed herself. The scene when she leads her husband to commit two crimes is most marvellous, and so is the last scene when she drops into the sea.

A very largely advertised film was just shown at one of our boulevard establishments. It was made in Italy, showing wild animals.

It is a poor imitation of many good American pictures of the same kind we have had for many years.

We are going to have a big series of films with Mistinguette. This time it is M. Hugon who has taken the matter in hand, and we are sure to see something special.

M. Hugon has been for the last few years editor of the kinema department of the Paris Journal. He is the gentleman who started the fight against American imported pictures; he ought to know what the French public wants, and we shall soon judge him at work.

Our contemporary, the Film of Naples, is publishing a very vehement article against the new form some of the Italian producers are adopting to make films salable to the foreign countries.

"If we adopt such methods," the writer of the article says, "we will soon lose our world reputation as producers of artistic pictures."

The reason for the article is a film made by a well-known Italian firm, in which a child carried off by a monkey is the sensation of the film.

"If," the article goes on to say, "we are unable to sell our artistic films abroad, we better abstain from selling any. Our manufacturers should guard their reputation and not make films for the sake of getting a big price by resorting to sensational methods."

Pittsburgh Men to Help Swell Actors' Fund

Screen Club Appoints Committee to Work with the General Committee in the East—Pitt Theatre to Be Lent for the Day

Special to Motion Picture News

Pittsburgh, March 5.

THE Actors' Fund of America is to be given a big boost by the motion picture men of the Pittsburgh district, according to action taken at last Sunday's meeting of the Pittsburgh Screen Club.

The organization appointed a committee to work with the general committee in the east whereby the funds would be looked after in this section.

That the men here are willing and more than anxious to assist in every way possible the big fund that is to be raised has been shown by the fact that they passed the resolution for the appointing of the committee without one dissenting vote.

The committee from the Pittsburgh Screen Club named by the president, H. B. Kester, follows: Al W. Cross, chairman; William Moore Patch, Peter Antonopolis, John McAleer, A. H. McClelland and M. Feitler.

The committee got to work at once and held a meeting last Monday in the office of Mr. Cross and one of the features to be used in the raising of funds here was started.

The Pitt theatre is to be loaned to the committee for the occasion with its massive organ and orchestra of twenty-two pieces. The Pittsburgh male chorus is also to be secured and a big Sunday concert is to be given.

It is also possible that some of the biggest first run features will be shown at this concert. In this way the committee with very little outlay expects to raise a large sum.

All of the theatres in this section of the country, it is said, will assist and on a certain date will set aside a percentage of the money taken at the box office for a donation to the fund.

BROWNELL WILL SCENARIOIZE "PHYLLIS" FOR KLEINE

John C. Brownell, commissioned by George Kleine to write the scenario of "Phyllis," the Rupert Hughes novel in which Billie Burke and Henry Kolker will be featured, has also recently finished an original five-reel story and turned it over to Mr. Kleine for his approval.

The title has not been decided, and will not be until the cast is selected and work on the picture begun.

Brownell has written more than a hundred screen plays.

FRANCES MARION IS AT WORK ON SIX ORIGINAL SCRIPTS FOR WORLD

Frances Marion, editor-in-chief of the World Film Corporation's scenario department, is working on six original photoplays, now in course of construction.

Recently she completed "The Feast of Life," which Clara Kimball Young is now working in at Havana, and "Love's Heaven and Hell," in which Holbrook Blinn is to co-star with Frances Nelson.

Under direct orders from William A. Brady, Miss Marion is writing "The Eternal Sacrifice," in which Alice Brady will appear following the completion of "Then I'll Come Back to You," which she is now

California to Market Along Mercantile Lines

Beyfuss Forms Plans for Selling Its Pictures on States Right Basis in Accordance with Ideas for Getting Best Results Prevailing in Regular Commercial World

IN announcing their re-entry into the active marketing of photoplay features, some time ago the California Motion Picture Corporation, through Alexander E. Beyfuss, general manager, made it quite clear that the company's new plan to sell states right had been worked out along lines which prevail in the commercial world.

In view of this fact Mr. Beyfuss' ideas on the subject of motion picture advertising are not at all surprising, although they are somewhat unusual.

Mr. Beyfuss expresses the opinion that the future growth of the industry will depend upon more care for truth and precision and accuracy in motion picture advertising.

"The business of advertising as I understand it," says Mr. Beyfuss, "consists of letting the public know in the most effective manner possible just what one has to sell.

"To go beyond this and make exaggerated or even doubtful claims for a product defeats the purpose of the advertising.

"In the sale of pictures, as in the sale of any other salable article, it strikes me that it is necessary to stick to the truth and to keep well within the bounds of probability."

Just now Mr. Beyfuss and the California company are chiefly interested in helping the fortunes of "The Unwritten Law," with Beatriz Michelena, a photoplay feature which had its first trade showing in New York not long ago and was received with favor by those who attended.

In discussing the advertising campaign which has been laid out in this connection Mr. Beyfuss says:

"The kind of reputation which has permanency is one built on truth and results rather than upon advertising and publicity running riot with all sorts of nebulous claims.

"That is the reason that Miss Michelena's drawing power on the screen has increased tenfold during the past six months.

"Despite the fact that Miss Michelena came to us fresh from triumphs on the operatic stage and therefore was possessed of an obvious opportunity to establish herself in pictures solely through advertising and publicity, we, at the star's earnest solicitation, determined to let the star's work on the screen speak for itself.

"In the light of what has been accomplished with 'The Unwritten Law,' and the manner in which it has been accomplished, it certainly is true that Miss Michelena is a star who has been created by the sheer merit of her own work rather than by advertising and publicity of the sort which it would have been quite possible to have used.

"In presenting 'The Unwritten Law,' it has been our aim to merely influence the public to see the picture. We have been content to leave to them the coining of superlatives of praise for the offering.

"And all this, too, despite the fact that we are thoroughly convinced that Miss Michelena's work in this first our our 'better-than-program' pictures stands out well above anything which has been done in the screen in a long time."

The California company is more than pleased with the results which have already been achieved in the states right campaign which the company has been waging. These results, Mr. Beyfuss claims, completely substantiate his company's claims that there still remains a splendid states right market for really high class features.

MARGARET JOSLIN AND HARRY TODD WITH "U" FORCES

Margaret Joslin and Harry Todd, well-known comedians, are now members of the Universal forces.

Miss Joslin is the lady of generous proportions who has been appearing in the "Snakeville" stories pictured by the Essanay company.

Todd also will be remembered as one of the leading comedians appearing in the same pictures.

Miss Joslin and Todd will play opposite each other in single-reel comedies directed by Craig Hutchinson.

EXHIBITORS COMMENT ON WORTH OF "OLD HOMESTEAD"

Just prior to the appearance of the Famous Players Film Company's adaptation of "The Old Homestead" on the Paramount program last December, Adolph Zukor, president of the producing company, declared his belief that the old-fashioned wholesomeness of the story, together with the popularity of the original play, would win great popularity for the picture version.

The film, after being on the screen for about two months, has occasioned many comments from exhibitors, which Famous Players regard as bearing out Mr. Zukor's prophecy.

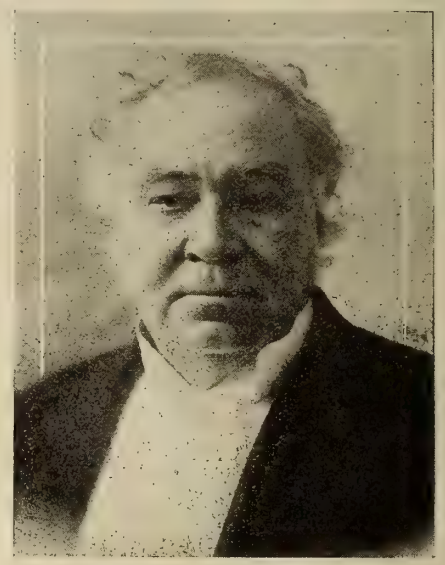
Highly commendatory expressions have been received from theatres in every section of the country, among them the Colonial, Tacoma, Wash.; the People's theatre, Portland, Ore.; the Columbia, Springfield, Ohio; the Parkway theatre, Baltimore; the Rex, Duluth, Minn.; the Alhambra, Newark, Ohio, and the American, Butte, Mont.

Charles Manley Dies in Los Angeles at Age of 86

Veteran Actor, Affectionately Known as "Daddy," a Beloved Member of Universal City, and Only Octogenarian Featured in a Series, Was in Cast Night of Lincoln's Assassination

CHARLES MANLEY, veteran actor of both the legitimate stage and the screen, passed away at his home in Los Angeles, Saturday, February 26, after a short illness, at the ripe old age of 86 years.

At the time of his death Mr. Manley was a much beloved member of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at Universal City, Cal., where he had been located for over a year.



Mr. Manley was born in a small town in Pennsylvania, and his meagre schooling was procured in a little log hut near the village of his birth.

From boyhood he had aspirations for the stage, and at the age of fourteen he had his first experiences in the theatrical business, but it was not until he was sixteen years old that he became permanently identified with the stage.

From that time on he gradually worked his way up until he was much sought for by many of the big theatrical managers of his time.

He is better known to his host of friends and admirers as "Daddy," and always took pride in the fact that he spent the greater part of his long career in the theatrical business.

He was acknowledged to be the oldest American actor actively engaged in his chosen profession at the time of his death, yet until the very last breath was considered by all as being remarkably hale and hearty, taking as keen interest in his work, his books and his friends as many a young man.

CHARLES MANLEY

He was one of the few players who had actually taken part in the cast at the Ford theatre in Washington, D. C., on the night of the assassination of President Lincoln by John Wilkes Booth.

Mr. Manley's ambition was to live to a ripe old age and die in harness, and his ambition was fulfilled.

He started in the motion picture business with Edison, later playing with Biograph, Lubin, Powers, and since 1914 has been with the Universal at Universal City, he and Mother Benson being the oldest couple in the industry.

Mr. Manley's past work with the Universal company is too well known to all picture patrons to need any summarizing at this time.

What will be of interest to them, however, is that Mr. Manley is the only octogenarian ever featured in a series of pictures. Mr. Manley was featured in "The Master Key," with Ella Hall and Robert Leonard.

Other features in which he appeared were "Their Golden Wedding," by Frank Lloyd, and "Learning to Be a Father," by Jacques Jaccard. He also was the writer of many scenarios, chief among which was "Hearts of Gold."

The death of this venerable old man will cast a deep gloom over all his acquaintances near and far in the theatrical world and the motion picture industry.

"The Dead Alive" Is a Courtot Hit, Says Bradford

General Manager of Gaumont in This Country Declares That the Reception of the Picture More Than Justifies the Care Expended on Production of the Film

THE cordial reception given Marguerite Courtot in her first Gaumont production by reviewers, exhibitors and the motion picture public has been highly pleasing to F. G. Bradford, general manager of the Gaumont company in America.

Not only is it the first picture the wonderful little screen star has done for Gaumont, but it is also her first five-reel feature.

MARGUERITE COURTOT

"Naturally, we have been much interested in watching the way in which Miss Courtot's first Gaumont picture, 'The Dead Alive,' would be received," said Mr. Bradford, in discussing the brilliant star of the Gaumont firmament.

"Every facility was placed at her disposal, even to the securing of Henry J. Vernot as her director.

"The results have more than justified the care we have taken and the attention we have given to every detail. 'The Dead Alive' has scored a Courtot hit.

"While 'The Dead Alive' is a remarkable photoplay, we are striving to surpass it with the next five-reel feature in which Miss Courtot will star.

"This is 'Feathertop,' a story written especially for us by Paul M. Bryan, who has written so many Gaumont successes.

"The fantastic story of the same name by Nathaniel Hawthorne has been woven into a play of modern life that has within its wide range scenic locations in the South Sea Islands and glimpses of the splendors of palatial homes on Fifth avenue.

"'Feathertop' is well under way at our Jacksonville, Fla., winter studios. I have seen a number of scenes which have been sent to the home office at Flushing.

"The photography is what one would naturally expect from Andre Balatier after having seen his 'The Dead Alive' or his 'Neptune's Daughter.'

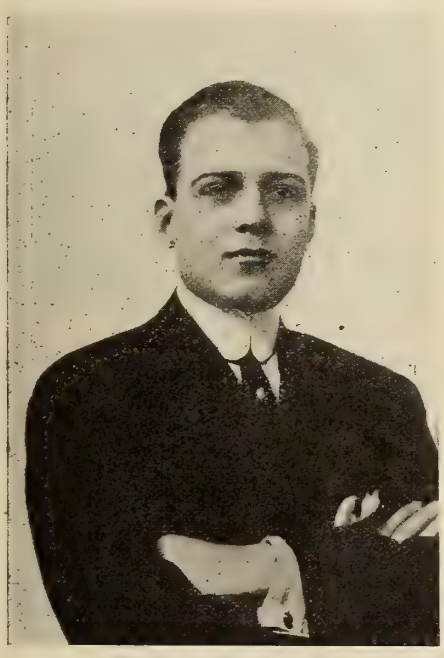
"Mr. Vernot has caught the spirit of the Hawthorne part of the story, as well as the modern atmosphere."

MONUMENT FOR "MAN OF SORROW" BRINGS JOY TO CITIZENS IN CALIFORNIA TOWN

In the midst of taking the newest William Farnum feature film, "The Man of Sorrow," for William Fox at Rio Vista, Cal., Director Apfel decided that one of the scenes required some type of public monument in the chief square or plaza of the village.

But when the plaza was visited, no monument could be found. Not in the least disconcerted by this discovery, the director had a large and imposing monument built and dedicated in the presence of all the citizenry.

After the picture was finished, the population had grown so accustomed to the new monument that they would not consent to its destruction, so it was presented to the city with the compliments of William Fox.



LE MAY, FORMER BROKER, IS METRO PLAYER ON WAY TO STARDOM

Pierre Le May, a prosperous broker in Wall Street until the panic of five years ago, is now a full-fledged motion-picture artist well on his way to stardom.

Mr. Le May has just been engaged by the Popular Plays and Players to appear in the forthcoming Metro wonderplay, "Playing with Fire," in which Mme. Petrova is starred.

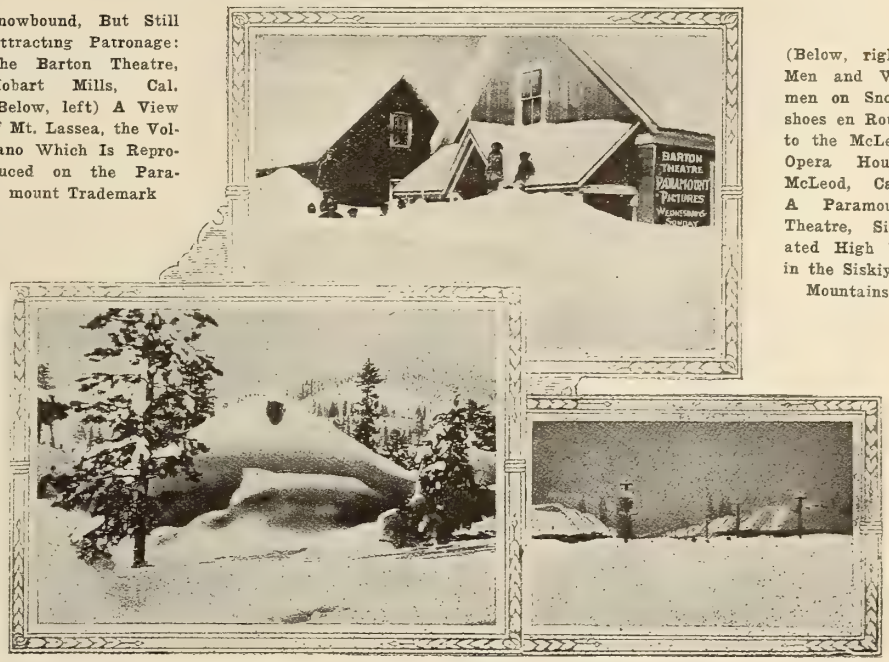
Mr. Le May is a descendant of an old Knickerbocker family and was born in West Thirty-sixth street. He is now working in a Metro studio, not two blocks away from where he was born. It is an old church where his family worshipped which has been converted into a modern motion picture studio.

Soon after his failure "in the Street," Mr. Le May accepted a proposal to play a small role with Molly McIntyre in "Her Great Hour."

PIERRE LE MAY

He made good in that successful play and was engaged for a better role with Margaret Leslie in "The Question." Afterward he appeared with John Mason in "The Reaper," and for three years was the leading man for Minnie Dupree.

"IMMORTAL FLAME" GIVEN SHOWING AT NEW YORK THEATRE, FEB. 28



Getting away from the usual custom of private exhibitions for the trade, "The Immortal Flame," the new Ivan production, was shown for the first time on Leap Year's day, February 29, at the New York theatre, it being the desire of the Merit Film Corporation, the distributor of Ivan productions in New York, to have the trade see this film under critical conditions.

The exhibitors mingled with the fans who flocked to both the theatre and the roof garden during the day and night, and the comments were certainly unbiased.

The feature was so favorably received by the audiences at this Marcus Loew house that it was booked for the entire Loew circuit.

Heavy Blanket of Snow Fails to Keep California Villagers Away From Theatres

Snowbound, But Still Attracting Patronage: The Barton Theatre, Hobart Mills, Cal. (Below, left) A View of Mt. Lassea, the Volcano Which Is Reproduced on the Paramount Trademark

(Below, right) Men and Women on Snowshoes en Route to the McLeod Opera House, McLeod, Cal., A Paramount Theatre, Situated High Up in the Siskiyou Mountains

THE almost indistinguishable spots in the lower photograph accompanying this article are men and women on snowshoes on their way to see Paramount pictures at the McCleod Opera House, McCleod, Cal.

This little village of 500 souls is situated high up in the Siskiyou mountains in the shadow of Mt. Shasta, the highest peak within a few miles of the only active volcano in North America, Mt. Lassen, in fact the very mountain which is reproduced in the Paramount trademark. The Paramount trademark was originally conceived by W. W. Hodkinson, president of Paramount, who began his career in California. The middle photograph shows Mt. Lassen.

The McCleod Opera House is owned by D. M. Painter and E. Smith, who operate the theatre successfully, despite very adverse weather conditions.

The photograph at the top shows the Barton theatre, which is located at Hobart Mills, Cal., far up in the Sierra Nevada mountains. During the winter months the whole town is covered with a six to twenty-foot blanket of snow. Nevertheless, Manager O. L. Barton shows two Paramount pictures a week, and reports success.

Three Paramount-Holmes Are Devoted to California

The Glorious Scenery of the State, Its Landmarks and Distinctive Modes of Living Will Be the Treat for "Fans" in Second Month's Releases

THE second month's releases of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures promise an even greater variety than the first month's issues.

Three of this new quartette of Paramount-Burton Holmes releases are devoted to California, yet never was a state more adapted to varied picturization, stretching as she does from the Mexican line—where semi-tropical conditions control not only the scenic elements, but the human as well—to the snow-clad peaks of Mount Shasta, the giant forests of the world's biggest trees and taking en route the gaieties and frivolities of one of the most cosmopolitan cities on earth, San Francisco.

The fourth subject differs as much from the other three as they do from each other, for Mr. Holmes will take his fellow travelers back into Arizona, where in the forest he will stage a veritable drama, where the actors are all real men and a real woman, playing the very real and very romantic drama of their exciting and oft-times perilous daily lives, fighting the overwhelming forest fires which so often carry death and destruction over thousands of acres.

To every lucky man or woman who visited the Expositions last summer, will be given the opportunity of renewing the delightful experiences; to the less lucky stay-at-homes will be offered a far cheaper but a most satisfying glimpse of what they were obliged to miss.

Tourists past, present and future, can roam with Mr. Holmes from one end of the state to the other, visit orange orchards, Indian villages, lumber camps, Chinatown, the Cliff House; cross into Old Mexico, mingle with the "Smart Set" on the beach at Coronado, where they bathe and dance, and then take a hand in the dangerous game of forest fire fighting.

In "Going Some in San Francisco," Mr. Holmes will spring a surprise, warranted, it is said, to cure the most cronic grouch.

EMERGENCY HOSPITAL FOR HORSLEY STUDIOS

David Horsley has given orders to have a hospital for emergency purposes constructed at his studio in Los Angeles.

"RAMONA" WILL BE SHOWN IN BIG CITIES WITH ELABORATE STAGE SETTINGS

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 4.

President William H. Clune, Manager of Production, Lloyd Brown, and advertising manager, Robert Poole of the Clune Film Production Company, spent several days of the past week at San Francisco where arrangements were completed for the showing of "Ramona" at the Cort Theatre.

The opening was set for March 19. The Sunday following the parties left for New York City on a similar mission, and will remain in the East until the film is shown at New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and Chicago.

The production consists of thirteen reels, and is to be presented in each city in the same manner as shown here. Atmosphere creating settings will be built to fit each stage, and orchestras similar to the one used here will give the musical program.

"Ramona" is now being shown for the third consecutive week, and there is no falling off of interest in the production.

The line of people waiting to purchase tickets has not broken between the hours of 9 a. m. and 9 p. m. since prior to the opening, and it is now necessary to purchase tickets several days in advance, despite the fact that Clune's Auditorium has a seating capacity of 3,000.

WOMAN POLICEMAN IN FAIR "ZONE," AN ACTRESS FOR KEYSTONE

In "Wife and Auto Trouble," a current Triangle-Keystone starring William Collier, Blanche Payson, formerly a policewoman on the Zone at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, is introduced.

She was discovered at the Exposition by Mack Sennett, and at first assigned to station her six feet four inches and 234 pounds on guard at the Keystone dressing rooms, but she was quickly promoted, and is now a full-fledged actress.

Thanhouser Enthusiastic Over Film Functions

Events Like Ball in New York, Dance in Boston and Carnival at Brighton Beach Last Summer Promote Feeling of Good Fellowship Among Members of Industry

AN authorized announcement over the signature of Leon J. Rubinstein, director of publicity for the Thanhouser Film Corporation, speaks interestingly of that concern's activities at the recent social functions of motion picturedom. On behalf of Mr. Thanhouser and the players he writes as follows:

"I am sorry to note that any company sees fit to withdraw from these affairs. While they are always in a good cause, they have the additional virtue of bringing together the men of a branch of the industry who seldom get the opportunity to gather together.

"Dating back to the affair at Brighton Beach last summer, and covering the Bronx Ball, the Boston Ball and the most recent ball of the New York Exhibitors at Madison Square Garden. I believe that we have all hugely enjoyed the good-natured rivalry for publicity honors.

"While I concede that the Thanhouser Company has gone much further in these affairs than a single manufacturing concern generally does go, there is supreme satisfaction with the results achieved.

"The gala spirit everywhere has helped us spread the Thanhouser slogan broadcast, and from a personal standpoint I would not miss any one of them on a bet.

"I am only sorry that the necessity of the work here prevents our players from attending these affairs in greater numbers and at greater distances.

"From a publicity standpoint I must admit that the general functions of filmdom offered one of the best opportunities for men with ideas to secure type space. It is unfortunate that in some quarters the results have not been secured in proportion to the money expended, but that is a matter for each publicity man to take care of with his own judgment. In my case the expenditure has been delightfully small in proportion to the benefits derived.

"This statement is issued on the eve of another great ball in Salem, Mass., to which I am escorting a number of our players, and where Florence La Badie will sell autographed photographs for the benfit of the Actors' Fund. The Thanhouser Company thanks the promoters of the various functions for the opportunities afforded and the benefits derived."

Historical Accuracy Is Aim for "Macbeth"

Aitken, President of Triangle, Now on Periodic Inspection Trip to Coast, Is Impressed with Care for Detail Taken by Tree in Sets for the Picture

H. E. AITKEN, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, now in California on one of his periodical trips of inspection, sends word that, while he is very much gratified by the results so far obtained on pictures at present in course of production, he is particularly impressed with the Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree production of "Macbeth."

He will review a number of forthcoming releases before returning to New York.

"Each rehearsal confirmed the opinion that 'Macbeth' contains a wealth of picturization material," says Mr. Aitken, "and indications are that it will create a sensation as a film production.

"The supporting cast was selected with the most careful consideration and no expense was spared to obtain the appropriate backgrounds and costumes.

"Sir Herbert and his director, John Emerson, have given a great deal of study to the production so that the film 'Macbeth' will live long in the minds of those who witness the spectacle.

"By the way, Sir Herbert and Emerson found that the mere problem of securing historical accuracy for the photoplay was an extraordinary task.

"The period in which 'Macbeth' was laid is one of the most obscure in history and the setting of a modern stage version is child's play compared with the planning and execution of the film version."

One question which came up, Mr. Aitken adds, was whether there were mountain sheep among the Scottish hills nine or ten centuries ago.

"Sir Herbert thought that it was quite probable wild sheep and goats roamed in Britain in the early days.

"He based his opinion on the fact that as far back as history goes there have been domesticated flocks, but Emerson decided that the big horn sheep heads were suggestive of the California mountains.

"He fixed upon the antlers of the royal stag as more in harmony with the picture. And the Fine Arts studio scouts spent days producing the goods."

Less Personal Direction of Plays by Cecil deMille

He Will Give More Time to Scenario Writing and Supervision of Other Producers in Lasky Organization—William C. deMille Obliged to Seek Interpreter Aid for "Sowers"

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 1.

CECIL B. deMille, having completed the subject he was directing, has left the Lasky studio for one of his periodical three or four days' vacations, which he is spending in the mountains.

Mr. deMille was accompanied by four or five unfinished scenarios that promise to make his leisure moments busy ones.

It is his intention to give more time to scenario writing and supervising the other directors of the Lasky producing force in the future, and he will personally direct but few photoplays.

Wm. C. deMille, engaged in directing the Lasky production of "The Sowers," with many scenes laid in Russia, is having troubles of his own, owing to the types selected for parts in this subject by the employment department.

Their appearance was considered far more valuable than their ability to speak or understand English, and consequently deMille is forced to give a greater part of his instructions through an interpreter.

Fedor Raskolnikoff, by the Lasky publicity department said to be a former costumer to the imperial Russian court at St. Petersburg, has been specially engaged to supervise the costuming of "The Sowers." This subject stars Blanche Sweet.

Jesse L. Lasky, who arrived from New York the early part of the past week with a big package of tonsilitis, has spent but a few hours at the studio. These, however, were busy ones, and plans for additional improvements have been started.

Mr. Lasky found it necessary to increase the size of the star dressing rooms now being built and a two-story bungalow style building will be built.

The plans for the new administration building were O. K.'d by Mr. Lasky, and progress on the construction of this is very satisfactory.

JUNIOR KEEPS ONE FOOT IN CHICAGO AND THE OTHER IN NEW YORK

John Junior, a recent addition to the Essanay family, has left Chicago for a visit to New York. In fact, it might be said that he has left again, as he has cultivated the habit of spending his week-ends in Gotham.

Mr. Junior starred for several seasons in Broadway productions. He was with William Collier three seasons, with Charles Frohman two and Daniel Frohman one.

JOHN JUNIOR

He played with Arnold Daly in "Steve" and was in the original all-star cast of "Officer 666" which played at the Gaiety theatre in New York. He was the juvenile lead in this production.

He had just finished an engagement with May Irwin in "Number 13 Washington Square" when he went to Essanay. He has played important parts for Essanay in "A Daughter of the City," "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" and took the leads in "A Man's Work" and "Politeness Pays."

Mr. Junior is twenty-six years old, five feet seven inches in height and of athletic build.

OTTO PRODUCES "BEHIND THE CURTAIN" FOR UNIVERSAL

Henry Otto, who directed the Bluebird photoplay "Undine," was transferred to the Universal studios at Universal Heights, N. J., to direct King Baggot, but as he had to wait two weeks before he could start in, he produced several one-reelers to keep his hand in trim.

His first effort was "Behind the Curtain," a drama written by Robert Thomas Hardy, managing editor of Snappy Stories, in which Dorothy Phillips and Alan Holubar were featured.

This marked the return of Mr. Holubar on the program releases of the Universal, as he is now taking the leading role in the new Williamson submarine pictures, on which he has been engaged the past seven months, and will be tied down with them for several months more.

"Cohesion of Exhibitor and Producer"—Rosenbluh

Elimination of Waste in Production and Distribution of Pictures Is Plan of Official of Variety Films, Formerly Greater New York Film Rental Company

PLANS for bringing exhibitor and producer, especially the independent producer, closer together, and eliminating much of the waste in the production and distribution of films, have been drawn up by Louis Rosenbluh, of Variety Flms, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York.

Variety, which was formerly the Greater New York Film Rental Company, has been reorganized on a basis of service to both ends of the film industry.

Mr. Rosenbluh, who is at the head of the corporation, says that the policy of the new organization is best expressed in the announcement that its business is the selling of films in any way in which they can best be sold.

Mr. Rosenbluh, although he does not consider his firm a brokerage firm in the strictest sense of the word, is nevertheless prepared to do a general brokerage business in motion picture films.

He is in touch with all the principal sources of supply, as well as the chief outlets, and is prepared to handle business for independent producers as well as distributors.

"Our business," he said to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, "is simply the gathering up of the loose ends of the picture industry. There is now altogether too much waste in the business of marketing films, once they have been produced.

"We aim to obviate this, to get producer and exhibitor together. We are prepared to handle pictures in any way, on regular programs, on a State's right basis—in fact any method of selling from which both producer and buyer can get the greatest benefit.

"We will cater specially to the small independent producer, who has no outlet for his product. If he will come to us we will find the outlet.

"Our immediate field is New York State. Although we will specialize in this territory, we will not necessarily confine ourselves to it, but will cover the entire country with any good, sound proposition.

"We want to talk to every man who has film to sell, as well as every man who wants to buy film."

STUDIO NUMBER?—READ THIS LETTER!

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 24.

Mr. J. C. Jessen,
Motion Picture News,
Los Angeles, Cal.

My Dear Jessen:—

I want to write and tell you what I think of the Authorized Studio Directory Number of the "Motion Picture News." It is certainly the finest thing yet done for the motion picture business.

I have often dreamed of just such a help in obtaining data for my columns, but never had an idea that it was to be anything but a dream.

For a help to a newspaper man, who edits a motion picture department, it is worth more than its weight in gold, and I can easily see that it is going to be my source of information in the future.

I am especially pleased to find it so complete. I can get just what I want about every branch of the industry.

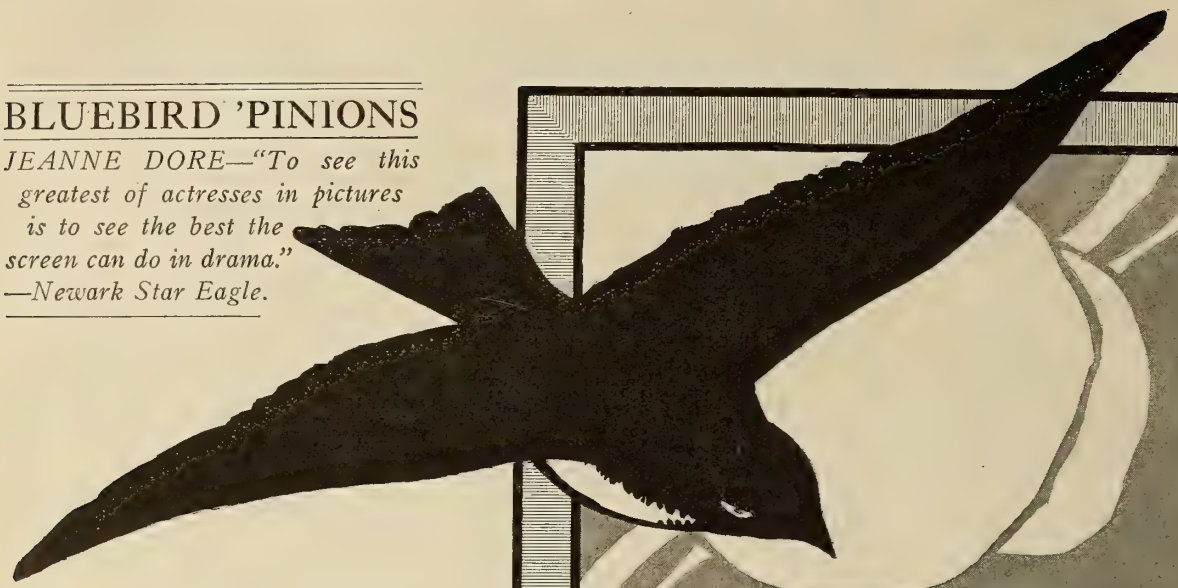
It was indeed a happy thought that included directors, cameramen, scenario writers, and others that have contributed to the success of the industry, about whom information has been so hard to get.

I really feel like extending a personal vote of thanks to "Motion Picture News" for this great help.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) GEO. H. BELLMAN,
Motion Picture Editor, Seattle Daily and Sunday Times.

HELENE ZIEGFELD, IN TERRISS' "TRIANGLE," IS DAUGHTER OF SONG WRITER

Helene Ziegfeld, who makes her first screen appearance shortly as the ingenue lead in Tom Terriss' latest five-part feature, "The Triangle," is the daughter of Hugo Ziegfeld of the Miner Lithograph Company, and Mignon Ziegfeld, author and composer of "Could You Learn to Love a Little Girl Like Me?" and many other well-known popular songs.



HELENE ZIEGFELD

Mrs. Ziegfeld is a daughter of Police Inspector William McLaughlin and Miss Helene and her sister, Marie, made their first stage appearance at the monster benefit to the widow of Policeman Enright, of which the inspector was in charge at the New York Theatre. The dance they gave on that occasion was taught them by Pat Rooney. Miss Ziegfeld is very fair and has large blue eyes.

MIGNON ANDERSON IS MEMBER OF IVAN COMPANY

Mignon Anderson, a favorite of photoplay theatre patrons, who was for a long time with Thanhouser (though she is but a few years old), has joined the Ivan Film Productions.

Miss Anderson's first role under the Ivan banner will be in "The City of Illusion," a drama written for the screen by Ivan Abramson.

Miss Anderson will portray the role of a country girl who is dazzled by the lure of the city and realizes before it is too late that the happiness to be found in a big town is but a mirage and cannot be easily found.

Disillusioned, she returns to her old home and finds happiness where she least expected it—in her home in the country.

A supporting cast appears with Miss Anderson, including Paula Shay, Bradley Barker, Joseph Burke and Willard Case. The company is being directed by Ivan Abramson.

HEAVYWEIGHT PUGILIST MAKES SCREEN DEBUT IN THE "BRUISER"

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 4.

Al Kauffman, the prize fighter who a few years ago loomed up as a formidable contender for heavyweight championship honors, made his screen debut recently at the American studios and was knocked out by William Russell in a most realistic fight scene.

The fight is one of the big moments in "The Bruiser," a five-part feature which Charles Bartlett is directing, as Russell is a big man and a clever boxer, the pair put up an exhibition that really made the "extras" who composed the film fight fans wax enthusiastic. "The Bruiser" is another of William Parker's original scenarios.

Three Stars in a Feature, from Equitable Studios

Muriel Ostriche, Edna Wallace Hopper and Charles J. Ross Will Make Appearance in "Who Killed Simon Baird?" by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, in April

MURIEL OSTRICHE CHARLES J. ROSS EDNA WALLACE HOPPER

THE first three-star productions to be created by the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation will characterize the World Film Program early in April, when Muriel Ostriche, Edna Wallace Hopper and Charles J. Ross will appear in Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf's "Who Killed Simon Baird?"

This will be Miss Ostriche's third appearance with Equitable, her former vehicles, "A Daughter of the Sea" and "A Circus Romance," having firmly established her, while Charles J. Ross is now a seasoned screen player, having appeared in several other productions, including "The Senator" for Triumph-Equitable. Edna Wallace Hopper makes her debut in "Who Killed Simon Baird?"

"Who Killed Simon Baird?" perhaps called into play the greatest amount of talent at the disposal of the Equitable concern. In addition to requiring three established stars for three difficult and intricate roles, two noted authors and playwrights collaborated on the story of the photoplay.

Rennold Wolf and Channing Pollock are responsible for five of the biggest hits Broadway has known.

Pollock created "The Pit," "Such a Little Queen," "The Little Grey Lady," "A Game of Hearts," "Secret Orchard," and "The Traitor," and in collaboration with Rennold Wolf, wrote "My Best Girl," "The Beauty Doctor," and "The Quaker Girl."

Mr. Wolf is the dramatic editor of the New York Morning Telegraph and one of the foremost journalists of the day.

The blending of stage and screen personalities is again seen in the placing of Miss Ostriche, Mr. Ross and Miss Hopper in the one production.

James Durkin, who was responsible for Equitable's production of "The Clarion," is staging "Who Killed Simon Baird?" and has been busily engaged the past week securing locations and assembling supporting casts. The interiors will be made in the Fifty-second street studio.

Nita Davis, Ingenue, Joins American for Mustang

Experienced Screen Player Will Be Seen as Feminine Lead in Three Reelers, the First Being "Curlew Corliss," One of the New "Happy Family" Series

Special to Motion Picture News

Santa Barbara, Cal., March 4.

THE American Film Company, Inc., announces the acquisition of Nita Davis, an ingenue who henceforth will appear as the feminine lead in American three-reel Mustang features.

Miss Davis goes to the American after two years of film experience with other companies in the Far West.

Her first screen apearance was made while she still was a student in a Los Angeles high school.

Upon graduation she entered filmdom in earnest, and her advance in the art has been steady.

The first American production in which Miss Davis will appear is "Curlew Corliss," one of the new "Happy Family" series from the stories by B. M. Bowers, to be released March 14.

She takes the role of a mountain school teacher who becomes the object of the affections of Curlew Corliss, who is none other than Art Acord, the famous Buck Parvin, of the Van Loan series produced by the American.

SOUTH AMERICA WILL SEE "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

South America is to see "The Birth of a Nation." A. M. Beatty, who will be in charge of the production, will leave New York, March 18, for Buenos Ayres, where the Griffith spectacle will have its first presentation in the Southern continent.

Other South American cities will be booked after the run, and the engagement will last five months. Beatty will be accompanied by George Bothwell.

VIEWS OF THE $35,000 SET BUILT AT INCEVILLE AND USED IN THE THOMAS H. INCE SPECTACLE SOON TO BE SHOWN

INTRODUCING THE MISSES LEE, CHILD PLAYERS FOR FOX

Child players seen in William Fox productions are among the best known youngsters on the screen. They include little Jane Lee and her twin sister, Katherine.

Both children have appeared in numerous Fox pictures and are now working in Jamaica in the big Annette Kellermann feature.

A GROUP OF FOX CHILD ACTRESSES

There are also "Kittens" Reichart, Runa Hodges, Jacqueline Morhange and Alma Frederic, whose ages, all added together, do not total thirty years.

Then there is Madge Evans, who is said to have been termed by Charles Dana Gibson "the most beautiful child in the world." Another youthful player in the employ of William Fox is Ethel Kauffman.

RUSSELL MAKES NEW CONTRACT WITH HUTCHINSON

William F. Russell, who has been starred in American Mutual Masterpictures De Luxe, made a new contract with President S. S. Hutchinson, and by the terms of this he will in the future direct as well as play the leading parts.

The first subject Mr. Russell will make is entitled "The Mismating," which was written by the actor-director himself.

Omaha Court Refuses Injunction Against Order for Children to Keep Away from Theatres

THE district court at Omaha has refused to allow a writ of injunction asked for by the exhibitors of the city to prevent the health commissioner and chief of police from keeping children away from their houses under the temporary scarlet fever epidemic regulation, while permitting them to attend the regular theatres.

The court held that the regulation is an exercise of the police power of the state, and said he was not disposed to issue an injunction to interfere with a regulation designed to protect the health of the community.

Besides cutting down the attendance of children, who are numbered as the greatest share of patrons for many of the city's theatres, especially in the suburbs, the regulation calls for the frequent fumigation, at a considerable cost, of the theatres.

The decided loss and the additional cost has put many of the houses on the verge of closing. The epidemic of scarlet fever, said the exhibitors in their petition asking for the injunction, is nearly over.

They readily agreed to the restriction when first imposed and were aided by the exchange managers, who cut in half the cost of film service.

A. A. Watts, manager of the Rohlff theatre, 2651 Leavenworth street, was fined twenty-five dollars in police court for admitting children to his house. Other exhibitors are under arrest.

Watts appealed his case to a higher court. No action will be taken in the other cases until the result of his appeal is known. A force of health officials has kept close watch of the theatres, immediately arresting any exhibitor where a child is found in the house.

All of this has been continued, said the exhibitors in court in the injunction case, while in regular theatres children could go in as large numbers as they pleased. The trial was largely attended.

Since the refusal of the injunction writ, no action has been decided upon by the Omaha organization of exhibitors.

"LOVELY MARY" IS METRO RELEASE FOR MARCH 13

"Lovely Mary," the five-part Metro wonderplay in which little Mary Niles Minter is starred, and Thomas J. Carrigan, her new leading man, is featured, will be released on the Metro program March 13.

This feature was produced by the Columbia Pictures Corporation, under the direction of Edgar Jones and his assistant, P. Thad. Volkman.

"Lovely Mary" is a story of the southland and a novel love tale is woven around a peculiar condition that obtained in Florida until a few years ago.

At that time state prisoners were "farmed out" to private contractors for any sort of manual labor. How a young girl saves her sweetheart from years of hard toil after he has been convicted of a crime he did not commit, and engaged him to work on her little farm until he is proved innocent, forms the principal theme for this stirring production.

Beside Miss Minter and Mr. Carrigan the cast includes Frank De Vernon, Russell Simpson, Schuyler Ladd, Ferd. Tidmarsh, Myra Brooks, and Harry Blakemore.

ROTHACKER VISITS NEW YORK

Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, left on the 20th Century Friday for New York. He returned to Chicago Tuesday morning.

GEORGE FAWCETT ARRIVES AT SELIG CHICAGO STUDIOS FOR SUPPORT OF BESSIE EYTON

George Fawcett and Lionel Atwell, among the most prominent of New York actors, have arrived in Chicago to take leading parts in the support of Thomas Santschi and Bessie Eyton in the Selig production of "The Crisis."

George Fawcett has starred in many productions of the spoken drama, including "The Great John Ganton."

Lionel Atwell is an English actor of note, his first appearance in America being in the support of Lily Langtry.

Mr. Fawcett will play the role of Silas Whipple in "The Crisis," while Atwell will enact the role of Clarence Colfax. Frank Weed, a well known character actor, has been especially engaged to play the role of James Hopper.

Director Colin Campbell has begun the production of "The Crisis" at the Selig studios in Chicago.

William N. Selig will later escort his company to St. Louis, Vicksburg, Miss., and other places to film scenes called for in Winston Churchill's great novel.

"HE WHO RETURNED" TITLE OF BIG INCE FEATURE

"He Who Returned" is the title decided upon for the multiple reel Ince feature to be released within the next five or six weeks as a theatrical attraction. Negotiations for the opening at a New York theatre is now being made, while the force at the special cutting room at the Ince theatre at Culver City is reducing the one hundred and twenty-five thousand foot of negative to a subject of ten or eleven reels. This work is being giving much of Mr. Ince's attention. The author of this story is C. Gardner Sullivan and the greater number of scenes were made under the direction of Raymond B. West.

Thomas H. Ince this week consumated another contract with William Collier whereby the comedian returns to the New York studio for a second engagement. The first Collier subject, "The No Good Guy," will soon be released.

LABOR LEADERS ENDORSE "THE BLACKLIST," LASKY SUBJECT WITH BLANCHE SWEET

"The Blacklist," which treats of capital and labor, and which was produced by Lasky, with Blanche Sweet as the star, has called forth endorsement from labor leaders and those interested in social and industrial problems.

After the first performance at the Strand, New York, Carl Beck, head of the Labor Forum, called at the Lasky offices and declared that his organization and many labor leaders were endorsing the production.

The photoplay was shown to more than a thousand persons in the auditorium of Washington Irving High School, New York, and they watched it with interest. Amos Pinchot addressed the audience on the labor question.

Letters received at the Lasky offices from exhibitors say that local branches of national unions will aid in providing large attendance for second showings.

C. Lang Cobb Again in the Ring, with Comedies

The Man Who Put Ramo on the Map Organizes the Broad-Grin Company, to Star Jolly Fanny Rice, Sally Cohen and Sam J. Ryan in One Reel Laughmakers

THE LAUNCHING OF THE BROAD-GRIN COMEDIES IN THE OFFICE OF C. LANG COBB, JR.

CONTRACTS were signed last week in his offices in the Columbia theatre building by C. Lang Cobb, Jr., with Jolly Fanny Rice, Sally Cohen, Sam J. Ryan and other well-known players for his newly organized company, which is to be known as the Broad-Grin Comedies Company, for the purpose of producing one one-reel comedy a week.

Mr. Cobb, who will be remembered as, among other things, as the man who put Ramo on the map, will act as general manager of the company, of which he is the sole owner.

Philip Mindil will be the advertising and publicity manager and Charles M. Seay, well known as a comedy director, will be the stage producer.

Mr. Cobb will release his product independently of any program and has already signed contracts with many of the cities of the United States.

The first picture will be released on Wednesday, April 5, and will be followed by another on each succeeding Wednesday.

"I feel," said Mr. Cobb, "that we are filling a demand which the public, and therefore the exhibitor, has long been making without satisfaction..

"Somehow, the manufacturers have been stubborn, in the face of repeated and multitudinous requests for clean smart comedy, and have persisted in giving in its place a lot of cheap and vulgar slapstick farce, played by clowns instead of actors.

"Is it really funny to drench an old man from a fire-hose, or throw a soft mince pie in a pretty girl's face?

"We have in our company just the sort of people to make it live up to its name of "Broad Grin.' Who is better known throughout the entire country as a wholesome laugh maker than Jolly Fanny Rice, and is there a greater petite comedy favorite than snappy little Sally Cohen, who with her late husband, John C. Rice, formed one of the most popular vaudeville acts on the big time?

"Sam T. Ryan, who was for many years the leading comedian of all the big George M. Cohan plays, needs no introduction to the great amusement-loving public of America."

RENA ROGERS FOR LEADS IN VOGUE COMEDIES

Rena Rogers, who has appeared in Crown City, National and Universal subjects, playing leads, has been engaged for Vogue comedies and will play leads in Director Jack Dillon's organization.

William McGan, late cameraman of the L-Ko, and James Rankin, former stage manager at Universal City, are new members recently added to the Vogue Comedies staff.

RICHARDSON WITH MOROSCO AS ASSISTANT DIRECTOR

F. F. Aldis, who has been assistant to Director William D. Taylor of the Pallas-Morosco organization, has resigned because of ill health and has been succeeded by Frank Richardson, late of the American Company.

"UNWRITTEN LAW" PRAISED FOR WORK OF STAR, MISS MICHELENA

The California Motion Picture Corporation reports that its recent trade showing of "The Unwritten Law," with Beatriz Michelena, called forth a number of commendations from those who attended.

The acting of Miss Michelena and her associates, and the elaborate settings, elicited praise.

Posters of a superior sort, made by the Schmidt Lithograph Company, a Western concern, discovered by Alexander Beyfuss, general manager of the California company, have been provided for this state rights feature.

Indianapolis Convention Attended by 276

Resolutions Adopted Placing the Organization on Record Against All Forms of Censorship —Ball in Tomlinson Hall Brings Out More Than Three Thousand

Special to Motion Picture News

Indianapolis, March 3.

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Indiana, in convention here, today drafted the following telegram and forwarded it to President Wilson at the White House:

"The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Indiana heartily and unanimously commends the stand you have taken to insure to Americans that freedom of the seas which is their inalienable right. We pledge you our undivided support in whatever steps you may take to maintain this right. We have telegraphed to the members of Congress from Indiana, asking them to support your proposals on this question without delay."

In introducing the resolution J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, said that as President Wilson had honored the motion picture industry by being its guest at the recent dinner given by the Board in New York, it was only fair that the industry should now reciprocate by supporting the position the President had taken in his controversy with certain elements in Congress.

The afternoon session of the convention was devoted to a discussion of censorship. Resolutions were adopted placing the convention on record against all forms of censorship, whether Federal, State or municipal, and pledging the support of the exhibitors in the suppression through laws now in force of any pictures which are immoral, indecent or obscene.

There were registered at the convention 276 out of Indiana's 630 exhibitors. The meeting was held in the ballroom of the Hotel Severin. Frank J. Rembusch, exhibitors' vice-president of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, presided at the opening session in the absence of State President Lyman H. O'Donnell, of Washington, Ind., who reached the convention hall later in the day. Among the speakers were representatives of the Universal, Pathe, Bluebird, World, Mutual, Metro, Nicholas Power, Seeburg Piano, Speer Carbon, and other companies.

"Organization and co-operation—what these will do for the motion picture industry" was the subject of Mr. Binder's address at the main session. Other speakers on the same general topic were Henry Weiss, of Chicago, and S. H. Grimes, of Crawfordsville, Ind., and Dr. James Rhodes and Joseph Cavin, of Indianapolis.

A telegram of fraternal greetings was sent to the New York exhibitors. The ball given last night—which did not close until early this morning—was attended by more than three thousand persons. It was held in Tomlinson Hall, the largest in the city. Many famous film stars were present, including several each from the Metro, Essanay, Vitagraph, and David Horsley companies.

INTERNATIONAL PHOTOPLAY WILL RELEASE PICTURES BASED ON POLISH HISTORY

A. Czechowicz is at the head of the recently organized International Photoplay Company, Inc., in the State of Illinois. The International is a $25,000 corporation, with offices at 2123 N. Robey street, Chicago.

Mr. Czechowicz has had much experience in various trades and professions and is well equipped to take the executive chair of the corporation. It is reported that the first picture of the new company will be released some time in April.

It deals with certain portions of the history of Poland, chiefly with events of the last few years.

Mr. Czechowicz also stands sponsor for the fact that his company's pictures will be clean and unoffensive and that it has an unlimited supply of material to draw upon for its releases.

Convention at Albany Brings Out 300 Exhibitors

Fine Spirit of Harmony and Co-operation Characterizes the Event and Augers Well for the Future Plans of the Organization—Enthusiasm, Running High, Results in Formation of a Branch League in the Capital City of New York—Banquet at the Ten Eyck Marks Closing of Two-Days' Session

Special to Motion Picture News

Albany, N. Y., March 5.

THE two days' convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New York brought motion picture men closer together in their fight against censorship, both state and federal. It also developed the fact that with the proper spirit the moving picture men of the state can get together and exert a wide influence for good as well as to keep out of the industry some of the things that are not wanted, but which have crept in because the state association has not been of the strongest.

One of the first results of the convention was the formation in Albany of a local. There has been no such organization here for the past three years, but all of the principal motion picture men are in it and they promise to stick.

One of the reasons for the convention was to discuss censorship and to line up against the bills now before the legislators. The motion picture men will present a solid front to the legislators and will endeavor to have the Ahern bill smothered in committee, or if it comes out on the floor of the Senate or Assembly, defeated by their influence.

More than 300 delegates and interested gentlemen attended the opening session, held at the Ten Eyck Hotel on Wednesday, March 1. Corporation Counsel Arthur L. Andrews, in the absence of Mayor Joseph W. Stevens, made the address of welcome to which National Vice-President Samuel Trigger, of New York City, responded.

Committees were named on resolutions and grievances, the former headed by A. N. Wolff, of Rochester, and the latter by George Wright, of Albany.

W. Stephen Bush read a paper on "Present Perils of Censorship in the State." President Lee A. Ochs, of New York, discussed "Constructive Legislation for the Benefit of Exhibitors." Frederick J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, Pa., spoke against censorship and declared that the exhibitors should take interest in the proposed information bureau it is expected will shortly be established in New York City. He discussed the need of strengthening the national organization.

Morality by Censorship Ineffectual

In his address Mr. Bush attacked the Ahern bill now before the legislature, which provides for state censorship. He declared that censorship had never improved the morality of any nation or individual. Mr. Bush said that the three censors would have to examine 35,000 feet of film every day in the week.

On Thursday one of the first things accomplished was the passage of a resolution which expressed the idea that the exhibitors are opposed to every form of censorship.

It was decided to present a memorial to the legislature embodying the sentiment of the meeting.

A resolution empowering a committee to confer with the Motion Picture Board of Trade on any matter affecting the industry was voted down, only four votes being recorded in its favor. An amendment to make it read the manufacturers instead of the board of trade was unanimously adopted.

Regarding payments for film service the meeting discussed the question in all its phases. The practice of feature companies exacting a four weeks' rental from the exhibitor was the subject of bitter discussion.

It was pointed out that at this time the feature companies have tied up about $1,400,000 of the money of exhibitors.

It was reported that the State Superintendent of Banking Eugene Lamb Richards had been spoken to about the matter and he declared he had no jurisdiction. A committee will later confer with the manufacturers and ask them to accept a bond instead of the cash payments.

League Favors Open Booking

The league went on record as being opposed to the program system, which is now enforced by very many of the dealers. The exhibitors declared in a resolution that they favored a system of open booking.

Another matter of vital interest to the exhibitors was the unqualified declaration that they wish a screen examination of films and the right to reject such productions as do not suit them. This subject was warmly discussed.

The question of the war tax was not touched upon, other than to refer it to the national convention, which will be held in Chicago July 11-15.

It was decided that the state organization should support the movement to aid in the formation of a bureau of information to be located in New York City, for the purpose of giving advice and assistance to the exhibitors.

The main functions of the new bureau are: First, for supplying to the exhibitor information on all points of law and legislation arising in his particular state. It is proposed to compile a digest of the motion picture laws and ordinances now in force in the various cities of the country. In the drafting of legislation the bureau is to lend its service.

The second prime object of the bureau is to supply the exhibitors with information regarding all multiple reel productions put on the market by producers, in the form of weekly bulletins, this information to be given by an impartial expert.

Another function is to take up with the heads of the producing and distributing companies in New York all questions, difficulties and grievances that may arise at any time between a branch of any film company and the exhibitor.

Emphatic protest against some of the posters issued by the film companies was heard. It was agreed that many of these posters and photographs are misleading and coarse.

League Branch in Albany Formed

One of the immediate results of the meeting was the formation in Albany of a local organization consisting of: President, William Frischknecht; secretary, George Wright, and treasurer, Samuel Sucno, of this city.

Officers of the league elected were: President, Lee A. Ochs, New York; first vice-president, L. Buettner, Cohoes; second vice-president, Samuel Sucno, Albany; third vice-president, John Witteman, New York; secretary, Thomas Holland, Brooklyn; treasurer, H. Emmett Cornell, Syracuse. Delegates to the Chicago convention chosen were: L. Blumenthal, New York; J. Wittman, Bronx; L. A. Buettner, Cohoes; D. A. Gibbon, Syracuse; A. N. Wolff, Rochester; J. L. Miner, Schenectady; E. M. Day, Rome, and W. H. Linton, Little Falls.

The league endorsed the action of President Ochs in sending a letter to President W. W. Hodkinson, of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, in relation to federal censorship, which read in part as follows:

I am glad to have your statement to the effect that you are entirely opposed to state and local censorship "with their variable standards." I regret that the same light of reason which enables you to perceive clearly the evils of state censorship fails you utterly in your consideration of the evils of national censorship. You have been reported as saying that the opponents of censorship seem to have no reason for their stand and that their only argument is reiteration.

Let me ask you: Why do you oppose state censorship? You speak of the variable standards of state and local censorship. What makes these standards variable? Nothing but the variable action of the variable human mind.

What reason have you to suppose that the censor, because he is called "federal" will be less variable, less liable to err and less liable to do injustice to the film interests? Is it possible that you fail to understand our principle? We are opposed to censorship as a principle. This means that the personality of the censor has absolutely nothing to do with the question of censorship. A principle which is essentially vicious remains vicious no matter in whom it may be embodies. The most truthful man is not believed when he tells us that twice two make five.

If censorship were a new idea we might be tempted to give it a trial. The fact is that nothing has ever been tried more thoroughly and found more inefficient than censorship. The English speaking races have for the last 200 years rejected censorship because it utterly failed to accomplish the ends for which it had been instituted.

. . . . You will see, then, I trust that censorship of any variety flies in the face of the experience of all free and Democratic countries. I assume there is no doubt in your mind as there is none in ours as to the right of the picture to enjoy the same legal guarantees and immunities which the constitution of every state grants to the press. . . . .

It is easy to say that federal censorship wiH do away with state censorship, it may be creditable to your optimism to hope so, but I challenge you to point to a single historic fact or a single legal principle on which such a hope and such a belief can be based. Until you furnish such proof your contention that federal censorship will in any way diminish the evils of state and other censorship cannot be taken seriously.

If you believe that federal censorship will destroy what you may consider unfair competition, we beg you to consider that after such unfair competition is removed the federal censors board will begin to operate on your films.

SCENES FROM "A WIFE'S SACRIFICE" AND "GOLD AND THE WOMAN," WILLIAM FOX PHOTOPLAYS, STARRING ROBERT B. MANTELL AND THEDA BARA, RESPECTIVELY

It is generally recognized by the public and by exhibitors that you aim to produce none but clean and wholesome pictures. In spite of your honest endeavor some of your best pictures were made the subject of condemnation and elimination by the censor board of Pennsylvania and Ohio. Censorship strikes at all films in its effort to maintain itself and provide a plausible excuse for holding office and drawing salaries.

In conclusion, I wish to say that the exhibitors of the country have a very vital interest in this matter. They have a right to speak for themselves and they furthermore have the right to expect that the producers consult with them before taking such a stand as you have taken.

Yours very truly, LEE S. OCHS.

One of the pleasant features of the convention was the banquet which took place Thursday evening in the ball room of the Ten Eyck. It was attended by about 200 exhibitors and a few invited guests.

It was a very delightful affair. W. Stephen Bush was toastmaster. The dinner marked the close of the two days' session. Although many phases of the motion picture industry were touched upon by the speakers it was the common opinion of all that in censorship was a bold attempt "to trample upon the rights of a free American nation," and this was characterized as a "blot on Democracy."

Frederick J. Herrington, president of the National organization, declared censorship was an attempt to deny freedom to thought and speech.

NEW YORK STATE EXHIBITORS IN CONVENTION AT ALBANY

Former Deputy Police Commissioner J. Robert Rubin, of New York, attorney for the motion picture men, impressed upon the guests the grave responsibility which rested upon them in their business, which represents an investment of $500,000,000.

Samuel J. Rothapfel, first manager of the Strand, who is soon to open the new Rialto theatre, told of the first motion picture show he gave when he graduated from a bartender in a Pennsylvania coal mining town. It was a story full of heart interest and was listened to carefully by the company.

Vice-President Samuel Trigger told some interesting experiences. Deputy Secretary of State A. B. Parker spoke for Secretary of State Hugo, who was unable to attend.

The concluding feature of the occasion was the presentation to Mr. Bush of a handsome gold watch, suitably inscribed. It was presented by Vice-President Trigger and accepted by Mr. Bush in a neat speech. S. J. Coe.

"HOW TO BECOME MOTION PICTURE ACTRESS," BY GAIL KANE, SYNDICATED IN SCORES OF DAILIES

GAIL KANE, the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation's leading star, has arranged for the syndication of a ten-chapter series of articles entitled, "How to Become a Motion Picture Actress," which will appear in several hundred newspapers throughout the country.

The syndicating of the stories was attended to by Harry Reichenbach direct with the papers. World and Equitable theatres throughout the country are aiding the papers in the exploitation of the stories by flashing on the screen and by lobby display.

ACTUAL TRENCH FIGHTING BROUGHT BACK BY HALL IN "AT THE FRONT WITH THE ALLIES"

ACTUAL trench fighting and other spectacular phases of the great conflict in Europe, calculated to give Americans a better conception of the war, were brought back from the Allied fronts last week by Bleecker Hall, the cameraman.

Mr. Hall's credentials permitted him to take some scenes of hand-to-hand fighting at points along the west front that have hitherto been closed to moving-picture operation.

Slinging the deadly hand-grenades; combating the enveloping German gas fumes by the use of respirators and goggles; firing scrapnel from mortars; cutting barb-wire entanglements under fire, and serving the big French guns are some of the unusual scenes which he secured.

In addition, he was able to collect some remarkable negatives taken by official cameramen on the Russian and Caucasian fronts, which he will incorporate with the other celluloid in the new war series, "At the Front with the Allies," which will be presented shortly to the exhibitor by the Hippodrome Film Company, 110 West Fortieth street, New York City.

These latter pictures show the Russian bombardment and conquest of a Turkish port on the Black Sea littoral; midair battles between the latest types of aeroplanes; a great sea battle between German and Allied fleets, and the actual capture and internment of German troops by the Russians.

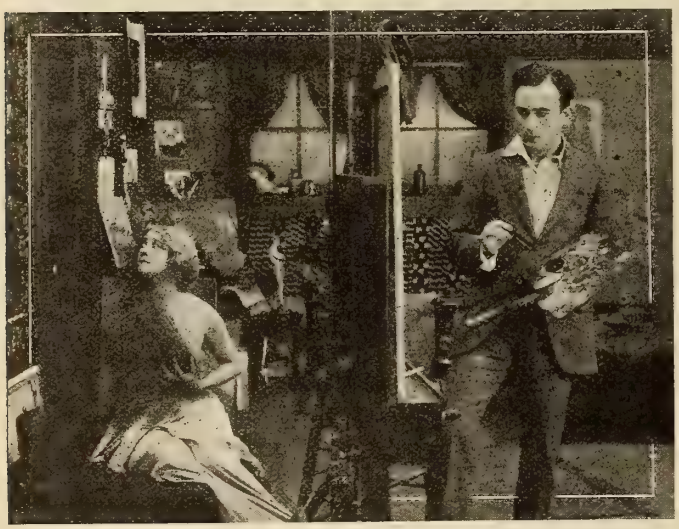
"THE DEVIL'S TOY"



(Premo-Equitable—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE poem "The Mills of the Gods," by Edward Madden, has deftly been turned into a picture by its author in collaboration with Maurice Marks. The subject moves with an ease and logic that duly absorbs and interests the beholder.

It is not an unfamiliar story by any means, because every creditable work of literature has its imitators in one form or another, but never to our recollection has it been done in such a pleasing and comprehensive manner.

Much of the credit for the success of the production should go to the members of the cast, which is above the average in ability and prominence. Adele Blood, Montagu Love and Edwin Stevens are well known and experienced players, and their presence in

AT WORK ON THE MASTERPIECE

"The Devil's Toy" does much to put it on the high road to excellence.

"The Devil's Toy" contains padding, but it is pleasant padding, and padding with a purpose. When Helen Denver starts to ruin Wilfred Barsley she repairs to Collins' Fifth Avenue fashion shop where many of the models, attired in the latest creations, parade for her inspection. When Barsley gives a party he gives it at the Biltmore Ice Gardens and both the Biltmore and the skating receive more than passing notice. This is padding, in a certain way, but it is not of the sort that tires—so let it pass.

The direction was attended to by Harley Knowles who has done his work very well. The scenes are all apropos of the occasion, particularly those in the studio scenes where Mr. Knowles has shown a fondness for displaying the well-known female form in the shape of models.

Barsley, an artist, nephew of a miser, is dissatisfied with his work and his bank account. A vision of the Devil comes to him and tells him that it would be very easy to dispose of his uncle and gain his wealth.

This done, the Devil enters again and persuades his prey to steal the wonderful paintings of Paul La France, and exhibit them as his own.

La France has lost his memory through privation, so it is easy. Then Barsley feels the need of a woman and enter Helen Danver, actress, former model of La France whom she dearly loves.

Helen learns of Barsley's deceit, ruins him through her extravagance and reinstates her lover in his rightful position. Barsley, of course, goes completely to the Devil, where he belonged.

Montagu Love gives an impressionable performance as Barsley. His work is not overdone as might be the case and it is convincing.

Adele Blood as Helen, by good acting, banishes the thought that she is older than most heroines. Edwin Stevens, appearing as the allegorical Devil, does realistic work in a role that could have appeared ridiculous by an amateurish rendition.

Arnold Lucy, Jack Halliday and Madge Evans complete the cast.

"THE FLIGHT OF THE DUCHESS"

(Thanhouser-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

MRS. BROWNING'S poem has furnished inspiration for a dainty story, daintily told. As a matter of fact, the charm of the subject is almost entirely in the presentation; the story doesn't require much of our old friend, "the punch." Nevertheless its charm makes itself felt very perceptibly, and the picture should have a wide appeal.

The production is elaborate, and great care has been shown in arranging the period costumes and settings. The scenery is notable and someone has worked hard on looking up locations; they are striking and successful in interpreting the atmosphere of the picture.

Virginia Hudson wrote the scenario from the Browning poem, extracts from which are used as titles, and Eugene Nowland directed the production.

By all odds the central figure of the cast is Gladys Hulette. Petite and charming in her screen presence, she shows considerable ability in expressing the emotions and fancies assigned to her part, and considered as a whole, her work shows great capacity along these lines.

THE DUCHESS IS WELCOMED HOME

The young duke returns to his castle, imbued with a love for the days of chivalry. He dresses in the costume of the Middle Ages and commands all his servants to dress likewise and observe the usages of those good old times.

He sends heralds to a neighboring nobleman to demand his daughter in marriage, and the young girl is taken from the convent and sent to the castle. On the way she meets a band of gypsies and falls in love with one of the young men.

She immediately conceives a dislike for the duke, who is overbearing and cruel, and when he goes for a hunt, and sends the fortune teller of the gypsy band back to give her a lesson in obedience, the gypsy helps the girl to escape, and she flees with the old woman; later she marries the young gypsy and casts her lot with the romanies.

Finding his intended bride gone, the duke angrily revokes his order regarding medieval costume and observances, and lives like a modern nobleman.

Robert Gary, Burnett Parker, Nellie Parker Spaulding, Wayne Arey and Caroline Lee give Miss Hulette able support throughout the photodrama.

"THE HEART OF TARA"

(Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

FROM the exhibitor's standpoint this is a good picture. It has the qualities which are generally depended upon to draw and please an audience, such as attractive settings and scenery, a melodramatic story, which is not always logical, animals and action.

Such a picture should make money for the exhibitor if properly heralded.

The scene is India, under the British suzerainty. The principal characters are a native "Khan" and the British governor and his daughter.

Twenty years before (this, apparently, being the conventional jump in pictures) the same Englishman had won the love of the Khan's favorite, and the Khan had killed the girl rather than resign her to his rival.

Now the Englishman, who left India immediately after, is reassigned to the post, and the Khan plots his long-awaited revenge.

The Khan places spies, as servants, in the governor's house, and they communicate with their chief through a secret passage, built long before, in anticipation of such a situation as the one now confronting them.

OUT OF THE DUNGEON

At a favorable time the governor and his daughter are seized, bound and conducted through the passage to the Khan's palace, where the governor is chained in a dungeon, and his daughter chosen as the new queen of the harem.

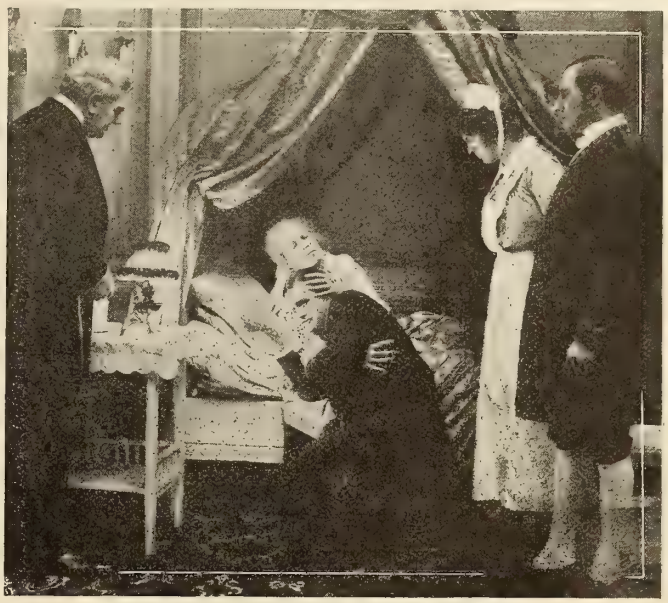
Lieutenant Grey, the girl's sweetheart, discovers the passage, and in exploring it, finds the girl, who has lost her mind, and consequently is regarded as sacred to Allah.

She recovers her mind at sight of him, and he, urged on by the Khan's favorite, who is consumed by jealousy, goes for the troops.

The Khan finds the girl sane again, and orders the nuptials to be prepared; he also orders the governor thrown into a den of lions.

The lieutenant arrives with the troops just in time to kill the lions and save the governor, while the favorite kills the Khan as he is about to attack the white girl.

William Clifford, Sherman Bainbridge, Marie James, Margaret Gibson, Marvel Spencer, Walter Spencer, Edward Alexander, Edward Roberts and Gordon Russell are in the cast. The story is by Theodosia Harris and the picture was directed by William T. Bowman.



"THE MOTHER WHO PAID"

(Great Northern—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

HERE is a foreign production that can rank with the good features of the year, and by good, we mean that there is nothing concerning the feature that warrants deprecatory criticism. Its story is well put together and though the basic idea has long been favorite with foreign producers, the theme is worked out logically and carries a satisfactory degree of suspense.

The acting is meritorious, and special mention should be made of the excellent types that are seen.

THE DEATH OF JUSTIN'S FOSTER-MOTHER

The hero, a statesman, looks the part and the same may be said of the other principals and even the supernumeraries. The settings, particularly the one representing the Parliament house, are substantial and realistic.

Regina Wethergren, featured as Madame de Thebes, gives a well-timed and convincing portrayal of a difficult role and the rest of the cast, not named on either herald or film, is most satisfactory.

The actress who appears as Louise Beresford is pretty and has an attractive personality that does much towards the good effect created by the entire picture.

Great Northern photography has always set somewhat of a high water mark in camera work, and although some of the scenes in "The Mother Who Paid" are marked by static, this important factor in the picture's production has in general been attended to in very good style.

The theme is striking and appealing and it is worked out to a logical conclusion, in which a complete happy ending has been sacrificed for the good purposes of the drama. The finale, however, is entirely fitting and instead of creating a disappointed feeling, one is inclined to admire the producer for his good taste.

The story: In the prologue, Ayla, a gypsy, bears an illegitimate child and acting on the advice of her father she decides to rid herself of it, and in after years never acquaint her offspring of her identity. It so happens that the child of a Countess has died and the gypsy's baby is substituted.

Years later, the baby grown to manhood as Justin Winthrop, runs for an important position in Parliament. The Countess dies and leaves a note acquainting him of the fact that she is not his mother. The note is secured by his adversary, who threatens to expose Justin's parentage unless he withdraws from the fight.

Ayla has become a noted clairvoyant and is familiar with the identity of her son, but keeps the secret. Justin meets and falls in love with his political opponent's daughter.

The time comes when Beresford denounces Justin in Parliament and informs the house that Madam de Thebes is his mother. She, however, is in the gallery and for the good of her son's career she denies being his mother.

She dies never revealing her secret, while, through Beresford's daughter, the two political enemies become fast friends.

"AUTUMN"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

O. A. C. LUND, who wrote and directed this picture featuring Violet Mersereau, has done admirably well. It will be remembered that Miss Mersereau's last production furnished her with a practically actionless story.

Mr. Lund has centered a strong drama about the attractive star, but he has not overlooked opportunities for offsetting her charming personality. She appears in her favorite part, a wild unsophisticated young lady of the north woods, and Miss Mersereau always convinces as such.

There is another notable attraction about "Autumn" and that is that Lieutenant Percy Richards, well known in Times Square and environs as The Man in White, is cast as the hero and although many heroes have been much more active than the brawny lieutenant, he does exceedingly well in all his scenes, acting with a naturalness and ease that is pleasing.

SPANISH KATE ADMITS HER GUILT

"Autumn" is not a perfect picture, because there are several points that might arise for discussion both in respect to construction and direction.

The closing scenes for instance are of the anti-climax variety—the picture should end just a little sooner than it does and though Lieutenant Richards dries himself before a fire after having been immersed in the river, his clothes don't show the need of this attention.

But "Autumn" as a whole is a most satisfactory subject. The story runs smoothly and is of a generally liked sort, the photography is good, the scenes are well chosen and the supporting cast is entirely capable.

The story centers about Autumn (Violet Mersereau), a little waif of the Northwest. Dick Leslie of the Royal Mounted is commissioned to find a certain man who disappeared years before and naturally enough he encounters Autumn and after a while it is proven that the man wanted is her father.

To this there is added a spicy bit of melodramatic villainy in the shape of one Diamond Jack, a gambler, who turns covetous eyes on Autumn.

He is murdered by a jealous rival of Autumn and after determining Autumn's innocence Leslie is made happy with the bright little girl of the woods.

Lester Stowe, Paul Panzer, Clara Byers and Lindsay Hall are most important of the supporting cast.

"THE HUNTED WOMAN"

(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

HERE is another demonstration of the fact that good stories cannot be kept off the screen. It also demonstrates that suspense can be carried through four thousand feet successfully, if the director is alive to his job, and the players are cast properly.

Exactly this happened in "The Hunted Woman." The moral is that no audience will fail to be stirred by the finished product.

James Oliver Curwood wrote the story; S. Rankin Drew directed the picture; Viriginia Pearson and Drew led the cast that enacted it.

The first reel is purely introductory; the action does not begin to warm up until the second is well under way. When it does, however, the spectator gets tremendously interested in the characters and their fortunes.

He begins to feel that unless the hero and the heroine come to a good end, and the villains to a bad one, he will have to take a hand in the matter himself.

This is only another way of saying that the element of suspense is handled in a way that is positive and sure-fire.

The result is that when Joanne, out in the wilderness of Canada, marries John Aldrous, the author, after a search which convinces her that her scoundrel of a husband is dead, the spectator hopes he is dead, and the lovers will be permitted to go on their way undisturbed.

When, however, the husband reappears, as the confederate of a desperate character who has resolved to get Joanne for himself, the spectator, surprised, is actually anxious for the husband to be disposed of in a summary manner.

And he is disposed of, but not in a summary manner. If he were, the suspense would have been broken, and the spectator would have been disappointed at last.

Few pictures really call forth such genuine sympathy, such spontaneous sympathy as this one. This is the outstanding merit of the production, and it stamps S. Rankin Drew as a director of unusual promise.

Virginia Pearson, as Joanne, performs splendidly. Her acting it a great factor in building up the appeal of the story; Frank Currier draws a fine sketch of Donald MacDonald, a guide; Ned Finley and George Cooper are convincing villains; and the others, Billie Billings, Charles Wellesley, Denton Vane, Harold Foshay, and Mae Greene—are entirely acceptable. Drew himself appears to excellent advantage.

Several fights, a landslide which imprisons Joanne and John and nearly costs their lives, a struggle between John and one of the villains which hurls them off a cliff into a river, and the final combats on a mountainside, furnish the chief thrills.

In the print shown for review, the photography was noticeably dark. There is also considerable padding, but these things cannot change our conviction that "The Hunted Woman" will prove mighty interesting to picturegoers.

"AS IN A LOOKING GLASS"

(World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THAT remarkably informative sheet, World Film News, refers to "As in a Looking Glass," as a picture that spells success. We can voice its sentiments in all sincerity, and we do. Kitty Gordon, however, is the chief factor in the spelling—she ranks at the head of the class and makes her picture a success despite itself.

The picture is based on the novel by F. C. Phillips. Our prejudice against its structure, that is so charmingly covered by Miss Gordon, is that little occurs until two and a half of the five reels are over.

Miss Gordon is indeed a ravishing sight from her face to her justly touted back which is shown in all its glory in the picture. Miss Gordon will also create great response in the audience, chiefly the feminine portion, by the many and wonderful gowns which she dons and sheds with startling rapidity.

In fact, it is Miss Gordon who spells the success as we remarked before; the picture merely furnishes her the opportunity to spell.

"As in a Looking Glass" can by reason of its termination be called a tragedy. There is no forced happy ending. Miss Gordon appears as Lila Despard, a social adventuress, who, commissioned to procure valuable plans from Livingston, the assistant secretary of the Navy, disappoints herself and her colleagues by falling in love with him.

They are married, but the villainous colleagues still pursue her and force her to leave him and bring them the papers.

But her love for her husband dominates, she throws the papers in a fire and consequently is shot and killed by one of the confederates.

A confession over the telephone to her husband follows, while the several conspirators meet death when their wild automobile plunges over a steep precipice.

Next in importance to Miss Gordon is Teddy Sampson who, as the star's maid, plays extraordinarily well. Her girlish, unaffected mannerisms are quite captivating.

F. Lumsden Hare makes a natural figure of Livingston. Gladden James and Charles Eldridge have good comedy roles which they handle capably, while others are Mario Majeroni, Frank Goldsmith, Mrs. Woodward, Lillian Cook and P. Massi. Miss Cook makes an appealing character of Livingston's fiancee whom he casts off in favor of Lila.

THE MAID'S PLAN IS ACCEPTED

Frank Crane's direction is, as usual, most acceptable. His scenes are well arranged and he has shown Miss Gordon's back to good advantage without giving the impression that he was trying to do so. Among other things, he has staged a spectacular masque ball. The photography is good.

"BEN BLAIR"

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

DUSTIN FARNUM is ushered on to the Paramount program once more via "Ben Blair." The picture possesses a number of distinct merits, such as magnificent photography and scenes, most of which are laid in a West that is truly wild, and the settings leave nothing at all to be desired.

"Ben Blair," taken in a dramatic way, is not what we have been accustomed to expect from the studios of the Pallas company.

BEN DELIVERS HIS CHARGE TO THE SHERIFF

"Ben Blair" is based on a novel, and evidently the novel was of that sort which contains a number of themes, each one just about as important as the other and each one demanding new and distinct interest.

The scenario writer has obviously pictured the material without much change, and the result is that again we have a picture in several episodes, quite disconnected.

Some of the big moments of the picture fail to ring true. For instance take that one in which Ben Blair, by the sheer power of his personality forces his sweetheart to forsake her city lover and return with him to the West. Blair proves nothing against his rival, and why the girl should submit to his personality is not made clear.

The picture commences with the life of Blair as a boy. His trials and tribulations consume almost two reels, so Mr. Farnum is quite late in his arrival.

Gordon Griffith, in this early phase of the picture, does a lot of good work as the boy, but the announcement that Dustin Farnum is to play the featured part is apt to cause anxiousness.

Much space is occupied showing Blair hunting down and bringing to justice the man responsible for the death of his mother, and after this Blair goes to the city and fetches the girl of his heart back to the West.

Director William D. Taylor's work is not of the sort that we can commend. There are a number of slips throughout the five reels that affect the continuity of the action. In the matter of locations, however, he has done very well indeed.

Winifred Kingston, Herbert Standing, Lamar Johnstone, Virginia Foltz, Frank A. Bonn and Fred Burns support Farnum.

"LITTLE MARY SUNSHINE"

(Balboa-Pathé Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

BY using a child as the central figure—a girl of three years—and leaving all the childhood in her, an absolutely charming picture has been produced by the Balboa studios in this subject.

Children are a common thing in pictures now-a-days, but in so many cases the directors have found it necessary to make the little ones register emotions, take poses, and to "act" generally.

In this case it has evidently been realized that a child is a natural actor, and that emotions expressed in its own childish way provide the great touch of nature that holds the human family together.

Although there is nothing of sadness or sorrow attempted, either in story or situation, the mere happy childhood of Baby Marie Osborne raises one of those lumps in the throat, and sends one away with tears starting.

The handling is artistic in the fullest sense; i. e., the artist has known where to stop. The picture, as shown for review, was minus most of the titles.

We would suggest that they be left out; language is often out of place, and in this case would only encumber, and might even spoil situations which stand clear and pointed by virtue of their own humanness.

When a charming child lies dreaming of bears and Indians, and loving hands come and tenderly shake her into wakefulness, we would hate to see the film cut for the insertion of such a title as "Wake up! Wake up!" We hope it won't be done.

The story of the picture amounts to very little. It isn't necessary. A wealthy young man is to marry a wealthy girl on the morrow, but he tarries long with his bachelor friends, and arrives at his fiancee's home in a partly liquid condition.

She is angry and hands him back his ring. On his way home he finds the little waif hidden under the rug in his automobile, and he takes her home with him.

The little one becomes the light of the house. She is bathed, dressed, and given the run of the place. The most striking scenes are when an Italian appears with a big black bear.

The bear is hired for a few hours and romps with the child on the lawn, the little one turning the hose on the animal, giving it a drink and shower, and generally handling the big brute roughly.

That night she dreams of the bear, and of taking him into the dining room and feeding him; she then gives him a bath in the big tub; finally the bear turns on her, chases her into her bed and pounces upon her; she then awakes.

The upshot of the matter is that the child's influence brings the separated pair together again, and all ends happily.

The work of Henry King is convincing and good throughout. He is ably supported by Marguerite Nichols and Andrew Arbuckle.

"THE SOUL MARKET"

(Popular Plays and Players-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

MADAME PETROVA has a congenial and appealing role in this story of the stage. She appears as Elaine Elton, a prima donna who, wearied of the glamor of life behind the footlights, resists every temptation to sell her soul for jewels and fine clothes, as so many of her associates are doing.

Mme. Petrova easily dominates the picture, and gives an impersonation which holds attention throughout. In fact, the picture is very largely Mme. Petrova.

Her personality and finished acting readily offset a theme which, otherwise, could hardly have been spread over five reels successfully.

A wealthy clubman, thwarted in his efforts to declare his love to Elaine, finally gets a job as her chauffeur. After this event, he has many opportunities to propose, and does so, but without revealing his identity.

He is refused, of course, and the spectator is a little exasperated. It is perfectly evident that Elaine loves him, and would marry him if she knew his identity.

But if the revelation of his identity had come so early, there would have been no opportunity to show a thrilling dream of Elaine's, in which she foresees the consequences of marriage to another suitor,—Billings, a cultured scoundrel, head of the theatre trust.

If she had married Billings, there would have been a murder, with Elaine as the murderess. The introduction of this dream provides suspense, and opportunity for the sort of emotional acting in which Mme. Petrova excels.

Warned by the dream, Elaine finally accepts the chauffeur, and then learns who he is.

Arthur Hoops does good work in the thankless role of Billings; Wilmuth Merkyl makes a pleasing hero, and the rest of the cast is entirely acceptable.

ELAINE REFUSES TO SELL HER SOUL

They are: Fritz De Lint, Fraunie Fraunholz, Charles Brandt, Charles Mack, Bert Tuey, Grace Florence, Cora Milholland, Evelyn Brent, Al Thomas, and Gypsy O'Brien.

Several gay scenes are introduced, notably a festive wine party given by Billings. These scenes are quite animated, but entirely inoffensive. The sets are rich throughout, and furnish very effective backgrounds.

Views of a theatre, both back stage and out front, are particularly interesting. Direction by Francis J. Grandon plays its part in making the whole a good hour and a quarter of entertainment.

"THE YAQUI"

(Bluebird-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

WHEN there is something in a play which makes one angry, and fills one with sympathy for the wronged person who lives only for revenge, the play ought to be considered "gripping." This is the case with "The Yaqui."

The subject is melodramatic, but seldom have we seen melodrama better produced. Pictures like this emphasize the proposition that anything in Nature will "get over."

The director has resorted only to nature; there are no painted drops, or hothouse interiors; the whole thing, with the exception of one or two unimportant scenes, is made in God's out-of-doors; the camera takes us to the wild mountain passes and cacti plains of the Mexican border, and the scenes are brilliantly photographed. The story is the old story of revenge.

It is the same story it has always been, but it has been given an unusual setting, and there are a number of unexpected features in the working out of the human passion.

Hobart Bosworth, as Tambor, leader of the Yaqui Indian tribe, does some excellent and most convincing work. General Martinez, the military commander of a northern district, is instructed by his superiors to aid a Yucatan planter in obtaining workers for his plantation.

THE INDIAN CASTS HIS LOT WITH HIS PEOPLE

So trouble is fomented among Yaquis, and the charges of rebellion are made as an excuse for enslaving the whole tribe.

Tambor, who was believed to have been killed, joins the party on their way south, and in the fields of the Yucatan plantation he shares their slavery. He is ever at the side of his wife, and when their child dies of fever because the overseers would not allow the mother to care for it, and the mother herself is attacked, and commits suicide, Tambor seizes the knife, and with it kills the planter.

He makes his way back north to the remainder of the tribe, and vows vengeance on Martinez, who was instrumental in enslaving the tribe.

A rebellion starts, and Martinez's troops are ordered out to quell it. Tambor pursues Martinez to the American line, where United States troops forbid the general to cross because he is bearing arms.

The few moments' delay allow Tambor to catch up with him, and he plunges the knife into the general's heart.

Incidentally, the removal of the general opens the path for Lieutenant Hernandez to marry Ysobel, the girl of his choice, whose hand was sought by his superior.

Golda Caldwell, Dorothy Clark, Charles Hickman, Yona Landowska, Jack Curtis, Louis A. Valderna and Emory Johnson are in the cast, and all give acceptable renditions of difficult parts.

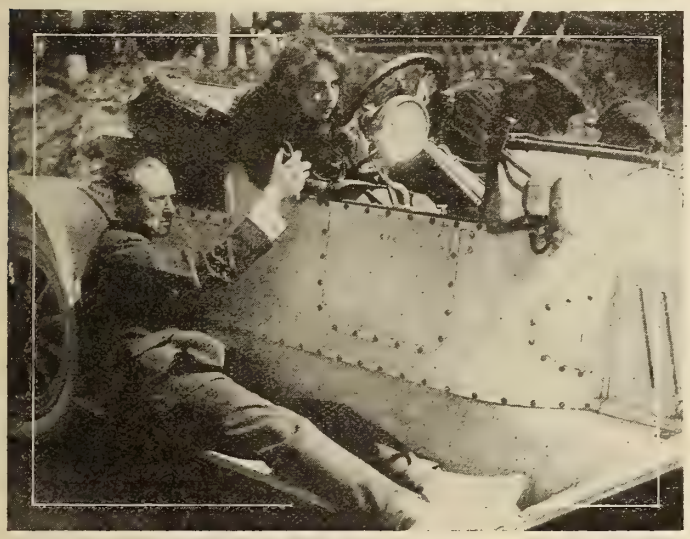
"THE RAIDERS"

(Kay-Bee-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE finesse, the human touches, the vital bits of comedy that are always present in Thomas H. Ince pictures lift them far above the average feature. Those things which go to make Mr. Ince's pictures so extraordinary are present in "The Raiders".

The picture is full of contrasts, contrasts of scene and of dramatic action and as a consequence "The Raiders" keeps one in a good humor over its entire length. And it is unusually strong besides.



H. B. Warner is featured. He is a clean cut and attractive hero and wears his role like a glove. Of Dorothy Dalton, the heroine, the same may be said. Robert McKim, the heavy Jerrold Burnes is convincing and moreover acts the role of a business man to a convincing degree.

George Elwell appears as the office boy and a most human and humorous figure does he make of this part. Henry Belmar as Haldeman and J. Barney Sherry as the doctor complete the named cast.

The scenario furnished by J. G. Hawkes shows how a twenty-dollar-a-week clerk in Wall street defeated the nefarious schemes of his employer, who attempts to break Haldeman through the market. The greater part of the picture is given over to this combat and there is never a moment in which the interest lags.

The reasons for this are those cited previously and also the character of the hero. Scott Wells, the twenty-dollar-a-week man was once somewhat of a millionaire and stomaching the daily cuts of the office force is not an easy proposition.

His rise in the financial world is therefore whole heartedly desired and when he sets forth to fight Burnes he does so with the good wishes of every person in the audience.

A RACE AGAINST TIME

The realism of the settings is of the usual Ince sort, and not to be passed over without extra comment. The stock exchange scenes are excellent, and the office settings are equally good. The scenes laid in the lunch room are delightful and the home of Haldeman looks as if it had never seen a motion picture studio.

"TRUE NOBILITY"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THIS film is American in appeal as well as in brand name. The hero is first seen as a prospector, then as a farmer, and finally as a little brother of the rich. Above all things, democratic Americans like to see the inner workings of the haute monde—or rather, the director's conception of them.

When the hero, sprung from humble origin, gains recognition in Society's holy of holies, the audience feels a sort of vicarious triumph.

The picture sets out to prove Tennyson's statement, "Kind hearts are more than coronets", and one of the final subtitles might well read "Q. E. D." To achieve this worthy object, it was found necessary to make the hero superhumanly good and the heavy's villainy rather transparent. The long arm of coincidence is almost thrown out of joint at times.

The sterling acting done by E. Forrest Taylor, Lizette Thorne, and Helene Rosson, and most of the supporting cast, has been finely photographed. Charles Newton, Eugenie Forde, Marie Van Tassell, Harry Von Meter, and Harry McCabe appear in the picture.

Phil Burton, a farmer's son, is in the city studying mining engineering. There he meets Effie Marsh, a girl he knew in his childhood, who is studying art.

A miner whom Burton had once befriended, leaves him a rich mine, but Devlin, the head of a mining company, discovers that Effie is the miner's daughter, and hence should inherit the property.

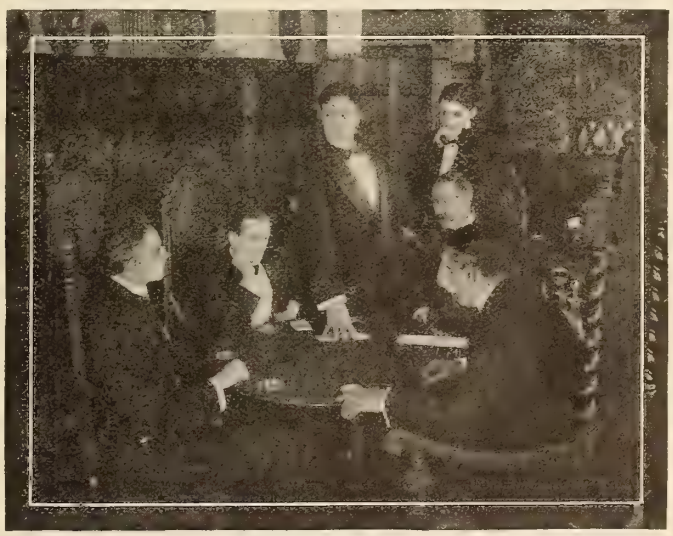
Under false pretenses he gets Effie to give him power of attorney, and is about to seize the mine, when Burton steps in. By using a little ingenuity, he recovers the mine for Effie, beside some incriminating letters written by his fiancee's sister to Devlin.

"THE PRICE OF MALICE"

(Rolfe-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

PICTUREGOERS never tire of themes with a detective twist to them provided only they are interestingly handled. When the hero is oppressed for four thousand feet, and then rewarded in the last thousand, picturegoers are satisfied, if the acting en route has been good and the settings pleasing.



"The Price of Malice" is just about that kind of a picture. It is very fortunate in its hero—Hamilton Revelle—as in its heroine—Barbara Tennant—and its villain—William Davidson. These players do well, indeed, in a theme which drags at times, but whose final effect is quite good.

The atmosphere is that of the British War Office, and British high society, and the atmosphere is gained quite successfully in the settings.

The story revolves around the disappearance of Document 117, which Captain Mills abstracts from the office. He is jealous of Jim Clifford, a fellow officer, and wishes to show Jim up as a very poor detective.

The rest of the action is concerned with Jim's search for the missing paper and is carried through a round of week-end parties to the wreck of a yacht. In this, Jim rescues the heroine, only to discover that Captain Mills has made her an innocent accomplice by entrusting the document to her.

Together, they fight their way through snowdrifts to the hut of a Norwegian peasant, and finally get back to England, where everything is cleared up.

JIM SHOWS HIS SKILL AT CARDS

The scenes on the yacht are the best in the production. Mills and Jim have a stirring fight on deck; Jim is shown down in the hold where his slumbers are disturbed by rats; a clever bit of comedy is provided when Jim purloins a pie from the ship kitchen; and the excitement of the party when the ship strikes a rock is well portrayed. For the actual sinking of the yacht, viewed from lifeboats, a toy ship is employed.

With Helen Dunbar, William Calhoun, Frank Glenson, Hugh Jeffrey, William Heck, and a number of extras, the cast is complete. O. A. C. Lund directed.

"THE MARBLE HEART"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A HUSBAND'S murder and then the avenging consciences of the murderers, his wife and her lover, is the theme upon which this Fox feature is built. It is handled in the same style as all of Mr. Fox's pictures are.

The grimness is accentuated and the sex element brought to the fore, but the "Marble Heart" will only offend the counterparts of the staid old gossips that we see in farces and burlesques.

"The Marble Heart" even goes so far as preaching a moral through its maintenance of several of the biblical commandments.

The picture is based on the work of Bernard Chapin and is essentially a tragedy. However, we hasten to add that glimpses of more pleasing subjects than adultery and murder are to be seen, for contrasts have been cleverly employed in the production with an effect that strengthens as well as relieves the structure of the tragedy.

These lighter bits, and some of them are truly humorous, are contributed by a pure and happy romance indulged in by two persons on intimate terms with the sinners. Every once in a while we catch sight of these enraptured lovers and their presence is pleasant and alleviating.

Violet Horner is featured in "The Marble Heart." Her performance in the role of the erring wife is most convincing. She is attractive and has a personal magnetism that appeals even in such a thankless role.

Opposite her as the husband's "friend" and murderer is Walter Miller. Mr. Miller, like Miss Horner, is taxed heavily by his villainous role and he acquits himself very well.

Herbert Brennon staged the picture in Jamaica, and high artistry marks the few exteriors that appear. Paris is the supposed locale and the Jamaican substitution is good enough. The photography and settings are so good that they are forgotten in the tangles of the plot.

After the murder of the unsuspecting husband, the wife and lover are married, but they are constantly troubled by unrestful consciences, and after a protracted period of suffering the severest halucinations of the brain they poison themselves. The romance of the second couple closes in the accepted way.

"OUT OF THE DRIFTS"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MARGUERITE CLARK is quite the most refreshing and wholesome appearing actress that the screen has seen for many, many days. These extraordinarily pleasing personal gifts of hers, show to great advantage in "Out of the Drifts."

AFTER THE ACCIDENT

Little Elise, the Swiss girl, and Miss Clark are one and the same—there is no separating the actress from the part—to do so would be unfair to each.

And when an actress so merges her own personality with her role that the two are inseparable, she has accomplished all that can be asked of her.

"Out of the Drifts" is distinctly a pleasing picture. Its romance is not of the usual sort, as the hero undergoes a change from bad to good while it is in progress. He does not love the little Alpine shepherdess at first, he merely desires her in the manner he has desired all pretty women in the past, and so his character injects much suspense in the picture.

In reference to the hero's past, it may be said that his loose character is very plainly portrayed in a few scenes where debauchery runs rampant. There is not a question of a doubt as to what these few scenes mean and constructively they are handled excellently, although to some they may appear unduly realistic.

The locations in which the Alpine scenes are set are impressive and beautiful. Snow-clad, pine mountains furnish backgrounds of grandeur, that suggests the locale to a most realistic degree.

The camera work in these scenes is also exceptional. Not that it is bright and glaring, but that it is subdued and unstraining on the eyes.

William Courtleigh, Jr., makes a likable reforming hero, while J. W. Johnston is an appealing figure as the faithful mountain lover of Elise. Ivan Simpson who appears as Martin, the butler of the hero, has been awarded the chief comedy role of the picture. Through the medium of subtitles he is responsible for many a hearty laugh. Albert Gran is a benevolent Father Benedict.

The direction rendered by J. Searle Dawley is in general adequate, although there are a few minor points which show lack of attention to detail. However, a few faults cannot materially mar a picture so good in other respects. The scenario was furnished by William H. Clifford.

"IN THE WEB OF THE GRAFTERS"

(Signal-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

THE part of the public interested in the details and workings of the underworld will be able to see visualized in this picture what they have read about—grafting politicians, blackmailers, yeggs, dope fiends, scarlet women, and all the other creatures of the Tenderloin.

The story is melodramatic to the *n*th degree, involving a kaleidoscopic melange of murder, kidnapping, society scandal, bribery, underworld life, and the eternal quest for the "papers."

Considering how hard it must have been for the players to avoid dropping into the characteristic mannerisms so long employed in stage melodrama, they do very well. Edythe Sterling and Norbert A. Myles are an acceptable pair of principals, while Millard K. Wilson, Francis J. MacDonald, and Louise Hutchinson are good in minor roles.

The mayor is trying to free the city from vice resorts, and has collected enough evidence to have them all shut up. This evidence is stolen by a tool of the grafting chief-of-police. Kerrigan, a patrolman, who loves Ethel, the mayor's daughter, determines to get the papers.

The mayor is lured to a questionable resort, and so is his daughter, but Kerrigan saves them from disgrace at the expense of his own character.

The mayor is killed by a gun-man, and Kerrigan is accused of the murder, but after a most complicated series of happenings, he finally ferrets out the real criminal and marries Ethel.

"DEFENSE OR TRIBUTE?" TO HELP SWELL TRIBUNE BATTLESHIP FUND

"Defense or Tribute?" a screen sermon on the necessity for preparedness, which has been shown to large crowds at the Park theatre, New York, and at the Security League meetings in Carnegie Hall, is to be used to swell the New York Tribune's Battleship Fund.

Marjorie Sterrett, a New York public school girl, induced the Tribune to start a dime fund for the purpose of building a battleship. By an arrangement entered into between the Public Service Film Company, which controls the rights to "Defense or Tribute?" and the Tribune, a portion of the money paid by the public to see the picture will pass into the Tribune fund. The latter has started a publicity campaign, on behalf of the picture, among many newspapers of the country.

Exhibitors through New York and New Jersey are rapidly booking the picture.

"THE DISCARD"

(Essanay-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THE combined efforts of the author, director and actors have given this play individuality and unusual interest. The impression uppermost in one's mind after viewing it are those of unity and co-ordination.

The incidents of the play are ingeniously dovetailed, the mountings are appropriate, and the players supplement each other in perfect harmony. Lawrence Windom, the director, was responsible for many very effective touches.

Virginia Hammond, formerly with the Frohman forces, plays the part of an adventuress, and is always in character. In several scenes, notably in one of the closing ones, she does some neat emotional work. Harry Beaumont, the hero, is not only good-looking, but is an actor as well. Betty Brown's dimple and smile are quite screenable in an ingenue role.

IN THE TRAP

A very large slice of the credit for the picture's success should go to Ernest Maupain, one of the best character men in the business. His work as the heavy is brilliantly convincing.

Doris Wynne is the daughter of Alys Wynne, the accomplice of an international swindler, but having spent all her life in a French church school, she does not know her mother's reputation.

Doris marries the brother of her school chum, and her husband takes her to America for their honeymooo. There the husband's wealth attracts the attention of Alys Wynne and Grant, her criminal associate.

They trap their victim into a compromising position, and then start to blackmail him. He refuses to be victimized, and they give the details of the case to his wife.

In an agony of doubt Doris obtains her mother's address, and tells her the whole story. Aghast at having unconsciously tried to ruin her daughter's happiness, Alys gives Grant's address to the police, and then asphyxiates herself.

ONLY PRODUCING COMPANY IN PHILIPPINES IS LAUNCHED BY E. M. GROSS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Manila, P. I., Feb. 1.

A NEW venture in the film field of the Orient is the recently established Cines Manila, a Philippine corporation, which was organized in January to manufacture purely Philippine films. Its managing director is E. M. Gross, a cinematograph man of a decade of experience in motion pictures in the Orient.

Mr. Gross had already scored a success in the Philippines with his dramatization of José Rizal's "Noli Me Tangere," and the first work of the company was the staging of the sequel to "Noli," "El Filibusterismo." Rizal is the great Filipino author and martyr. His execution in 1896 brought on the revolt in the Philippines.

Cines Manila is planning to put all of Rizal's work on the screen. The company is the only manufacturer of film in the Philippines.

"BEYOND THE LAW"

(Essanay—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY, 2ND

A LARGE part of this picture consists of "snow stuff," and while many of these scenes contribute little toward advancing the plot, they add picturesqueness and atmosphere. The story has considerable power, and would have been infinitely stronger if it had been developed with less circumlocution.

The locale of the film is Alaska, Alaska during the gold craze, when only those with hair-triggered guns survived. The spirit of the wild Yukon days has been creditably interpreted by the director, but a few more subtitles would have added much to the effect.

E. H. Clavert, in a character part, deserves first place in the cast, but a close second is Marguerite Clayton, who has not only a charming personality, but a constantly increasing sense of screen values. Hugh Thompson and Jack Meredith are both excellent. The Indians in the picture are too obviously of Caucasian ancestry.

Moir and MacGreggor are partners in the ownership of an Alaskan gold mine. When they have cleaned up all the ore, Moire decides to kill his partner.

The only man in the region who can cope with Moir is a rough soldier of fortune named Rivers. Hattie, MacGreggor's daughter, knowing that only gold can bribe Rivers, tells him of Moir's rich mine. She promises him all the gold if he will avenge her father, whom she believes to be dead.

Rivers, after some exciting adventures, finally kills Moir, and takes MacGreggor back to the settlement. Won by Hattie's fearlessness and charm, Rivers gives back all the gold, and finally marries her.

WESTINGHOUSE OFFICIALS INSPECT ELECTRICAL PLANT AT UNIVERSAL CITY

IT was only natural that when Henry D. Shute, treasurer, and John J. Jackson, general attorney of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, of Pittsburgh, accompanied by S. J. Keese and R. A. Keese, of the Los Angeles office of the company, visited Universal City, they would be exceedingly interested in the big electric light studios.

H. O. Davis, vice-president and general manager of the Universal company, greeted the visitors upon their arrival at the picture plant and immediately piloted them through the electric light studios where directors, Francis Ford, Joseph De Grasse, William Worthington, Jay Hunt and Cleo Madison, were working.

Director Robert Leonard was filming scenes for his five-reel production, "The Crippled Hand," when the electrical men visited the feature stage, and while waiting for "props" in one of the scenes Ella Hall consented to pose with them.

TEN EXCHANGES EXPRESS APPROVAL OF PLANS FOR FIREPROOF BUILDING IN NEW ORLEANS

Special to Motion Picture News

New Orleans, March 4.

TEN film exchanges of New Orleans enthusiastically gave assent to the tentative plans for a film building to be erected at Gravier and Baronne streets, at a special meeting February 19, held in the office of Karl Bugbee, manager of the Crescent City office of Metro.

Leo Fellman, president of the DeSoto Building Company, which is constructing New Orleans' magnificent Strand theatre on a site next to that of the proposed film building, prepared the plans.

New Orleans exchanges have long needed suitable quarters. The DeSoto Building Company, recently formed to erect the Strand theatre, realized this, and, owning a desirable piece of property adjacent to the theatre site, had the plans drawn up through their president and presented to them for their ratification.

Although the exchange managers looked with decided favor on the proposed building, they suggested minor changes in the plans as drawn up, and the tentative plans have been submitted to the architects for revisal.

At present, the proposed building will give headquarters to but eight exchanges, four on the ground floor, and four on the second story. It will be so built, however, to allow of additions.

Occupancy is assured at the start, since every exchange in New Orleans will present their application for an allotment of space.

Besides this interesting question, the film managers discussed other things at the Saturday meeting.

L. V. Willis, assistant general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, spent the week end at the local Fox lair. He is making a tour over Southern territory, and finds conditions very good. He is traveling in advance of the million dollar Annette Kellermann picture.

Sam Dembow, Jr., southern district manager of Fox, is back at the home office after a flying trip to Dallas. He reports the very interesting Fox item that Theda Bara in "The Serpent" had proved a big drawing card in the territory, and that the picture is playing return engagements in Meridian, New Iberia, Vicksburg, Montgomery and Lake Charles.

"Girl and Game" Booked Until April 27

S. T. Stephens, who holds down the local Mutual stronghold, was in his usual Mutual mood when the representative for Motion Picture News called. "'The Girl and the Game' is booked solid in the New Orleans territory until April 27," he said. "'Damaged Goods' is creating a furore."

Karl Bugbee, who, Metrocally speaking, is one of the livest of live wires, and the hero of last week's "The Press, The Press Representative and The Picture" was ensconced behind a big stack of papers and dictating to his secretary.

He had been having callers from film row all morning and was still receiving telephonic congratulations on having broken into print.

Mr. Bugbee's office has been so busy lately that R. F. Watkins, the general manager of southern Metro, has promised to take a trip to New Orleans during Mardi Gras to see how he does it.

Mr. Bugbee broke into print again lately, and on the front page of the Daily States. In reviewing the new issue of the New Orleans city directory, which shows 6,000 more new names than the preceding one, a facetous reporter says: "While there are no Bugs, there is a Bugbee."

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"The Lady and the Mouse." (Biograph. Mon., Mar. 13.)—An attractive re-issue, in which Lillian and Dorothy Gish play the roles of sisters—than which nothing could be more fitting.

A young man, thrown over by his sweetheart, wanders off into the country, and there he meets the two sisters; one is an invalid, and the other devotes all her time and thought to her care.

The young man is touched by the example of devotion, and falls in love with the girl. The one final proof of her nature is supplied when the girl's aunt orders her to drown a mouse which has been caught in a trap.

She dares not disobey and dips the trap in water, but surreptitiously opens the door and allows the little animal to escape. The young man sees the action and realizes that he has found the girl he wants.

He pays off the old mortgage on the girls' home and claims his bride. Lionel Barrymore, Robert Harron, Henry Walthall and Harry Hyde are also seen.

"The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Mar. 15.)—This is an attractive presentation of the successful play of the same name, in which May Robson has appeared all over the country. It is well mounted and capably acted.

Jack Denham, an orphan, is adopted by his wealthy Aunt Mary, who sends him to college. There he gets into difficulties, through visiting a cabaret, taking too much to drink, and getting engaged to a girl.

When Aunt Mary hears he has wronged a woman, she disinherits him, and one of his college chums takes care of him.

He promptly falls in love with Betty, his chum's sister. Betty evolves a plan to get Aunt Mary on the scene, by telegraphing her Jack is sick. When she arrives they pretend the telegram was a ruse to get Aunt Mary to a party in her honor.

Betty pretends to be the maid, and dresses Aunt Mary in the latest mode. The old woman is completely rejuvenated, joins heartily in the festivities and makes the rounds of the cabarets.

Later the girl, who was suing Jack, grateful for favors from Aunt Mary, visits her and confesses she has no claim on the young man, who immediately marries Betty.

In the cast are Kate Toncray, Audrey Kirby, Dell Henderson, Reggie Morris, Dave Morris, Tom MacEvoy, Jack Mulhall, William Sloane, Florence Lee and Gertrude Bambrick.

"Beyond the Law." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Mar. 4.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Joyce's Strategy." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Mar. 14.)—Not shown for review.

"Vernon Howe Bailey's Sketch Book of Philadelphia." (Essanay. Split reel, with scenic. Wed., Mar. 15.)—Not shown for review.

"Unknown." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Mar. 18.)—Not shown for review.

"The Girl Who Dared." (Kalem. Sat., Mar. 8.)—This episode of the "Hazards of Helen" is a little deficient in action; in fact, there is only one of the thrills which we have come to expect in this series, and that is when Helen swings from a rope hanging from a bridge superstructure onto the tender of a passing engine.

She loses her footing and strikes sharply against the edge of the cab roof. The exploit cost her two weeks in the hospital, and the accident—for such it was—is shown in striking detail.

For no apparent reason, Helen makes her dash after the engine which has been seized by fleeing bandits, standing up on two horses.

She leaps from their backs to catch the swinging rope, thereby reaching the engine and stopping it long enough for detectives to seize the fugitives.

Percy Pembroke, Franklin Hall, Robyn Adair and Clarence Burton are also in the cast.

"Ham Agrees With Sherman." (Kalem. Tues., Mar. 14.)—Ham and Bud go to war in this comedy, which is an excellent satire, albeit the action is a little slow. They are induced to enlist, and Ham becomes a general, with Bud as his aide.

Bud is deflected from his duty by the wiles of a girl spy, but Ham is proof against her charms, and chases her out of camp. There are several striking battle scenes, during which Ham and Bud walk calmly down between the lines, and Ham even climbs back into a trench which the enemy has taken, in order to recover his hat.

Porter Strong and Norma Nichols are in the cast.

"The Regeneration of Jim Halsey." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Mar. 13.)—Will be reviewed in next week's issue.

"Toll of the Jungle." (Selig. Sat., Mar. 18.)—This is a better-than-average one-reeler. The South African atmosphere has been well imitated, the animal scenes are really thrilling, and the charm of Edith Johnson helps out considerably. Skillful directing and unusual camera effects prevail throughout.

Ida, daughter of an animal trapper in South Africa, accompanied by Jose, a trainer, makes a trip through the jungle to look over some animals that a dealer has for sale.

Returning from this inspection, Jose attacks her, but she is saved by the appearance of two lions that spring upon and kill her assailant. She climbs a tree, and is saved by Hartley, a hunter, who later marries her.

Supporting Edith Johnson are Wheeler Oakman, Harry Lonsdale, and Walter Beckwith.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Jerry's Big Game." (Cub. Fri., Mar. 10.)—This comedy shows George Ovey in a new character, that of an organ-grinder's monkey. Jerry, flying from the police, as usual, takes refuge in a tenement inhabited by the organ grinder, who takes pity on him and dresses him as a monkey.

Not only are the police thrown off the track, but Jerry and the organist go out on the street and pick up considerable money. After several escapades, in which Jerry is chased all over the facade of an apartment building, he sees a Rajah abducting a girl.

The two follow the Rajah to the harem, where Jerry is about to be arrested. He tells the police of the abduction, and the girl is saved; Jerry is hailed as a hero and has a pleasant afternoon.

George George, Jefferson Osborne, Louis Fitz-Roy, Bessie Clark, Louise Horner and Janet Sully are also in the cast.

"In the Web of the Grafters." (Signal-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Mon., Mar. 13.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Suppressed Order." (American. Three reels. Tues., Mar. 14.)—This is a tale of antebellum days that holds the interest in spite of occasional excess footage. There are strong moments that Tom Ricketts' good directing intensified.

Winnifred Greenwood and Edward Coxen, and George Field are a talented trio of leads, and the support given them by George Webb, Charles Newton, and Sylvia Ashton is excellent. The photography is fine.

Hugh Bradford is in love with an inn-keeper's daughter in a Southern town. Bradford's father is an aristocrat, and objects to what he considers a mesalliance. Jesse Semple is also pursuing this girl, but with dishonorable intentions.

When the civil war is declared Bradford and Semple both enlist in the Confederate army, but Jasmine's brother is a Northern spy. One night he goes to the Inn to get some information from Jasmine, but he is discovered there by Semple, who promises not to arrest him if his sister will accede to his demands.

This she promises to do, but Bradford arrives, shoots Semple, and after deciding not to report the presence of the spy, finds that the brother has been mortally wounded.

"Plotters and Papers." (Beauty. Wed., Mar. 15.)—This burlesque on jitney-novel detective exploits is moderately amusing. A commendable amount of new business is used, and the work of John Sheehan and Carol Halloway, assisted by Mary Talbot, Rea Berger, and Dick Rosson, is up to their usual standard.

Johnny, a newspaper reporter, is assigned to discover "Madame Z," an important witness in a murder trial. He is captured and sentenced to death by a band of anarchists, and after a series of strenuous adventures, he finally finds the abducted girl locked in a cellar.

She dictates her testimony to him, and signs it by holding a pencil in her teeth and writing through a knot-hole in the floor. This scoop gets Johnny the star reporter's job.

"Bungling Bill's Peeping Ways." (Vogue Thurs., Mar. 16.)—This slap-stick comedy not shown for review.

"Curlew Corliss." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., Mar. 17.)—Reviewed in Mar. 4 issue.

"Overalls." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Sat. Mar. 18.)—Will be reviewed next week.

"Tips." (Beauty. Sun., Mar. 19.)—The basic idea of this comedy is new and funny, and being young and strong, it is made to carry the entire thousand feet—a pretty substantial task. Orral Humphrey as a senile savant does a neat piece of character work, and Lucille Ward is also good.

Professor Doolittle receives a letter from a lawyer, advising him that he has inherited a hundred dollars. He goes to the city to claim his legacy, but the constant tipping he is forced to do uses up all his money.

He finally discovers that the money was left to another Doolittle. His sorrow is changed to joy when a firm of publishers offer him a thousand dollars for his massive work on "The Origin of Tattooing."

"Troubled Waters." (Vogue. Sun., Mar. 19.)—Not shown for review.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Two reels. Episode. Fourteen. Week of Mar. 13.)—"The Iron Ring" introduces several strike riots and strenuous fights in which Robert Harding (Richard Stanton) is continually the central figure.

When this chapter closes only Stone is left of the notorious fifteen. The love element of course is absent as neither Bruce nor Tom Larnigan appear.

"The Pool of Flame." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., Mar. 13.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Mar. 4.

"The Deacon's Waterloo." (Nestor. Mon., Mar. 13.)—An average Nestor, novel because every exterior shown was taken in the rain.

The Deacon calls on his girl on a rainy day and Eddie and his chums substitute a wooden animal for his old steed with results that can best be imagined.

The spectacle of the Deacon attempting to start the wooden horse is very funny but it has been overworked a bit. Lee Moran, Betty Compson and Eddie Lyons are featured.

"Born of the People." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., Mar. 14.)—A woman to save her husband's life poses in the nude to obtain money and later he discovers her act, denounces her but finally sees her worth.

Grace Cunard does the posing, and much of the acting in her own particular style. When viewed the titles were much too full of "damn" and "hell." We are not priggish but such stuff shouldn't be overworked.

The story by Francis Ford is fairly good, while Jack Holt and Neal Hardin are chief in the support. Holt gives rather a wierd interpretation of the husband.

"Her Invisible Husband." (Imp. Tues., Mar. 14.)—A novel comedy with Matt Moore and Jane Gail. Hubby dreams that he is invisible and the resulting action furnishes many laughs. Samuel Greiner is the author of the subject, while Moore directed.

"A Bold Bad, Burglar." (Rex. Tues., Mar. 14.)—This comedy-drama featuring Baby Early was not shown for review.

"Orders Is Orders." (Victor. Two reels

Wed., Mar. 15.)—A college comedy in which Yale has been selected as the setting. It is a clever farce, with a basic idea of humorous originality.

Care has been shown in the direction for the highest possibilities of the scenario have been well realized.

The spectacle of the crowd of boys trapsing all over the premises each armed with a barber pole is indeed very funny.

Ernest Shields and Mina Cunard are in the large cast. "Orders Is Orders" will certainly prove its value.

"Lonesomeness." (Laemmle. Wed., Mar. 15.)—This takes the form of a satire on the general run of modern dramas, and we imagine it is a good subject although when shown for review several important inserts were left out and the exact trend of the action was lost. Myrtle Gonzalez and Fred Church are featured.

"The Fatal Introduction." (Big U. Three reels. Thurs., Mar. 16.)—A western drama in which a man betrays his partner and benefactor to rob him of his mine and his sweetheart.

Years later the two men meet and to save himself from further shame the villain commits suicide. The subject is a little unconvincing at times, but in its entirety it will please the lovers of the rapid moving western.

The story is by Ben Cohn while Murdock MacQuarrie, Edna Payne and M. K. Wilson appear in the leading roles.

"Patterson of the News." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Mar. 17.)—Portraying the manner in which a reporter saved the honor of a society girl and later did the same good deed for her father.

King Baggot appears in the title role in this and gives a fine performance. Edna Hunter, Howard Crampton and Bert Busby comprise the support.

The picture is very good and as compared with the ultra-melodramatic numbers that Baggot has appeared in in the last few months it shows wonderful improvement.

There is plenty of suspense, the scenes are realistic and the raid on the gambling house is exciting.

"The Cry of Erin." (Rex. Fri., Mar. 17.)—A drama laid in Ireland after the revolution depicting the manner in which one of the peasants was captured by the king's soldiers and how by a ruse he escaped.

Francis Ford prepared the scenario besides appearing in the main part. The story is well worked out, the mob scenes are handled efficiently and the scenes and costumes convince.

Daddy and Mrs. Manley and Jack Holt are others in the cast.

The subtitles are in poetry of Irish dialect, evidently taken from some poem. They add a most pleasant touch to the picture.

"Across the Hall." (Nestor. Fri., Mar. 17.)—Hubby comes in drunk and gets in the wrong room wherein another man's wife is reposing, thus furnishing an incident around which Al Christie built this comedy.

Horace Davey directed Neal Burns, Ethel Lynn, Billie Rhodes and Ray Gallagher and aside from a little bit of the risque he has made a fair number.

Burns in a drunken state attempting to keep his feet in the midst of a fight is about the funniest bit.

"The Iron Rivals." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Mar. 18.)—The story of the clash of rival railroads on construction work and how the disgraced son of the president of one of the roads made good with the assistance of a girl telegrapher.

There is action and plenty of it throughout this number—it was directed by Henry McRae and there's the reason for it. There are plenty of thrills, fights between the workers, one taking place on a train of moving cars, and besides the hero and heroine jump from an engine into a river below.

Lee Hill and Marie Walcamp are the principals. The scenario was designed by Frank Wiltermood.

"Muchly Married." (Joker. Sat., Mar. 18.)—Milburn Moranti as the nephew doesn't want his rich and priggish uncle to learn of his fast friends, so he passes one of them off as his wife and the other party also claims this position.

The real wife shows up later but she manages to get the goods on uncle and so Milburn inherits the fortune.

Gale Henry, Charles Conklin, William Franey and Lillian Peacock play the other important parts.

"Live Wires and Love Sparks." (L-Ko. Three reels. Sun., Mar. 19.)—Billie Ritchie is seen to very good advantage in this subject, in fact to better advantage than he has been in many of past L-Ko subjects.

The comedy has a holding plot and a considerable amount of original business, but hardly enough to adequately and untiringly fill three reels.

The fun is not crude and there is nothing to offend. Gene Rogers and Peggy Pearce also appear.

"Behind the Curtain." Imp. Sun., Mar. 19.)—An absorbing, rapid fire drama, the action all transpiring in just the time it takes to picture it. It concerns the falsity of the husband's friend, how he is murdered by the wife and his death made to appear as if caused by a burglar. Henry Otto directed Dorothy Phillips and Alan Holubar in the leading parts.

One Reason More

and there are many more why the British edition of Motion Picture News is an absolute necessity to the American producer. Read carefully this extract:

The Editor of the Cinema says, in the Feb. 7th issue:

"The modern cinema manager, with an alert opposition on the other side of the street, does not trouble himself overmuch about the nationality of the films he books. He wants the best films, and he has got to have them! He pays a viewer to see films on his behalf; he consults the trade Press; he consults the selected list furnished by his own association; he consults the independent reviews furnished privately by professional critics; he reads the film criticisms in the Evening News and Daily Mail; he keeps an eye on the whole field of film production both at home and abroad; and he makes up his programme with elaborate care."

5000 British exhibitors today, in making up their programs, consult the exclusively compiled chart of American pictures published weekly in the British Edition of Motion Picture News.

Motion Picture News,
427 S. Figueroa St.,
Los Angeles, Cal.

Gentlemen:—

The Studio Directory Number of the "Motion Picture News" is a remarkably interesting publication. It should be in the library of every newspaper in the land.

No producer, no theatre, no exchange manager, no exhibitor, no man dealing with publicity, should be without it. I regard this issue of the "Motion Picture News" as so valuable that it has been chained to my desk.

Really, Mr. Johnston and yourself ought to receive a vote of thanks from the entire motion picture industry for the splendid work you have done in publishing a directory so comprehensive and so thoroughly up-to-the-minute.

Cordially yours,
(Signed) M. G. JONAS,
Publicity Manager, Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

HENRY BELMAR

CONSTRUCTIVE DIRECTOR OPEN FOR IMMEDIATE ENGAGEMENT

Author of: "Sin and Its Sorrow," "Man and Wife," "The Eternal Fires of Hate," "The Cattle King of Arizona," "Lincoln from the Cradle to the Grave," "Her Mad Love," "Where Satan Rules," "Life's Sweetest Sin," "A Woman of Two Lives."

Have a number of out-of-the-ordinary, interest-compelling subjects ready for filming—especially the dynamic sensation:.

"A WOMAN'S SOUL LAID BARE"

A story based on actual happenings running the gamut of human passions and emotions, mysterious, fascinating, tragic.

Will furnish the story, my services as producer, supervise cutting and assembling negative for $2500 plus 10% after cost of making negative is deducted.

"LIFE'S SHOP WINDOW"

The Big Fox Success
WAS written and directed by HENRY BELMAR.
The profits on this picture have been enormous.

"A WOMAN'S SOUL LAID BARE"

Another record-breaking box-office attraction.

LET'S TALK THE MATTER OVER.

Negatives of the following thrillers for sale:
"ANGEL OF THE TRAIL,"
"TRACY THE BANDIT,"
"A RACE FOR LIFE,"
"UNDER CONVICT'S STRIPES,"

Concerning the Function of the Open-Market

It now transpires that our original estimate of the importance of the OPEN-MARKET, in its relation to the success of the progressive exhibitor, was an error of understatement of facts. Hundreds of this country's best exhibitors and buyers have written evincing the liveliest interest in our announced intention to offer a steady supply of OPEN-MARKET specials.

They tell us, in plain and unmistakable terms, that there is a dearth of real pictures which can be obtained by the exhibitor

AS HE WANTS THEM
WHEN HE WANTS THEM AND AT A MODERATE PRICE

To those who have not understood exactly the function of the OPEN-MARKET as we intended to convey it, let us say that it is humanly impossible to maintain an output of "uniform" excellence and strength, hence the injustice of being compelled to buy an obviously weak attraction at a price properly chargeable only for the best. Therefore, we shall grade our pictures and price them according to their true value.

Fullest particulars for the asking regarding the following releases:

"Sins of the Father,"
In 4 parts, with HAMILTON REVELLE acting the stellar role.

"Denise,"
Alexander Dumas' greatest play, made into a picture of 4 parts.

"Love's Sacrifice,"
In 6 parts. A mammoth production of Oriental splendor, featuring RITA JOLIVET, noted American star and beautiful survivor of the "Lusitania."

"Her Redemption,"
In 4 parts, with RITA JOLIVET.

"Under the Mask,"
Coupled with "THE POISONED KISS," 5 reels of exceptional strength—another JOLIVET picture.

"A Woman's Awakening,"
From the story by Abel Gance, which quickens the patriotic spirit and touches every human heart.

Authors Film Co., Inc.

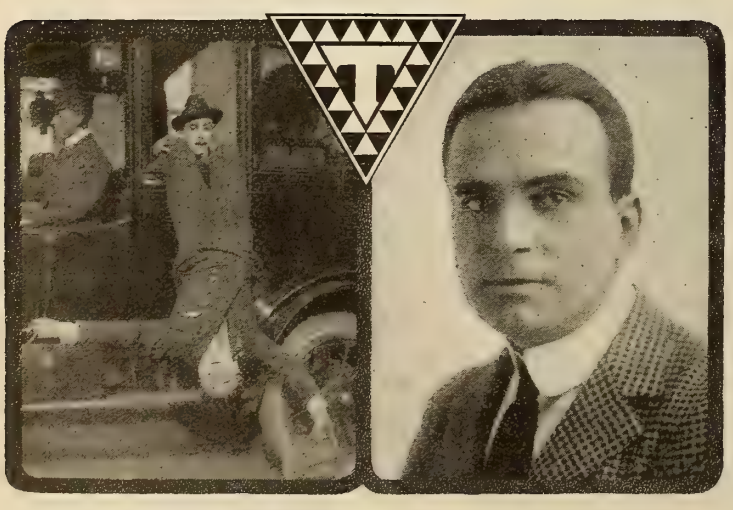
Eastern Booking Office, Philadelphia, booking for Authors Film Co., Inc., in Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia.



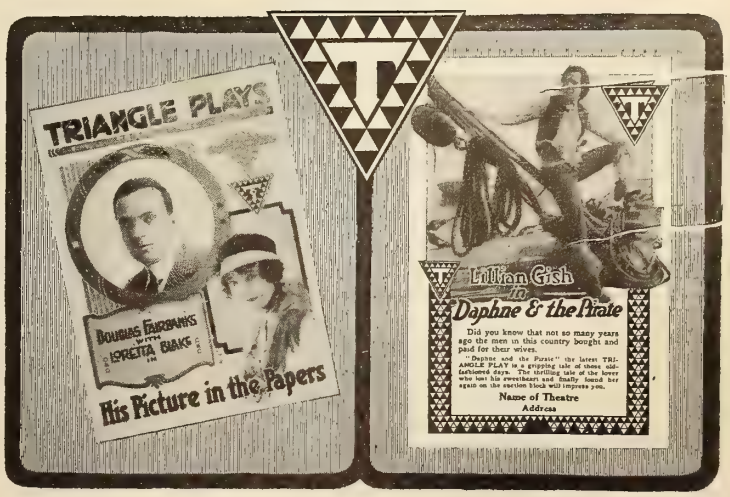
Correspondence invited from independent exchanges of highest financial and business responsibility.

Back of the Triangle is the earnest desire to produce pictures that will meet the demands of the public and push returns for the exhibitor through the Box Office window.

In presenting Bessie Barriscale, the popular star in "Honor's Altar" and many other successes, we are meeting the public wish for an actress that has proved her worth.

"His Picture in the Papers," the latest Triangle Play in which Douglas Fairbanks appears, has been found a winner. Full of the personality and individuality of its star the success was instantaneous.

Triangle Film



When it was known that "The Bright Lights," a recent Triangle Keystone release, again presented Mabel Normand and Roscoe Arbuckle the financial success of the picture was assured.

Triangle Stars like Dorothy Gish and Dorothy Dalton who appear regularly in Triangle Plays have great drawing ower. Their appearance means money for the exhibitor.

And in addition there is back of the Triangle a competent Publicity Department to serve the interests of Triangle Exhibitors. The proper preparation of advertising material is given every attention.

Another evidence of the fine quality of David Horsley productions comes in the shape of an unsolicited congratulatory letter from J. Celler, manager of the Decatur Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y., to Mr. Horsley. Mr. Celler says:

> "Wish to compliment you and Mr. Crane Wilbur on the fine showing of the Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, 'Vengeance is Mine!' This photoplay was not only good in the story, acting and original ideas, but started off with the story without wasting a whole reel in the introduction of characters, etc., as in the majority of features. Our patrons enjoyed every moment of the play up to the last minute.
>
> "Hoping that all your future productions will be as good as this one, I remain,
>
> Very sincerely yours,
>
> (Signed) J. Celler."

Future David Horsley productions will be as good, if not better, than "Vengeance Is Mine!"

Among them are: "The Hidden Law," featuring Margaret Gibson and William Clifford, released March 25; and "The Love Liar," featuring Crane Wilbur, released March 27. Each is in five reels and is distributed as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition.

Attention is also called to the popular Cub comedies with George Ovey, one of which is released every Friday.

Apply at your Mutual exchange for bookings on any of these subjects.

The Chimpanzees with the Human Brains—Internationally Known Vaudeville Favorites

The big demand today is for real comedy. Novelties always are successful. The E. & R. Jungle one-reel comedy features combine the two and are sure winners for exchanges and exhibitors who use them.

If you have any question as to the value of these "comedy features" ask the Exchanges who are handling them.

Space NOW being leased for the First National Exposition of the MOTION PICTURE INDUSTRY

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN
NEW YORK CITY

MOTION PICTURE BOARD OF TRADE
PROGRESSION PROTECTION PROMOTION OF AMERICA

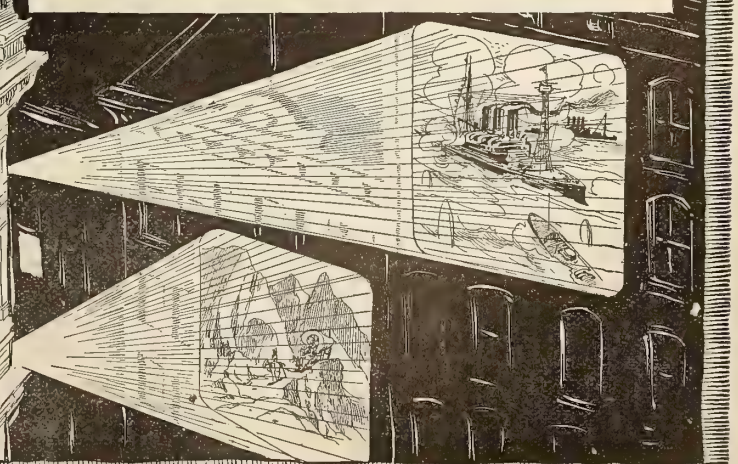
May 6-13 1916

Under the Direction of the MOTION PICTURE BOARD of TRADE of AMERICA, Inc.

This exposition will be in every way worthy of the fifth industry of the United States. It will prove that the motion picture is a new vehicle of expression—akin to the press and human speech.

Under the auspices of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., representing the entire industry. The profits made will go into the treasury of the Board. They will be devoted to fighting those battles which are common to the entire industry.



S. L. Rothapfel, whose genuis and originality are acknowledged by all, will arrange the decorations, music and presentation of motion pictures during the exposition.

Enough space has already been taken to insure the exposition being a big success. If you have not done so, wire today asking for a reservation to

SECTION OF MOTION PICTURE NEWS DEVOTED TO THE CONSTRUCTION, EQUIPMENT AND OPERATION OF THEATRE, EXCHANGE AND STUDIO

IS YOUR PROJECTOR GIVING SATISFACTORY RESULTS?

If you buy projecting machines of the same make repeatedly you do it, not because of what the manufacturer says (Advertising), but because of what you get (Service).

Clever salesmanship or advertising may have secured the first order, but YOUR PROJECTOR must demonstrate its ability to "deliver the goods" right along before you will buy another of the same make.

Mr. Landen of Belleville, Ill., says he uses 12 MOTIOGRAPHS because they give real service with practically no up-keep.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

63—Is it absolutely necessary to have a rheostat, resistance unit or some other form or regulator in series with an arc maintained between two electrodes?

Ans.—You will remember that it has been explained to you that the arc established between two carbon electrodes as an example is of such nature that it does not regulate its own flow and it will pass all of the current which the circuit supplying the lamp or arc is capable of delivering.

In other words, the resistance of the arc decreases with an increased flow of current and in consequence thereof it becomes necessary to put in series with the arc another device which will put a check to the flow of current in case it exceeds a predeterminted amount.

The rheostat or ordinary resistance unit which has been described to you, is the cheapest and simplest form of device to accomplish this purpose, but unfortunately it is exceedingly wasteful.

64—Is there any way in which the electric energy lost within the rheostat or other controlling device in series with an arc can be utilized for practical purposes so as to reduce the loss of electrical energy?

Ans.—Under certain conditions a rheostat is useful as an electric heater. Where it is convenient and allowable the rheostat may be mounted in an approved cabinet in the ticket sellers booth during the winter time, or at any other point where heat is required and due to the dissipation of several H. P. of electric energy within the rheostat a great amount of heat is available which would otherwise be wasted as long as the arc is operating.

65—Is there any other method which could be used for utilizing the power wasted in an arc lamp rheostat?

Ans.—It is possible with D. C. at the arc to make use of the power wasted in the rheostat by shunting part of it for use in charge of storage batteries, providing of course, proper regulating and protecting means are introduced in the circuit to prevent the storage batteries from discharging through the system when the arc is shut off.

Devices of this kind are on the market and are called reverse current relays, which open the circuit the moment the charging stops, thus protecting the battery from accidental discharge.

66—Is there any other method which can be followed in utilizing the energy wasted in an arc lamp rheostat?

Ans.—It is possible to use a bank of incandescent lamps in series with the arc in place of a rheostat for a regulator to check the current flow through the arc.

In this case special lamps can be had or ordinary lamps can be wired and connected in multiple so that the current for the arc will pass through the lamps, which will act as the regulator, but this system is not applicable for general use and is merely cited as an instance where illumination can be obtained by utilizing the wasted energy.

67—Having under discussion in particular the A. C. arc, is there any means which can be devised whereby the voltage reduction between the line and the arc can be accomplished without actual loss of energy as in a rheostat?

Ans.—Yes, the A. C. being intermittent and oscillating back and forth lends itself to the alternate excitation of a magnet core within a coil, which is usually termed a "reactive" or "choke-coil."

68—How is a choke-coil constructed?

Ans.—The choke-coil, as above stated, consists of an iron core, which, for reason of heating when it is subjected to the influence of A. C. cannot be made of solid iron, but must be made from thin sheets of iron or electrical steel, which are laid on top of each other in any desired shape or form until they form a body or core, which may then be rivetted together to make it in one unit and solid.

Theatre Always Full But Owner Refuses to Make Money

No, He Is Not Ready for an Asylum—The "He" Is a Mining Company Which Maintains in Lead, South Dakota, a First-Class Place of Entertainment for Its Employees, Without Any Desire to Make a Profit from the Shows—Any Surplus Goes to Booking Bigger Features

VIEWS OF HOMESTAKE OPERA HOUSE, LEAD, SOUTH DAKOTA

OPERATED BY MINING COMPANY FOR ITS EMPLOYEES

AN unusual motion picture theatre is the Homestake Opera House, Lead, South Dakota, built and run for the benefit of the employees of the Homestake Mining Company, owners of the largest gold mine in the world.

The theatre is run in connection with a recreation building, a two-story brick structure containing a library, billiard, card and chess rooms, a bowling alley and swimming pool. For thoroughness and completeness this arrangement is probably not duplicated in any other mining or industrial center, run on a communistic and philanthropic plan.

While the opera house was built primarily for the employees of the company, its doors are open to others in the town of Lead who may wish to patronize the picture exhibitions.

The theatre is not run with the idea of making money, but is maintained solely for the benefit of the workers in the mine. All the company asks is that it pays expenses. In this the officials are not disappointed.

Often there is a surplus. Then arrangements are made for running a feature like "Neptune's Daughter," "An Alien," "Cabiria," "The Eternal City," 'The Williamson Submarine Pictures" or "The Spoilers."

Admission Price at Rock Bottom

The admission prices are very reasonable, some of the shows being open to the public for five cents for adults as well as children. At other times, according to the rental for a subject in great demand, the price is raised to ten cents. At no time is there allowed to be a profit. Anything in the way of a surplus is put aside until more can be added for the booking of a pretentious picture.

The recreation department serves as a club for the workmen in the mines and the employees in a clerical capacity, all being admitted on a basis of perfect equality. The rooms and their appointments vie with the attractions of club life in many cities. The furniture in the lounging room and the card room is in the Mission style and conveys an air of solidity and comfort to the whole interior.

The theatre, designed by Shattuck & Hussy, Chicago, and under the management of M. C. Kellogg, is 140 by 65 feet. The interior is handsomely decorated in old rose, blending with the mahogany woodwork.

A decorative feature giving the opera house a distinctive note consists of a freize showing scenes typifying life in the Black Hills country. One shows a turbulent stream rushing between two steep wooded hills; another an Indian encampment overlooking the rolling country below; while a third reveals a moose standing on a lofty eminence and gazing toward silent wastes, miles in the distance.

Heating and Ventilating Arrangements

Heating and ventilating have received considerable attention on account of the extreme changes of temperature in that part of the country.

The structure has a complete steam heating equipment for the comfort of the patrons visiting the theatre on cold bitter nights when the thermometer drops so many degrees below zero that it makes an Easterner or a Southerner shiver to think of the climate.

Equal care for the comfort of the audience has provided for scientific and efficient ventilation. A Stuyvesant forced fan and intake and exhaust outfit has been installed. The inverted lighting system is part of the house equipment, the fixtures being furnished by the Albert Sechrist Manufacturing Company, Denver, Col., which installed lights of a special design.

The seating capacity of the Homestake Opera House is about six hundred. The chairs, large and roomy, were furnished by the Andrews Chair Company. For projection two machines are used —a Power's 6-A and a 6-B, and the length of the throw is

Operating Electricity — Questions Answered — Repairing Equipment

Edited by J. H. Hallberg

Who Will Answer All Questions You Send in, No Matter How Simple or How Difficult

MOTOR AND GENERATOR NOT CONNECTED RIGHT

G. G. O., Elgin, Ia.:—I have a motor and generator in my theatre that was in the place when I took charge of it. I don't believe it is connected right, so I am sending you a sketch of the generator and wiring. I connected it up direct from lamp to generator the other day.

It worked fine, but I put the coil back in as I was afraid I might hurt the generator or motor. I have a Lincoln Electric Company generator, Cleveland, Ohio, D. C. No. 4450, 60 volts, 30 ampere, 2.5 K. W. Wagner Electric Co. motor, 5 H. P., 3-phase, 60-cycle A. C. I have a field rheostat here, so I tried it by connecting it in between F wire and L wire.

Is that the right place? If not, please tell me the proper way, or would it be too much load on generator to cut out all resistance? Do you think I would get better results from using 5/8-inch cored carbon at top and 1/2-inch cored at bottom? I am using 5/8-inch top and bottom now.

Ans.—In the absence of a diagram showing the internal connections of your generator, it is difficult for me to say where the field rheostat should be connected. The terminal marked "F" on a generator always indicates "Field," but on the other hand after going through the field rheostat, I don't know for sure whether your machine is so connected that you should make the second connection of the field rheostat to the wire marked "L," which stands for "Line," or to "A," which stands for "Armature."

However, it will be very easy to test this out, and I presume that you have done so, because the rough sketch which you sent along indicates that your "F" connection belongs on "L." If this is the case, all you have to do is to cut the rheostat in circuit at any point on the wire running from "F" to "L."

Concerning the use of a resistance coil in series with your generator and the arc, I want to say that some generators are designed to operate without a resistance in series with the generator and the arc—others must have a resistance between the generator and the arc.

If I were in your place, I would put the field rheostat in circuit with the field wire and then I would also connect the old resistance coil which you indicate to be 8 inches long in series with the arc.

After the generator has been started I would strike the arc and make sure that the upper carbon is the hotter, which indicates that it is positive, as you know it should be.

Then I advise you to let the arc run for a few minutes until it is perfectly steady. Then it would be well to test the field controller by moving the same in the direction where the amperes of the machine will decrease and then in the other direction where it increases the current.

Having ascertained that the field controller regulates the voltage and current of the generator, my next move would be to put a jumper across the resistance coil in series with the arc.

If the arc does not then begin to sputter and burn unsteadily, I would consider that your generator is capable of operating without this resistance in series with the arc and in view of your short-circuiting the resistance coil by the jumper suggested, you should cut in more resistance in series with the field so as to lower the current delivered by the generator.

In making these tests there are a few things for you to remember.

First.—If you have an ampere meter which you may possibly borrow from the Electric Light Company, or from an electrical contractor, put it in series with the arc.

Second.—If an ampere meter is not at hand, I would consider it safe to run the machine without the rheostat in series with the arc, providing the arc remains steady when the carbons are separated about one-quarter to a maximum of 3/8 of an inch and also providing the generator does not get too hot or show signs of sparking which are sure indications of overload.

Please remember that, as a general rule, the limitations of a generator are indicated by excessive heat and by sparking. If the temperature of any of the part of the generator does not exceed 150 to 175 degrees Fahrenheit (this will feel very hot to the hand, however), and sparking at the brushes does not develop, then you can feel perfectly safe in operating without the rheostat in series with the arc, and you can then assume that your generator is working without overload.

For the size generator you have which is only 2½ K. W., the 5 H. P. motor is more than plenty, so there is no danger of you overloading the motor. Do not be afraid of that, but keep an eye on the generator during these tests, and remember that the generator will not get thoroughly heated in less than 1 to 2 hours' steady operation.

I recommend a 5/8-inch cored carbon in top and 1/2-inch cored in the bottom for best results. If you are now getting good results and perfect combustion of the carbons using 5/8 inch, both top and bottom, then it is satisfactory for you to continue to use these carbons, but under certain conditions you will find that the 5/8-inch bottom will be too large with only 30 amperes at the arc.

WANTS TO KNOW HOW TO GET A LICENSE

A. G., Fowler, Ind.:—Could you inform me how we could get a license in this town? There are only two picture houses, but would like to have license here. There has never been any here before.

Ans.—It is beyond the province of this department to give information as to the granting of licenses for motion picture theatres or operators.

Each locality has its own rules and regulations, and what you have to do is to comply with the wishes of your city authorities, fire department and underwriters.

If I were you, I would call on the person in charge of the license bureau in your town and also upon the fire chief or other officer in charge of the inspection and control of electrical installations.

WHAT IS BEST WIRE TO USE FOR RHEOSTATS?

J. H. W., Toronto, Can.—What is the best wire to use for rheostats? State different kinds used and why.

Answer.—In Motion Picture News, Accessory Section, in issues of September 11, question 20-D, to November 20, question 35, inclusive, you will find under heading "Motion Picture Projection Simplified," the most complete information on resistances and rheostats for projector arc lamps.

In the foregoing mentioned questions and answers, every conceivable detail concerning rheostats and resistance units has been discussed and illustrated.

If you desire particular information on the difference in resistance wire and material of different brands and makes, you will find this part discussed in issues of October 2, question 23, to October 23, question 28, inclusive. If you will kindly refer to these issues you will find exactly what you want to know.

Power, Simplex and Baird Machines and Minusa Gold Fibre Screens

LEWIS M. SWAAB
1329 VINE STREET, PHILADELPHIA, PA.

TROUBLE WITH A REVOLVING SHUTTER

W. W. J., Kaufman, Tex.:—I have a problem which I wish you would answer for me. I have a Power's 6-A machine and I am having trouble with the revolving shutter. I can set my shutter with the frame rod pushed down and it is all O. K. until I move my framing rod up and then the shutter is off.

I have placed a new toggle joint gear and a new flywheel gear, and the gear that drives the toggle joint gear and all the rest of the gears seem to be all O. K. It has a three wing medium-size shutter and I am using D. C.

ANS.—The fact that your shutter does not properly cover the intermittent movement of the films, even though you have replaced the gears and the toggle you mention, when the framing rod is in the upper position, may be due to the fact that there is a slightly greater shake in the train of gears at the toggle when the framing rod is in the highest position and this allows the shutter to slam or have a greater back and forth shake than it ought to have.

The remedy would be to make the large shutter blade slightly wider, maybe from one-eighth to one-quarter inch wider, or you could secure a new shutter with a wider blade.

While the other gears between the intermittent and the shutter shaft may appear good to you, it is possible that there is slightly more shake in them than there ought to be, and the wider shutter would overcome this with a very slight sacrifice of light.

The very best thing for you to do is to write directly to Nicholas Power Company, 90 Gold St., New York, and tell them about your trouble. In the modern Power's 6, 6-A and 6-B mechanisms, the toggle gear arrangement is such that there is absolutely no difference in the shake, no matter what the position of the framing lever may be, but it is possible that in some of the older models a slight difference did exist, and this may explain your trouble. If you can not remedy the trouble yourself, write to the factory as they stand back of their goods and will give you full information and satisfaction.

The repair of mechanisms is a very important matter and the very best method to follow is to make a deposit for a loan mechanism which can be sent to you by your distributor or dealer, then you return your mechanism to the distributor or factory, if he so directs, where it can be thoroughly overhauled and tested and returned in fine condition.

Then when your mechanism has arrived and is satisfactory, the loaned mechanism is returned to your distributor or dealer and the money you have paid will be refunded less the expense of the repairs.

While an operator should, and generally does, know how to fix machines, there are many little parts which unexpectedly get out of order and require attention as you explained, and that is where the factory repair work comes in to the benefit of the exhibitor.

WEARS CAP IN BOOTH TO PREVENT HAIR FROM FALLING OUT

L. Schneider, Baudette, Minn.:—I have been reading various articles in Motion Picture News and understand that you will respond to questions asked relative to your profession.

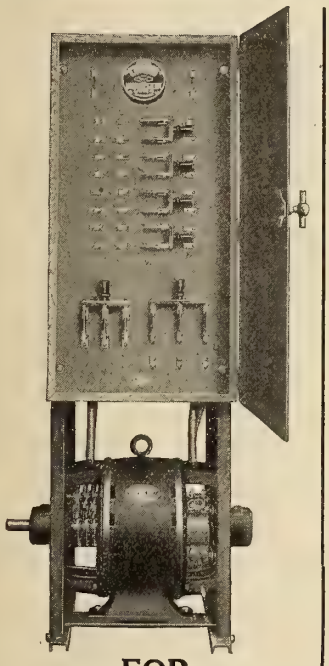
I have had almost three years' experience at operating motion picture machines and find that by wearing a cap of "light material" in the booth during time of operation, tends to keep the dust from the scalp, and is, in my opinion, a great aid in preventing dandruff from accumulating and the falling out of hair. I notice a considerable amount of carbon dust accumulates during the shows when the carbons are burning.

The heat causes sweat and sweating causes the pores to open, and if it were not for the wearing of a cap, the carbon dust would naturally alight on the hair and finally lodge on the scalp—into the pores and cause the hair to fall out.



The above is stated from my experience and has been contradicted.

I would feel very much gratified in receiving a personal reply in regard to your opinion of this cap affair.

ANS.—The question which you set before the department is one which I believe could be better discussed by a specialist on the scalp. Of course, if you, by personal experience, have found your cap of "light material" has done you good, then your suggestion that operators wear these caps is commendable.

The editor of this department has lost a considerable amount of the covering on his own head, but not as far as he knows, due to the particular cause you report, and I, for one, would like to know of a remedy to prevent more hair from falling or to bring back what has fallen out.

If for no other reason than for cleanliness and for the prevention of unnecessary dirt accumulating in the scalp of operators, your suggestion of the cap may well be taken advantage of by others who may read your article and benefit thereby.

ONLY HALF CIRCUIT EVENLY BALANCED IN LOBBY

A. McL., London, Ont.:—I take the liberty to write you in regard to a little trouble with our lighting system.

We have a three-wire circuit in our lobby A. C. 110 volts, 60 cycle and use 60 Watt lamps. Half the circuit is evenly balanced and gives no trouble, the other half one lamp goes very bright and the next dim, and so on, the bright ones keep burning out.

ANS.—You evidently have the regular 3-wire installation on 60 cycle A. C. where the voltage is 220 volts across the outside wires and 110 volts between the center, and each one of the outer wires.

If your case is correctly stated by the above, then if you have an equal number of lamps on each side consuming the same number of watts your system would be perfectly balanced and the middle or neutral wire would carry no current.

If your 3-wire system is properly installed and properly fused and if the transformer is properly balanced so that it really gives 110 volts to each side, you could easily unbalance your system to the extent of turning off all of the lamps on one side without effect on the voltage.

Judging by your description, however, I don't believe that your middle connection is properly made or complete between the transformer and your lamps.

Perhaps a connection is loose somewhere or perhaps the neutral fuse has blown, and you don't know it.

If the neutral or middle fuse has blown, or if the middle wire is loose, then as long as you have an absolutely equal number of watts on each side of the system you will not notice a difference in the candle power of any lamps.

On the other hand, if you happen to have a few more lamps on one side than on the other, then the side on which you have the less number of lamps will increase in voltage and your lamps will in consequence thereof, burn considerably brighter than on the other side of the system.

This same effect would occur if you had lamps of different wattage so that, for instance, you might have on one side six 60-watt lamps and on the other side six 40-watt lamps.

That would unbalance your system 120 watts and on the side of the system where the least load is you would have a higher voltage, and consequently greater candle power and your lamps burn out.

I think that if you take up this question with your electric light company they will very quickly test out your system and will be glad to help you out.

TROUBLE WITH CONDENSER LENSES

W. W. W.—My trouble is with condenser lenses. I would like to know the proper lens for my requirements. The size of the picture is 9 feet 2 inches by 12 feet 10 inches, with a throw of 63 feet. At present I use one 6½- and one 7½*-inch focus.*

The 7½ is 11¾ inches from aperture plate, and the 6½ is 3¼ inches from the arc. I would rather have the lamp house farther from the machine, and the arc farther from the lens.

I use a Bell & Howell transformer on 220 volts, with 45 amperes at the arc; ⅝*-inch cored carbons.*

ANS.—The selection of a condenser combination most suitable for a specified installation of a motion picture projector can only be made if all specifications are given.

You have stated most of the facts in the case, but I should have the back focus of your lens also (this is the distance from the front of the aperture plate to the rear glass of your projector lens), and the diameter of the opening or the exposed part of the lens cells in your projector lens.

You seem, however, to have the matter very well in hand, and if it is your desire to increase the distance from the arc to the rear condensing lens, and from the lens to the aperture, then you have to exchange this 6½-inch lens to one of 7½-inch foci.

It has been my experience, especially with A. C. at the arc, that a flatter and better field of light is obtained by using from ½-inch to 1½-inch higher foci condenser combination than usually employed.

It is true that you sacrifice a given amount of illumination in brilliancy at least on the screen, but you gain a considerable improvement in the quality of the illumination, due to the fact that the crater points and the ghost, as you might call it, usually present when A. C. is used at the arc, is not so prominent.

The results you want can be had as stated by using two 7½-inch condensers, or you could obtain the same result by using a 6½-inch condenser in the rear holder and an 8½-inch condenser in the front holder.

BETTER ADMISSION PRICE ERA IS IN SIGHT FOR BUFFALO, N. Y., THEATRES

Special to Motion Picture News

Buffalo, N. Y., March 4.

SEVERAL changes in film service have taken place or will do so in the near future in Buffalo houses. Following the visit to the city of William L. Sherry, of the Paramount company, a contract was signed by which the Strand theatre will continue the presentation of this service for another year.

Under the same contract the Paramount productions will make their bow to Elmwood theatre audiences and will also remain at the New Victoria theatre. With the signing of the contract, increased admission was inaugurated at the Strand theatre, the evening price was raised to fifteen cents, while the Elmwood prices will also increase to this figure upon the opening of Paramount plays on March 13.

Thus the path is blazed for a general rise among the better film houses in Buffalo. With increased admission, many problems at the operating end of the business will have been solved, and the managers will be able to give better music, pictures and do more advertising.

Another change in film service is that at Shea's Hippodrome, which has booked the Triangle plays, commencing Sunday, February 27, with Billie Burke in "Peggy." Prices here remain the same, which is fifteen cents. The Fox productions will make their bow to Palace theatre audiences on Sunday, March 5, with Theda Bara in "The Galley Slave" as the opening attraction.

BRADY AND COMPANY, NEW YORK, CARRIES FULL LINE OF SUPPLIES AND MACHINES

THE firm of Dick Brady and Company, Inc., 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York City, is branching out and adding another department in which it will carry a full and complete line of motion picture supplies and projecting machines. This department will be under the management of Adolph Dutch.

He has made a success of the mounted poster rental end of the business and is now carrying over 600 accounts of exhibitors who are using his mounted posters on a rental basis.

It is said that Mr. Brady was the first man to conceive the idea of renting posters, mounted, which, on a rental plan, has been a saving to the exhibitor. The plan has met with great success, and the company is handling the out-of-town accounts as easily as the exhibitor nearby.

TYPHOON FANS INSTALLED IN BONITA, TAMPA, FLA., AND THE MONTGOMERY, COLUMBIA, SOUTH CAROLINA

MR. CATRON, owner of the Bonita theatre in Tampa, has just closed a contract with the Typhoon Fan Company for installing their Typhoon cooling system in his theatre.

George C. Warner, ot fhe Montgomery theatre in Columbia, S. C., has just made a contract with the Typhoon for installing their system in the Montgomery theatre now managed by him.

The Typhoon Fan Company is also installing the system for the cooling of the Seminole Hotel, Jacksonville, Fla.

THE PRECISION MACHINE CO.

Dear Sirs:

I have been using a Simplex Machine in my Theatre since November, 1911, and have never had any trouble with it, only to put on new sprockets, and that was easy to do. I couldn't think of trying to use any other make of machine, for my pictures are perfect and steady as a rock. I have used several other makes, but none for me but SIMPLEX.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) CHAS. F. WOODS.

The Iron Seat Question Threshed Out in Detail

Correspondent Declares That Many States Forbid Use of Metal Chairs for Health Considerations—It Is Maintained, However, That Iron Seats, According to the Original Contention, Can Be Used to Advantage, in the Balconies and Galleries of Theatres

THE writer well remembers when he was a student in Cornell University some twenty years ago. In the lectures of the venerable Professor Charles A. Babcock, when subjects presented expressed the view of various authorities, he would in perplexity ask, "Well, when the authorities disagree, what shall the patient do?"

It is with the greatest of pleasure that MOTION PICTURE NEWS has received quite an extended letter from one of the largest seating manufacturing concerns in the United States, taking exception to some of the ideas presented by the writer in the issue of February 12, on the subject of seating.

It is with regret that we cannot here print for lack of space verbatim the letter of the correspondent, but desirous of the public having the benefit of every possible idea, assurance is given that no essential point of the letter will be left unnoted.

Before, however, answering the same we wish to emphasize that the columns of this department are open at all times for expressions of opinion by all those interested in the various phases of the various subjects covered.

Like all editorials they express largely the mind and knowledge of the party writing the same. It does not follow that everybody must agree with them, and when they are read to the extent that they are answered, proof is found of their real value to the readers.

Let it first be said that the correspondent's objections are only as to that part of the article which advocates steel seats. Let it be emphasized that the correspondent does not manufacture, and has, therefore, not for sale, steel seats and steel backs; that the writer advocated such furniture only for theatres and advocated the use of steel seats in the galleries of theatres and such motion picture houses where exceptionally hard usage is had.

Laws Against Steel Seats?

The correspondent calls attention to the fact that the article stated that many theatres are now being equipped with steel seats and steel backs, that he has not investigated thoroughly but has a recollection that there are laws in some states, where the health requirements prohibit the use of such seats; that he knows personally, that in Ohio, there is a law prohibiting the use of stadiums built of concrete, unless the risers are properly boarded, and that he believes for the same health reasons that there are laws prohibiting the use of steel backs and steel seats in opera chairs.

The above is based not upon known facts by the correspondent, but simply general impressions. The writer knows of a motion picture theatre on Long Island, very successfully seated with steel furniture, and knows of a concern in New York that owns very many theatres which have taken up the advisability of requiring only steel furniture for the gallery, and that several theatres throughout the West are so furnished.

The idea presented in the article was not to bring forth something that might have been universally known, but rather to open the eyes of exhibitors, owners and architects, to a various troublesome condition that has been found in connection with amusement places and a way to remedy it.

The writer earnestly believes that not many years will pass when this article for theatres in places referred to will be far more universally used. We were not on the subject of concrete stadiums and we have no knowledge of any state having laws prohibiting steel backs and steel seats in theatres or opera chairs, and have no knowledge of any such laws being advanced in any of the present legislatures.

The correspondent mentions a seating firm which at one time strongly pushed the steel back and steel seat, but as far as he knows, only sold a few. For instance, one for the seating in a court room where they were rejected on account of working lose and causing a tinpanny effect.

We have not advocated such an installation for court houses, nor would we consider such a severe piece of furniture in place, for large rooms. If the material did work loose and cause a rattle, the defect is not in the material itself, but in the method of attachment, and workmanship.

Drew Summer Heat and Made Impracticable

He calls our attention to another case of an installation in one of American Association ball parks, where such seats were placed in the grandstand. They had to be removed because they contracted so much heat under the summer's hot sun rays that it was impracticable and uncomfortable to use them.

Steel is a great conductor of heat and therefore it is self-evident that for either outdoor summer or winter use, such furniture is absolutely impracticable. We did not recommend seats for such purpose. It stands to reason also, that for exterior work such material would soon rust beyond repair.

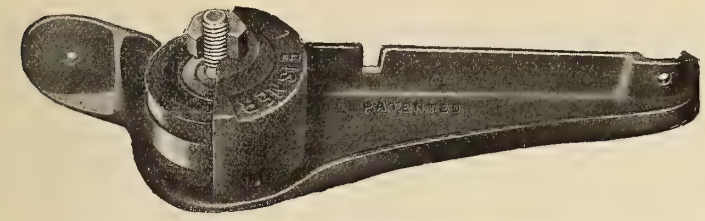
Our correspondent presents no further argument in his letter. The writer has since receiving the criticism, investigated and found at least one very responsible firm that is manufacturing an all-steel chair. We do not mention its name, but will mail it on request.

It is a well recognized physical property that all materials, whether wood, stone, steel, plaster, or what-not, contained within an enclosed space, are all absolutely of the same temperature. Theatres are supposed to be heated 70 degrees Fahrnheit in zero weather.

It is self-evident, therefore, that the conductivity of steel at 70 degrees temperature is not seriously obectionable to the clothed body.

We all do know that it is unhealthy for persons to sit outdoors in cold weather on masonry or iron work and on such points we heartily agree with our correspondent.

NATHAN MYERS.



SELF-RAISING DEVICE ADDS TO SEAT COMFORT

THE rapid-fire progress of this twentieth century is nowhere illustrated better than in the theatre. This no doubt is due to the fact that the mission of the theatre is to take people out of the humdrum affairs of their everyday existence and give them an hour or two's enjoyment. To accomplish this the theatre owner endeavors to furnish every modern comfort and convenience.

One of the latest improvements both for comfort and safety is a self-raising device which causes the seat to rise automatically as soon as vacated by the occupant. This invention should recommend itself to the theatre man on sight because of its absolute simplicity of construction and the minimum amount of space it occupies.

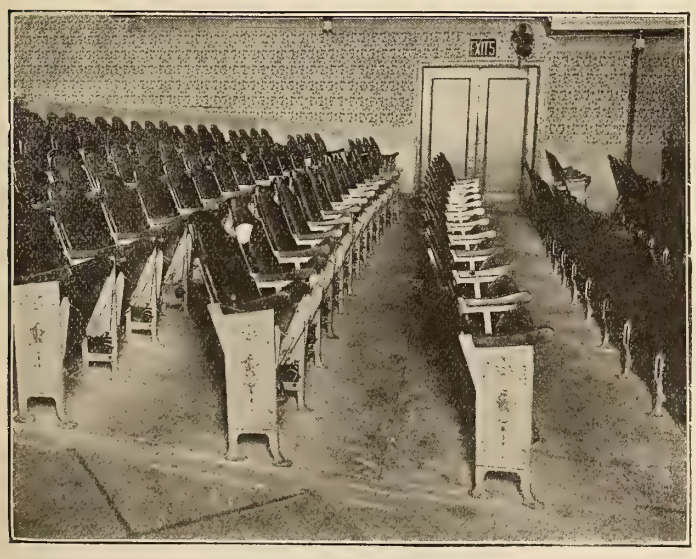
"It's under the seat," is the terse way the manufacturers emphasize the convenience of their appliance, and this aptly conveys the fact that being under the seat it is out of sight and cannot possibly interfere with wraps or other wearing apparel of the patron.

SECTIONAL VIEW OF SELF-RAISING DEVICE

The appliance consists principally of a heavy steel coil spring in an iron casing. The photograph on this page, showing a sectional view of the appliance, illustrates this clearly. The simplicity and compactness of the invention are very obvious.

"Every Row a Clear Aisle"



"Every row a clear aisle." That is what this arrangement produces. This is quite apparent in the illustration given herewith of a portion of the new Fourteenth Street theatre, New York City. Note the ease with which occupants on arising from seats at first sign of disturbance can pass swiftly and without confusion to side exit No. 15, which is directly at their elbow.

Under the old seating method what would have occurred? Everybody in these rows would be stumbling over lowered seats, pushing and fighting frantially to reach this exit.

The latter might as well be one hundred feet away for all the safety it would furnish patrons caught in a hopeless and fatal network of lowered seats.

Comfort and Convenience at All Times

But another noticeable improvement the self-raising seat furnishes over the old style arrangement is the comfort and convenience at all times. It eliminates a major part of the discomforts caused by the passing in and out of a patron during a performance.

"EVERY ROW A CLEAR AISLE"

A half dozen people may be forced to rise to let him pass. The self-raising device eliminates all awkward fumbling with seats which sometimes prove unwieldy and hard to lift. The seat rises as soon as occupant arises. The seat takes care of itself.

This feature is especially valuable in photoplay theatres where people are coming and going continuously. There is also no possibility of stumbling in the darkened house against a lowered seat.

STILLMAN, CLEVELAND, WILL BE RUN LIKE THE STRAND IN NEW YORK CITY

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Cleveland, O., March 5.

ALTHOUGH it is not expected that the Stillman theatre, Cleveland,'s big new downtown photoplay house on Euclid avenue, will be ready for opening until the late summer or early fall, the policy of the house has been practically decided.

The Stillman theatre will have a seating capacity of nearly 2,000. It is proposed to run it on much the same lines as the Strand theatre in New York. Hyman Spitalny, the best-known musical director in northern Ohio, will have charge of the music, and it is rumored that one of the best-known organists and composers in Cleveland will be retained to play the big organ, which will be a feature of the musical arrangements.

Hyman Spitalny is the oldest of three brothers, who are all musical directors and much interested in the musical development of the photoplay. Philip Spitalny is director of the Metropolitan theatre orchestra, and Maurice, the youngest of the three brothers, is leader of the Knickerbocker orchestra. The Metropolitan and Knickerbocker theatres are the two best photoplay houses in Cleveland at the present time.

Philip Spitalny, spoken of as one of the future great musical directors of the country, says the time has passed when musicians regard the direction of a motion picture theatre orchestra as beneath their dignity.

"It is a new art, but I am convinced it is the coming art," Mr. Spitalny says. "The artistic development of the photoplay makes it more and more important that the music shall be in keeping with the artistic nature of the offering on the screen.

"It is just as dignified and just as artistic a piece of work to set a beautiful picture to appropriate music as it is to set beautiful verses or the lines of a song to music."

GUY BARRETT REJUVENATES THE BELVEDERE, LYNCHBURG, VA., AND MAKES IT A PICTURE THEATRE TO BE RECKONED WITH

SINCE taking over the management of the Belvedere theatre a little more than a year ago, Guy Barrett, who was formerly connected with Tom Moore and Crandall's theatres in Washington, D. C., has succeeded in re-establishing this cosy little picture house in the good graces of the photoplay public in Lynchburg, Va. The theatre is one of the few now making money in that community.

Notwithstanding the fact that the Belvedere is one of the smaller picture theatres, it has always kept abreast of the times and patrons have been able to enjoy all of the facilities of modern-day accommodation through the foresight of the management in always providing for the pleasure and comfort of its clientele.

That this service has been appreciated is indicated by the patronage every day, and since the box office is the best barometer of business the receipts have been such as to encourage the owner in his attempt to furnish only the best.

The Belvedere is extremely fortunate in its location, being situated in the heart of the business section and only a whisper from the busiest corner in the city.

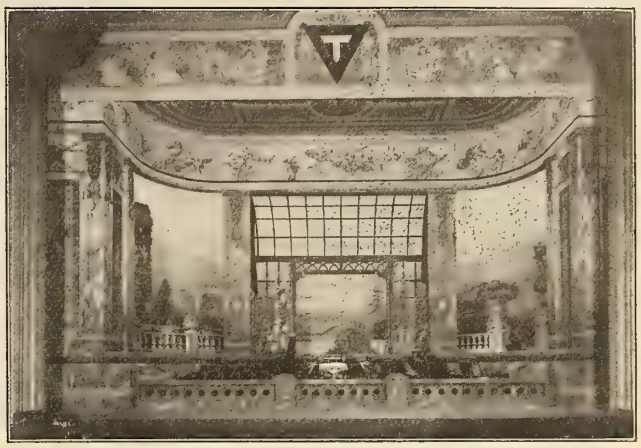
At present, Manager Barrett is presenting Paramount, Metro, and V-L-S-E pictures and his confidence in liberal and persistent newspaper publicity has resulted in producing the desired effect among picture enthusiasts.

When he went to Lynchburg, he immediately suggested certain changes in the exterior as well as interior and C. M. Casey, who has owned the theatre for more than seven years, yielded to the entreaties of the new manager and made such alterations as Barrett felt should be made if he hoped to build up business again.

The screen was shifted back to make way for more seats and two aisles were provided to permit the construction of extra seating arrangements.

New papering on the interior was ordered and an inverted lighting system installed for the purpose of making it possible for patrons of the house to locate their seats in the semi-darkness.

A splendid system of ventilation is being employed, the plan now operating sufficing to keep the air inside the theatre fresh at all times by means of two huge fans, the exhaust being in the ceiling and concealed from ordinary observation.



THE BELVEDERE THEATRE, LYNCHBURG, VA.

A Wurlitzer unit orchestra furnishes the music and an experienced musician is employed to render suitable music for each picture.

Two machines in the operating room are kept in splendid shape, both being worked alternately in order to maintain a continuous program without interruption.

A MOTION picture and soft drink roof garden is being installed by J. Harvey Clement on the roof of the Desert Inn at Oatman, the new gold mine town.

Pictures will be shown each evening until ten-thirty, when the tables will be cleared away, and the roof garden converted into a dance hall.

CALIFORNIA

The Acme theatre in the Mission district, San Francisco, conducted by George Knowles for several years, has been disposed of to Ford and Meyers.

The Larkin theatre, on Larkin street, San Francisco, has been re-opened by Charles Goodwin, formerly of the Elite theatre, after having been closed for several months.

The Turner and Dahnken circuit is making plans to erect a large moving picture theatre on its property at Sacramento.

Vaudeville has been discontinued on Sundays at the Empire theatre at Napa, conducted by Dave Solari, of Stockton, and feature photoplays are shown instead. Music is furnished by a six-piece orchestra.

The Star theatre at Fellows has been removed to a more central location in this prominent oil center.

A theatre is to be opened by F. C. Ellis at Sunnyside.

The Gaiety theatre, 2407 Central avenue, Los Angeles, has been sold by M. Cholzinoff to W. Besselman.

A. C. Owley has purchased the Strand theatre at Fifty-fourth and Vermont streets, Los Angeles, from Henry Kornfeld.

J. A. Menard has purchased the Brooklyn theatre at 2235 Brooklyn avenue, Los Angeles, which house has been dark for several weeks, and after making a number of improvements and alterations has re-opened it.

Turner & Dahnken, Inc., which firm has a number of theatres in San Francisco, Oakland and cities in that vicinity, have invaded the Los Angeles territory by leasing the Arlington theatre at 2477 W. Washington street, and purchased the equipment from John J. Tully.

Mr. Tully is a pioneer exhibitor of Los Angeles, and has conducted several theatres there. The Turner & Dahnken people are making a number of improvements at this theatre, which they have re-named the Fountain.

A large fountain has been placed in the lobby and a big electric sign is being added in front. An American fotoplayer has been installed, and H. D. Burt has been placed in charge of the management.

The new theatre of the Palace Amusement Company on Seventh street, between Broadway and Hill street, Los Angeles, was opened Saturday evening, February 19, using the Blue Bird subject, "Undine," for the opening bill. Prices will be ten, twenty and thirty cents.

The Palace of Pictures was formerly located on Broadway between Sixth and Seventh streets, but, owing to expiration of lease, was moved to the new location where larger space was secured and the seating capacity increased to more than seven hundred.

J. C. McCarthy, who has conducted theatres in Dakota and the Central West for the past eight years, has purchased the Lyric at Oxnard. He immediately made a contract for the Metro service.

Business manager Harry Lustig has just returned from a very successful trip to San Diego and other southern California cities. While there he made contracts for Metro service to be used four days weekly at the Pickway theatre. In Los Angeles seventeen theatres are now using Metro service weekly.

CANADA

Mr. Lemieux, one of the youngest men in the film business, has one of the largest houses in Montreal, the Readoscope, under his control, and is showing that ability stands by itself and cannot be downed.

The Readoscope has a capacity of 1,200 seats, and is doing an excellent business. This fact is all the more remarkable, because prior to Mr. Lemieux's taking over the managership, the theatre was known as a hard nut to crack and crack successfully.

CONNECTICUT

The Star is the name of a picture house that opened recently in John street, near Broad, Bridgeport. The old name was the Lennox, and it was one of the original picture houses in the city. R. L. Tayleure and Joseph Meyers, Jr., are at the head of the house.

Since the Seymour opera house was totally destroyed by fire about three weeks ago, Seymour has been without a moving picture theatre The present situation will soon be relieved, as plans are in progress for the erection of a new theatre by E. H. Rolston. The theatre will occupy Mr. Rolston's lot on Main street.

FLORIDA

The Opera House, Pensacola, has been taken over by H. M. Navaratt, who opened it on March 4. The house seats 1,500, and will operate on a ten-cent policy. Occasional acts of vaudeville will be run in conjunction with the films.

The Alamo theatre at Gainesville has been purchased by W. M. Clark, who will make improvements.

ILLINOIS

The Lyric theatre at Danville has been purchased by Louis H. Balfe and David Maurice. The building will be remodeled and re-opened, showing vaudeville and motion pictures.

Motion picture theatres at Aurora are to combine and show pictures of different classes. The Aurora and Strand theatres will be dark five nights a week, showing features on Saturdays and Sundays.

The Fox theatre will show feature pictures during the week, and will play vaudeville Sundays. The Palm and Star theatres will show one-, two- and three-reel pictures daily at an admission price of five cents. Frank Thielen is president of the new syndicate, and Jules J. Rubens treasurer. W. D. Burford is secretary, and will book all pictures for the various play-houses in the pool.

John G. Fredericks, manager of the Lyric theatre at Belleville, has secured a lease on the lot at Main and Race streets, and will conduct an airdome there during the coming summer

INDIANA

The Strand theatre, in South Harrison street, Shelbyville, opened its doors Saturday, March 4, according to the announcement made by William C. Meloy, owner, and Claude Williamson, manager. Mrs. Kate Raymond gave a concert of numbers during the evening on the $5,000 organ which has been installed in the theatre.

IOWA

A. M. Wood has taken over the Isis theatre at Sioux City from the DeBartlett Brothers. After closing the house for ten days, during which time it was decorated and recleaned, Wood held a grand opening.

Steve Green, manager of the opera house at Hamburg, has taken over the picture show owned and operated by R. S. Ross. He now controls the theatre situation in his town and will continue to operate the motion picture house, while admitting road shows and big picture features at the opera house.

Don J. Preston, of Audubon, is starting to build a house that will seat five hundred.

The scarlet fever epidemic that has caused trouble in many Nebraska towns is also a hindrance in many Iowa houses.

R. S. Hunter, proprietor, and F. E. Reed, manager, have opened the Frank theatre at Broadway and Frank streets, Council Bluffs, showing a regular program. The admission is 5 and 10 cents.

The Jewell picture theatre, conducted by Eugene Brister in Des Moines, has been sold to Chas. Allen.

KENTUCKY

The reconstruction of the Ben Ali theatre, Lexington, which was damaged by fire last January, will be completed within six weeks and the house reopened as a motion picture theatre, according to Manager C. H. Berryman. The picture programs now being shown at the Lexington Opera House will be returned to the Ben Ali and road shows will be staged at the Opera House.

The Rex theatre, formerly the Novelty, on Fourth avenue, Louisville, after being renovated and redecorated, was formally opened February 27. In the panels of the walls are painted flower chains and at the back are some artistic landscapes. Silken tapestries adorn entrances and exits. There are new soft lighting effects.

An orchestra under the direction of David Schwartz furnished music and solos were contributed by Madame Kaetha Pieczonka, cellist, of Chicago. Admission is ten cents until 6 p. m., when fifteen cents is charged.

LOUISIANA

C. L. Sherwood, of Homer, opened his new Sherwood theatre on February 23. In New Orleans he purchased two Power's 6-A projection machines from the General Film Company. He will use General service.

The new house in Shreveport, owned by Charles Rick will be opened under the name of the New Lyrick.

MASSACHUSETTS

The Mahaiwe theatre, East Barrington, has been leased to Earle B. Raifstanger, who was formerly theatre manager in New Haven, Conn. W. C. Howitt, who has been manager of the Mahaiwe for the last six years, goes to Pittsfield to take charge of the Grand theatre there.

Samuel Wolfson has secured a permit for the erection of a picture house in Worcester. The estimated cost is $50,000.

NEBRASKA

Jack Howard has started showing motion pictures in the city auditorium at Norfolk, where he seats eight hundred people.

R. R. Booth, proprietor of the Paramount theatre, Nebraska City, has recently enlarged his theatre, until it seats six hundred. He uses a mixed program of features and regular service. He is already planning to open an airdome.

NEVADA

Charles Martin, of the Orpheum theatre at Sparks, has purchased the Temple theatre at Fallon, and will conduct both houses.

A moving picture theatre is to be erected at Fallon, by J. W. Flood on the site of the airdome that has been conducted in past seasons.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

Robinson and Barnett have purchased the moving picture business of W. W. Robertson in Lancaster.

Another change has occurred in Lancaster moving picture circles. Lawrence Carroll and Glenn Mills have purchased of Fielding Smith the Opera House and will conduct it as the Lyric theatre. They will follow somewhat the plan of Mr. Smith, with shows on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday evenings, but with a Saturday matinee and one big feature each month. Mr. Carroll has been the operator and Mr. Mills the head usher.

NEW YORK

A realty deal which has been pending for some time in Buffalo is reported as completed by R. W. Goode and Company and Charles A. Cunningham, the consideration being approximately $200,000. The property, which is sold to William W. Reed, who buys it as an investment, is the Regent theatre building at Main and Utica streets. The theatre has been run by a Canadian company and is being managed at present by J. Michaels, of the Academy theatre staff.

Manager Edward L. Hyman recently celebrated the first anniversary of the New Victoria theatre, Buffalo. An elaborate program was issued and a notable series of programs presented during the week.

The Unqua Amusement Company, Inc., has started work on its fireproof theatre at Farmingdale.

Harris Lumberg will build another picture theatre on the site of Lumberg's theatre, Falls street, Niagara Falls. The house upon which work was started the first of this month, will have a seating capacity of 1,000.

The largest of all the theatres in Brooklyn devoted to the exhibition of photoplays, the Rialto, situated at Flatbush avenue and Cortelyou road, opened the second week in March. The theatre, just completed and designed with all the modern improvements of playhouse construction, occupies a plot of about ninety feet frontage on Flatbush avenue, with a depth of 140 feet on Cortelyou road. It has a seating capacity of about 2,000, of which 1,450 chairs are on the ground floor, and 450 in the one balcony. The front of the balcony is divided into loge boxes.

OREGON

Plans have been prepared by W. W. Lucius and George Langford for the construction of a moving-picture theatre in the Alisky building, now under course of reconstruction on Third and Morrison streets, Portland. The theatre is to have a seating capacity of 350 persons and when completed will be an exceedingly attractive house, it is believed.

A. H. Fleischman will operate it. The work is to cost between $10,000 and $12,000.

PENNSYLVANIA

Russ C. Roshon, manager of the Roshon Photoplay Service at Johnstown, has taken control of the Dreamland Theatre, a three hundred seat house at Cresson.

The theatre is the oldest one in that town and has a good following. Mr. Roshon expects to make a number of improvements in the near future.

John Bender has sold his interest in the Colonial Theatre, located in Troy Hill, North Side, Pittsburgh, to his partner, Ralph Williams, and the latter will make a number of improvements in the place.

Mr. Bender, it is said, contemplates the erection of a new theatre in that section, but has not as yet decided on the location for the house.

TEXAS

The Zoe Theatre, in Houston, reopened recently under new management, it having been taken over as a sister house to the Queen Theatre by the Hulsey Theatres Company, whose recent doings have shaped the destinies of the picture houses, not only in Houston, but in Galveston, Waco and Dallas. Frederick Ward, formerly of Galveston, and well known in the Empire State, has been named manager of the new Hulsey Theatre.

C. W. Hartman, manager of the Garrick Theatre, Dallas, announces that the house will be enlarged and three hundred additional seats added.

The opera house at Collinsville was burned recently. Whether it will be rebuilt or not is still a matter of conjecture.

A. Martini has installed a new $8,000 pipe organ in the Dixie Theatre at Galveston.

The Garden airdome, Longview, owned and operated by H. R. Yates, will open April 4. The place measures 100 feet long and 50 feet wide and is built to accommodate vaudeville acts as well as pictures.

The seating capacity is 1,200.

VERMONT

Edward Poquette has purchased the Casino Theatre on Church street, Burlington, from Arthur Gladstone. No change in the policy of the house has yet been announced.

WEST VIRGINIA

Poole Brothers, acting for the Smith-Poole company of Williamson, have opened the Broadway theatre in that city. The house promises to meet with success.

seventy-seven feet. A motor generator set, made by the General Electric Company, is also part of the booth equipment. A canvas screen with a special coating is in use at the theatre.

A piano, violin and cello constitute the music for the pictures. The lobby is rendered attractive by the color harmony of the easels, manufactured from mahogany to correspond with the wainscoting, in the same wood.

Only Features Shown

No program pictures are shown at the Homestake Opera House. Only features are thrown on the screen, the management using multiples from Fox, Metro and V-L-S-E.

Three and four shows a day are necessary to furnish entertainment for the miners leaving off work in the various shifts. Eight people are employed in the theatre, which is located in the heart of the business district.

Although the Homestake Opera House is run on a community plan without regard to money making, the manager is fully alive to the necessity of advertising for keeping his orchestra and balcony full. He makes use of the screen, lobby display, distribution of paper and any other form of publicity seemingly suitable for local conditions.

CITY ARCHITECT IN TORONTO REFUSES TO ISSUE PERMIT UNTIL LEGALLY COMPELLED TO TAKE ACTION

CITY Architect Pearse refuses to issue the permit for the making of changes in the Gem theatre, Queen street, West, Toronto, which do not comply with the building bylaw, until he is legally compelled to do so.

He has applied to City Solicitor Johnston for a ruling on the action of the city council when it voted by fourteen to five in favor of allowing Mrs. Ellen Woolson to make the changes in her house and to increase the seating capacity from 471 to 771, without making the theatre of fireproof construction.

The city bylaws say that all houses seating over 500 persons must be of fireproof or first class construction.

It is now likely that if the city council wants the Gem theatre to be exempted from the provisions of the bylaw it will have to pass a special bylaw amending the building bylaw, for this particular house.

This will be a precedent on which other film men may base similar appeals to the aldermen, and thus, it is argued, the whole aim of ensuring the public safety in such houses is endangered.

There is sure to be more battling over the matter in council.

LARGEST COMMERCIAL FILM PLANT ON WEST COAST OPENED FOR BUSINESS

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 5.

THE largest commercial film manufacturing plant on the West Coast was opened this week when the Pacific Film Laboratories was completed.

This is located in Hollywood, and is the business venture of W. H. Faust. H. T. Brookmiller is general manager, L. F. Sanburn, superintendent, and H. Sulvester, chief electrician. The company has been organized for several months, formerly occupying a building on Hoover street.

Their present patrons are the E. & R. Jungle Film Company, the L-Ko, Monrovia Feature Film Company, Monrovia, California, and the Dudley Motion Picture Manufacturing Company.

FIRST IMPORTANT RUN OF "NE'ER-DO-WELL" IN EAST, AT ATLANTIC CITY

THE first important Eastern engagement of "The Ne'er-do Well" began at the Cort theatre, Atlantic City, N. J., on February 26, and drew record-breaking crowds. Messrs. Gates & Symons, the Cort managers, arranged to retain the picture for a two weeks' run.

On Sunday, February 27, the theatre opened its doors earlier than usual, and despite a snowstorm, the playhouse was crowded with all it could accommodate.

"The best picture I have seen since 'The Spoilers,'" is the way Alfred Heldman, an Atlantic City business man, characterized "The Ne'er-do-Well."

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

DOES NOT BELIEVE THERE SHOULD BE MUSIC DURING ENTIRE PICTURE

"My Dear Mr. Lutz:

"After reading yours in Motion Picture News of February 19, I want to write to you of some of my opinions and experiences. You say the exhibitor rarely writes. I agree partly with you in that I would never use a cornet except in orchestras over fifteen pieces. I will add to it a little. I would never use them at all.

"I have found that a good cornet player, one who plays with a beautiful soft tone which carries, and one who does not think that he has to explode to play, is a rare bird. I am a professional musician, graduate of large schools in Chicago, and it has been my experience that a good orchestra for a small house can be composed of the following: first and second violins, drums, bells, trombone, clarinets, cello, bass and piano.

"If you haven't a cello, a trombone can play the same parts, if he has any idea of tone.

"I have an exceptional orchestra, one which has caused favorable comment from such people as Olga Nethersole, Virginia Harned, Nat Goodwin and others for whom we have played, and this is the combination I use.

"We play all intermissions and twice during a reel. We do not try to play the pictures, except in that we do not play ragtime during a death scene. When in doubt, a waltz always goes. We have all the popular music, and a large repertoire of good music, such as selections from 'Boheme,' 'Pagliacci,' the Saint-Saens Mazurka, Grieg's Norwegian Dances, etc.

"I do not agree with you that there should be music during the entire picture. Personally, I am relieved when the music stops, usually. This summer I went to a theatre in a Northern city. The attraction was 'Neptune's Daughter.' A decrepit old lady played piano. There was nothing else. She improvised, and ye gods what music!

"After two reels, although I wanted to see the picture, I escaped and went to another show down the street, where the music was perpetrated by an organist. He also improvised.

"One reel of that bunk. Then to another, where I was tortured by the same thing. This in a city. Later I went to a show in an Ohio city. The ticket girl could hardly tear herself away from an ice cream soda long enough to permit me to buy a ticket, and at the door the maiden was so surrounded by males, admiring, that I with difficulty forced my way in, and when I got in, I found a girl improvising, without ceasing, on a piano.

"At another place I was entertained by an electrical device, such as is used in cheap saloons, and this was badly out of tune. In the same place I heard a man butcher 'Bird of Paradise,' and he didn't know the tune of the chorus. It was a pleasure to get back home, where I heard some real music, and this is a village.

"I would believe in playing the pictures if the orchestra was large and if played in the manner 'The Birth of a Nation' was. But otherwise let me out. And I prefer slow torture to sitting in a house where the pianist plays 'Come to Jesus' during sad scenes and jumps to 'Dixie,' or yells for the drummer to tum-tum if a Chinese man walks across the stage.

"Skydome theatre, "Cordially,
"Fayetteville, Ark. "H. Tovey."

Note:—The above letter from Mr. Tovey is quite interesting. His conception of using brass in picture theatre orchestras when the orchestras are small and the brass players are better adapted to military band work and not orchestral work, is quite true.

The proper way to play cornet, trombone and other wind instruments is neglected in many smaller communities. Some few years ago I suffered from the same difficulty, but in this time I have surrounded myself with musicians whose volume of tone on brass instruments does not exceed that of the reed players.

It is unnecessary for me to say that when the cornet or trombone is played well and soft, it is not out of place in an orchestra of eight or more musicians. In small combinations for picture work the brass is entirely out of place.

The question of instrumentation depends greatly upon the repertoire of music used. In French music, about fifty per cent. of the better compositions when orchestrated omit parts for the brass.

The orchestral instrumentation depends greatly upon the community and taste of the audience to be entertained. Nevertheless, boisterous or bombastic musical effects can but disturb the audience in the picture theatre.

You state, "We play all intermissions." From which I take it that your shows are not strictly continuous. If there is an intermission between each picture during which a number is played, I quite agree with you that if you were to play to the pictures continuously or throughout, any musical endeavors you might make in your intermissions would be detracted from.

There are many pictures released which are so disinteresting to play that continuous music seems a waste of energy. Yet, those pictures which naturally develop musical possibilities are really not features as photoplays, or musical, unless the musical illustration is carried throughout, giving the effect of one number played as if it had been specially adapted for that picture. This alone can make music and the picture a successful combination.

Orchestrally and otherwise, the waltz is, as you say, the most valuable music in picture playing.

The lone piano is fast becoming obsolete in picture playing and is detrimental even when used to relieve the orchestra. The continued installation of other instruments, such as organs, and others making organ effects possible, are being daily added to the musical equipment of picture theatres, making an entirely different class of music possible.

You write of your impressions in different theatres where so-called picture playing was indulged in, which reminds me of an occurrance a short time ago, when I was training an organist to do picture work.

After listening to three reels of nothing, or we might say a noise, which the player evidently called music, he pulled off what I consider the most humorous thing I ever heard in picture playing.

Suddenly a lengthy series of scenes depicting a burglary, showing the burglar making a sneaky entrance with a searchlight, when suddenly the organ pealed out the beautiful strains of "Lead Kindly Light."

Needless to say that the audience laughed, and the picture immediately became a burlesque comedy, instead of a drama as was intended. Giving the player all due credit, he did the above in all seriousness, thinking that it constituted proper picture playing. Such conditions will necessarily exist as long as pictures are sent toto exhibitors without proper suggestions or music.

We shall always be glad to hear from you and know that our readers will be interested.

Note: "Thou Shalt Not Covet" affords excellent opportunities for a good musical program. The picture thought throughout is very serious, and music of serious appeal is consequently essential. There are also a few opportunities for light Oriental and African effects.

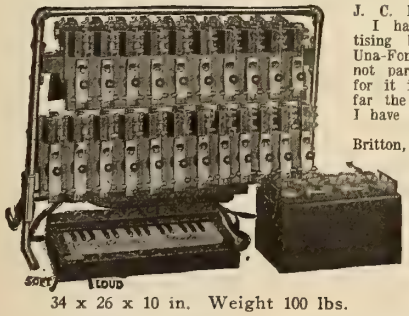
Nos. 3 and 5 accompany dancing on screen, and care should be taken to follow tempo set on screen.

Nos. 1, 8, 10, 25 and 27 are all slow serious numbers and must have a romantic as well as dramatic appeal.

Nos. 19, 20 and 21 cover at least fifteen minutes of time, and numbers of a slow serious and legato should be used.

Great care must be taken in these numbers that the music does not become frivolous at any time.

Nos. 2, 16 and 28 must be slow waltzes played very legato. No. 6 should also be a slow number suggesting a parting.



No. 7 should be a piano solo played loudly and poorly. No. 9, 17 and 23 must be light galops of hurried temperament.

Nos. 11 and 13 should be light and musical 2/4 numbers of Arabian character. No. 12 should be what is known as an Oriental waltz played legato.

No. 14 should be a 2/4 number of strictly African negro character. No. 24 should be a 2/4 number in minor key with hurried and dramatic effect.

Nos. 15, 17, 18, 22, and 26 are melodramatic numbers as suggested in music plot. With the exception of the character color, and the melodramatic numbers, the organ is very appropriate in this picture.

CAN TOO HIGH STANDARD BE PLACED ON MUSICAL INTERPOLATION FOR PICTURES?

THE following communication may be of interest to those who use instruments requiring music rolls. I have from time to time had requests for information concerning the same, and never having used any such instruments myself, I highly appreciate this communication and the offer of the writer to give any requested information to the readers of our department.

SMYTHE JAY MUSIC COMPANY,
Makers of Hand-Played Inspiration
Music Rolls for Motion Pictures.

Mr. E. Luz,
MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
New York City, N. Y.:

Dear Sir:—

Can we place too high a standard on musical interpolation for the picture either with the electric motion picture players or orchestra? The electric players are as near a human orchestra as can be produced but the average demonstrator gives little thought to what appears upon the screen, playing mostly drums and tremolo, killing the value of an instrument that was meant for orchestral music.

Why not play it with discretion. Good orchestras must rehearse and select music. If not so we would get discordant sounds. A few suggestions for electric player pianists: Keep one roll for your sentimental or descriptive music.

If sentimental use organ with tremolo; you will find much better music and more like an orchestra. Who ever heard a pipe organist use drums, vox humana or tremolo incessantly? In comedy horse chase with traps, etc., likewise castanets, tambourine, etc., for Spanish?

Don't try and play all traps, drums, swell, organ and piano at once. It makes the instruments sound like an orchestra rehearsing and kills the many beautiful effects that the picture calls for. I hear you say the manager never rehearses true, he may not find it to his interest to do so.

He will, however, I am sure, for the asking give you a synopsis of the picture even a week ahead. By looking it over you can give a very good idea of the music required.

Make your selections. You can surely find a little time each day to play them over; by so doing and trying different effects many surprising results are obtained. If you were playing with an orchestra this would be expected.

Yours very truly,

ALICE SMYTHE JAY.

KIMBALL ORGAN INSTALLED IN FIFTY-SIXTH STREET THEATRE, PHILADELPHIA

AFTER four months in the making, the large Kimball organ was installed in the new Fifty-sixth street theatre, Philadelphia, on February 26.

This instrument is one of the latest and most improved to come out of the Kimball factory, having every accessory now deemed necessary in the best photoplay houses.

With the advent of the organ, music will be made a specialty by the management of the theatre.

In addition to the overture and incidental music, an organ recital will be given every evening at nine o'clock.

Professor W. Hugo Andrews, a well-known musician, will preside at the instrument.

The opening program led off with "Zampa" as the overture, followed by Rossini's "Semiramide," Victor Herbert's "Badinage," "Princess Pat," and closing with Elgar's "Pomp and Circumstance."

SPEEDCO ARC CONTROLLER INSTALLED IN NEW YORK, BROOKLYN AND BOSTON THEATRES

THE Speed Controller Company, Inc., 257-259 William street, New York, announces that it has just installed the Speedco arc controller in thirteen of the largest motion picture theatres in the East.

These houses are the Biltmore and the Majestic, New York; Keith's Prospect, Keith's Greenpoint, Monroe, Cumberland, and Loew's Fulton, Brooklyn; Loew's, New Rochelle; Strand, Providence, Strand and Olympia, Lynn, Mass.; Moore's Strand, Washington, and the Scollay Square Olympia, Boston.

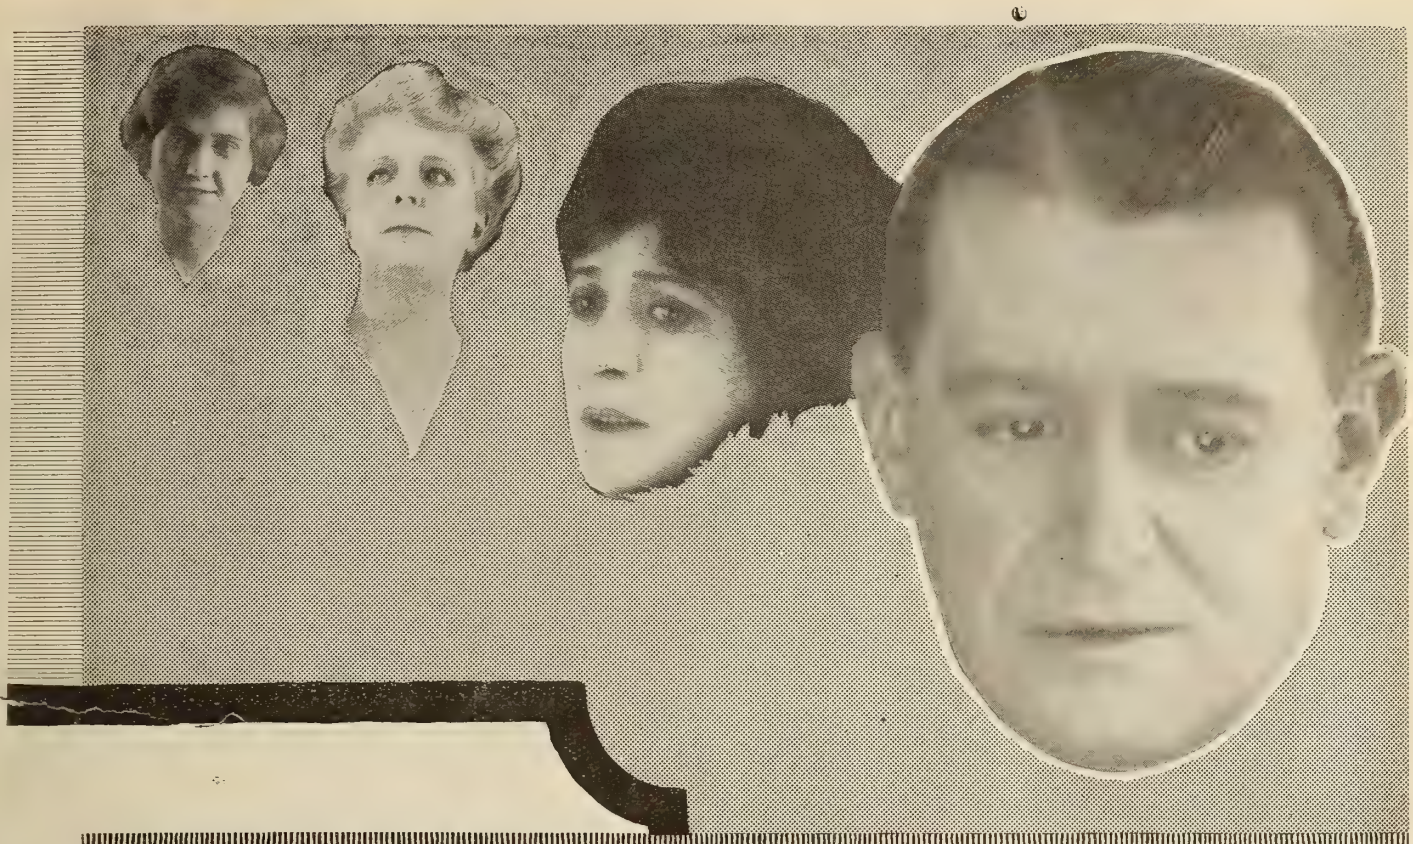
IN

"The Supreme Sacrifice"



Founded on the novel "To HIM THAT HATH" by Leroy Scott

¶ Affords Robert Warwick a magnificent opportunity to display his brilliant gifts of dramatic power and characterization. ¶ The story concerns itself with the heroic sacrifice of David Aldrich, a young author, (played by Mr Warwick), who sacrifices himself and endures a bitter term of years in prison to save the hallowed memory of his dearest friend, an East Side clergyman, who in a moment of desperation has embezzled the charity funds placed in his care to satisfy the extortionate demands of a woman with whom he had become entangled years before.

MILLIONS

¶ Means proportionate profit to the exhibitor. The World and Equitable Film Corporations could not afford the immense expenditure involved by starring in great features such notable artists as Clara Kimball Young, Robert Warwick, Alice Brady, Kitty Gordon, George Beban, House Peters, Edwin August, Charles Cherry, Frank Sheridan, Holbrook Blinn, Muriel Ostriche, Carlyle Blackwell, Bruce McRae, Gerda Holmes, and a host of others unless they could be sure of substantial returns on the investment represented.

IN

"Passers By"

By C. Haddon Chambers

¶C. Haddon Chambers, the celebrated author of "Passers-By" has written many successful plays; but none that has attained the international fame accorded to this wonderfully powerful and brilliant piece of literary art. ¶The story interests with its novelty, thrills with its dramatic climaxes, and impresses with the masterly way in which the author handles the deeper currents of modern life.

INVESTED

¶The only way to make sure of this reasonable profit is to produce photo-plays that are "sure-fire" money-makers, not a "hit or miss" program. It follows there fore, as sure as night trails day, that the prosperity of these two great corporations, is bound up with the exhibitors success. If we are to exist, we must give the exhibitor features that will yield him big business. That's "Horse Sense" isn't it?

Attention, Mr. C. C. Burr
Manager of Trade Advertising

Gentlemen:

Thank you for the information contained in yours of the 22nd, in regard to where I may see the Paramount short subjects.

I shall visit both the Broadway and the Strand at the first opportunity, just to see the Burton Holmes Travelogues and the Pictographs; I shall also look up the Bray cartoons.

My home town is Jersey City, and if I cannot find all your pictures at any of the picture theatres there, I shall act upon your suggestion and make a request for them. As I wrote you before, a program consisting of all the features mentioned in your recent advertisement, would be an ideal moving picture entertainment, and you must accomplish it.

Very truly yours,

P. Vincent McDonald

Paramount single reels are produced not merely to fill out a program, but to make it stronger.

Here are actual reproductions of a window card, a newspaper advertisement, a herald and a lobby display—other advertising material on this one subject which is prepared for TRIANGLE exhibitors. These are typical of the kind of advertising matter furnished.

YOU are wasting your opportunities if YOU ignore advertising.

A glance at the mail every morning would indicate that most exhibitors are already interested in the possibility of securing Triangle Plays for their patrons. If you knew the financial advantage to be derived you too would be inquiring for particulars regarding the presentation of TRIANGLE PLAYS.

If you have not already received particulars why not use the coupon below.

RESERVE SEATS MONTHS IN ADVANCE FOR BIG FOUR PRODUCTIONS

BUSINESS is like friendship—sensitive. It goes only where invited—stays only where well treated.

Below is a letter from Joseph Heim, Proprietor of the Luna Theatre, Danville, Pa., which explains, in part, why one exhibitor is giving his business to V-L-S-E. Read it, and then read what the Big Four service is accomplishing for Mr. Heim:

Luna Theatre,
JOS. HEIM, Prop.,

Danville, Pa.,

V. L. S. E. Inc..
New York City.

Gentlemen:

I have used in the past few months seventeen or eighteen of your photoplays, and wish to congratulate you on the quality of same.

I have turned patrons away with nearly every show, and being so well pleased, wish to acknowledge to you my appreciation and good wishes.

My policy is that nothing but the best is good enough for my patrons.

The treatment accorded me by your Philadelphia office, is excellent and fair. Your service in every particular is the best I have had in all my fours years experience in this business.

Yours very truly,

Jos Heim

Not only Mr. Heim's satisfaction with V-L-S-E productions, but that of his patrons prompted the above letter.

Mr. Heim can tell you now what his receipts will be on Tuesdays for months to come.

They have set the seal of approval upon these pictures to the extent that every seat in the Luna Theatre has been reserved for afternoon and evening performances on every Tuesday, when Big Four features are shown, for the rest of the season.

In other words, by reason of the superior drawing powers of V-L-S-E pictures,

Just one illustration of the V-L-S-E's treatment of business, and why, notwithstanding this company's liberal open-booking policy, it probably has fewer cancellations than were ever before known in the film industry.

If you seek to surround your theatre with the safeguards enjoyed by Mr. Heim, the list of branch offices on the last page of this advertisement, provides the means for you to gain such security.

Gentlemen:

On Saturday February 5th we had our first Anniversary at the Sorg. We tried an experiment, which we think is the acid test of merit. We had booked "THOU SHALT NOT COVET", after seeing the picture, and wanted to see how much confidence our patrons had in the V. L. S. E. Program. We did nothing in the way of advertising except run two slides. As you know, this is not our regular method of presenting your productions, but we wanted to see just what influence the name V. L. S. E. had with the public.

WE DID A CAPACITY BUSINESS ALL DAY.

The reason is we have always made V. L. S. E. our magnet, not any certain production or producer but the program as a whole. We will certainly bring "THOU SHALT NOT COVET" back at the first opportunity, as it was one of the most pleasing pictures we have ever shown. The acting of Kathlyn Williams and Tyrone Power is beyond criticism.

Our big house is one block from the main street. We get ten cents straight at all times, while our competitors, with a better location, are showing the so-called "$2.00 pictures" for five cents. We are doing the business of the town, and cannot tell you how glad we are for having secured the V. L. S. E. program. The other service is no competition whatever to us, and we shall continue, as we have in the past, featuring V. L. S. E., feeling sure that you will give us the very finest productions obtainable.

Thanking you for your courteous treatment, and again assuring you that I am an enthusiastic V. L. S. E. "booster", I am,

Very sincerely yours,

That Action at Albany

THE recent convention at Albany, of the exhibitors of the State of New York—a very successful and important gathering—was marred by a single and most deplorable action.

By a vote of 185 to 5 a resolution to confer through committee with the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America was voted down.

* * *

WORDS can scarcely express, the chagrin which must be felt over this nearsighted action by everyone who holds above petty selfishness the broad and true interests of this industry.

I, for one, am sore clear through, and I want to go on record as such, stating the facts as I know them, and see them.

* * *

MOTION PICTURE NEWS takes this occasion to thank and to congratulate the five exhibitors who believe in co-operation and in a unified industry. They are Lee A. Ochs, Samuel H. Trigger, S. L. Rothapfel, J. N. Hartstall, of New York City, and Wm. Donlon, of Utica.

TO the 185 exhibitors whose overwhelming vote killed the resolution, I have nothing as specific to say. If I did, I would not hesitate to say it for any reasons of policy in connection with this publication.

It is scarcely to be conceived that these men, by their vote, meant to indicate that they do not believe in a unified industry; that, in this respect, they take a stand against the policies of all other standard industries and, indeed, against the policy of the government of the United States; that they feel absolutely secure against censorship, unjust legislation, and every other business menace; that they need no help.

SUCH a stand is not only in direct opposition to all modern business, modern intelligence, modern civilization, but is directly opposed to the principles of the Exhibitors' League of America and of New York State, to the declaration of these principles as printed on the banquet menu cards at the convention.

I need cite only one: "A house divided against itself cannot stand."

EQUALLY, it is scarcely to be conceived that these 185 exhibitors were flatfootedly opposed to, were harshly critical of the new organization which we have worked so hard to promote, from which we hope so much for—for the exhibitor—and which we call the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

How could any one be so minded when no one of these 185 exhibitors has ever attended a single meeting of the Board of Trade?

SOME one person or persons, there, must have swayed this large vote.

If so, I can state and do state, that he or they did it with the most arrant misrepresentations, with misrepresentations that call for the condemnation equally of the industry at large and the exhibitors at Albany who were misled.

One can only be led to wonder just what individual and selfish motives prompted such a spirit of misguidance.

BE fair, gentlemen. Consider a moment. What is the Board of Trade? How did it start and grow?

Why in just the same way that every local or State League has started and grown.

The Board of Trade movement was launched at the New York Convention of 1913, revived at the Dayton Convention, and finally accomplished a few months ago.

IT is successful. It is going to be more successful and do fine things for the exhibitor, whether he wants them or not.

* * *

A number of men have fought and bled for it. They have given freely of their time and gone heavily in to their pockets with not an axe to grind; not a single direct benefit received. Their spirit is exactly the same as that behind Fred. J. Herrington, who is trying so hard and well to make a national organization of exhibitors; the same as that behind every officer of and worker in every State League; the same spirit identically that moved each of you 185 exhibitors to go to Albany.

I HAVE attended every executive meeting of the Board of Trade. I know in detail everything talked about, planned, accomplished within and without these meetings.

I know these things as no man at Albany did. And I want to state that never have I witnessed any politics, any favoritism. I have only seen a spirit of fairness, impartiality and broadness, of sincere consideration of the exhibitor and his extreme importance to this industry.

In my opinion, and in the opinion of every man who knows, the Board of Trade is the finest thing that has happened in this industry.

I am deeply suspicious of any well-informed man who says otherwise.

That Action at Albany

CONSIDER, again, gentlemen. Don't stand off and look at the Board of Trade—even with your honest eyes open. Be in it and look out from it. Why aren't you in it? Why not, as well as I?

You're a part of it, if you consider yourself a part of this industry and its future. It's your Board of Trade.

This publication is an exhibitors' journal. Like any publication, it is conducted in the readers' interest. The exhibitor is our reader; therefore, the exhibitors' cause is our cause. The exhibitor comes first. It shouldn't be necessary to state this.

* * *

THIS is plain business. We don't weep about it or preach about it; we don't lick boots or pass the hat. We are putting out a paper in the exhibitors' interest, to increase and conserve his business. When we cease to do this, well and honestly, we won't have any readers. We want to be an exhibitors' paper.

* * *

WE believe in Local Leagues, State Leagues and in a unified National League. We have spent thousands of dollars in promoting exhibitor organizations and, thanked or not, we shall continue just the same. We told Fred. J. Herrington, after his election at San Francisco, that we were for him and we are. We shall continue our help.

And just so we shall continue our support of the Board of Trade, because we believe, we know, that it is highly necessary to the exhibitor and his industry at large.

* * *

TO-DAY, in Great Britain, the industry is crying out for a Board of Trade. They have a manufacturers' organization, a renters' organization, an exhibitors' organization. The latter is much stronger than our National League, because in that small and compact country it is much easier to achieve national organization. Yet against the common menace of heavy taxes and other evils, they have no big united force to fight with, and they are envious of our American Board of Trade.

And here, in Albany, with worse legislation right at our doors, we are voting against unity; we are striving to maintain a divided house, we are elevating the standard of petty rancor and downright selfishness.

LET it stop—now. Follow the lead of North Carolina and Indiana, who have voted to co-operate with the Board of Trade—and the other state and local leagues which will follow them.

For we believe they will follow, and we believe that eventually we shall have a clear understanding and close co-operation between every exhibitor organization and the National League and between all exhibitor organizations and the Board of Trade. We believe this just as we believe in the sincerity and intelligence of the worth-while exhibitor.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSTON.

The Exhibitor and the Board of Trade

WE would advise every exhibitor to read, thoughtfully and carefully, the resolution passed by the directors of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, and which is reproduced in this issue.

It ought to be very suggestive to members of the various state leagues. It ought to have something very important to say to those misguided and short-sighted members of the exhibitor organization who permit their habitual suspicion of the producer to get the better of their common-sense.

* * *

THE Board of Trade cannot force co-operation down an exhibitor's throat. But one of two things is true; either the Board is sincere—or it is not. Why not find out which is true—if you have any doubts in the matter? If you were playing poker, and you thought your opponent was bluffing, you would call him.

In this case, it doesn't cost you anything to "call."

Why not display at least as much sense in your own business affairs as you would at the card-table?

Dropping the Fatal Word

IT is gratifying to note that several producing companies have begun wisely to omit the word "censorship" from the National Board's trailers at the end of their films.

The word censorship in the title of the National Board was always a thorn in the flesh of the producer. It was originally intended to still the yelling agitators outside the business, but it has of late recoiled.

* * *

WE are still busy trying to explain to those who prefer not to understand why the National Board of Censorship, so-called, is not a censorship board. It was plain enough to those very persons who now pretend to be mystified, when they complained that state censorship was necessary because "The National Board had not authority to enforce its decisions." Now they cannot, for the life of them, remember that characteristic of the situation, and insist that we should have no objection to censorship from without because, say they, we submit to it from within.

Such an argument is like telling a man, because you have found a rat-trap in his house, that he should have no objection to boarding a herd of fox-terriers.

Indianapolis Will Apply for League Membership

Move Was Decided Upon at Convention Held at Hotel Severin on March 2-3—Rembusch Is Elected President; Lipps, Vice President; Rhodes, Secretary, and Gavin, Treasurer—Principal Addresses Made by Binder and New Head of the Organization

Special to Motion Picture News

Indianapolis, March 11.

THE most successful motion picture exhibitors convention in Indiana was held Thursday and Friday, March 2 and 3, by the Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors, at the Hotel Severin, which closed with a ball and entertainment Friday evening at Tomlinson Hall, when seven photoplayers were present in person.

The most important business transacted at the convention was the election of new officers, and the adoption of a resolution providing that the state body should apply for a charter in the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America.

The new officers elected follow: President, Frank J. Rembusch, Shelbyville; vice-president, William Lipps, Alexandria; secretary, J. M. Rhodes, Indianapolis; treasurer, Joseph Gavin, Indianapolis. Mr. Gavin also is president of the Indianapolis Exhibitors League.

The convention opened Thursday afternoon. The program at the afternoon session was informal. The principal addresses were made by J. W. Binder and Frank J. Rembusch. Brief talks also were made by S. H. Grimes, of Crawfordsville and Harry Weiss, of Chicago, representative of the Metro program. General conditions in the motion picture industry and particularly the work being done by the motion picture board of trade was the theme of Mr. Binder's address, who said to the exhibitors in part:

"The Motion Picture Board of Trade of America now includes in its membership the producers of 91 per cent. of all the motion pictures shown in the United States and the distributors are represented to the extent of 78 per cent. of the total business.

"In the motion picture business the exhibitor is the great factor; he can make or break a production.

"The exhibitors should have cohesive organizations and work together for the good of the industry and themselves; no sacrifice is too great to make in order that a strong organization of this kind may be obtained."

"Competition" Not "Opposition"

Mr. Weiss also urged organization and co-operation, and the substitution of the word "competition" for "opposition" in the relation of exhibitors toward each other.

Richard Travers, of the Essanay company, made a brief speech to the audience that witnessed an entertainment in the assembly room of the hotel in the evening.

The keynote of the discussions throughout the convention was the necessity for motion picture exhibitors to cease "knifing" each other, and to band together for the good of the business—particularly to do all in their power to prevent the establishment of a Federal censorship of motion pictures.

Addresses were made Friday afternoon by Jacob W. Binder, Harry Weiss, and Hector Fuller, dramatic editor of the Indianapolis Star.

Short talks also were made by a number of the exhibitors on the problems that continually confront the proprietor of a motion picture theatre.

Mr. Weiss told of some of the many difficulties of the film manufacturer, whom he likened to the ham in a ham sandwich, with the exchange on one side and the exhibitor on the other.

He said that one of the greatest troubles with the motion picture business is that there are a great many persons engaged in it who know nothing whatever about it, and who make it difficult for their competitors to do business.

He deplored the custom of demanding varying prices from exhibitors, and said that the films ought to be rented to all exhibitors at the same price, regardless of the size of the theatre.

Screen Displacing Stage Plays

Mr. Fuller, in his address, called attention to the great future of the motion picture, and spoke of the manner in which it has displaced the spoken drama.

J. R. Gadbury, motion picture editor of the Indianapolis News, and correspondent of Motion Picture News, gave a short talk, urging truthfulness in advertising the pictures.

He said not all the pictures produced were the best pictures produced and asked the exhibitors to forget some of the superlative adjectives they ordinarily use.

He said there were poor pictures produced by all the different leading producing companies.

Several of the photoplayers who came to attend the entertainment and ball in the evening were present at the business session in the afternoon.

The convention sessions were held on the thirteenth floor of the hotel. The twelfth floor had been reserved for exhibits of the local exchanges and accessory companies.

Among the exchanges who had exhibits were: General, World, Pathé, Mutual, Metro. The Paramount, Fox, Triangle were not represented.

W. A. Ratz, manager of the Indianapolis office of the World Film Corporation, one of the livest wire exchange men in Indianapolis, demonstrated that he was a live wire at the convention. Mr. Ratz put in an exhibit at his personal expense consisting of printed matter, photographs, decorated in attractive style in the rooms.

W. F. Hurst, Indianapolis manager of the Pathé company, also a live wire, made things real in the Pathé exhibit by having a caged red rooster on display.

Ball Attended by 1,800

It was estimated that about 1,800 persons attended the ball held at Tomlinson Hall. Music was provided by a large orchestra, and several specialties were given.

Charles C. Pyle, equipped with a megaphone, introduced the photoplayers to the audience. Many of the persons present did not dance, but attended to see some of the photoplayers in person.

Those present at the ball and entertainment were: Leah Baird, Vitagraph; Bryant Washburn, Ruth Stonehouse, Richard C. Travers, of the Essanay; Mary Miles Minter, Metro; Margaret Gibson and Elaine Ivan, David Horsley productions.

Five thousand tickets for the ball had been issued, the admission price being one dollar.

Mary Miles Minter stayed over in Indianapolis Saturday and appeared at the Colonial theatre in the afternoon and evening in person.

She held a reception of children in the afternoon and also appeared twice in the evening. This caused the Colonial theatre, which shows Metro pictures, to be crowded afternoon and evening.

A large part of the credit for the success of the convention and ball is due Frank J. Rembusch, the screen man, of Shelbyville, Ind.

He worked early and late to make the convention a success and the publicity committee received the hearty co-operation of all of the Indianapolis newspapers.

J. R. Gadbury.

MEEKER, PICTOGRAPH EDITOR, TAKES VACATION

George R. Meeker, editor in chief of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine of the screen, and the first serious attempt to visualize the thoughts of America's greatest thinkers and to teach vital subjects through the medium of the screen, has been granted a two-weeks' leave of absence, to recuperate from the arduous duties with which he has been confined during the past few months.

Mr. Meeker has given to the motion picture industry "the first new thing" in a number of years. Mr. Meeker will spend his vacation at Palm Beach.

Upon Mr. Meeker's return to New York next month, he will take up a variety of interesting subjects to be portrayed upon the screen through the Pictographs.

"DEFENSE OR TRIBUTE?" SENT ON ROAD BY PUBLIC SERVICE CO.

Immediately after the five-reel historical drama, "Defense or Tribute?" closed its two-weeks' run at the Park theatre, Columbus Circle, New York, the Public Service Film Company started to send out companies in New York State, Connecticut, Pennsylvania and other parts of the country.

The picture has the support and advocacy of newspapers in various parts of the country, which advocate military preparedness.

The New York Tribune has selected the picture to assist Marjorie Sterrett, the little Brooklyn girl who conceived the idea of building a battleship from dime contributions, in her ambition.

News Writers and Artists Dined by Board of Trade

Cartoonists and Newspaper Men Connected with New York Dailies See 5,000 Feet of Film Made Up From Scenes Cut Out of Pictures by Order of Censors—Arthur Brisbane Creates Stir By Speech Declaring Censorship Is Necessary—J. Robert Rubin in Reply

A HEARTFELT protest against censorship and the methods of censors was voiced Sunday night March 12, at a dinner given by the Motion Picture Board of Trade at the Hotel Astor, New York.

The dinner was given to the newspaper writers and cartoonists of New York, and several unique features were provided to impress upon the guests the ridiculous side of the censoring of motion picture films.

Chief among these was a showing of about five thousand feet of film made up of scenes cut out of completed pictures by the Philadelphia and Ohio censors. The film was arranged by Terry Ramsaye, of the Mutual Film Corporation, and was hailed by shouts of delight from an appreciative audience.

Arthur James presided, and with him at the guest table were J. W. Binder, John R. Freuler, J. Stuart Blackton, J. Robert Rubin, Herbert S. Houston, Charles Urban, William M. Seabury and Arthur Brisbane.

Mr. Brisbane, who was introduced as the first speaker, created something of a stir by demonstrating the attitude of those who favor censorship. He declared that censorship was necessary, and then explained his attitude by the statement that he knew nothing of motion pictures, and never went to see them.

Rubin Answers Brisbane

J. Robert Rubin answered Mr. Brisbane's strictures on the motion picture in a dignified and convincing manner, and was warmly applauded by the 250 men assembled. William M. Seabury and Herbert S. Houston also attacked the evil.

"Moving pictures," said Mr. Rubin, "are no longer clap-trap melodramas. Our entertainments are arranged in programs containing news events, cartoons, travel pictures, and the highest type of drama. In this profession there is being used the best thought of the best literary men.

"The motion picture today is a school in itself. It has made men wiser and humanity broader. It is the greatest food for mankind since the telephone. The people have not taken the interest in the censor question that they should.

"The censor is the child of autocracy, nurtured by tyranny and despotism. The tool of these vices—the censorship of the motion picture—today, means the censorship of the press tomorrow.

"The motion picture of today speaks to the people and expresses the best sentiments of the people. The gag rule of the censors, who are wofully ignorant of the business they are pretending to regulate, should not be tolerated."

Menus for the dinner, prepared by T. M. Alexander, secretary of the publication committee of the Board of Trade, announced: "The Fifth Estate dines the Fourth Estate."

Among the noted artists present were Harry Grant Dart, J. R. Bray, Rollin Kirby, George Herriman, "Tad" Dorgan, L. A. Searl, L. M. Glackens, F. Opper, Thomas McNamara, George Brinckerhoff, and others.

Arthur James, the toastmaster, said in introducing the speakers:

"The Fifth Estate, the motion picture, reaches out to its older brother, the Fourth Estate, and asks co-operation in resisting the destroyer of art, the foe of progress, the common enemy, the Censor.

"The spoken, the written, the drawn, the sculptured, the painted, the acted word, alike in their common purpose, the expression of thought, cry out against the oppression of those who seek to make all men conform to the narrow confines of their bigotry, their undevelopment, their prejudices and can't. To yield at all to censorship is to put our mental, our artistic, our very moral liberty into the keeping of others. Our physical freedom was worth dying for a century ago; surely our greater freedom of thought and its expression is worth fighting for today.

"Censorship is without the shadow of a defense among a civilized and an enlightened people. We readily concede, or I might better say, we proclaim that morals on the screen differ not at all from morals of the spoken drama, of the newspaper and of the pulpit. We believe with all other men who have a thought for the uprightness of the community in which they live, that there are proper rules governing public exhibitions and amusements, and to such proper regulation we cordially subscribe.

"But censorship, whether it be the censorship of the daily newspaper, or of the pulpit, or of the motion picture, we solemnly, earnestly, indignantly resent because we know of no man or group of men great enough, god-like enough, to take our art and enslave it and make it do their bidding."

Mr. Brisbane said in part:

"For your own business, I will say to those of you who have invited the Fourth Estate to come here tonight, including myself, I will say that I know very little. I am one of the few living men who has never seen Mary Pickford (laughter) or Charles Chaplin, or Theda Bara, or Miss Clark—I believe she comes in there. All I have seen is the Durbar and Scott's South Pole pictures and "Carmen," which I couldn't escape because it was given in Mr. Hearst's house and I happened to be a guest there. (Laughter.) Furthermore I never read the Family Story Paper or the Ledger when I was a boy, and I do not see why I should see Theda Bara or Mary Pickford, in "Rags," I believe it is, in my old age. (Laughter and applause.) I have great respect for the men who are developing the financial value and the real genius of those people, but I don't think that I should be bothered about it.

Gives Views on Censorship

"Now, as to the censorship—there are only a few things that I want to say anything about—and as to the censorship, I do not think I can become very much excited about it. There will be no censorship without the consent of a majority of the people of the United States, and I do not think that they will consent to any very extensive or universal censorship. The moving picture, so far as it is merely a melodrama, a story, a tragedy, or a joke, a comedy, it is only a money-making proposition, and whether it is censored or not I don't in the least care. That part of the work is only in its infancy, and as I say, I don't care in the least as to whether it is censored or not. But the censorship of the moving picture will become an established fact, and it may in the future be a very serious matter because at the present time the moving picture, all it amounts to today, at least the modern moving picture, is that it is an amusement, and its success is based upon the stupidity and lack of intellectual development of the human race. (Laughter and applause.)

Pictures to Be Factors in Politics

"One of the big factors in politics, if it were used, and I believe it is going to be, would be the moving picture. I believe that in the next campaign the man that studies this and uses genius to get at the facts will find it a very large factor in the result. For instance if they take what I believe you call a 'close-up' picture of some of the things which may happen, you will do something worth while.

"If you put those pictures out the people will look at them and see them and believe them. Those are pictures which I would not like to see censored. I think the censorship of ordinary things is not a menace. The things that need censorship are not the ordinary things. You don't need to do things out of the ordinary in order to make your business succeed or to gain popularity."

Establishing Standards

"I made a memorandum here on my card that you could make more money out of a Childs Restaurant than you could out of the old Haymarket. The only thing is that it takes a certain amount of ability and persistence to make money out of a Childs Restaurant, but it don't take very much to hire a woman to degrade herself and give an indecent exhibition.

"Now, one of the things that you want to establish is standards. Establish something, so that it will become and be a standard for your business. One of the great purposes, I believe, to which the moving picture can be put is that of education, educational films.

"It is a great business, of course, with great big forces moving it, but its great work is for the future. Why, every school in the world will soon be teaching by the moving picture.

"The moving picture will make intellectual digestion absolutely perfect. It will be Uniform Copyright Laws for Films in the Americas

Paul Cromelin of Cosmofotofilm Company Prepares Statement on Behalf of the Industry for Use of the International High Commission, Composed of Representatives of the United States and the South American Nations, Who Will Convene in Buenos Aires, April 3-15

THE International High Commission, composed of representatives of the governments of the United States and the South American nations, which will meet at Buenos Aires, April 3 to 15, will take up, among other questions affecting Pan-America, the problem of uniform copyright laws for literary and artistic productions, in which motion pictures are included.

Paul H. Cromelin, of the Cosmofotofilm Company, has prepared for the Commission a statement on behalf of the industry respecting this important question, and it has been endorsed by the Motion Picture Board of Trade, at whose request Mr. Cromelin prepared the statement.

W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, is chairman of the United States section of the Commission, which sailed March 8 on the battleship Tennessee for Buenos Aires.

The United States representatives requested that Mr. Cromeline's statement be printed, and will bring it before the convention at Buenos Aires.

The principal matter to be discussed with regard to copyright is the desirability of reaffirming the principles embodied in the Fourth International American Conference Convention on Literary and Artistic Copyright signed at Buenos Aires, August 11, 1910.

The reaffirmation of these principles is urged by Mr. Cromelin, and in particular the ratification as soon as possible of the convention of 1910 by those South American Governments which have not yet ratified it.

More Business with South America

After detailing the extraordinary growth of the motion picture industry in the United States, Mr. Cromelin points out that, as relations with our Pan-American neighbors develop, the South American market will be more and more cultivated by North American manufacturers, and that this will undoubtedly require "that the best in literature and story in those respective countries be eventually produced in the form of motion pictures."

In this connection, Mr. Cromelin urges that certain amendments to the convention of 1910 are highly desirable, so far as the picture industry is concerned.

The chief of these has to do with the question of copyright registration, which, because of its lack of uniformity, operates as a menace to the manufacturer.

That is, a manufacturer may make a picture of a story which originated in one of the countries signatory to the convention of 1910. Under the terms of Article 3 of that convention:

"The acknowledgment of a copyright obtained in one state, in conformity with its laws, shall produce its effects of full right in the other states without the necessity of complying with any other formality, provided always there shall appear in the work a statement that indicates the reservation of the property right."

This means that citizens of those countries, without having to register in the United States, are entitled to all the benefits of our copyright law; and the manufacturer may be innocently infringing a copyright of a work by a South American, and be liable to damages therefor.

There is no way for a manufacturer to tell from what may be a typewritten scenario of an unlawfully typed copy of the work offered him that it is a work in which copyright subsists."

Innocent Infringement Serious

Quoting Section 25 of the Copyright Law of the United States regarding damages recoverable in the case of an innocent infringement, Mr. Cromelin remarks that "even with the limitations made by our law the consequences of an infringement may be very, very serious.

It is not this alone, however, but the remedies which the copyright owner may have in damages when the motion picture is brought into his own country or into the other countries of the Union, which makes it serious for the manufacturer or his assignee.

In many of these countries the damages assessed are not limited and although a manufacturer was quite innocent of the fact that he was using another person's copyrighted property, he would be compelled to pay dearly for it and in addition have his property confiscated.

"We believe the convention should be amended in a way to provide for a system of registration and an exchange by the various nations adhering to the Pan-American convention from time to time of a complete list of copyright registrations filed with them, these to be published in a manner similar to that followed by the Register of Copyrights at Washington under the name of 'Copyright Entry Books.'"

Mr. Cromelin then endorses an amendment to Article 3 of the convention, as proposed by the Victor Talking Machine Company, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., and the Columbia Graphophone Company.

The amendment states: And provided that no copyright owner shall be entitled to enforce any claim for infringement of his copyrighted work in a signatory state occurring prior to the filing of an entry of such copyright in the copyright office of such signatory state by the copyright office of the signatory state in which such copyright was originally granted, and the copyright office of each signatory state shall be required to forward to the copyright offices of each of the other signatory states, each month a complete list of copyright registrations effected during the preceding month."

This amendment is believed to be necessary "in order to avoid international legal difficulties, involving, necessarily, great expense and possible damages."

"In conclusion," says Mr. Cromelin's statement, "we commend to your serious consideration the clauses in the United States Copyright Law as amended by Act of August 24, 1912, relating to motion pictures.

"We believe that if there is uncertainty on the part of the representatives of other Pan-American countries as to the kind of internal legislation they should originate in their respective countries covering the copyrighting of motion pictures; they might well make use of the experience we have gained and adopt and make a part of their copyright law the good feature of our law to the extent this could possibly be done. This would be a strong move in the direction of uniformity of laws respecting an important division of the law relating to copyright and would of necessity in the last analysis prove of benefit to all concerned."

George Beban in "Pasquale" for Morosco Company

Star of "An Alien," Based on His Famous Vaudeville Sketch, "The Sign of the Rose," Collaborates on Script with Lawrence McClosky

GEORGE BEBAN, portrayer of Italian characters, is now busily engaged in the production of his initial photoplay subject for the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company "Pasquale," an original play written by himself in collaboration with Lawrence McClosky.

"Pasquale" affords Mr. Beban a screen vehicle in which he will bring out the quaint character of the poor Italian such as we see in everyday life along Mulberry Street, New York.

The subject will also have bearing upon the present war in Europe and various actual scenes of battle involving the Italian army, with others showing the manoeuvers of a fleet of Zeppelins are included in the production.

Supporting the star, The Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company presents a cast including such artists as Myrtle Stedman, Helen Eddy, Page Peters, Jack Nelson and Nigol deBrullier.

William D. Taylor, whose recent work in "He Fell In Love With His Wife" has won him considerable attention on the part of both trade and public, has been selected to direct the photoplay, while Homer Scott will officiate at the camera.

The release of "Pasquale" on the Paramount Program will mark the return of George Beban to this brand, his former productions "The Italian" and "An Alien" having been materially responsible for his present popularity with the motion picture public.

THANHOUSER MAKES CONTRIBUTION TO SHAKESPEARE TERCENTENARY

The coming Shakespeare Tercentenary will find itself enriched by a contribution from Edwin Thanhouser of New Rochelle. Frederick Sullivan, the Thanhouser director, is now at work on a production which will be released during the celebration.

The only information that can be gained about the production just now is that it is an imaginative work of Philip Lonergan, and will very likely be in three reels.

Mr. Thanhouser attaches so much importance to the value of the production that he has designated Florence La Badie to play the star role.

The story will be the first work touching on Shakespeare so directly without being founded on any of the poet's work.

It is purely a fanciful arrangement of events in which Shakespeare himself is impersonated as are also the people of his time.

It has been seen fit to devise a special vehicle in order to depart from the usual recognized but heavily burdened Shakespearean conceptions.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN ORGANIZES MUSIC COMPANY FOR OWN SONGS

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 11.

The Charlie Chaplin Music Company, composed of Charles and Sidney Chaplin and Herbert Clark, has been organized and has opened an office in Los Angeles.

The purpose of this company is to popularize the music written by the well known comedian. The selections published to date including "Oh, That Cello," "There's Always One You Can't Forget" and "The Peace Patrol."

Cleveland Theatres Keen on "Family Programs"

Club Women Want Bills to Include Something of Interest to Adult as Well as Juvenile Members of the Household and Specially Selected Subjects at Each Performance

Special to Motion Picture News

Cleveland, O., March 11.

CLEVELAND and its populous residential suburbs, Lakewood and East Cleveland, are paying much attention to the question of children's matinees.

The efforts of the managements of the Alhambra, Wind-a-Meer, Monarch and Lakewood theatres to popularize special children's entertainments are quite apart from the movement of the Cleveland Federation of Women's Clubs to arrange what they call "family programs."

The club women want to arrange programs which will include something that will interest adult as well as juvenile members of the family.

They want their specially selected programs to be given at each performance from Friday night to Sunday night.

Their experiment provides for a six weeks' test at neighborhood houses to be chosen later. They are still working with members of the Exhibitors League to select a number of dramas, comedies, cartoons and travelogs they consider suitable for such programs.

Their plans provide for review of a number of old pictures recommended by the exhibitors and for the renting of new prints of such pictures as they approve.

This, of course, is in addition to such new films as they can get on terms which will make them available for the "family programs."

The present children's matinees at the Alhambra, Wind-a-Meer and Monarch theatres usually include the current feature film and a number of smaller things suitable for children's performances.

The Alhambra, for instance, has included such pictures as "Rumpelstiltskin," "Robin Hood" and "The Kingdom of Noseyland," in its program, but the venture at this theatre recently received a setback when a number of parents protested to the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the Northern Ohio paper which for months has waged a relentless crusade against the unwholesome type of picture, against the inclusion of Pathé's "New York" in a children's matinee program.

The Alhambra management frankly admitted it had made an error of judgment, but, while assuring patrons of its intention to exercise greater care in future, deplored a dearth of pictures suitable for children.

Perhaps the most promising children's matinee plan yet introduced in Cleveland is that of the Lakewood theatre.

The management has made an arrangement with the Thimble and Book Club of that district which provides that the programs shall be selected by the members of the club and the Board of Education.

The performance is to commence at 10:30 a. m. and beginning next Saturday, the selected programs for the children of the neighborhood will be given on three successive Saturday mornings.

If the patronage accorded warrants it, the Saturday morning children's matinee will be a permanent feature.

Recently an effort was made to arrange children's matinees at the Metropolitan theatre, the best photoplay house in Cleveland. A number of club women were behind this movement, but it is stated that the proposal fell through because the women were unable to agree on the policy or scope of the entertainment.

It is interesting to note, however, that the subject of children's matinees is attracting greater attention in all parts of the city and that all the big houses are exercising greater care in the selection of their week end programs.

Charles Chaplin Is On Way to California for Mutual

Famous Comedian with the Wonderful Pedal Extremities Is Accompanied by His Brother Sydney, and Makes a First Class "Chaplin Exit" from New York

CHARLES CHAPLIN is on his way to California. The Mutual's comedian left Thursday on the Twentieth Century for Chicago, where he proposed to spend a few days before proceeding to Los Angeles.

Chaplin was accompanied by his brother Sydney and Henry P. Caufield, who takes general charge of the studios being prepared for Chaplin in Los Angeles. Chaplin's departure was not attended by any ceremony, but he made a first-class "Chaplin exit" from New York.

The other members of the party were waiting in the Grand Central station and train time was at hand, while Chaplin lingered with his farewells to Broadway which began with a call at the office of President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation and continued uptown to the Plaza.

The Century was on the dot of departure when Chaplin dashed through the station concourse at top speed, plunged and skidded down the train shed and flipped over the rail on the observation coach, the story goes.

"In departing I want to emphatically deny that the Essanay company is holding a large stock of unreleased films of my productions," said Mr. Chaplin. "There are to come from this company only two two-reel releases—'Carmen' and another which has had the working title of 'Police.'

"I am glad to be on my way to California. I've had a bully time in New York and I have enjoyed every minute of it, but now I feel like going back to work again.

"As I have so often said, I have felt that this was to be my big year. I know it is going to be.

"I am pleased with the terms of this contract beyond the somewhat important financial return.

"It means that my efforts will get before all the people, that my pictures will have adequate distribution through the Mutual's system of sixty-eight exchanges."

HAMILTON APPOINTED TO CENSOR BOARD IN DALLAS

William Hamilton has been appointed a member of the board of appeals at Dallas, Tex., succeeding John S. Aldehoff, resigned. The board of appeals has the last say in censorship in Dallas.

ROACH, ROLIN PRESIDENT, RETURNS TO WEST COAST

Hal E. Roach, president and director-general of the Rolin Film Company, of Los Angeles, returned to the Pacific Coast late last week after an extended stay in the East on business connected with the comedy releases of his company on the program of Pathé Exchange, Inc.

Mr. Roach, before taking the transcontinental train, pronounced his visit a complete success from every standpoint, praised Pathé for the smoothness of the relations they had maintained with him, and expressed his determination to make "bigger and better pictures."

While not at liberty to publish any details of the plans agreed to between the Pathé heads and himself, Mr. Roach intimated that they were in the highest degree satisfactory to him, and that Rolin productions would be even more popular a feature of the Pathé program than in the past.

"Dumb Girl of Portici" for State Rights is "U" Plan

Inquiries From All Over the Country for Price of Picture on That Basis Influence the Board of Directors—Decision Is Made to Dispose of Film to Highest Bidder—McMahan and Jackson Get Ohio; C. L. Hertzman, Michigan; and N. A. Magner, California

THREE STIRRING GROUP SCENES FROM THE ELABORATE PAVLOWA-SMALLEY-UNIVERSAL MULTIPLE

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company and Anna Pavlowa, co-partners in "The Dumb Girl of Portici," have decided to release this production under the State rights proposition

So many requests coming to the offices of the Universal asking prices for certain states, that the matter was brought before the board of directors, to which the Pavlowa representative was invited.

After some discussion and consideration of the several applications already made for state rights, it was finally decided to sell state rights to the highest bidders.

Many bids were received without solicitation, while a great many other live exchange men and state rights bookers wrote in, asking the Universal's price for their respective territories.

This prompted the officials of the Universal to give consideration to the releasing of the Pavlowa-Smalley's feature on the state rights basis.

The Picture Makes Big Hit

The satisfaction which "The Dumb Girl of Portici" created among theatre-goers generally and the popularity it attained during its showing at the Colonial theatre in Chicago, prompted the leading newspapers of the Western metropolis to give it more extensive publicity than was accorded even great and successful plays of the legitimate stage.

Half page reviews, profusely illustrated with dancing poses of Pavlowa, as well as many scenes taken from the motion picture, adorned the front pages of several Chicago publications, while the motion picture pages were overflowing.

Although Pavlowa is the leading light in this picture, in which she portrays the role of Fenella, the dumb girl, it is far from a single central figure picture.

The story carries no less than a dozen characters, all very important to the careful development of the play, and each person was chosen for the respective part with the greatest of care by Lois Weber, who adapted the scenario of "The Dumb Girl of Portici" from Auber's opera, "Masaniello," a story of the strife in Italy during the seventeenth century when the land was under the rule of the Spanish viceroys.

Such motion picture stars as Rupert Julian, Wadsworth Harris, Douglas Gerrand, John Holt, Edna Maison, Lois Wilson, Laura Oakley and Hart Hoxie supported Mlle. Pavlowa in the careful denouement of the plot.

The press of Chicago was unanimous in proclaiming this one of the greatest supporting casts ever accorded a leading star in a motion picture production.

Amazed by Number of Inquiries

As the Universal had originally intended to release this Pavlowa feature through its own exchanges, it was at a loss at first to account for the continuous flow of letters asking for territory privileges.

When these became so numerous as to demand the personal attention of President Carl Laemmle, he carefully considered the possibilities of the picture and when those exhibitors who had purchased state rights on such big Universal productions as the Annette Kellermann feature, Williamson's Submarine pictures, "Neptune's Daughter" and "Damon and Pythias" offered sums in excess of those paid for such features, President Laemmle brought the matter to the attention of the board of directors.

Three states have already been sold before any announcement was made that the Universal would release the picture in this manner. These were specific offers of a certain amount for the territory desired which were accompanied by a substantial deposit in each case.

These were for Ohio, Michigan and California, McMahan and Jackson of Cincinnati obtaining the rights for the state of Ohio; C. L. Hertzman of Detroit, the rights for Michigan, while N. A. Magner of San Francisco got the California rights.

Exhibitors See "Social Pirates" Before Booking

Plan Carried Out for Bronson-Howard Serial by Kalem Meets with Success—Special Invitations Given for Showings in Theatres in Many Cities

OFFICIALS at the Twenty-third street, New York, offices of the Kalem Company are enthusiastic over the results that have accrued from the policy of allowing the exhibitor to "see the goods before he buys," which that organization established in connection with "The Social Pirates," the big new fifteen week series by George Bronson-Howard.

For the past two weeks exhibitors in all parts of the country have been viewing the first two episodes of the series, though the initial release date is only March 27.

"The Little Monte Carlo," released March 27, and "The Corsican Sisters" on April 3, are the two episodes that the exhibitors have seen.

As soon as the date of release for the first issue of the series was decided the two pictures were rushed through the factory and prints delivered to exchanges throughout the country, as soon as possible.

The managers were then urged to make every effort to have all exhibitors in their territories see the productions before the work of signing contracts was begun.

In many cities special invitation performances were given in local theatres, while in others the pictures were shown to all exhibitors who requested the privilege in the exchange projection rooms.

In New York the General Film exchange was kept busy showing the picture to small groups of exhibitors, while in addition Kalem arranged a special exhibition at Wurlitzer Fine Arts Hall last Thursday morning, which was attended by hundreds of showmen in New York and Brooklyn and the trade paper representatives.

The local exchange also arranged an exhibition for Jersey City exhibitors, which was given in that city last Sunday.

BETTS' FIRM WILL SEND BRITISH PICTURES TO AMERICA

Friends on this side have been advised of the safe arrival in England of Walter C. Betts, of the International Cinematograph Corporation, Limited, 24 Gerrard street, London, W., England.

In a letter just received by Arthur S. Kane, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, he speaks of the changes which have taken place in the industry in Great Britain during his absence of several months in this country, where he made many warm friends in the trade.

This was the first visit of Mr. Betts to America as a representative of his concern, although he had traveled this continent before.

The International expects to send a number of foremost British and continental productions over in the near future as a result of his trip.

It is one of the old established firms in the trade in the British Isles with a high reputation.

HUTCHINSON SIGNS SLOMAN TO DIRECT WINIFRED GREENWOOD

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, announces the addition to his directing staff of Edward Sloman, a director who has served in this capacity with a number of large companies.

Mr. Sloman has already arrived at Santa Barbara from the East and will begin production work immediately.

Franklin Ritchie, a newly acquired American star, and Winifred Greenwood will head the company he directs.

Mr. Sloman is a cousin of David Belasco. He was born in London, England, and educated there. He made his first appearance on the London stage when still in his teens, playing at the Pavilion theatre in Mile End Road.

His first film connection was wtth Universal, with which organization he remained two years. He then became director for the Lubin company.

Mr. Sloman will work exclusively on features.

THREE COMPANIES FOR KEYSTONE, MAKING FIFTEEN

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 11.

A number of conferences held at the Keystone studio between President Adam Kessel, Jr., Director General Mack Sennett and his numerous lieutenants, has resulted in the decision to enlarge the producing staff from twelve to fifteen companies.

It is not the intention of the company to increase the output, but the three added companies will make it possible for all directors to put in the necessary amount of time on each subject.

It requires from forty to seventy days for the making of scenes for each two-reel Keystone.

There will be no cutting down in the cost of each production, and the subjects of the future will continue to contain the elaborate sets and expensive effects that have marked them since the first release on the Triangle program.

"U" Inaugurates Scenario Contest With Magazine

Prize of $50 Is Offered by "Picture Play Magazine" for Best Original Script, and Universal Will Purchase Plots at Rate of $40 a Reel for Fuller Vehicle

A SCENARIO contest is announced by the Picture Play Magazine and the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, the winner of which will be awarded a prize of fifty dollars by the magazine, while the Universal will purchase the scenario at the rate of forty dollars per reel for as many reels as the judges consider the photoplay should run.

The contest will close at noon on June 17. It is open to individual authors only, and scripts will not be accepted from photoplay authors, schools or booksellers handling scenarios on a percentage basis.

The plot germ is what the Picture Play Magazine and the Universal are seeking. A mere synopsis will be sufficient, it is announced.

The plot must be suited to the talents of Mary Fuller, who will play the leading role in the picture, which should be a society, mystery, railroad, straight drama, or whatever the writer thinks Miss Fuller would appear in to the best advantage.

The judges will be General Manager Joe Brandt of the Universal, Clarence J. Caine, of the staff of the Picture Play Magazine, and Miss Fuller. The rules are as follows:

No manuscripts will be considerd unless accompanied by an application blank copy of which will be found in the magazine, or a copy of it in the same form; one person may send in as many plots as he or she wishes, providing a separate application blank is sent with each; the main point is the plot; write the story in synopsis form, giving the detailed action in as few words as possible.

No scenario is necessary, although it may be sent; manuscripts should be typewritten or neatly written in ink.

No definite number of reels is specified—the length depends entirely on the plot, as the judges will decide what length is suitable for the story submitted, and payment will be made accordingly.

For instance, if the picture is five reels, two hundred dollars will be given for it, while the additional special prize of fifty dollars will be paid to the winner, regardless of the length of the picture. All stories must be original and the leading character in the story must be suitable for Miss Fuller. All manuscripts must be sent to the Picture Play Magazine, Contest Department, 79-89 Seventh avenue, New York City.

General Manager Brandt announces that scenarios of merit, which are found unavailable for purposes of the contest, will be bought by the Universal at proportionate prices, if they can be used to good advantage by other producing companies of the Universal or could be purchased for other stars than Miss Fuller.

Lasky Promises More Belasco Stage Successes

Productions Will Follow "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," Featuring Mae Murray, and Are Expected to Make as Great Hits as "Girl of Golden West" and Others

THE association of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company and David Belasco in the presentation on the screen of Belasco productions has been in the past two years one of the most interesting movements in the history of the photodrama.

Announcement was made this week that other Belasco productions will be done in film versions. With Mae Murray as the star, work already has started at the Lasky studios on "Sweet Kitty Bellairs."

At the time when the feature play was young the arrangements entered into between Mr. Belasco and the Lasky company, by which the latter concern had the exclusive film rights to his noted productions, played no small part in the popularizing of the photoplay throughout the country.

Some of these productions on the screen have called forth words of the highest praise.

Now the Lasky company has recorded for all time the story of these plays and the dramatic situations which they contain.

On the screen they have been seen within the past two years by hundreds of thousands of persons throughout the country to whom Mr. Belasco's name is a household word.

While the plays were presented in dramatic form, the great distances from the larger cities kept the plays away from the very small towns.

In the score of years Mr. Belasco has maintained his place among American producers, several generations of theatregoers have come and gone.

The production of "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," in which Mae Murray is the star, will be James Young's first directed picture for the Lasky company.

The cast includes Tom Forman, James Neil, Horace B. Carpenter, Bob Gray and other members of the Lasky all-star company.

Among other plays that have come from Mr. Belasco's theatres and which have been picturized by the Lasky company are "The Warrens of Virginia," "The Woman," "The Governor's Lady," "The Case of Becky," "The Rose of the Rancho," "The Girl of the Golden West" and "The Fighting Hope."

EDITH ROBERTS MAKES DEBUT IN "MORAL FABRIC," TRIANGLE-INCE

Edith Roberts, said to be a strikingly beautiful woman, will make her film debut in "The Moral Fabric," a Triangle-Ince feature, in which Frank Mills is starred.

She appears as the wife of a wealthy and prosaic man who has no sympathy with so-called modern tendencies when they involve the breaking up of his home.

Miss Roberts has supported prominent players of the legitimate stage and has played occasional vaudeville engagements.

News of Pictures Will Bring Big Revenue to Dailies

Editorial Message to Motion Picture Editors About Their Film Pages in Daily and Sunday Newspapers, From William Fox Press "Bulletin," Points Way for Greater Profits to Publishers—Already One New York Owner Has Gained More Than $100,000 a Year in Advertising, as Result of Public Interest in Photodrama

THE importance of motion picture pages in newspapers, the means of making them profitable, and interesting to the great mass of readers is pointed out in an editorial message to motion picture editors of America in the current issue of the William Fox Press Department Bulletin.

The editorial says:

"In the world of feature film production there are certain manufacturers whose names or trade corporation names mean much to the people who pay their way into theatres.

"It will be found, beyond question or debate, that nearly all of the big, dependable companies advertise directly, in concert with the local exhibitors of the better type of pictures.

"The theatre owner in your home city is a local merchant—as much of a merchant as the man who sells you shirts, collars, neckties or groceries.

"He is selling you amusements and you buy from him the type of picture that has established itself in your mind (through earlier attendance) as always possessing strength, vigor, good photography, strong, brilliant dramatic acting, lavish staging and popular women and male stars.

Public Curious About Players

"The popularity of these players is much greater than any of us, editors or producers, really realize.

"The American public has a great curiosity. It is perpetually asking questions. It likes to have these questions answered. It wishes to know everything possible about its favorite picture-players.

"It wishes biographical matter, stories of their home life, stories of their loves, their likes and dislikes, their adventures during the making of pictures and their adventures off stage.

"A public wants to know what directors manage the favorite stars, how they rehearse, how they act and to know as directly and truthfully as possible a flood of interesting matter of this sort.

"All of the publicity matter of the Fox Film Corporation is written straight to this line. It contains the precise, yet human and colorful matter that editors of newspapers themselves would write if they suddenly found they had a star, or a local society charity on their hands to promote into success.

"In the William Fox offices thousands of newspapers are received and checked daily. Every line of motion picture copy published, no matter what company issues it, is read, checked, and some of it even filed away for a permanent record.

"This is not meant to apply merely to the papers of the larger cities. Heed is given to the papers of Salina, Kan.; to the verdict of Aurora, Ill., and the likes and dislikes of Marietta, Ga.

"For such editors as have failed to develop adequate and profitable motion pictures departments we have a message. We subdivide this message into several units, as follows:

Play Up Personality

"Play up personality. It is the most interesting thing in the world. Tell how men and women got up in the world, instead of down. Tell the story of the girl from a farm outside of Sparta, Mich., who became a great picture star and explain how she climbed up.

"Tell the story of the tailor who stood by his mother and never lost courage and became a great personality in the film producing industry. Tell the story, too, of the clothing merchant who grew to financial greatness in this big industry.

"This is impartial advice. All the big picture companies have been pushed forward by strong personalities and the men who have created such an important new industry are deserving of attention. The public is unquestionably interested in them.

"One producer here in New York is receiving close to 3,500 letters each week from the patrons of pictures (not the exhibitors) addressed to him in person and commenting on the pictures he makes, their virtues and the opportunities for even greater improvement.

Editors of Dailies Must "Cover" Pictures

"The point we wish to make is that every editor who neglects to have his paper play up motion picture news properly and intelligently is missing an opportunity to add circulation and financial revenue to his newspaper.

"What the automobile industry has meant to newspapers from the standpoint of financial profit is now being duplicated by the motion picture industry.

"And every newspaper in the country that has created an intelligent and virile picture news department already has increased its financial earnings.

"One New York publisher told the writer of this editorial the other day that motion picture advertising had put more than $100,000 a year into his business office cash drawer.

"One Western paper is running over three-quarters of a million agate lines of picture advertising a year. This is a quarter of a million lines more advertising than the same publisher receives from his largest single department store advertiser.

Liberal Attitude Necessary

"It is equally certain that any newspaper playing pictures in formal or slovenly fashion cannot hope to build up its revenues from this industry. In every town where the newspaper attitude has been either liberal or intelligent the local exhibitors (your local merchants) have made this industry a source of profit to the newspapers.

"There still are hundreds of newspapers not taking even half the available opportunity to reap profits from pictures.

"The publicity departments of the Fox Film Corporation in New York will be glad to help newspapers develop their picture news skilfully and in a manner that will bring them advertising."

Edna May Picture Ready Through V-L-S-E April 10

"Salvation Joan" Gives Former Star of "The Belle of New York," Stage Success with Long Run, Opportunity to Appear in Strong Vitagraph Role

GENERAL MANAGER WALTER W. IRWIN, of the V-L-S-E, announced last week that the Edna May picture, produced by the Vitagraph Company, in which the former star of "The Belle of New York," is featured, will be available to exhibitors on April 10.

This is the picture which Edna May is appearing in. Its title is "Salvation Joan" and gives Miss May an opportunity to again appear in the role of a Salvation Army worker in which she won such wide-spread success on the stage. The picture is in seven reels.

Mr. Irwin also announced that the title decided upon for the picturization of Albert Payson Terhune's novel, "Dollars and Cents," which elicited so much comment when it appeared in serial form in one of the popular magazines, is "Dollars and the Woman."

This has been produced by the Lubin Company under the direction of Joseph Kaufman, and features Ethel Clayton and Tom Moore. It will be released on March 20.

"The Fires of St. John," produced by the same company, which Edgar Lewis has been directing in Florida for several weeks past, and in which Nance O'Neil is starred, is scheduled for release April 3.

Lubin will follow these two features with another Daniel Carson Goodman story, entitled, "Life's Toll." Many of the scenes in this production were taken at the Ice Gardens of the Biltmore Hotel, and pictures some of society's cleverest skaters enjoying their favorite pastime.

Other scenes were filmed in the Metropolitan Opera House in Philadelphia.

BLACKWELL SIGNS LONG TERM CONTRACT WITH EQUITABLE

Carlyle Blackwell, whose first appearance as an Equitable star in "The Clarion" was one of the successes of the season, has become a permanent figure on the World-Equitable list of stellar favorites.

A long-term contract was signed under which the popular young star will appear in a new Equitable feature each month, if possible.

Mr. Blackwell is now engaged on his second Equitable picture, "The Shadow of a Doubt," under the direction of Wray Physioc at the Flushing studio.

Universal Throws Down Gauntlet Against Censors

Anti-Censorship Propaganda Includes Copies of President Laemmle's "Straight from the Shoulder Talks" and Other Material for 1,000 Newspaper Editors

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company is doing all in its power to fight federal, state and city censorship. The recent agitation over the censorship bill in Washington followed by the other smaller but no less threatening storm centers in New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania and Ohio has led this producing company to take decisive measures in an effort to defeat all forms of censorship other than the advisory editorial policy pursued by the National Board.

Every week there is sent from the New York offices of Universal effective anti-censorship propaganda.

Copies of President Laemmle's "Straight from the Shoulder Talks," as well as personal letters, and other material are being sent to the editors of at least a thousand newspapers throughout the United States.

The gist of all this material is "A free screen with no censor but the people."

Mr. Laemmle in one of his recent letters to the press of the country besought them to fight censorship of films on the same ground that they would attack newspaper censorship.

Already these messages have been reprinted in the editorial and news columns of the papers.

In the Talks by President Laemmle, printed regularly in the Moving Picture Weekly, the same topic is now being discussed above all others.

Exhibitors are warned of the seriousness of the question and are urged to take active measures to prevent further censorship activities in their localities.

With its pictures Universal has adopted a Safety First attitude. Orders have been issued to all directors in the employ of the organization to refrain from the excessive portrayal of the use of drugs and liquors. Wanton shooting and scenes depicting murder in any form are also to be barred. Scenes picturing disorderly houses or any questionable bits of action that go hand in hand with such scenes are to be eliminated unless absolutely necessary for the telling of the story.

By thus purging its program of the individual bugaboo of the professional censor, the Universal hopes to do away with the rash and unfounded demands for cut-outs made on their films in the past.

Such a course, however, will not diminish the opposition of Universal against censorship in the least. Further measures than the messages to newspapers are to be taken.

Already the Universal Animated Weekly carries a cartoon in every issue by Hy Mayer, ridiculing and attacking the weaknesses of the state and city boards and the proposed federal board.

These are planned to instill in the general public a sense of the impending danger of fanatical censorship and with the combined force of the newspaper articles an awakening on the part of the public is looked for.

The Moving Picture Weekly is also reprinting the cartoons of Winsor McKay, cartoonist for the Hearst papers, who has recently seen occasion to attack the proposed federal board of censorship.

The following excerpt from one of Mr. Laemmle's messages to the newspaper editors is of interest:

"Moving picture producers are not bad men, trying to ruin the morals of the people.

"On the contrary, they are just human beings with the same sort of red blood in their veins as other men. They want only one censor—the people.

"They don't want a handful of professional reformers to decide what pictures the people can or cannot see.

"They know that as long as the pictures please the people, they will thrive; but they also know that as soon as they make pictures which displease or harm the people, the whole structure of the picture business will totter and fall with a smash.

"We feel that we have as much right to a free screen as you have to a free press—and for precisely the same reasons. Will you help us get it?

PROCTOR FINISHING SCENARIO FROM BURNS STORY FOR GAUMONT

"In view of the fact that we have lived up to our policy of selecting manuscripts well in advance of their use by our directors," said George D. Proctor, scenario editor of the Gaumont company, when asked about the activities of his department, "we have nothing startling to announce at the present time.

"I am just finishing a scenario which is from a story by Robert Burns, a New York newspaper man. This was called 'Scarlet and Gold' by the author, but a new name will be selected for the photoplay.

"John H. Trant has just completed an adaptation of an extremely popular novel, but it will not be announced until the cast has been selected.

"Our most recent purchase is 'The Isle of Love,' by Paul M. Bryan. Mr. Bryan has written a number of Gaumont successes, but we feel that he has far surpassed his previous efforts in this photoplay.

"It is now being filmed at Jacksonville, Fla., with Gertrude McCoy in the stellar role. Edwin Middleton is directing the production.

Flo La Badie Helps Raise Funds at Elk Ball

Thanhouser Star, with Assistance from People in Vitagraph, Fox, Universal and Hanover Organizations, Gets Over $65 in a Few Minutes for Actors' Benefit

THE past week witnessed another addition to the volume on "Little Journeys of Film Stars," as the late Elbert Hubbard might have written it.

This time the Elks of Salem, Mass., gave a ball, and Ernest Horstmann, the New England theatre man, who has just been elected Exalted Ruler, determined that film stars should be the guests of honor.

LATEST PHOTOGRAPH OF FLORENCE LA BADIE

At Mr. Horstmann's right hand throughout the evening was Florence La Badie, the Thanhouser star, and what she did not do at the ball and the banquet which followed, nobody else did, either.

She came there with the intention of bringing back some money for the Actors' Fund, and after a speech by L. J. Rubinstein the ladies of the visiting party passed out Miss La Badie's autographed pictures.

They were given for whatever the guests offered, and the net result was a little over sixty-five dollars, gathered in a few minutes.

While the photographs were being passed out the band played an overture, and the Thanhouser star took the baton.

It was quite unknown to anybody that Miss La Badie's accomplishments ran in this direction, but she led the musicians with a spectacular cleverness worthy of a Creatore.

This event furnished the unusual spectacle of film players selling the photographs of a star from another company than their own.

Mr. Thanhouser therefore desires to acknowledge the favor of the Vitagraph, Fox, Universal and Hanover film organizations, while Florence La Badie wishes to convey her thanks publicly to Rose Tapley, Hope Stewart, Gazelle Marche and Doris Grey, all of whom helped for the good of the Actors' Fund.

The promoters of the Motion Picture Campaign of the Actors' Fund may well be proud of the splendid spirit of co-operation shown by these players in getting together to help Miss La Badie for a common cause.

Pathé Signs for Goldberg's Animated Cartoons

Famous Caricaturist of New York "Mail" Who Began at Eight Dollars a Week Drawing Pictures on Topical Events for a San Francisco Paper Is Now in Receipt of an Income Totaling $100,000 a Year—He will Make a Cartoon Comedy for Release Every Two Weeks

PATHÉ announces the signing of contracts by which all the animated cartoon comedies of R. L. Goldberg, the famous artist-humorist of the New York Evening Mail, will be released through the Pathé Exchange, Inc.

It is expected that one will be released every two weeks, and judging from those already completed the American public can look forward to seeing pictures of a kind absolutely original and brimful of humor from start to finish.

Mr. Goldberg for some years has enjoyed a position on the very top round of the newspaper ladder and his cartoons have achieved such popularity that they have been syndicated and are being published in one newspaper in every city of the country.

To be only thirty-three and yet draw a salary of $50,000 yearly with percentages bringing it up to some $100,000 is to be in a class by yourself, and that is true of R. L. Goldberg.

He was born in San Francisco, and at an early age made up his mind to be a newspaper artist. His father, a substantial business man, strenuously objected to the boy's ambition, saying that there was no money in the newspaper business. Mr. Goldberg, senior, prefers to forget his early objections now.

As a student in the University of California, studying to be an engineer, he was drawing continually for the mere fun of it. His pictures were published in the college paper and his fellow students learned to look for them.

There was something different in the young man's outlook on life, something different in the creations of his pencil, and something different in the captions—in the imaginary conversations of his brain people.

He graduated from the University in 1904 with the degree of Bachelor of Science and soon got a job planning sewers in the San Francisco City Engineer's office at one hundred dollars per month.

However, it strains one's sense of humor considerably to see humor in sewers, so he threw up his job to take one with a San Francisco paper at eight dollars a week. He was hired to draw daily cartoons for the sport page, but the paper didn't publish his cartoons and he wanted to see them in print.

So he quit this job also, and went to another paper that agreed to publish his pictures. The salary was even less at the new job than at his other one, but that didn't bother him, for he found it better fun.

A few months of this and he decided that New York was the better field, and so went East. He talked to three or four editors, all of whom he failed to interest until he went to the Evening Mail.

There he was offered the chance to make pictures daily for the sporting page. That was nine years ago, and he is still with the Mail. He started in at fifty dollars per week.

Three months later it became sixty-five dollars a week, six months later seventy-five dollars a week, and at the end of a year he got a two-years' contract at one hundred dollars a week.

R. L. GOLDBERG

At this time, too, his cartoons were first sold to other newspapers throughout the country. Today his pictures are being seen by more than 2,200,000 persons daily.

At the close of his third year he signed a three-years' contract at three hundred dollars a week, followed by another at four hundred and fifty dollars a week. His new contract now gives him a salary of $50,000 per year and royalties—surely a pretty respectable jump from eight dollars per week.

Mr. Goldberg works hard for his big salary. Early and late he is at it, going over his pictures again and again until he has produced what he wanted to obtain.

His pictures are intensely human and his characters unlike anything that was ever conceived before. Despite their impossibility of appearance, their conversations and actions are always dominated by the same motives that actuate the people we know in everyday life.

Mr. Goldberg is the most companionable of persons. His success has not spoiled him, and he is as modest as though he were still earning his eight dollars a week.

His animated cartoons represent a year's patient work and experiment, and they will strike a new note of originality and cleverness on the screen.

By special arrangement these films will be exploited by the newspapers which are running the Goldberg daily cartoon, a method of publicity that cannot fail of good results.

The Pathé booking force has welcomed these new cartoon comedies with open arms, and sees in them opportunities for very large business.

Universal Masque Ball Is Going to Be Big Affair

A Large Number of Authors, Newspaper Men, Sculptors and Painters Is Expected to Be Present at Event, Set for March 18, in Grand Central Palace, New York

TO the Universal Masque Ball, to be held at the Grand Central Palace, New York, March 18, a large number of authors, newspaper men, sculptors and painters have been invited.

The Universal has offered one hundred dollars in prizes for the most daringly original costumes worn at the ball. A number of Universal actresses have announced their intentions of competing for these awards.

As additional inducements, Joe Rosenthal has offered twelve prizes, ranging from silver loving cups to Japanese gold signet rings, to the most charming young women.

Those who will contribute to the gayety of the evening include Helen Coyne, a young dancer of the Metropolitan Opera House; Violet Mersereau, who will render the "Universal Fox Trot," and Rosemary Theby, who will dance an Oriental rhapsody.

POWER AND SMALLEY IN FIVE-REEL PSYCHOLOGICAL DRAMA

A five-reel subject, with Tyrone Power, Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley as principals, is being made from a original scenario by Lois Weber entitled, "The Eyes of God." This is a psychological drama.

STRIKING VIEWS OF SETS AND PLAYERS IN "THE STRUGGLE," A FORTHCOMING WORLD FILM PRODUCTION, MANY SCENES FOR WHICH WERE FILMED IN BRAZIL

FRANK SHERIDAN, ARTHUR ASHLEY, AND ETHEL GRAY TERRY HAVE THE LEADING ROLES IN THIS SUBJECT, WRITTEN BY HARRY CHANDLEE AND DIRECTED BY JOHN INCE

Star of "The Struggle" a Potent "Legit" Figure

Frank Sheridan, Featured in the Ince-World Feature, Earned from William Winter, Greatest Dramatic Critic in This Country, Title of "The American Coquelin"

WITH the reorganization of the World Film Corporation and the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation, the newly-elected production heads and department managers, under the supervision of President Arthur H. Spiegel, announced a policy of film commercialization.

The first demonstration of the policy is seen in John Ince's production of "The Struggle." The casting of this picture showed a blending of three elements theatric.

Frank Sheridan has long been a potent figure on the spoken stage. Mr. Sheridan by his work in "Paid in Full," "The Unwritten Law," "Blackmail" and "The Boss" substantiated the title given him by William Winter, "the American Coquelin." Mr. Sheridan plays the leading role in "The Struggle." Supporting Mr. Sheridan is Arthur Ashley and Ethel Grey Terry.

The story itself was written by Harry Chandlee and adapted for the screen under the eyes of the film, service, advertising and publicity departments.

Mr. Ince, with his retinue of cameramen, structural workers and property men, with the players, journey to Manaos, Brazil, a leper colony, where many of the scenes were laid by the author.

The following permit from the Brazilian Government was secured:

Manaos Februario 7.

Casa Hospital Do San Maceo
Per Orden del Sr. Director Administrador de este hospital do Leproza autoriza al Sr. John E. Ince para que pueda tomar una fotographia do patio del asilo para imprimir una pelicula
Aux De Contradura
RAFAEL MASA
Jefe

This allowed Mr. Ince and his players to use the Lazarette, or leper colony, as he saw fit. The idea of the journey of the company to far-away Brazil was to procure local color and they got it, the company confidently believes.

The second physical demonstration of the commercialization of film plays appears in "The Chain Invisible," which has just been completed under the direction of Frank Powell. This is an original work from the pen of Richard Le Gallienne.

"The effect in 'The Chain Invisible,' is one of seeing a gigantic spectacle," said an Equitable official. "Insofar as the parallel is explicit, you watch a series of beautiful incidents all a consecutive portion of the tale.

"Then at moments, some gigantic novelty is injected which dovetails into the spectacle, and adds zest to the story, yet creates in itself a startling effect. In other words, each incident is a startling episode and as a whole a gigantic series of 'punches.'"

Actors' Fund Feast Shows Coast No Tightwad Locale

Fifteen Hundred Dollars Is Raised at a Banquet in Levy's Cafe, Los Angeles, Bringing the Total of the California Committee to More Than $5,000

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 11.

APPROXIMATELY fifteen hundred dollars was raised at an Actors' Fund dinner given at Levy's cafe, Los Angeles, Friday evening. Sixty per cent. of the receipts were donated to the fund by the cafe management. This brings the total of the California committee to more than $5,000.

Jesse L. Lasky, president of the California Committee, and W. T. Wyatt, manager of the Mason theatre, composed the committee in charge, and Charles Murray of the Keystone Company was master of ceremonies.

During the dinner there was a continuous cabaret program in which many of the stars of filmdom took part, including De-Wolf Hopper, Fine Arts; Mae Murray, Lasky; Mae Bush, Charles Murray, Slim Summerville, Bobbie Dunn, Ruddie Umholz, and H. Guy Woodward, Keystone; Gertrude Selby, L-Ko; Ruth Roland, Balboa; Miss Billie Rhodes and Neil Burns, of the Christie Nestor studios; Lena Baskette and Carter De Haven, Universal; William S. Hart, NYMP; Crane Wilbur, Horsley's; Louis J. Cody, Selig, and a number of others.

Anita King, Mae Bush, Virginia Kirtley, and Kathlyn Williams sold flowers and added more than two hundred dollars to the fund.

Announcement was made by Mr. Lasky of the various sums donated to the Actors' Fund by the actors of different studios. These funds were as follows:

Fine Arts, ten hundred and ninety-five dollars; Universal, four hundred and eighty; Lasky, three hundred and twenty-five; L-Ko, two hundred and fifty; Horsley, one hundred and eighteen; Christie Nestor, one hundred and ten; Keystone, eighty-five; Fox, fifty, and Selig, ten.

Subscription papers are still in circulation, and it is believed these will be materially increased.

The committee in charge of raising fifty thousand dollars in southern California has arranged for two additional dinners, one at the Beverly Hills Hotel, and the other at the Huntington Hotel at Pasadena.

"Improvement Is Due from Selling Side"—V-L-S-E

Long Looked for Day of a Uniform Product Must Come Through the Introduction of Effective Distributive Methods Rather Than From the Producing End of the Industry, Is Prophecy of General Manager Walter W. Irwin, Who Attributes Increased Business of His Own Company to This View

THAT the long-looked-for day of a uniform product in the film industry will come about first through the introduction of correct practices in the selling side of the business rather than in the producing side is the prophecy made by General Manager Walter W. Irwin, of the V-L-S-E.

Mr. Irwin was sought out the other day, and asked the significance of the increase in business which the V-L-S-E has experienced for some time past, and which is said to be general with all the branches of this company throughout the country.

"Our increases have been due both to the improvement in our product, and to the correctness of the distributing policies under which we operate," he replied.

"As unrelated as they may seem, the two are inseparable. I mean by this that the only hope of stabilizing and intensifying the output of a producer, is for that output to be so marketed that the producer makes money only on those films which are meritorious.

Best Reformer a "Touched Pocketbook"

"There is no surer way to make a man correct a fault than to touch his pocketbook. This applies to moving picture producers as much as to any other type of business man.

"The producer who watches his neighbor prosper while he is not getting back the bare manufacturing cost of his product needs no greater spur to improve the quality of his productions than his financial statement.

"This incentive can only exist when every producer is independent of every other one —when each feature is priced individually and solely on its merits—in short, when each associate producer is in real and active competition with his fellows.

"That is what I mean when I say that the distributing system has a vital bearing upon bettering the quality of a product.

"Where pictures are rented on a flat rate basis and each manufacturer in a combination receives exactly what every other manufacturer receives, regardless of the respective merits of his productions, there is no incentive for the manufacturer who is investing large sums of capital in order to produce pictures of ever-increasing merit, as long as an associate producer is making just as much money on a smaller investment, and, therefore, producing pictures of a lesser degree of merit.

"On the other hand, there is no incentive for the manufacturer with a small investment and an output of mediocre quality, who is making as much money as the manufacturer of the best grade pictures, to increase his expenditure and improve the merit of his product.

"It is apparent, therefore, that the flat rate method of pricing films puts a premium upon mediocrity and inferiority.

"It makes it possible for the organization which spends the minimum amount of money in the manufacture of their picture, to make more money than the one which spends the maximum amount of money.

Remedy in "Open Booking" Method

"The only remedy for such obviously inequitable conditions is the 'open-booking' method of renting films, and the 'minimum-and-maximum' price system—two policies instituted by the Big Four, which combine to market every film of every manufacturer independently of every film of every other manufacturer, at a price based on the actual box office value of each production.

"These policies were adopted by the V-L-S-E at its very inception. In fact, it is entirely within the bounds of conservatism to say that this company was formed for the purpose of overcoming the reactionary conditions which almost universally existed in the moving picture industry.

"We determined at the start to be an exception to the rule—to institute the keenest possible competition between the associate manufacturers making up this company.

"It is a competition in which each would be bound to try and outdo the other in the size of his investment and the consequent merit of his product.

"To this end we inaugurated the 'open-booking' and 'minimum-and-maximum' methods in marketing our productions.

"These are the methods which keep every manufacturer keyed up to produce at all times, the best of which he is capable, for in the end, under these systems, the manufacturer alone is the principal sufferer if a film fails to measure up to the proper standards.

"And the financial statement, as I have pointed out, is the most potent argument which could be used in correcting the weaknesses of production.

"No oratory nor personal pressure is needed to accompany this statement. It in itself speaks volumes so forcibly that the manufacturer cannot do other than realize that he must endeavor to outdo his keenest competitor, or fall by the wayside.

"We hear much these days of the 'survival of the fittest.' The 'open-booking' policy as operated by the Big Four is in very fact 'the survival of the fittest.'

"It places a penalty upon poor pictures and rewards the good ones, for each manufacturer obtains the proceeds solely from his own pictures and those can only be consistent with the merits of the output. The producer, in other words, gets only as he gives, takes out only in proportion to that which he puts in.

"The hope of the film industry lies in merit being the sole measure of reward. Films are not of uniform worth. It is humanly impossible to make them so. Consequently, it is foolish to argue that they are co-ordinate in drawing power.

"But until the Big Four established the open-booking and minimum-and-maximum policies, films were always sold on a basis of equal merit and co-ordinate drawing power.

"Every exhibitor was tied by a contract under which he was compelled to take the entire output of a feature distributing company, whether or not a part of it lacked merit or was unsuitable to his audience.

"How much fairer it is—how much more common business sense, to have a man come in and see a picture on the screen before he buys it—to let him judge of a picture's value for his particular patronage for himself—to let him take what he wants —to use it when he wants it and for as long as he wants it.

"And how much fairer it is to the manufacturer also, to give him a price commensurate with the actual worth of the product, and not ask him to take what the manufacturer of an inferior product is forced to accept for his wares.

"He need not be urged then to make the best possible pictures which money, brains and ingenuity can turn out.

"He will do it without prompting, because in so doing, he is determining his own financial condition."

Ormi Hawley and Fellowes Engaged for Fox Leads

Actress Is Remembered for Her Work in "The Nation's Peril" and "Race Suicide," in Addition to Stage Reputation—Actor Scored Success in "Regeneration"

ORMI HAWLEY and Rockcliffe Fellowes, well-known screen players, have been engaged by William Fox for the leading roles in a multiple reel production, the title of which is for the present withheld.

Mr. Fellowes and Miss Hawley have already begun work on the feature at the Fox studios in Fort Lee, N. J.

Miss Hawley is best known through her work for the Lubin company, with which she was associated for a number of years.

Some of her most important roles for the Philadelphia concern were leads in "The Nation's Peril" and "Race Suicide," the latter production being sold to Joseph W. Farnham and distributed by him.

Before going into pictures, Miss Hawley had extended stage experience.

In "Regeneration," a Fox photoplay in which Anna Q. Nilsson played the feminine lead, Mr. Fellowes scored a success, which brought him widespread recognition as a capable and finished screen actor.

"CAMPBELLS" WILL OPEN REGENT, MONTREAL

It has been decided to use the Universal war film, "The Campbells Are Coming," to open the fine new Regent theatre, just completed in Montreal.

Very elaborate arrangements are being made for this opening, which it is expected will be quite an event.

May Allison and Harold Lockwood Quality Stars

Fred J. Balshofer, Who Will Direct Their Features with Assistance of Howard Truesdell, Signs Players for Exclusive Appearance for Metro Subjects

HAROLD LOCKWOOD and May Allison, a popular stellar combination in pictures, have signed a long time contract with Fred J. Balshofer to appear exclusively in photoplays to be produced by the Quality Pictures Corporation for release on the Metro program.

Mr. Balshofer will direct the Lockwood-

HAROLD LOCKWOOD

Allison features, and will be assisted by Howard Truesdell. The first production is already under way.

The company is now in Northern Maine, seeking picturesque exteriors in the snow and woods.

The Quality corporation has taken over a large studio near Forty-third street and the Hudson River, where the Lockwood-Allison company will make interiors for the present.

Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison recently came to New York from Santa Barbara, Cal., where they were engaged in making feature productions for the American-Mutual. Previously, they were among the stars engaged by Famous Players.

Mr. Balshofer has selected for the two new Metro stars scenarios in which youth, romance, adventure and the spirit of the great outdoors predominates. It is in such productions that this couple have won especial recognition.

The career of Mr. Lockwood is an interesting one. He was born in Newark, N. J. After being graduated from Columbia University, he engaged in the wholesale dry goods business.

Tiring of commercial life, and being fond of out of door sports, he arranged to go West and seek a place on a ranch. A friend suggested that he try for a position with a motion picture company, and an engagement with the Rex-Universal company followed. Subsequently, he was associated with the Nestor-Universal company, 101 Bison, of which his present employer, Mr. Balshofer, was the organizer, Selig, and then Famous Players.

Mr. Lockwood was Mary Pickford's leading man in "Tess of the Storm Country," "Hearts Adrift," "Such a Little Queen," and other features.

He was also Marguerite Clark's leading man in "Wild Flower." When he left Famous Players and joined the American staff, Miss Allison was engaged to play opposite him.

Among some of the notable productions they made for the American were "Lillo of the Sulu Seas," "The Other Side of the Door," "The End of the Road and the Fighting Lieutenant."

Miss Allison, who is counted one of the screen's most beautiful young women as well as one of its gifted stars, was born on a plantation in Georgia.

She was educated in Tennessee, in Philadelphia, and spent several years in voice culture. Coming to New York, she sought an engagement on the legitimate stage.

MAY ALLISON

Her first role was that of Vanity in "Everywoman." Soon afterward she was given the part of Beauty in the play.

Then followed seasons in "The Quaker Girl," as understudy to Ina Claire, in "Miss Caprice" as the ingenue lead, and the leading role in "Apartment 12-K."

When Famous Players was casting for "David Harum," Miss Allison secured a prominent role. Here she was introduced to Mr. Lockwood, an incident which resulted in their association as co-stars.

She next appeared with Edith Wynne Mathison in "The Governor's Lady." She appeared in several other feature productions, and then became a star on the American-Mutual program, having the stellar role in "The House of a Thousand Scandals."

HAWKS COMPLETES SCENARIO FOR THIRD WARNER-NYMP SUBJECT

H. B. Warner is to continue as star for a NYMP company, and scenario for his third subject has now been completed by J. G. Hawks, of the Ince staff.

ENLARGEMENT PLANNED FOR TWO LUBIN PHILADELPHIA PLANTS

Siegmund Lubin has announced important additions to his main studio plants in Philadelphia.

In order to keep ahead of the procession, the two Philadelphia plants of the Lubin Manufacturing Company are to be given enlarged equipment.

The studios at Twentieth street and Indiana avenue and at Sixteenth street and Glenwood avenue are each undergoing extensive alterations.

The great outdoor studios occupying over 500 acres at Betzwood, Pa., are also being furnished with new equipment.

The Lubin Studios in California and Florida are in good shape for the production of average features.

But the Philadelphia plants demanded the installation of extra facilities for the big feature plans which the Lubin Company has just undertaken.

Three spectacular photoplay versions of Rex Beach novels are underlined, the Lubin Company having secured exclusive screen rights to his works.

These productions, however, are said by Mr. Lubin to be merely incidental among other big photoplay undertakings for which preparations are in present progress.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD CHILD DANCER SIGNED BY "U" FOR 6 YEARS

Little Lena Baskette, a talented California child dancer, has joined the forces at Universal City under a six-year contract. Her dancing attracted considerable attention from people of her home city, San Mateo, and brought her to the notice of Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal company. The result was the six-year contract.

Lena is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Baskette, of San Mateo, and is but eight years old. During the time she is with the Universal, her education will be provided for by the company.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 729 Seventh Avenue, New York City.

"TRIANGLE SUNDAE" MAKES ITS APPEARANCE IN NEBRASKA

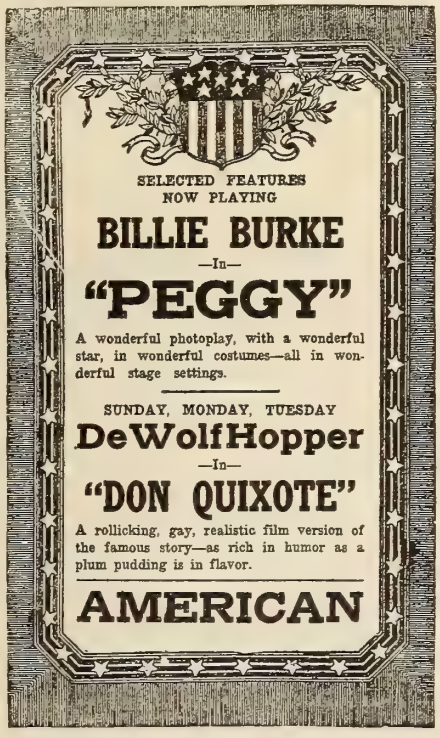
Hal Kelley, of the Gilbert theatre, Beatrice, Neb., apparently runs something besides the theatre, for he recently converted temporarily the entire policy of a local pharmacist to Triangle. Prominent in the scheme was the serving of a brand new confection, the Triangle sundae, at the soda fountain.

The Triangle sundae occupied a glass of generous proportions and had a confection triangle made by a local baker to top three cherries, supported by three candied plums in green. Ice cream of white vanilla and very dark chocolate completed the color scheme. For a consideration which Mr. Kelley cheerfully undertook, the originator taught the leading soda dispensers of Beatrice the trick. It is reported that the Triangle sundae was a hit from the start.

Mr. Kelley also has well defined ideas of presentation. When a recent William S. Hart picture was announced he sent to Omaha and got a supply of western stuff, which he bestowed upon a company of western boys. Then from his scenery storeroom he got a western "hall" front, which at the proper place he lowered in front of the screen while the projection stopped. Then the boys drifted into the place and finally Kelley himself, endeavoring to represent Hart, got a tremendous round of applause when he rolled and lighted a cigarette with one hand. After this feat projection was resumed.

"NEW IDEA" OF EXHIBITING WINS IN MARION, VA.

An example of what happens when the "new idea" of exhibiting strikes a small town is found in Marion, Va. When J. B. Eccles took charge of the Marion theatre, he brought with him live wire methods which he immediately put into practice.



He has a new theatre with beautiful decorations, excellent music, fine projection, lights and ventilation. Its capacity is 500, the largest in Marion. He found himself surrounded by houses which still employed out-of-date ideas, but, instead of attempting at first to win away their patronage, he went after residents who did not visit these houses.

When he had gained this class of patrons, he found that his theatre, because of its superior surroundings and pictures, also began to make inroads upon the business of his less progressive competitors. The result was that the competitors were forced to begin modernizing their houses.

DISTINCTIVE BORDERS AN AID TO THEATRE TRADEMARKING

Trade-marking the theatre, as we have pointed out before, is a live wire stunt of importance. The first step is the selection of an appropriate slogan for the theatre. This should be used in newspaper ads and in the house organ.

HOUSE ORGAN SERIES NO. 24

ILLUSTRATING A DISTINCTIVE AD. BORDER APPROPRIATE TO THE INDIVIDUAL THEATRE AND SUITABLE FOR USE IN THE HOUSE ORGAN OR NEWSPAPER COLUMN

The trade-mark idea, however, is not merely a matter of words. It can and should also include an artistically designed border, symbolic of the theatre itself, something like the one reproduced here. The consistent use of such a border fixes the theatre name firmly in the mind of patrons. It also helps the newspaper reader to find your ad quickly, because he gets used to seeing all your ads served up in a distinctive form, one which he recognizes at first glance.

FIND OUT EXACTLY WHAT YOUR PATRONS WANT

Finding out just what kind of pictures his patrons want ought to be a principal duty of every exhibitor. There are many ways of doing this, but the only certain way is to get your patrons in the habit of expressing their opinions freely to you.

We note a neat little scheme used by the Grand theatre, Oswego, N. Y. A page of its six-page folder is given over to an explanation of the desire to please and a blank ballot, on which patrons are asked to express their choice as between features and serials. This is an excellent idea, especially for the small theatre, which, because of its fixed patronage, must observe carefully likes and dislikes.

FREE SHOWING OF "NATION" FOR LOUISVILLE ORPHANS

Through the courtesy of A. A. Bigelow, manager of Macauley's theatre, and D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," a special morning show of that photoplay was given free to the orphans in all the institutions of Louisville, Ky.

Street cars were chartered to take the chillren from and to the orphanages, and a cortege of police and several firemen were on hand at the theatre to lend assistance in caring for the children.

USES SPANISH COLORS AND COSTUMES IN ADVERTISING "CARMEN"

Jack Nash, manager of the Isis theatre, Trinidad, Col., is a live wire when it comes to advertising a picture appropriately.

When his theatre was showing the Lasky "Carmen"—to S. R. O. business, by the way—Nash decorated the house front with the Spanish colors and used them extensively in his street displays. His ushers were dressed as toreadors.

SCOTCH "STUFF" LENDS COLOR TO SHOWING OF "PEGGY"

Real bagpipers in kilts, parading up and down the aisles, following a short flash of the scene showing Woodkirk, Scotland, in "Peggy," was one of the features of the Billie Burke photoplay debut at the Merrill theatre, Milwaukee.

Manager Graham gave this production an unusual presentation. He also had his ushers uniformed in kilts.

These innovations proved very popular with his patrons.

CREATES NEW FANS FOR "DIAMOND" SERIAL

Manager Thomas Nagle of the New Star theatre, Rossland, British Columbia, recently evolved an effective method of creating new fans for "The Diamond from the Sky."

He had already run ten installments of the serial, but realizing that many people were not interested in attending on his "Diamond" nights because they had not seen the first episode, he arranged to run the first and eleventh installments the same evening. New people thus had an opportunity to get the beginning of the story.

AWAKENING THE INTEREST OF PARENTS IN SPECIAL CHILDREN'S PERFORMANCES

IN going after the greatest possible attendance for children's performances, the exhibitor should begin with parents. There are three ways of doing this: by sending letters or cards to parents, by attracting their attention to children's shows through newspaper ads, and by personal appeal to them when they come to the theatre. All three methods should be employed.

If you are just inaugurating a series of children's matinees, you will want to send out formal announcements of the fact, and this ought to be easy if you have the right kind of mailing list. The announcement can be made in a letter, or, less expensively, on a Government postal card. The letter is more effective. Make it clear that you have selected pictures which appeal especially to the young, and that you consider the proper entertainment of the child so important that you have set aside a certain day each week for this specific purpose. Invite the co-operation of parents. Ask them to send or bring their children. Emphasize the fact that your theatre will take proper care of the children while the picture is being shown, and that everything will be conducted in an orderly manner.

This is a point which cannot receive too much attention.

Back up this campaign with newspaper ads. If you are running a children's matinee on Saturday, use your Friday afternoon or Saturday morning papers to advertise the fact. These ads should, of course, be devoted principally to the picture you are to show. Write your ads from the standpoint of the child. Make them simple, interesting, brief.

Use slides at every performance during the week to announce your children's days. Give space in your house organ to more detailed announcements. Have an ornamental poster made, heralding the fact that "Saturday is Children's Day." Put this poster in a conspicuous place in the lobby. Talk to your patrons when they come to performances during the week. Tell them about your special children's days. Make them feel that you have a personal interest in giving their children the right kind of pictures.

OUTSIDE THE ISIS, DENVER, ON A BILLIE BURKE NIGHT

The Isis, the largest and most beautiful picture house in Denver, broke all previous records for attendance Sunday, February 27, when "Peggy," the Triangle Billie Burke feature, began a three days' run there.

The accompanying photograph shows the crowd in front of the Isis that night. It also shows the theatre's handsome exterior and novel lighting arrangement. S. Baxter, manager and owner of the Isis, has long been regarded as a premier exhibitor in Denver.

COOLEY GOES TO AMERICAN

Hal Cooley, late of the Universal, where he played leads in a number of subjects, has been signed by the American and gone to Santa Barbara, Cal.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

"BONDMAN," FOX, WILL RELEASE STRONG EMOTIONS IN PLAYERS' ACTING ON MARCH 20

"THE BONDMAN," by Hall Caine, in which William Farnum is starred, is the William Fox release for March 20.

The earlier scenes are laid in rugged Iceland, but the later ones are on the Isle of Man, which no one knows better than the author.

Although Mr. Caine was born in England, his earliest recollections are of the Isle of Man—of his grandmother's cottage, Ballavolley, Ballaugh, in the north of Manxland.

Stephen Orry (William Farnum) large-limbed, muscled like a Greek god, but indolent despite his enormous strength, competes for the wrestling championship of the Festival of the Mount of Laws, Iceland's greatest holiday.

The prizes are distributed by the daughter of Jorgenson, governor of the island. As the eyes of Stephen and Rachel meet when she hands him the trophy for his prowess, each reads the other's love.

Rachel is wedded to Stephen after she has been driven from home by the proud and bitter old governor who had intended to marry her to the Danish minister.

The happiness of the newly-married couple is short-lived. The fair-haired giant forsakes Rachel, stowing away on a vessel bound for the Isle of Man.

Years pass and Rachel dies of sorrow, leaving a son Jason (William Farnum), who carries in his heart a sacred vow, given at his mother's deathbed, to find and kill his father for deserting her.

Fate brings him to the Isle of Man, where he is made the instrument of destiny and saves from death the very man he had set out to kill.

Stephen Orry in the meantime has married in the Isle of Man and has a son, Sunlocks. Cheated of his vengeance on his father, who dies a natural death, Jason vows it on his half-brother, Sunlocks, whose charm and good looks have won the heart of Greeba (Dorothy Bernard), daughter of the governor of the Isle of Man, the woman Jason loves.

Sunlocks and Greeba go to Iceland and Jason follows them, not knowing, however, how to recognize his half-brother should he overtake him.

Sunlocks becomes the friend of the governor of Iceland. When Jorgensen is overthrown by a political revolution, Sunlocks succeeds to the governorship, but he is shortly overthrown and sentenced for life to the sulphur mines. Jason, also a prisoner, meets a similar fate.

Upon his arrival at the mines, Jason is chained hand and foot to the man he has sworn to kill, whose identity he still does not know. A premature blast during a mining operation strikes Sunlocks blind.

In the panic which ensues among the prisoners, Jason, carrying Sunlocks on his back, escapes.

After incredible hardships and sufferings they reach Reykjavic, and here the cruel realization bursts upon Jason, as he sees Greeba catch the fainting Sunlocks in her arms, that for the second time he has been cheated of his revenge.

Nevertheless, the cup of bitterness is not yet filled, for his love of Greeba costs him his life itself. Sunlocks, recaptured, is banished to a desolate island, while Jason, benefited by an ancient law, goes free. Greeba pleads with Jason to save Sunlocks, who is under sentence to be shot.

In an hour of supreme sacrifice Jason substitutes himself for Sunlocks. As the boat bearing Greeba and Sunlocks to safety and happiness is hull-down on the horizon, Jason is led forth to the sand dunes and the Iceland soldiers fire a death volley into what Hall Caine has immortalized as "the biggest heart for good or ill that ever beat in the breast of man."

Mr. Farnum is supported by a cast, including Dorothy Bernard, Julia Hurley, Harry Spingler and others.

"HAUNTED MANOR" TO DRIVE SPOOKS OF CARE AWAY ON APRIL 1

The original release date for Gaumont's "The Haunted Manor" was March 20, but announcement has been made that this Mutual Masterpicture, de Luxe Edition, will not be seen until April, according to the manufacturer's announcement.

The photoplay, which is being directed by Edwin Middleton at Jacksonville, Fla., stars Miss Iva Shepard. Prominent in the cast are: Gertrude Robinson, Mathilde Baring, Richard Garrick, Olive Trevor, Earl O. Schenck, Henry W. Pemberton, Robert Clugston, John Mackin, Harry Chira and John Reinhard. The scenes of "The Haunted Manor" are laid in India and in the United States. The picture will be given an elaborate production.

"HER BLEEDING HEART" FINISHED BY LUBIN

Director Jack Pratt, of the Lubin Studios, has just finished an elaborate five-act feature, "Her Bleeding Heart," written by Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman.

Aside from a bid for the spectacular in scenic equipment, the photoplay has the advantage of a cast, including Rosetta Brice, Karva Poloskova, Inez Buck, Mrs. Carr, Richard Buhler, Craufurd Kent and William H. Turner.

AITKEN STAMPS "MACBETH" WITH HIS APPROVAL; "BEGGAR OF CAWNPORE" STARS WARNER

"THIS cyclonic picture-making business" is a phrase coined by H. E. Aitken, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, during his present trip of inspection to the California studios of Griffith, Ince and Sennett.

"Our producers are up on their toes," he writes to the New York offices. "They see far ahead and are planning a year or more in advance, anticipating the terrific momentum of competitive creation."

Mr. Aitken has already stamped with approval the Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree production of "Macbeth" at the Fine Arts. In his latest report he singles out "The Aryan," "The Beggar of Cawnpore," "The Habit of Happiness" and "Sunshine Dad."

"The Habit of Happiness" is the newest Douglas Fairbanks picture, produced by Allan Dwan at the eastern Triangle studios, and goes out to exhibitors this month.

The others will come later. "Sunshine Dad" presents De Wolf Hopper for the second time as a Griffith star, with many of the principals who supported him in his film debut, "Don Quixote."

Fay Tincher will be the foil for the huge comedian in this original American comedy, and Max Davidson, Chester Withey and Edward Dillon are "among those present."

William S. Hart takes leave of western characters for the present in "The Aryan."

Mr. Aitken announces that this is an even more powerful picture than the star's previous Ince features, "The Disciple" and "Hell's Hinges."

"The Beggar of Cawnpore" brings forward the star of "The Raiders," H. B. Warner, who has a role entirely unlike those which have made him a matinee idol.

C. Gardner Sullivan has placed his story in India during the Sepoy rebellion of 1857.

Warner is an English physician who becomes a drug-crazed derelict and then redeems himself and recovers the love of the girl who had renounced him.

All of these pictures will have an early showing at the Knickerbocker theater and then go out to exhibitors.

LOUISE BATES CAST FOR LEAD IN "WATER DEVIL"

Louise Bates, lately featured as the "Falstaff Girl," makes her dramatic debut in "The Water Devil," a Thanhouser Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, in which she plays the heavy lead.

Miss Bates was prima donna with "The Passing Show" at the Winter Garden, New York, when Edwin Thanhouser made her an offer to star in the silent drama.

FOURTEEN SUBJECTS FROM LUBIN FOR EARLY RELEASE NUMBER MANY COMEDIES

EARLY releases by the Lubin Manufacturing Company will include:

"The Repentant," a two act drama of university life, featuring Velma Whitman. Jay Morley, Eleanor Elvins and others are in the cast. It was written by Leon D. Kent.

Julian Lamothe's "The Redemption of Helene," three acts, shows a girl's struggles and her final awakening through love. W. J. Spencer, May Cruze and L. C. Shumway are featured.

"Her Wayward Sister" is a drama in four acts by Clay M. Greene, in which are seen Helen Greene, June Daye, Francis Joyner. Arthur Forbes, George Clark and others.

In "Hamlet Made Over" Billie Reeves gets the tragedy bug, and consequently gets into trouble. William Turner, Clarence Elmer, Arthur Mathews, Carrie Reynolds and others are in the cast.

"Some Boxer" is a Billie Reeves comedy, in one act, written by Mark Swan.

"The Chase" is a two-reel drama written and produced by Captain Wilbert Melville at the Lubin studio in California. L. C. Shumway, George Routh, Melvin Mayo, Dorothy Barrett, Helen Eddy, Robert Gray and J. J. Colby are in the cast.

"A Sister to Cain" is a three-act drama written by Julian Louis Lamothe and produced by Captain Wilbert Melville at the Lubin California studio. Helen Wolcott, Evelyn Page, Jay Moreley, Allan Forest and George Routh are prominent in the cast.

"Daredevil Bill" is a one-act comedy, written for Billie Reeves by Clay M. Greene and under the direction of Earl Metcalfe.

"The Gulf Between" is a three-reel drama, written by Tom Gibson and directed by Edward Sloman. It is a story of secret service operators engaged in running down a gang of opium smugglers.

"The Butler" is a one-act comedy, written and produced by Edward McKim for Billie Reeves.

"Ophelia" is a one-act drama with an all-star cast, including Ethel Clayton, Helen Weir, E. K. Lincoln and Craufurd Kent.

"The New Janitor" features Davy Don, with Patsy De Forrest in the leading support, under the direction of Edward McKim.

"A Change of Heart," is a Julian Lamothe two-act drama, in which love, domestic economics and comedy relief are delightfully blended. Prominent in the cast are: Velma Whitman, George Routh, Eleanor Blevins and others.

"Soldier Sons" is a three-act drama, by Wilbert Melville, dealing with army life in this country and the Philippines. It is a story in which a man is nearly murdered by his own son. Intrigue, politics and love interests form a thrilling feature. Melvin Mayo, L. C. Shumway, Adelaide Bronti and others appear.

MACKIN TAKES PLACE OF GARRICK IN "QUALITY OF FAITH"

Richard Garrick, who is directing the co-stars, Alexander Gaden and Gertrude Robinson, in Gaumont's "The Quality of Faith," cast himself for the role of Baker, the strike leader in the factory strike scenes.

However, the mob scenes assumed such vast proportions that Mr. Garrick found all his attention would be required for the task of directing.

Accordingly he surrendered the role to John Mackin. These factory scenes are being taken in Atlanta, Ga., whither a score of Gaumont players were taken from Gaumont's winter studios at Jacksonville, Fla.

HORSLEY WILL RELEASE 3 SUBJECTS IN 4 DAYS, FROM MARCH 24 TO 27

DAVID HORSLEY productions will be prominent in the release chart of the Mutual Film Corporation from March 24 to 27.

During those four days three productions will be released, two of them five-reel subjects and the third a one-reel Cub Comedy.

The first of the three pictures to be distributed is the Cub Comedy, "On the Rampage," released on March 24. It features George Ovey in his original character of Jerry.

The action centers around Jerry in his efforts to break into society by impersonating a nobleman. Spectacular effects have been introduced in conjunction with the comedy elements.

On March 25 will be released "The Hidden Law," a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, featuring Margaret Gibson and William Clifford.

"The Hidden Law" visualizes a story based on the law of reckoning. It is by Theodosia Harris, who has brought the characters up to date and laid the action in interesting surroundings.

The first part of the play transpires in scenes of theatrical life while the latter half takes place in the remote wilds of the West, except for the closing feet of the film, when the scenes revert to the East.

The theatrical scenes are interesting because they are true to a glamorous life and those of the Western country have been given an added touch of color by the introduction of the Bostock animals.

Miss Gibson and Mr. Clifford make in this picture their second joint appearance as stars, and a group of players, including Frederick Montague, Robert Kenyon, Mae Adams, Doris Baker, Marie Gavette, John Oaker, and Pauline Williams appears in their support.

"The Love Liar," the third of the releases, and scheduled for March 27, is the biggest production coming to date from the David Horsley studios.

The story of "The Love Liar" is the work of Crane Wilbur." His principal character is a famous violinist, an eccentric, erratic and temperamental man, who believes himself in love with every pretty face he sees. Crane Wilbur plays the featured part of "the love liar," and an especially engaged cast comprising Lucy Payton, Mae Gaston, Nan Christy and Ella Golden, lends him support.

NEED FOR PREPAREDNESS SHOWN IN SIXTH PICTOGRAPH RELEASE

The inadequacy of the American cavalry forces is picturized in the sixth release of Paramount Pictographs. This series is edited by Frederick Palmer, the war correspondent.

Besides the Preparedness portion, the release contains "The Use of the Gyroscope," explained by Elmer Sperry; "Testing the Mind," by Prof. Hugo Munsterberg; "Better Babies"; fashions by Zalud, and a cartoon by the Bray Studios.

POLI BOOKS "THE IRON CLAW"

Poli, the well-known New England exhibitor, has booked Pathé's serial "The Iron Claw," thus following the example of the Loew and Pantages circuits.

OUTPUT OF MUTUAL FOR WEEK OF MARCH 20 HEADED BY "MY PARTNER," WITH BURR McINTOSH

THE output of the Mutual Film Corporation for the week of March 20 will be headed by a Mutual Masterpicture, de Luxe Edition, which is the picturization of one of the most famous of the popular melodramas of a quarter of a century ago.

"My Partner," the play written by Bartley Campbell and produced at the Union Square theatre, September 16, 1879, will be released as a Masterpicture, de Luxe Edition on Monday, March 20. Burr McIntosh, a man who has figured prominently on the American stage for a good many years, is seen in the leading role. As Joe Saunders in "My Partner" he is at his best.

The second Mutual Masterpicture, de Luxe Edition of the week which will appear on Wednesday, is "The Bruiser," an American Film Company drama, featuring William Russell and Charlotte Burton.

"The Hidden Law," a sociological drama produced by the Horsley Company and featuring William Clifford and Margaret Gibson, will be the last of the Mutual Masterpictures, de Luxe Edition, for the week.

The other features which will be included in the same week are "The Code of Honor," "The Fifth Ace" and "Snow-Stuff."

"The Code of Honor" is an American picture produced under the direction of Frank Borzage and featuring Alfred Vosburgh, Vivian Rich and George Periolat.

It is an army story, centered about the plans for a new submarine invention which have been the result of hard labor on the part of Frank Marvin (Alfred Vosburgh), chief draftsman of the ordinance department.

"The Fifth Ace" introduces Alice Lake to the Mutual in a two-part picture from the Thanhouser studios. Supporting Miss Lake, in the leading role in this sociological drama is Wayne Arey.

"Snow Stuff," the last of the "Buck Parvin and the Movies" series, produced by the American Film Company, inc., will appear on Friday, March 24.

For the photography of "Snow Stuff," Director William Bertram took his entire company to Truckee, Cal. In support of Art Acord as the original "Buck," are Dixie Stratton, Larry Peyton, Charles James, Joe Massey, Hardy Gibson, George Clancy, Perry Banks and Ashton Dearholt.

The week's comedy released includes a wealth of humorous photoplays.

Francis Keyes and Jay C. Yorke appear in "Pansy Post, Protean Player," a Falstaff comedy, on Tuesday. The second funny picture of the same brand will appear on Thursday. It is "Pedro, the Punk Poet," and features the same two Thanhouser players.

"Cupid at Cohen's" and "The Bubbles and the Barber" are the two American "Beauty" comedies for the week.

"Cupid at Cohen's" appears on Wednesday, and features the popular comedians Carol Halloway and John Sheehan.

The Sunday "Beauty," "The Bubbles and the Barber" gives display to Orral Humphrey's versatility.

Billy Armstrong, the Horsley Company's funny man, will be featured in "The Twin Trunk Mystery," a Cub comedy of Friday.

The Vogue funny pictures of Thursday and Sunday have not yet been titled.

The regular Gaumont releases, Mutual Weekly, No. 64, and "See America First," will appear on Thursday and Sunday.

BAGGOT PICTURE, "HAUNTED BELL," IS FINISHED

King Baggot has just completed "The Haunted Bell," a two-reel drama adapted from the story by the same name written by Jacques Futrelle, the noted novelist.

Henry Otto directed the picture, which is up to his usual standard for its artistic effects and for the exercise of great care for the finer details of the picture.

King Baggot is excellent as the hero, a novelist, while Edna Hunter is the wife who lives in fear of the haunted bell. The others in the cast include Joseph Granby, Sam Drane, Frank Smith and Joseph Smiley.

MAE MARSH WILL BE SUPPORTED BY STRONG CAST IN "HOODOO ANN"

Active as he is in the supervision of Fine Arts pictures for the Triangle program, David W. Griffith has surprised his associates on the coast by the direction he has given to the forthcoming Mae Marsh release, "Hoodoo Ann."

Miss Marsh has been in great favor with the director since "The Birth of a Nation" days and her long siege of ill health has prevented the fruition of many ambitious plans which he had for "the little sister of the films."

But now apparently, Miss Marsh is again able to resume her work and Griffith is determined that her first appearance as a Triangle star shall be a success.

A typical cast of Griffith players will support Miss Marsh on her public reappearance.

Robert Harron is featured with her in "Hoodoo Ann" and in the principal roles are Mildred Harris, Pearl Elmore, Wilbur Higby, Loyola O'Connor, William H. Brown, Charles Lee and Anna Hernandez.

Miss Marsh plays an orphan asylum heroine who eventually finds a good home and weds an ambitious young artist.

WORLD-EQUITABLE RELEASES FROM MARCH 13 TO APRIL 10 MAKE IMPORTANT LIST

The World and Equitable Corporations announce the definite release dates of their forthcoming productions, from March 13 to April 10, beginning with Jane Grey in "Man and His Angel," March 13, on the Equitable Program, followed by Charles Cherry and Mary Charleson in "Passers By"; Frank Sheridan, Arthur Ashley and Ethel Grey Terry in "The Struggle"; Gail Kane in "Her God," and Bruce McRae and Gerda Holmes in "The Chain Invisible."

During the same weeks and on the same release dates, World Film will release Robert Warwick in "The Supreme Sacrifice," House Peters in "The Hand of Peril," Robert Warwick and Frances Nelson in "Human Driftwood," Clara Kimball Young in "The Feast of Life," and Edwin August in "The Social Highwayman."

"COUNT OF TEN" IS FIRST METRO-DREW COMEDY

The first of the Metro-Drew single-reel comedies in which Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are starred, will be released on the Metro program March 15.

The first Metro-Drew comedy is "The Count of Ten." The situation in this story, briefly set forth, is all that is necessary to visualize the possibilities contained in the photoplay for two artists like Mr. and Mrs. Drew.

The story concerns a commuter, financially embarrassed for the time being, who has invited his wife to dinner in the city, and to the theatre afterward. He is obliged to do some tall skirmishing to raise the money, which he does just in time for her to catch a train.

He telegraphs the wifey as follows: "Have gotten theatre tickets. Bring party clothes."

The telegrapher, in a hurry, makes a slight mistake in transmitting the message, and when the commuter's wife receives it, it reads as follows: "Have got ten theatre tickets. Bring party. Clothes."

Elated over his sudden prosperity, she invites neighbors to the number of eight. The commuter's surprise on learning of the unexpected guests, and his wild scramble to raise funds and entertain his neighbors creates a host of ludicrous situations.

LE SAINT TAKES COMPANY TO MOJAVE DESERT

A Western Universal Company under the direction of E. J. LeSaint, left Monday for Mojave desert where they will make exterior scenes for "The Three Godfathers," a story of the early west by Peter B. Kyne, which has been adapted for the screen by Harvey Gates and Director LeSaint.

The story is not one of the rodeo type, but portrays the better characteristics of the bad man of the west. Three hold-up men come upon a dying mother with a day old babe on the desert.

In her last moments she names them the child's godfathers, and entrusts the keeping of her baby to them.

All but one perish in the trip to the nearest settlement, "New Jerusalem," and there the survivor is made a prisoner by the sheriff, later to be liberated when the sheriff learns of the kindness the bad man has shown toward the sheriff's sister, mother of the baby, who perished on the desert.

This is one of Mr. Kyne's first successful stories which was published in the Saturday Evening Post. The leading parts will be taken by Harry Carey and Stella Razeto.

THREE VOGUE COMEDIES COMPLETED IN TEN DAYS

Three Vogue slapstick comedies have been completed at the company's West Coast studios during the past ten days. "Devilish Business" is the title of one made by Director Rube Miller, wherein a charmed potato given a youth by a witch enables him to prevent his sweetheart from falling into the hands of Mephisto. The big climax for this is reached when the lad knocks 'll out of hades.

"A Still Hunt" is another Miller subject laid in the "moonshine" district of the Kentucky Hills. The principals of these two are Miller, Arthur Traveris and Madge Kirby.

Vogue Director Jack Dillon has been wearing grease paint for the past week, taking the part of a detective in "The Lion Hearted Chief," wherein he wins the hand of the chief's daughter when he proves to the chief that another detective, impersonated by Paddy McQuire, is a foreflusher. Priscilla Dean appears as the chief's daughter.

SIXTH "JOURNEY-ETTE" WITH TRAVELOGUER HOLMES TAKES AUDIENCES TO SEE GIANT TREES

"PICTURING Summer Days Near San Diego" and "The Giant Trees of California" will be the fifth and sixth releases, respectively, of the newly announced Paramount-Burton Holmes Travelpictures.

In the first, Mr. Holmes conducts the spectator to a "tea dance" at Hotel del Coronado, then to watch the bathers at Coronado Beach.

By way of contrast, the scene changes to the Mexican frontier where a lot of Americans are shown returning from a bullfight across the border at Tiajuana.

Returning to San Diego, the spectator is conducted through the Panama-California Exposition, and later to Mount Roubidoux, Riverside and the extensive orange ranches.

In the sixth "journey-ette," Mr. Holmes leads the way up into the giant forests of California, and introduces the spectator to the biggest of all big trees—"General Sherman," in the Sequoia National Park.

Fifteen men of Mr. Holmes' party join hands and try to circle the giant, but they have to add two horses before the circle is completed.

Through the primeval forest, the camera goes until it reaches a lumber camp in full swing.

Actual felling of giant trees is shown, and the whole process of lumbering; the lopping off of the great boughs, the removing of the bark, the sawing into transportable lengths, the rolling to the mill, the sawing into boards and finally the rapid journey through miles and miles of flumes which lead to the towns of the lowlands.

"OLD VIOLINIST," BY COCHRANE, FOR "U" IS HEART-INTEREST STORY

Few two-reel stories of recent months have the tender heart interest of George Cochrane's latest film, "The Old Violinist," which is ready for release on the Universal Program.

LILLIAN GISH AS SHE APPEARS IN A SCENE FROM "SOLD FOR MARRIAGE," NEW TRIANGLE-FINE ARTS PHOTOPLAY

The story was written by Thomas Jefferson, one of the most recent of the Universal's acquisitions, and in it he plays the leading role.

The tale hinges about the life of an old musician and the two little tots he adopts out of the kindness of his heart; their struggles for existence; later their separation, and finally their reunion through the success of an old opera the old man has written years previous and which, after passing through the hands of several people, is produced with the little girl, since grown to womanhood, appearing in the leading role.

The entire film is replete with sympathy-provoking heart interest that cannot but result in a most enthusiastic reception at the hands of the theatre-going public throughout the country.

TWO HUNDRED EXTRA GIRLS IN SUPPORT OF MISS BARRISCALE

About two hundred extra girls garbed in the attire of Italian peasants, worked in support of Bessie Barriscale last week at the Culver City, Cal., studios in a subject being filmed by Director Charles Giblyn. Opposite Miss Barriscale in this picture is William Desmond.

HUNT COMPLETES "THE JUNGLE HERO" FOR UNIVERSAL

Director Jay Hunt, of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has just completed an interesting animal photoplay, entitled "The Jungle Hero," which will be produced in two reels.

The principal roles in "The Jungle Hero" are in the hands of Colin Chase, Golda Colwell, Rex de Rosselli and Harry Ham, supported by a number of others.

RAY, HICKMAN AND STANDING IN LOUISE GLAUM'S VAMPIRE SUBJECT

Louise Glaum, who is being starred in a vampire story at the NYMP studio, has disclosed eight of the twelve remarkable creations for this subject.

Opposite Miss Glaum in this subject are Charles Ray, Howard Hickman, and Jack Standing.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, March 11.

THE cutting of the Ince war picture has been completed and the spectacular film entitled "He Who Returned" will be released in twelve reels.

The subject has now been turned over to Victor Schertzinger, head of the music department, who will devote his time exclusively to the preparation of incidental music for this feature.

So that he will not be disturbed, Ince has provided a private projecting room with adjoining quarters for the musician in an isolated part of the studio, far away from the unavoidable noises of the producing plant.

Mr. Schertzinger has provided the incidental score for all the Triangle-Kay-Bee subjects made by Ince, but this is his first attempt of preparing music for a large production.

He is one of the few who have seen the Ince feature, "He Who Returned," and feels confident that the subject contains so many features of an inspirational nature that he will make a success of the work of preparing the score.

Each time he has seen the picture Mr. Schertzinger declares he has discovered new beauties. Decision regarding the release of this will be reached within the next few days by Adam Kessel, Jr., president of the NYMP Corporation, and Thomas H. Ince.

Three Cameras Take Thrilling Fight

Inceville players are still discussing the fight scene made for a coming Hart subject, in which William S. Hart fought with P. D. Tabler for several minutes while three cameras took different views of the fight.

These scenes are for the sixteenth century romance in which Hart appears as a Spaniard, the sole survivor of a shipwreck who lands on the American shore and becomes the pride of the Aztec Indians. The fight scenes serve as a climax to the subject.

A heating and cooling system is being installed in the Culver City laboratories of the NYMP plant which will maintain a temperature of sixty-five degrees throughout the year.

The system was worked out by Business Manager E. H. Allen and the heads of the laboratory department, and special machinery of an automatic nature was made specially for the company.

THOMAS JEFFERSON IN A SCENE FROM "THE OLD VIOLINIST," UNIVERSAL

Views of Universal City are serving for a number of the settings for "A Love Romance," wherein Agnes Vernon as a daughter visits the studios with her mother and becomes infatuated with Herbert Rawlinson.

"A King on Broadway" First Bowman-"U"

Mother learns of this and induces Rawlinson to aid her in disillusioning the daughter by forgetting his manners when at a dinner party. The picture is being filmed by William Worthington, and will consist of two reels.

The first William J. Bowman-Universal subject of five reels has been titled "A King on Broadway." The story for this is by Mr. Bowman and Elliott Clawson, a recent addition to the scenario department, prepared the scenario.

Carter DeHaven is featured as Battling Jimmie, prize-fighter, who while taking the count of ten has a wonderful dream in which he sees himself made the king of an imaginary European nation, and he has many adventures.

The supporting case includes Walter Belesco as the king, Duke Worns as a newspaper reporter, Marvel Spencer as a vaudeville actress, Yona Landowski, Frank MacQuarrie, Malcolm Blevins and others.

Because of illness, Allen Curtis has been granted a leave af absence from his duties as director of the Joker company, and is spending several weeks on a ranch in Colorado. While he is away Hal Clements is directing the Curtis Company.

The other Joker company, formerly directed by Clements, is now being directed by Hal Clotworthy, formerly Clements' assistant, and the organization is filming "When a Wife Worries," with Victor Potel, Jane Bernoudy, Doris Fellows, Eddie Boland and Harry Mann.

The photoplay deals with a proud father who discovers that his first heir has just cut a tooth, and upon advice of friends as to the best article a child should have to chew on while cutting teeth, starts a search for a cuckoo's wishbone. To secure one he has many adventures.

Clifford and Wilbur at "Knights" Fiesta

William H. Clifford and Crane Wilbur of the Horsley studios were headliners last week at a vaudeville entertainment of the Knights of Columbus fiesta.

The former gave two readings from Shakespeare, on consisting of "Hamlet's Advice to the Players." Wilbur's act consisted of two readings entitled "Golden Olden Days," and "Good Mawnin', Jedge," both of which are among his original compositions.

Now that the Horsley artificially lighted studio is completed, the companies are taking turn about, working all night in order to catch up with the release.

The new studio was christened by the Edward Alexander company, making "The Hidden Law."

The following morning at eight o'clock they left for a region in the mountains where, accompanied by forty extras, a number of exteriors were made. William Clifford and Marguerite Gibson are featured in this subject.

"Conscience of John David"

The next subject to be made by Director Robert Broadwell is "The Conscience of John David," which was written by Crane Wilbur, who will be starred in the subject.

The other members of the cast have not been selected, but it is understood that Mae Gaston will play the feminine lead.

A very elaborate set representing the reception hall in a city mansion, was used last week in the making of "On the Rampage," a Cub comedy with George Ovey, at the Horsley studio.

In this subject Ovey appears as one of the down-and-out class who meets a bogus count in the park just prior to the arrest of the count.

In a suitcase left with Ovey is found an invitation to a reception, and he takes advantage of this, wearing the count's clothes.

The last scenes for "Paths That Cross" have been made at the Biograph studio, when a remarkable roof garden cafe setting was used which required the services of approximately sixty extra people, including professional dancers and other cabaret acts.

Macdonald Directed "Paths That Cross"

J. Farrell Macdonald is the director of this and will next take up the making of a quadrangle story entitled "The Larrimore Case."

There are four principal roles consisting of one feminine part taken by Vera Sisson, and three male roles by Charles Mailes, Jose Ruben and Rex Downs.

This will consist of three or four reels, and the plot constitutes a social tangle in which the unsuccessful lover induces the crooked bookkeeper to aid in bankrupting the firm of his rival.

This brings about a murder, and Larrimore, the husband, is accused. The climax is in a court room when the guilty bookkeeper confesses.

A pretty story of fisher folk of the Normandy coast is contained in the two-reel subject, entitled "Celeste," being made by Director Walter Coyle of the Biograph.

Fishing beach scenes were made at San Pedro. The story is one of a Paris girl being rescued from a wreck in which her parents are lost.

She becomes the adopted daughter of an aged fisherman and his wife, and later the American tourist discovers her.

Vola Smith appears in the name part, and the other members of the cast are Jack Mulhall, Ivan Christie, Jack Drumier, Clara McDowell and Charles Pearle.

THREE SCENES FROM NEW BLUEBIRD FEATURE DIRECTED BY CLEO MADISON

The Film Was Blistered, Cuthbert

Cameraman Percy Hilburn of the Lasky-George Melford Company, now producing "The Race" with Victor Moore as star, and Anita King in a featured part, attempted to secure exceptional close-ups of a fire scene, with the result that he now claims to having been so near that the film was blistered.

The scene was that of Miss King being locked in a garage when the building was set on fire.

The only thing she had to do was to crank the racing car, break down the doors of the garage and drive out before the roof fell in, all of which she did successfully.

In the filming of "The Love Mask," semi-western Lasky subject, Cleo Ridgeley was the sole occupant of a stage coach when the team ran away down hill.

Standing on the top of the vehicle she turned the horses into the brush at the side of the road and brought them to a stop fully a half mile from the camera.

In the runaway, Jose Steelman fell to the ground. He was run over and his foot was badly crushed.

Marie Doro, together with her leading man, Elliott Dexter, has arrived at the Lasky studio. Their first subject will be taken up shortly under the direction of Cecil B. deMille.

The photoplay is an adaptation from a Hector Turnbull story and a scenario by Gene McPherson. The story is yet unnamed.

Kipling Verse Aids Sennett

Because of the belief that other comedy makers are attempting to copy the style of comedies made by the Keystone Film Company, Mack Sennett has caused the following verse from Kipling's "Mary Glouster" to be adopted as the Keystone motto:

They copied all they could follow,
But they could not copy our mind,
And we left them sweating and swearing,
A year and a half behind.

Bessie Eyton, Eugenia Besserer, Tom Santchi, Will Machin, and Leo Pearson, Selig players, and Al. Green, assistant director, accompanied by James L. McGee, Selig studio manager, has departed for Chicago for the making of "The Crisis," adapted from the Winston Churchill novel.

During the various trips of the company to locations described in this book, and during the company's stay in Chicago, Mr. McGee will act as business manager.

Director Colin Campbell has been in the East for several weeks, and completed arrangements for locations, costumes and settings.

With the departure of this company, Marshall Neilan, who has been directing, and Wallace C. Clifton, scenario editor, the ranks have been materially lessened, and the Selig zoo studio does not have its accustomed busy atmosphere. But three companies remain at the studio. These are under the direction of Robert Daly, T. N. Heffron and Frank Beal.

SCENES FROM "THE TRAPPING OF PEELER WHITE"; AN EPISODE IN KALEM'S "HAZARDS OF HELEN," WITH HELEN GIBSON

Mr. Clifford completed his work as scenario editor last week, and accompanied by his family, departed for New York, where he will become writer for the Popular Plays and Players Company of the Metro program. Mrs. Clifford is known as a writer for the screen as Emma Bell.

A one reel comedy entitled "Cupid's Touchdown," and portraying college life, is being made by Director Frank Beal with Jack Pickford in the principal part.

Upon the completion of this Mr. Beal will take up the filming of a three-reel subject, "The Hare and the Tortoise."

This is based on the fable concerning the race, but the photoplay, which is by Anthony McGuire, deals with the life of two men beginning with their college career, and continuing until their old age. The cast for this has not been selected.

A farewell dinner was given Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree at the Alexandria Hotel Thursday evening, March 25. Mr. Tree completed the scenes in which he takes part in the Fine Arts subject, "Macbeth," and departed for New York.

Douglas Fairbanks presided as toast master, and there were toasts by D. W. Griffith, Dustin Farnum, Erick Von Strohern, John Emerson, Mary Alden, William Farnum, Constance Collier, DeWolf Hopper, J. C. Epping, and Bennie Lubinville Zeidman.

Others present at the dinner were Vera Lewis, Jack Conway, Viola Barry, Clara West, Jack Fairbanks, Charles Eyton, Courtenay Foote, Winifred Kingston, Frank Case, Ralph Lewis, George Hill, Kathlyn Williams, Raymond Wells, Mde. Rabinoff, and Douglas Girrard.

On the previous evening Mr. Tree was the guest of honor at a dinner given by M. F. Ihmsem, publisher of Hearst's Los Angeles Examiner, at the Los Angeles Athletic Club.

"Sold in Marriage," Fine Arts

The Fine Arts subject now nearing completion under the direction of William Christy Cabanne, which has been known as "Marja of the Steppe," has been titled "Sold in Marriage."

The scenario is by Will E. Wing, and the plot deals with the marriage custom of the Russians—that of the bride's father accepting a liberal payment from the groom for the girl, and she having no voice at all in the question of the selection of her husband.

The last scenes for this were made aboard the Pacific Coast liner, Congress, which was leased for a special trip between Los Angeles and San Diego.

Those in the party taking the trip were Lillian Gish, A. D. Sears, Frank Bennett, Pearl Elmore, W. E. Lowry, Elmo Lincoln, Elmer Ruben, and a number of others, including two cameramen, Billie Fildew and Sam Abel.

HARRY BOOKER AND LOUISE FAZENDA IN "THE JUDGE," KEYSTONE-TRIANGLE

George Broadhurst, the dramatist, has been induced to play in a coming Fine Arts subject being filmed by Director Paul Powell.

The scenes were made at a golf grounds where Mr. Broadhurst was enjoying a game when the producing company arrived to make scenes. He appears in the part of a wealthy man amusing himself with golf.

Children of the Fine Arts studio school have a greater incentive now for getting their lessons, as Douglas Fairbanks has offered a cash prize of one hundred dollars to be paid to the one receiving the highest average grade during the remainder of the present school year. There are twelve children enrolled in the Fine Arts school.

"Village Vampire" Finished

A Keystone finished this week is "The Village Vampire," with Fred Mace as the station agent, Anna Luther his daughter. The other members of the cast are Dale Fuller, Joseph Swickard, Earl Rodney, Billy Brockwell, Charles Arling and Hugh Fay.

At the Christie studios, Al. E. Christie is filming "He's a Devil," a single reel by Tom Gibson, with Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Betty Compson.

There is a lover's quarrel, and the lover, Eddie Lyons, proceeds to take too many drinks. When he awakes in the morning he find a copy of "Faust" in his pocket.

He dreams the devil made a proposition similar to the one he induced "Faust" to accept, with the provision that Eddie should not spend more than twenty-five dollars at one time.

While he is asleep a crook robs the hotel safe, and when pursued goes through Eddie's room and leaves the bag of coin. By way of a peace offering he arranges a dinner for his girl and some friends prior to a masquerade ball.

The bill amounts to twenty-five dollars and ten cents, and knowing he has overstepped the limit, starts to leave the hotel without paying the bill, when he is confronted by a mephisto. The house detective finally aids him in straightening out the difficulty.

The Place Is Pinched!

"Never Lie to Your Wife" is another Christie comedy being made under the direction of Horace Davey with Ray Gallagher and Billie Rhodes as the newlyweds, who live with her parents.

Father-in-law is a gay old boy and soon educates his son-in-law to do the same stunts. The men not wishing to attend the opera, decide to pretend sickness, and then participate in a big game that's on that night.

When the gambling house is pinched, father and son-in-law escape, but mother and daughter, who have followed them, are taken in tow by the officers; but father has dropped a card, and in this way his arrest is brought about, and the married men promise "never again."

All of the animals and freaks of the E and R Jungle zoo worked last week in the filming of "One Awful Night," a one-reel comedy of circus life in which the rival of the animal trainer turns all the animals loose, in order that the trainer will be shown up as a coward.

The story is by Frances Willy, and the principals are Lillian Leighton, Ralph McComas, Ann Kroman and Charles Carter.

The zoo, besides lions, tigers, pumas, leopards, bears and the two educated chimpanzees, Napoleon and Sallie, contain forty-two varieties of monkeys, many species of parrots and other topical animals, and their appearance in this subject will give it added value as an educational comedy.

The Jaccard Universal Company has discontinued making western pictures, and has now taken up the making of a series of two-reel plays that will depict underworld conditions in their true light and show the relation of the underworld with people of a higher social strata.

The first of this series, "The Other Half," has been completed, and the second, "Purple Shadow," is now being made. The latter deals with secret Italian society and its effects upon modern American city life.

The cast for this series includes Raymond Nye, Hector Sarno, and Roberta Wilson. Mr. Jaccard is assisted by George Marshall, and Milton Moore is in charge of the camera work.

Unusual Sets in a Lasky

The David Belasco play "Sweet Kitty Bellairs," originally adapted from the Bath comedy by C. M. and N. A. Williamson, and now being produced for the screen at the Lasky studio by James Young, will be a notable screen play because of the beautiful interior and exterior settings used.

Mae Murray is the featured star, and Tom Forman appears in the masculine lead, with a supporting cast which includes James Neil, H. B. Carpenter, Raymond Hatton, Lucille Younge, and Lucille Bennett.

"The Detectives" is the name of a one-reel child play being made for Universal by Stewart Featherstanhough and Cecil Myers at the Gordon Street studio.

The players in this are Frank Butterworth, Irma Salter, John Cook, and Kathlyn Griffith. The children find a yellow back detective story in an ash can, which they read, and later when they hear of a bank robbery at the corner grocery store, start on the trail of the criminals.

Through sheer luck they find the stolen money, which they return to the bank and receive their reward.

Andrew Arbuckle, late of Balboa Company, and Gladys Brockwell formerly at the Fine Arts studio, are now members of Universal stock company.

George Cann, who came to the Universal as business manager, is returning to New York City, where he will again be connected with the Eastern offices.

Missionary Delegates in "Weekly"

Universal Weekly cameramen during the past week made scenes at the Layman's missionary convention attended by six thousand delegates. Later the Universal Company projected these views in the convention hall, following an address given by former Lieutenant Governor Wallace of California on the subject of motion pictures and the industry in California.

The next Tyrone Power feature now being produced by the Smalleys, "The Eye of God," will, like "Hypocrites" and "Scandal," both made by these producers, have a vision effect consisting of an eye which continually looks upon the man with the guilty conscience.

This part is taken by Power, the character being that of a country man who commits murder to secure wealth, and his conscience later forces him to confess.

A two-reel animal comedy with scenes supposed to be laid in New York is being made by the 101 Bison company. The title is "The Resurrection of Tammany's Tiger," and is being produced by Henry McRae.

Many of the Universal zoo animals take part in this, and a number of the scenes were made in a Los Angeles cafe, where a large lion was used.

The politicians failing to secure a stuffed lion, take a live one and have it doped. The drug wears off, and the lion creates a riot, breaking out of the cafe, and attacking a parade the party leaders are staging in the streets.

This all serves the enemies of the political party who had induced the veterinary to give the animal but a small portion of sleeping powder.

Jitney Expert to the Front

The last Joker comedy to be made by Allen Curtis for several weeks is "A Jitney Driver's Romance," wherein a buzz wagon driver falls in love with the traction magnate's daughter, and so completely organizes the auto lines that he forces the man of wealth to permit him to win the hand of the daughter.

William Franey appears as the jitney driver, Milburn Moranty the magnate, and Gale Henry the daughter.

Adele Farrington, in private life Mrs. Hobart Bosworth, has been selected to appear in the featured part of a five-reel subject being made by Director Jay Hunt, who prepared the scenario from a story by Gertrude Nelson Andrews.

The title of this is "Wheels of Power" and Miss Farrington appears in the part of Lil Magill, a newspaper woman employed on a daily owned by a mine magnate.

Between the magnate and the woman there is a mutual love affair. She writes "sob" stories concerning the hardships of the miners' families at a time when labor troubles seem imperative.

At a time when the magnate shows a disposition to tire of her she steps in front of him, thinking to prevent a mob leader from firing a leveled gun.

She is seriously injured, and during the illness which follows, she and her former lover, a newspaper writer, are reunited.

Others in the cast are C. N. Hammond as the magnate, O. C. Jackson, Kingsley Benedict, Harry Mann, Mina Jeffries, and others.

At Work on 16th "Graft" Episode

The Richard Stanton "Graft" Company is now working on the sixteenth episode, entitled "The Pirates of Finance."

In this the relative of the family which began the crusade against the various trusts, serves to prevent a financial panic by controlling the head of the mighty money trust.

MACK SENNETT AND HIS MOTHER ON THE KEYSTONE STAGE

The cast for "The Three Godfathers," adapted from the Peter B. Kyne story by Harvey Gates, was made public last week, and Harry Carey will be supported by Stella Razeto, George Berrill, Frank Laning, Hart Hoxey and others.

Rev. P. F. Shammon, a Catholic priest of Santa Monica, is playing an important part in the staging of scenes for the coming Bessie Barriscale subject being filmed by Director Charles Giblyn at the Culver City studio.

In this an elaborate altar is used, the building of which required two weeks, and the priest is superintending the making of scenes showing action in and about the altar. In this play Miss Barriscale appears as a nun.

Following the completion of this the popular Ince star will appear in a story being especially written for her by C. Gardner Sullivan in which she will be afforded the opportunity of wearing several gorgeous gowns.

No Bureaucratic Power for Police in Los Angeles

City Council Is Not Likely to Seriously Consider Attempt of the Department to Gain Right to Revoke Licenses of Theatres

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, March 11.

THE City Council of Los Angeles will in all probability fail to seriously consider an attempt on the part of the police board to invest the police department with the power to revoke the permit and license of theatres in the city.

The police department requested that the city council pass an ordinance providing that every theatre in the city be required to take out a permit from the police commission, and that the commission should in the future have power to revoke these permits and close the theatres.

A number of theatre men knowing such a request was to be made by the police department, were present at the City Council meeting, but before they had opportunity to protest against such a measure, the members of the Public Welfare Committee which recently investigated the needs of a board of censorship, and to whom the request was referred, took up the fight of the theatre men.

All three members of this committee voiced their sentiments as being against such an ordinance, and insisted that the police now have sufficient laws to inforce, covering the matter.

They refer to such an ordinance as being ridiculous in view of the fact that present state laws extend to the police department the power to stop any performance that is improper, providing complaint is made.

The ordinance providing for the abolishment of the present board of motion picture censors, and the appointment of a commissioner to see that recommendations of the National Board of Censorship are carried out, has been prepared by the city attorney, but hearing has been postponed from time to time for the past several weeks.

The ordinance received an O. K. from every member of the Public Welfare Committee, and was given a hearing before the City Council Tuesday, March 7.

Practically every society of long-haired reformers of the city had representatives at the hearing to fight against the passage of this measure. The motion picture industry organizations, including the Producers Association, Exchangemen's Board of Trade, and the commercial organizations of the city, had representatives at the meeting to work for the passage of the ordinance.

"DIAMOND FROM THE SKY" CREATES FOREIGN DEMAND

The American Film Company's thirty-chapter photoplay, picturized from the story and scenario by Roy L. McCardell, has proven so popular in this country that foreign demand has been created.

Sixty-one reels of positive film and an equal amount of negative film constitute the shipment, which required twenty-one galvanized iron fireproof cases.

"NONE SO BLIND," 3-REEL LUBIN IN WORK UNDER MAYO AT CORONADO

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

San Diego, Cal., March 11.

"None So Blind" is the title of a three-reel picture which is now being made at the Lubin plant in Coronado, with Melvin Mayo directing.

It is the story of a lieutenant in the navy, who, as inspector of submarines, was tendered a bribe to get him to accept a certain type of vessel.

Because of his refusal to do this the shipbuilder, through some faked letters, threw suspicion on him and finally, following a court-martial, the young officer was dismissed from the service.

He was ostracized by his former friends, and finally went to the Hawaiian Islands, where he took to drink.

A Kanaka girl, whom he had protected in a street brawl, was the means of his regeneration, and he decides to marry her.

His former sweetheart, an heiress, after his leaving the States, broods over his departure, and her mother at last gets her to take a sea-voyage on their private yacht. They visit the Hawaiian Islands and there learn of his presence.

A reception is given on board, and he is invited. Some of the Kanakas who are embittered against him because the native girl has taken up with him determine to board the yacht and kill him.

The girl hears of the plot and swims out to the yacht in time to save him, but is killed by the Kanakas for betraying them.

The American lieutenant, following the death of the Kanaka girl, sails back to the States with his heiress sweetheart. The plot to blacken his character is cleared up and he is restored to rank.

Walter Spencer is seen in the character of Lieutenant Fred Watson, with Evelyn Page as Gladys Remington, the heiress. Adelaide Bronti appears as Mrs. Remington, the wealthy mother, while the part of Ukane, the Kanaka girl, is taken by Princess Mona Dark Feather.

Van Auker is in the caste as Milton Hesser, the president of the Sunset Shipbuilding Company. Miss Saville has the part of Madge, his stenographer, while George Routh is seen as Rogers, manager of the shipyard.

There are many "extras" in use as beachcombers and the like. Captain Wilbert Melville's private yacht is used in filming many of the scenes. A Hawaiian street, with its thatched huts, was built up in the famous Coronado Tent City.

Dorothy Gish and a party of twelve players from the D. W. Griffith studio in Los Angeles were down here the past week to take scenes on the Coronado polo grounds, with Paul T. Powell directing, for a five-reel picture, "A Modern Joan."

Another party, also from the Griffith studio, came down by steamer, taking pictures en route. A number of scenes were taken in and around San Diego as a part of a twenty-reel feature, with William Christy Cabanne directing.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

WILL all publicity men and press agents take time enough to step around to the Frohman Amusement Company's studios and present a bouquet of orchids to "Jack" Sherrill, thereby conferring a favor, etc., etc. He tops them all, for last Wednesday the greatest dailies of the whole country carried front page stories about his having been robbed of $12,000 in jewels—family jewels, too. You who have been trying to put over the great jewel robbery story for the last eighteen years, can learn something from this young actor.

Last week, in Chicago, where he was appearing in person at showings of "The Woman in 47," in which he appeared under George Irving's direction, he made a bet that he could "put over" the old jewel story. And he did it, by means of a simple advertisement in Chicago papers. Not only did the great editors out there fall, but the matter was cabled to New York, and so eagerly did the papers here grab the news that William L. Sherrill, the young man's father, became alarmed. There really are some of the Sherrill family gems in a vault in Chicago, and the first thing which occurred to Mr. Sherrill was that his son had had a rough evening, and had broken into the vault.

It cost $13.62 in telegraph tolls to find out that the whole story was the result of a bet that Jack could make the great editors swallow the old, old bait.

"$670,000 [sic] per annum also brings with it its little cares," mimeographs Terry Ramsaye. Too true, Terry, too true. We haven't had a real good night's rest in three weeks.

He continues: "To Charlie Chaplin it has brought three secretaries, five stenographers and a deluge of literature—congratulatory, reflective, hopeful, designing and 'mash.'" If we will be pardoned a personal reference, it has brought three creditors, five process-servers and a deluge of literature — peremptory, remorseless, hopeless, determined and "smash."

In a story which, the title informs us, relates happenings which occurred "prior to 1901," Thomas Carrigan dashes into the scene in a shiny Packard touring car. If anyone in the audience has a Packard touring car, 1901 model, to dispose of, we believe we can put them in touch with a purchaser.

And while on the subject of higher criticism, it might be in order to refer to a feature picture in which the Duke of Cluny is shot squarely through the heart. Yet he lives through more than 100 feet of film—long enough to be helped home, where he has the strength to ask his wife's forgiveness.

No, Sheldon, this is not a photograph of a nurse, torn by a piece of shrapnel in the trenches of the Argonne. It is a photograph of Virginia Pearson, the Fox cream bather, sent out by the Fox publicity bureau. The malformation on the cheek is only a beauty patch, "the Pearson Patch," to use a trade term, and if the pink sheets accompanying the photograph are at all reliable, it is capable of most artistic expression. Art is sometimes exotic, if not erotic. Do you mind if we quote from the Pearson publicity sheet? "For example, Miss Pearson is asked to dine with an admiring male friend. She has become so expert at the art of clipping out likenesses that after a good look at her friend's face she returns to her quarters and quickly nips out his face from a piece of ordinary black court plaster. This shadow drawing . . . is stuck on where it most becomes the gown or hair dressing—on the cheek, if the 'he' is in slight favor, or if greater is the interest it is placed down nearer the heart." Reading on, and on, and on, we learn that the admirer gets his only answer by studying the exposed parts of the lady when she appears at dance or dinner, and recognizing his own profile across the table or dancing floor. After rushing over to the tailor's and examining our profile in the triple mirrors, we have decided not to invite Miss Pearson to dine. Call us stingy if you will!

By special permission of the government, the Equitable forces, under John Ince, used the entire Cuban navy in the production of "The Struggle" which has just been finished in Havana. According to Harry Reichenbach, some unprincipled culprit, or perhaps an oaf, attempted to spoil the picture by ringing in another tug-boat; but Mr. Ince was not to be fooled; he has been in Havana long enough to know the Cuban navy when he sees it. Besides, the fake boat had a two-degree list to starboard, and the navy always rides on an even keel, as everybody knows.

An esteemed contemporary—in fact, Burns Mantle's own paper, headlines: "Sir Tree Completes Yards of Shakespeare." Sir Tree, you may recall, is the distinguished actor who was knighted by King Guelph. He is well known outside his own country, having appeared more than once before Czar Romanoff and Emperor Hohenzollern.

Six guesses are allowed as to who sent out the following: "Much has been written about Hazel Dawn abandoning her violin for the screen when she joined the Famous Players to star in Paramount Pictures. But the truth has finally come out—she has not abandoned it at all! In fact, she plays it in her next picture." We yield to nobody in our ability to look at Miss Dawn; but when it comes to her violin—well, the screen's the thing!

"Jack" Fuld, one of the closest students of Universal offerings that this generation has produced—thus far—has evolved the following:

"Harry Meyers and Rosemary Theby
Both gave Universal the G. B.*
And from what I hear
(Just a flea in your ear),
She'll still be a star;
But what'll he be?"

*Good-bye.

Agents of the "I Knew Them When Club" have been busy recently, digging up the early careers of film actors and actresses before they became the great props of the celluloid drama which they are today. Some of the facts so far obtained are:

William Farnum was a boy cornetist.

B. A. Rolfe was——and is——ditto.

Claire Whitney was a hat model.

Mabel Normand worked in a pattern shop.

Irene Howley was a stenographer in Brooklyn.

Stuart Holmes was a soda clerk.

Pierre Le May was a broker.

Pauline Frederick was a chorus girl.

Frances Marion was an illustrator and designer.

George Irving was an actor.

Kate Price was a milliner. Etc., etc., etc., etc.

Real Department Store for "The Saleslady"

Famous Players Director Obtains Use of Big Mercantile Establishment on Sundays and Engages 300 Employees from Its Force to Take Part in Hazel Dawn Subject

HAZEL DAWN IN A SCENE FROM "THE SALESLADY," FORTHCOMING FAMOUS PLAYERS PHOTOPLAY

TWO of New York's most conspicuous phases—the "tired business man's" musical comedy and the great department store—will be presented in their most realistic forms when the Famous Players Film Company presents Hazel Dawn in "The Saleslady," by Willard Mack, on the Paramount Program, March 23.

For the production of this film, Director Frederick Thomson resorted to the use of one of New York's greatest and most celebrated department stores, three hundred employees of which were engaged on successive Sundays to "act natural."

To the big establishment the Famous Players' electricians transported truckloads of lighting apparatus which was planted strategically around the ribbon counter and along the main aisles of the store.

Here Miss Dawn dispensed ribbons and smiles to everyone except a flirtatious floorwalker, who proved to be the villain of the story. It is the first time that a New York department store has ever been used by a film producer as the setting for a photoplay.

The results obtained by the experiment prove conclusively that the trouble involved in installing the temporary lighting system was more than amply repaid.

Going still further in his quest for realism, the director took Miss Dawn, the lighting experts and several members of the supporting cast to Bustanoby's restaurant and later to Rector's, where typical scenes of New York night life were enacted before the camera.

These incidents were as nothing, however, compared with events which transpired later in the Famous Players studio when a large portion of the "Ziegfield Follies" chorus and a full orchestra took possession of the floor.

A full-sized replica of a theatre proscenium had been constructed in the studio, with stage, orchestra pit, boxes, etc., for the purpose of filming that part of the story in which Helen, the girl, enacted by Miss Dawn, becomes a member of the chorus.

In another part of the studio, a perfect dressing room had been erected into which the chorus girls trouped at the end of the scene and performed some of those antics which all stageland recognizes as being absolutely essential to the peace and happiness of the chorus lady.

Not only did Mr. Thomson employ an orchestra to play during the taking of the musical comedy scenes, but he made all the ladies of the chorus learn a song—the same song—which they actually sang as they danced, thereby obtaining perfect rhythm both in the dance and in the movements of their mouths! Even seasoned veterans at the studio who watched the making of this scene declared that the "nth" degree of realism had never been quite so comprehensively attained.

Among those in support of Miss Dawn are Irving Cummings, Clarence Handysides, Arthur Morrison, Dorothy Rogers, Janet Findley, Blanche Craig and Florence Ashbrook.

VITAGRAPH HOLLYWOOD STUDIO COMPLETE

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, March 11.

The Vitagraph Hollywood studio is now complete in every detail, the laboratory, dark room, projecting and camera rooms having been finished.

The buildings formerly occupied at Santa Monica have been raised and a portion of them moved to the Hollywood site.

It has been found necessary to increase the number of dressing rooms, and these will be built at once together with a large enclosed studio.

CREDIT FOR ACTION AND CAMERA EFFECTS DUE BERTRAM

To Director Bertram is due all the credit for the action and photography in "Snow Stuff," a three-part Mustang subject in the "Buck Parvin" series by Charles E. Van Loan.

In days not long ago, Director Bertram "cruised the big timber" on a still hunt for the yellow metal, "punching" his dogs and following his sledge over the snow and ice of the frozen North.

When he was given this subject he started negotiations with erstwhile friends at Valdez, Alaska, through whom he could secure the necessary "props" for the appropriate handling of the story.

When the dogs were received, Director Bertram had little difficulty in teaching his leading man, Art Acord, and his leading lady, Dixie Stratton, the art of handling the brisk little animals and the guiding pole of the sledge.

"Snow Stuff" is scheduled for release through the regular Mutual service on March 24.

"TWIN TRUNK MYSTERY," FEATURING ARMSTRONG FOR HORSLEY, READY ON ST. PATRICK'S DAY

After six weeks between releases, Billy Armstrong, the pantomimic comedian, makes his reappearance in a Cub Comedy with the release of "The Twin Trunk Mystery" on the Mutual program, March 17.

BILLY ARMSTRONG

Armstrong is the comedian formerly associated with Charley Chaplin during his music hall days and later in motion pictures.

He was signed by David Horsley last fall and made his bow in a Cub Comedy released early in February.

The Cub Comedy following Armstrong's will again present George Ovey. It is called "On the Rampage" and is scheduled for release, March 24.

DENVER MUTUAL RECEIVES MANY CHAPLIN INQUIRIES FROM INTER-MOUNTAIN EXHIBITORS

W. E. SCOTT, manager of the Mutual Exchange, Denver, reports that his roadman Harry Cassidy has been stalled in Chama, N. M., for the past eight days on account of the enormous snowslides, having tied up the railroads for the past week.

The railroads report that traffic will be opened to Chama within a very short time, as there are thousands of men at work removing the snow.

Scott also reports that since announcements of Charles Chaplin signing with the Mutual, two thirds of the mail that comes into the office is inquiries about Chaplin releases on the Mutual program.

O. H. Carlson, former head booker for Mutual has resigned his position on account of poor health. Richard Battles, former assistant booker, has been placed in charge of this department.

The State-right Film Exchange, Denver, was recently organized by a few prominent Denver business men with Roscoe C. Moore at the head.

The policy of the company will be to handle the best pictures that can be selected from the open market for the Intermountain territory. Arrangements are being made to handle two of the leading photoplays.

Roscoe Moore will be in charge of the office. Moore is a former exchangeman of experience, and is favorably known in that section.

Charles R. Gilmour, manager of the World Film Corporation, reports that the western division manager for the World Film, Denham Palmer, stopped over in Denver last week. He is making a tour of all the offices in the Western territory.

The "flag of prosperity" is much in evidence over the Bluebird's office in Denver, owing to the fact that Manager Carl Stearn has just purchased a late model Maxwell touring car.

Manager Stearn has left for a trip through the southern part of Colorado and then into New Mexico in the new car. As the southern part of Colorado has recently been tied up by the snow slides, we can expect Stearn in Denver any time between now and January 1.

L. Marcus, president and general manager of the Notable Feature Film Company, Denver, handling Paramount productions, is on his way to Frisco to arrange for new prints of Paramount attractions. He will return to Denver in about ten days.

The Metro Exchange, Denver, under management of William T. Binford, reports that business is showing a steady increase for the Metro attractions.

PATHÉ QUAKER CITY BRANCH, UNDER OSBORNE, ADDS ANOTHER FLOOR; WORTHINGTON LOOKS AFTER FOX

"PEGGY," with Billie Burke, the recent Triangle production, created a stir by running two solid weeks at the Arcadia, Philadelphia, with crowded houses to the end. Some people went two and three times to see it. This is the first film that ever ran so long at this theatre.

The Triangle office reports business good on all recent releases.

H. M. Osborne, the new Pathé manager, was eight years in Washington, D. C., but being a born Pennsylvanian, he is glad to return to the Keystone State.

Mr. Osborne does not contemplate any change in the office force, though he anticipates adding another floor to the present quarters for use as a poster room.

Pathé's "Little Mary Sunshine" is taking splendidly in that territory. The "Iron Claw" was considerably clawed about by the censors, but finally got through with some cuts and compromises.

The censors, however, actually went out of their way to recommend "Little Mary Sunshine."

C. L. Worthington, formerly manager of the Fox Office in Philadelphia, but more recently district manager of the Middle West for Fox, has been transferred to the same position in the Eastern district.

Mr. Worthington will look after Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Washington and Syracuse, N. Y., with headquarters in Philadelphia.

B. F. Keith's Allegheny theatre, a large house in the Kensington district, is the latest theatre to sign a Fox contract for a week's first run of feature releases in that section.

The Philadelphia office is congratulating itself that "The Bondman" will be released on regular service, the first Hall Caine play to be thus managed.

In spite of a severe snow storm on Monday night, Lasky's "To Have and to Hold," with Mae Murray and Wallace Reid, made its bow at the Stanley theatre to a large audience.

The Paramount office is chuckling at the excellent reviews accorded this picture by several Philadelphia papers.

"Ben Blair," the latest Pallas picture with Dustin Farnum as star, had a hard bout with the censors before being allowed to leave the ring, slightly wounded yet victorious.

The right arguments sometimes cause the board to have a change of heart.

The Mutual office is fairly swamped with inquiries, requests, even petitions, to have a chance at the future Chaplin releases. Even small exhibitors are begging for a week's booking at topnotch prices. Mutual's policy in Philadelphia will be to give first show to exhibitors who already are handling Mutual service.

The business of the Fairmount Film Exchange has increased about 200 per cent. since Bluebirds flew into their keeping. The "Birds" are steadily rising to greater heights in the City of Brotherly Love.

Another print of the Harry Watson "Musty Suffer" comedies had to be added to Kleine's store, so rapidly is the demand increasing on these pictures.

The office continues to be deluged with inquiries about the Billie Burke serial.

No details, however, having yet been received by the Philadelphia office, exhibitors must, for the time being, possess their souls in patience.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., IS MADE V-L-S-E BUYING OFFICE

The volume of business resulting from the opening of a sub-office in Syracuse, N. Y., several weeks ago has caused the Big Four to make this branch one of its buying exchanges.

It will be under the management of A. N. Webster, who has been with the V-L-S-E since its inception, and who is one of the best known film men in the state.

Mr. Webster has a large force of salesmen and ideal quarters to handle all the business of a metropolitan exchange.

The office of the Big Four in Syracuse occupies an entire two-story building. On the first floor are the general sales departments, and the shipping department. The upper floors will be devoted to a spacious projection room and poster display room.

The new Syracuse branch will serve all the territory of New York State, north and east of Albany, and including Albany. This will relieve some of the pressure under which the New York branch has been working for a long time past, the business throughout the state increasing in such proportions, that notwithstanding the fact that the New York branch early in the year doubled the size of its quarters, it has been seriously embarrassed in taking care of the demands made upon it.

CASH-IN-ADVANCE PLAN POPULAR ON PACIFIC COAST

The plan whereby film exchanges in San Francisco will send out films only when exhibitors pay for the service in advance, which has been given a trial in a modified form at San Francisco during the past year, is spreading to other Pacific Coast distributing centers and promises to be generally adopted at an early date.

This idea was adopted shortly after the formation of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco and met with so much opposition, being such a change from the former loose system of doing business, that it was modified in order to fully satisfy everyone.

Exhibitors may now take out films without prepayment, but in case the account is not settled within so many days no more films are to be had without cash in advance, nor may service be had from other exchanges unless this rule is observed.

By this plan all accounts are settled within a few days and the system is virtually a cash proposition.

Exchange managers in other Coast cities are placing into effect systems based upon the one in operation in San Francisco, having secured detailed reports of the working of the Film Exchange Board of Trade, but in most cases are making the rules even more stringent.

The immediate effect of the placing in operation of a cash in advance plan in any of these cities has been to bring to a close the operations of irresponsible exhibitors who have been the cause of heavy losses to film exchanges.

FEATURE FILM AND CALCIUM LIGHT BACK IN BUSINESS

The Feature Film and Calcium Light Company of Pittsburgh, which more than a year ago went out of the motion picture film business, has again returned to the fold.

It was thought that on account of the big increase in its other business it would not be able to handle the film end.

The company has secured the right to a number of pictures which will prove to be big drawing cards and will have both a feature and program department.

The management of the film business has not been announced by the officials of the company.

LEE N. Y. STATE REPRESENTATIVE FOR MERIT, IVAN DISTRIBUTORS

Joe Lee, well known to the exhibitors of New York State, has become New York State representative for the Merit Film Corporation, distributors of Ivan Film Productions in the Empire state.

Mr. Lee is making an extended trip for the Merit, taking in all the large cities, in New York State, from Albany to Syracuse and reports that the exhibitors are doing well with Ivan Productions.

Mr. Lee expects to open an office to facilitate shipping of Ivan subjects in one of the larger cities up state within the next few weeks.

GOLDSTEIN OF UNIVERSAL IN DENVER INAUGURATES SYSTEM ELIMINATING MISTAKES

At a recent interview Manager Louis Goldstein of the Denver Universal exchange, said: "I make the exhibitor realize that his business success means as much to us as it does to him.

"To a great many exchanges, service means only the supplying of a certain number of films and posters to the exhibitor and after that has been done, their interest in the exhibitor comes to an end.

"But with this exchange as well as all the other Universal exchanges, such is not the case. Our interest in the exhibitor is always kept alive, and even after his wants have been supplied. Nothing is left to the imagination; nothing is taken for granted.

"I have always been a firm believer in a fixed system, a system for everything that positively eliminates the making of mistakes. I have spent much time perfecting my office system and I don't really know what I would do if a mistake were to occur in this office.

"In the first place, all employees have been instructed that mistakes are fatal and that they will not be tolerated.

"Another feature in serving the exhibitor is the personality of all employees. In this exchange each employee is an expert in his or her particular line, and, again, this assures all exhibitors doing business with us that they will be looked after the way they want to be looked after.

"Service in this office means all the word implies. I try to make the exhibitor a booster for the Universal program, and I feel that the success of this office is in a large measure due to the consistent support rendered us by the exhibitors in this territory.

Fifty-five per cent. of all exhibitors in this intermountain territory are Universal exhibitors, so you can therefore readily see that the service rendered the exhibitors is really appreciated.

"Courtesy to the exhibitors regardless of their weekly rentals is the policy adhered to by every employee connected with this exchange.

"The exhibitor who pays five dollars per week is accorded the same treatment as the man who pays fifty per week. It is the duty of a certain employee to find out what every exhibitor wants the moment he enters the door.

"Personal attention is being accorded every account, and out-of-town accounts receive the same attention as the city exhibitor.

"We at all times welcome suggestions from our accounts, for we fully realize that there is always room for improvement. It is our foremost desire to constantly better our service; we want the exhibitors in this territory to understand that whenever they submit an idea to us and the same is found to be practical, it will certainly be carried out.

"We have installed a new poster system which makes it impossible to send out posters that do not correspond with the film.

"I make it a personal duty to see that outgoing films are in good condition; posters are in good shape; that shipments go out on the right train; advance advertising matter is sent far enough in advance to benefit the exhibitor; and that personal attention is given to all complaints and orders.

"This is what we call service, and it is just what our accounts receive.

L. AND R. FEATURE OPENED IN WASHINGTON, D. C., BY ROSENBERG

The L. and R. Feature Film Company has opened an exchange in Washington, D. C., in the Bank of Commerce Building, with M. Rosenberg as manager.

The territory covered by the office will include the District of Columbia, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and North Carolina, handling state rights features.

Just at present the "Spoilers" is doing big business from that office in Washington as well as the territory generally. Though scarcely well acquainted as yet, Mr. Rosenberg finds exhibitors responsive and feels he has made a logical and favorable location.

He is a man used to handling big features in a broad way, a man who has made an enviable reputation for himself as a business success in films in the West, and he anticipates meeting the same success in his present quarters in the East.

CELEBRATED PLAYERS COMPANY GETS RIGHTS TO 3 STATES FOR "OTHER GIRL"

The Celebrated Players Film Company of Chicago has secured the rights for the states of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin of "The Other Girl," the Augustus Thomas play, which was converted into motion picture form by the Raver Film Corporation.

The same day the picture was purchased, J. L. Friedman, general manager of the Celebrated, booked a print through a circuit of first-run theatres in Indiana and opened negotiations for one of the best circuits in the city of Chicago.

The Celebrated is also handling "Life Without Soul" and "The Fortunate Youth," two Ocean Film releases which are being marketed by the Raver Film Corporation.

O'DONNELL NEW PATHE MANAGER AT WASHINGTON

The Washington, D. C., Pathé Exchange has a new manager in D. F. O'Donnell, from the New York office.

He succeeds H. M. Osborne, who has been at the head of the Washington office for a number of years and has now been transferred to Philadelphia in promotion.

CAMPBELL IS BLUEBIRD HEAD IN ONTARIO

Mr. Campbell, formerly with the Mutual company and latterly Toronto manager of the World Film Company, has decided to change his residence to the Toronto Bluebird Nest, and has been appointed manager in Ontario for the Bluebird company.

EASTERN BOOKING WILL REMAIN IN VINE STREET

The Eastern Booking Office, Philadelphia, will not desert Vine street. Following closely on the heels of this decision by Marcus and Newman, owners of the Eastern, a spacious, well-situated building, has been leased at 1225 Vine street, and the force comfortably installed therein.

Larger quarters were made necessary by new contracts of the firm, which will in future represent the Authors' Film Company in that territory, besides retaining its large number of independent releases. The Authors' will at present put out two features each week.

HARRY CHARNAS MAKES CHANGES

Harry Charnas, president and general manager of the Standard Film Service, Inc., of Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati, announces the following changes:

Bert Deiner, formerly manager at Detroit, has been transferred to do special work in Cleveland; W. K. Allen has been appointed booking manager at Detroit, and Jesse Fishman, manager at Detroit; L. W. Greenstine, formerly at Detroit, goes to Cincinnati as manager of that office.

LYTLE NOW WITH V-L-S-E IN CINCINNATI

The Cincinnati sales force of the Big Four has been augmented by J. B. Lytle, formerly with the Cincinnati office of the World Film Corporation.

Mr. Lytle will handle the Indiana territory and three counties in Ohio. The other sections of Ohio, and a part of West Virginia, will be covered by F. B. Chase, another new Big Four representative who has been branch manager for the Western Union Telegraph Company, and whose selling experience covers a long period.

OSBORNE TAKES PLACE OF ATWOOD IN PATHE QUAKER CITY OFFICE

Not only the Pathé office contingent, but his many friends in Film Row heard with regret of the resignation of G. H. Atwood as manager of the Philadelphia Pathé office, which under his able direction has held a front rank in that territory.

Mr. Atwood, while expecting to remain in the picture industry, is not yet prepared to announce his future plans.

H. M. Osborne, of the Washington branch, takes over the Philadelphia office.

ADAMS REPRESENTS GENERAL IN DETROIT AND TOLEDO

R. A. Adams has been appointed special representative in Detroit and Toledo for the General Film Company, with headquarters at the Detroit branch.

He was formerly associated with the Detroit Kriterion Film Company.

DANTA IS WITH SHERRY

Harry Danta has resigned from the Pathé Exchange and is now connected with the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company, New York.

BERMAN IS ADDED TO R. AND L. FORCE IN CAPITAL CITY

The Washington, D. C., office of the R. and L. Feature Company, under M. Rosenberg, has added Louis Berman to its force.

Mr. Berman leaves the Washington, D. C., exchange of the V-L-S-E for his present position, having been shipping clerk for the former office for some time.

He will be on the road for Mr. Rosenberg, placing the "Spoilers," which is having a phenomenal run in every city and town.

BERNARD TRANSFERRED TO METRO IN LOS ANGELES

William Bernard, who has been road salesman for the San Francisco Metro Exchange, has been transferred to Los Angeles to be assistant to Manager Harry Lustig, and E. J. Lipson from the Los Angeles exchange has been sent to San Francisco.

Twenty-one theatres in Los Angeles are now showing Metro pictures each week. This number constitutes about forty per cent. of the ten-cent houses.

FRIEDMAN BUYS MAYER'S INTEREST IN MINNEAPOLIS KRITERION

Ben Friedman has bought out the interests of Fred S. Mayer in the Western Kriterion Film Service, Minneapolis, and is now the president and general manager of that exchange.

He will continue the exploitation of "How Molly Made Good," "The Melting Pot," "Uncle Sam at Work," "Life Without Soul," and several other features for which he is now negotiating.

BENNETHUM IS STILL WITH THE INTERSTATE, PHILADELPHIA

By wrong information, George C. Bennethum was credited a few weeks back with having given up his connection with the Interstate Film Company, of Philadelphia, while in reality he is the secretary of the organization.

Though other large film interests throughout the state require much of his attention, he manages to find time for all.

A FILM SALESWOMAN CARRIES COPY OF THE "NEWS" AS INTRODUCTION TO EXHIBITORS

A film saleswoman! This idea took the exhibitors of Nebraska by surprise when launched by Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World exchange in Omaha the other day. Esther Epstein, one of the foremost woman feature managers in the Middle West, was the woman.

"They were surprised," she said upon her return, "but don't you know, the Middle Western exhibitors, especially those in Nebraska, are so progressive they immediately fall in with any advanced plan.

"I had a novel introduction card. It was a MOTION PICTURE NEWS. I carried it in my hand and the striking colored cover immediately showed I was on motion picture business and interested in the same things in which they were interested—the progressive, up-to-the-minute growth of the business.

"Altogether it was a pleasant visit —and profitable."

STEPHENS SEES NEWS VALUE OF CHAPLIN STORY FOR NEW ORLEANS DAILIES

This is the way the Charlie Chaplin story was handled in New Orleans:

When S. T. Stephens, Mutual manager, received word that the famous comedian had signed with Mutual at an almost unbelievable salary, he got in telephonic touch with New Orleans' four newspapers.

The story was carried in full that afternoon by the evening sheets, and by the two morning dailies next day, with considerable elaboration.

The newspapers, knowing the demand for this kind of reading material, played up the story. Everyone of the papers has a reporter who daily visits the theatres and exchanges for every scrap of motion picture news available. Needless to say, the Chaplin story was worth all they gave it.

This is the kind of co-operation that counts.

KING TRANSFERRED TO GENERAL IN MEMPHIS
